George Kleine has brought to this country and is soon to release a new and unusual kind of motion picture in which every movement made by a character is fitted to music. It is a story with only a title and no sub-titles of any kind. "Pierrot, the Prodigal" is the picture adapted from the opera of that name. The composer of the opera, Mario Costa, worked with the producer writing a line of music for every movement in the film. The picture runs a trifle over three reels.

Milwaukee, stated that he was against state censorship because the picture was already censored by the National Board. He prefers local to state censorship but thinks that there is no need of either.

He thought the National Board fully able to handle the elimination of all objectionable features and also said that there was no demand for censorship and that politics was not mixed up in the censorship question.

The elimination by the exhibitor and his co-operation with the National Board was in his opinion the only solution of the censorship problem.

Mr. Wolfberg, head of the Milwaukee branch of the General Film Exchange, stated that he was not in favor of state censorship, because it was too apt to be a political issue. He said that he preferred local to state censorship, but did not think either was necessary.

In his opinion, the National Board of Censors were fully able to cope with the elimination of objectionable features, though they must have the co-operation of the exhibitor as well as the producer.

Mr. Wolfberg declared that politics was not mixed in the censorship problem in this city or state and that there was no public demand for any sort of censorship. The closer co-operation of exhibitor, exchange men and producers with the National Board would be the solution of the censorship problem, in his opinion.

Two managers of Beloit, Wisconsin, record themselves strongly.

Manager Quinn of the Lyric: "It seems to me that state censorship may work out all right, although it has failed to do so thus far. But local censorship, I fear, can never succeed and I am strongly opposed to it. You cannot select a large enough body of fair-minded men for local censorship. Conditions in every village, town and city are different and the films will be slaughtered.

"I think that the present National Board of Censors is very efficient. I do not see how the present system can be bettered. The members of the present board receive no pay. They are under obligations to no one. Therefore they show no favoritism; they cannot be bought. They are not in fear that if they offend someone they will lose their position. We must have one central board to censor everything uniformly. We must have the same censorship everywhere.

"I think that among the majority of people, there is no demand for censorship of any kind. The average audience doesn’t care much whether or not the picture which it sees has been censored. Only the reformers care."

Manager Olson of the Star: "I am opposed to local censorship. It is expensive and it cannot prove efficient.

"I think that it would be a fairly good plan to allow the state to censor the films shown in it. The films would be considerably sliced up, of course, but if good men could be secured for the censorship board I would be in favor of the plan.

"No, I cannot tell you how the men should be chosen.

"The National Board of Censorship is, I think, doing its work well. I believe that the films which pass through it are fairly censored. This is more than I can say for some boards, whose work on the films is apparent when the reels reach us."

PHOTOPLAY IN NEW QUARTERS

The Photoplay Company, Incorporated, has moved into larger quarters and now occupy practically a whole floor at 30 West Lake Street. Robert R. Barker, general manager of this concern has just returned from a trip to the southwest where he is contemplating opening up a branch office.

The success of the Photoplay Company is largely due to Mr. Barker’s wide acquaintance and thorough knowledge of the film business.
Feature Theatre Opens in Chattanooga

Features, No Matter What They Cost, Is L. H. Smith's Motto—Pages, Not Inches, His Advertising Creed

AFTER two years of careful study and figuring on the part of Lawrence H. Smith, well-known Southern motion picture exhibitor, feature film representative and photographer, a company, consisting of Dr. Charles H. Smith, president; Lawrence H. Smith, vice-president and manager; C. H. Royalty, secretary and treasurer; and Arthur S. Dickinson, assistant manager, has been organized in Chattanooga, Tenn., for the purpose of producing first-class feature films.

The total cash capital of the organization is $15,000. Chattanooga's oldest playhouse, the Lyric Theatre, has been leased by the new company and has been completely remodeled throughout.

This theatre will be known as the home of feature films, the first of which, "For Napoleon and France," a Kleine masterpiece, was shown for three days, beginning Monday, May 11. Such productions as "Brewster's Millions," "Checkers," "The Squaw Man," "The Littlest Rebel," "Paid in Full," "The Old Curiosity Shop," and others will be exhibited in the near future.

Price of admission will vary according to the quality of the show, the minimum price being 10 cents. According to Lawrence H. Smith, manager of the new company, the motion picture business will eventually hinge on the feature film service.

Mr. Smith thinks the motion picture game the best game in the world and says that he cannot keep out of it; that it is fascinating and he believes that there is a great future for feature films.

Mr. Smith knows the motion picture business. He opened one of the first motion picture theatres in Rome, Ga., and also the first picture show in Roanoke, Va., for Howell Graham, pioneer Chattanooga exhibitor. The foresight of Mr. Smith led him to see that the motion picture business is going to bigger and better films with advanced admission.

He expects to show only feature films, and any feature that is a feature, no matter what its cost may be, will be exhibited by his company. His theatre will have advantage of the Kleine weekly service. Arthur S. Dickinson, assistant manager of the organization, has been associated with Manager Smith for several years.

The new theatre is fitted out with the very best equipment. Two Powers 6-A machines are used, these to be in charge of Edwin Healy, one of the most experienced operators in the South. The pictures are thrown on a screen eleven by sixteen feet, the largest screen in the city.

The operator's booth is steel throughout and placed in the center of the first balcony and not in the top of the second gallery as is usually done. Thus it has an almost horizontal throw.

Mr. Smith expects to advertise by the page and not by the inch.

Ernest G. Taylor.

DETOUR EXHIBITORS ACT

Special to The Motion Picture News

A MEETING of all the motion picture exhibitors of Detroit and its suburbs has been called for May 16 for the purpose of taking action in regard to the censorship of pictures.

A resolution will be presented asking exhibitors to use no pictures not censored by the National Board. Another proposition will be the appointment of a committee of exhibitors which shall pass upon all films before they are exhibited and the agreement of exhibitors not to show pictures not approved by this committee.

Some of the film men are in favor of urging the police commissioner to continue in office Lester Potter, police censor, whom the commissioner has announced he will return to the ranks, a measure for additional funds and an assistant censor having failed to pass the board of estimates.
"IN THE HEART OF THE CITY THAT HAS NO HEART"
(Imperial Singing Pictures)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This picture and the ones that are to follow are a step beyond the old songs illustrated with slides but the step is a long one, as a well-photographed picture like this is ten times more attractive than the gaudy slides, its predecessors.

Of course a lot depends on the voices of the accompanying singers and the orchestra, and at Loew's Herald Square Theatre, New York, where this picture was first shown, the accompaniment was about perfect. This song, "In the Heart of the City That Has No Heart," is a pathetic one, and the pictures doubled its pathos. At the end it was greeted with a hearty round of applause.

The film is only about two hundred feet long and it is certain everyone will be pleased with it, for it makes a welcome change among the regular pictures.

LOCATE CAPTURED PATHE CAMERAMAN

Cameraman Wagner, of "Pathé's Weekly," who has earned a reputation for himself during the recent troubles in Mexico, has added to his list the pleasure of six weeks in a Mexican prison. Some time ago he set out across the mountains with his outfit and was captured.

Although the Pathé Company tried to locate him was nowhere to be found apparently, until his captors, on evacuating their position forgot him, though they remembered to take his outfit. He has received a new supply and will stay in the southern republic.

Mack Sennett promises a thriller in a film soon to be released by the Keystone Company, in which a horse, ridden by Mabel Normand, falls 275 feet over a cliff, with a policeman hanging to its tail. Trick photography is responsible.

Mack Sennett has finished a Keystone comedy, now on its way to release, the most salient feature of which is an explosion where a haystack of milk is blown into the air and drenches persons looking from a second-story window with buttermilk.

An example of the versatility of Bella Merydith was furnished when her work in "The Great Call" of the "General" was at last seen at a theatre on one side of the street and her acting was seen in "The Outlaw Reform" at a theatre opposite.

Mr. State Right Buyer: Control "THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE" for your territory.

FOUR REASONS WHY

FIRST—We have a photoplay from a book which had one of the largest sales of any book published by Charles Scribner & Sons.
SECOND—A play dramatized from this book has been played for several seasons and is still playing to capacity business.
THIRD—A song bearing this title was last summer's song hit and is known or sung by every man, woman and child in the United States.
FOURTH—Our production itself, acted by experienced dramatic and motion picture people; featuring Miss Dixie Compton as "June," and Mr. Richard Allen as "John Hale," speaks for itself.

RIGHT OFF THE REEL

Wilfred Lucas is going around with his arm bound up. Some time ago he evidently broke a bone in his shoulder. It will take some time to get back in the movie game, but of course he and company will get back in it.

Fred Mace is off for New York on a hurry trip to get some Western one. In the meantime work will proceed as usual at the Boyle Heights studios.

The Rocky Mountain Film Company has recently entered into a contract with the Colorado Steel Company whereby the use of the latter's large plant at Canon City, Colorado, will control for the production of pictures released by the Rocky Mountain brand, and means the company can take on the Pan American Company of New York.

Mack Bennett and his Keystone players were raiding for the police, during the movie, not noticing it was a movie picture fight. This, of course, added to the realism.

Edwin F. Cobb, formerly with Lubin under the direction of Romaine Fielding, has joined the Colorado Motion Picture Company forces at Canon City, and plays opposite Josephine West. Cobb will be included in "The Feud," Cleo Madison has a scene in which she escapes from a burning dwelling and with her clothes actually on her jumps over a precipice and rolls down a sixty-foot embankment of Monte Cristo.

Unless negotiations fall through, the ending August 22nd for completion by Cleo Madison will be in possession of several acres of very desirable land near Pasadena, in which case the new studio will be built there. The site. Edwin August is producing "The Hoosier Schoolmaster." Burton King, of the "Osma," is putting on a second company which will be directed by Edward Brady. Mr. King has just completed a beautiful production, entitled "The Man Who Could Not Live." D. F. Whitcomb is now writing and revising playplots for Frank Montgomery, of the Kalem Company. The present production, "The Yellow Bullet," is from his pen.

Two bug Western features, produced by Milton H. Farnery for the Albuquerque Company, have been run off. Alexandra Phillips Farnery is the author of both. Their titles are "The Daughter of the Tribe" and "The Toll of the Warpath."

The new projection room of A. H. Sawyer, Inc., 1900 Broadway, New York, is said to be one of the most perfect of its kind in the world. It is the work of Schramm and investigators, with a new system of ventilation is particularly important for its value.

Theatre of "A" Club, scheduled by the Pacific Coast League. The first game is to be played at Central Park, during which the "A" Club will play the Universal Club. Margarita Fischer has been selected to throw the first ball.

Irving Billig, director of the Primagraph Film Company, was a German actor before entering the film game.

“THE HEART OF MIDLOTHIAN”
(Hepworth—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSO MICHELL

AFTER the famous novel of the same name by Sir Walter Scott. The picture, made in five reels, is one of a series visualizing the works of England’s celebrated writers. Forerunners of this picture were “The Old Curiosity Shop,” “The Cloister and the Hearth,” “David Copperfield” and “The Vicar of Wakefield.”

Probably the principal point in favor of these stories is their undoubted popularity. The films, following the story closely, without exaggeration, give the thousands who have read the books a clear concise story of what happened, very much as the reader had visualized it in his or her mind. We see the living image of what we had seen in the mind’s eye while reading the book.

It does not seem likely that the picture, if made outside of England, would obtain the results. These films, made in Great Britain, for the most part exactly on the sites described by the writer, are naturally perfect atmospherically.

The story deals with the medieval period in Britain.

At that time there was a law, which was rigidly enforced, dealing with the birth of children. If a woman should give birth to a child, and in any way conceal that fact from the authorities, and the baby should disappear, she was guilty of murder. It is around this that the story is wound.

Having given birth to a child, Effie conceals it because of her shame. The father, an outlaw, is hunted by the soldiers. Old Margery and her crazy daughter, Madge, steal the child and then lay complaint against Effie, charging murder has been committed. After a lengthy court scene she is found guilty.

Her sister refuses to lie for her, and states that she knew of the birth. She, however, saves her sister’s life by obtaining a royal pardon in the nick of time.

“BENEATH THE MASK”
(Im—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSO MICHELL

ONE of the prettiest dramas the Imp Company have yet made. It will be released on May 18. Ethel Grandin, who has been hailed as the Universal’s coming actress, plays the leading part in a most capable and energetic manner. It is the best vehicle she has had for a long time. She is supported by David Lithgoe and the heavy part is played by Edward Mortimer.

The play is a comedy drama, yet allowing room for melodramatic touches here and there. In this work Mr. Mortimer excels. As a love story it is splendid. There is a certain quaintness about the work of the principals that elicits our sympathy. It is not a new plot by any means, nor is it inexcusably old. The main ideas have seen service before, but the many changes effected in the story have given them a gloss of novelty.

A jealous secretary, knowing he cannot win the girl’s hand, sets fire to her father’s factory and ruins him. The girl attends a masquerade and meets Warren, whose face she does not see, and falls in love with him. At her father’s death she gets work as a governess. A ball is given and she attends in disguise. She meets the man she loves again. Later the truth comes out and she learns that the two men, her masqueraded lover and Warren, who lives at her mistress’s house, are one and the same. The relationship between Ethel’s mistress and Warren is not clearly explained.

ROCHESTER HAS NEW WEEKLY

Rochester, N. Y., May 14

The Rochester Weekly is a new feature in this city. A local motion picture concern “films” events of interest about the city. This week the display contains pictures of the opening of the local baseball season, and of an athletic meet between two high school teams. It was shown first on May 11 at the Hippodrome Theatre.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There’s one film that’s recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for “Eastman” on the perforated margin.

EDITOR'S NOTE—These lists of current releases are arranged in this form for the convenience of the operator and exhibitor. Ventilation  Cooling  Heating “TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM” has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don’t waste money experimenting with exhaust fans. The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well. Our Catalogue tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

GREAT says the

MORNING TELEGRAPH:
Seldom, if ever, has a play been more artistically shown or more thoroughly appreciated. The scenes aroused the audience to "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" The acting was of the highest order. The theatre was packed and it looked more like the presentation of an important opera than the opening of a feature film.

BEST says the

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:
A very marked success, and movie maniacs are still raving over its many novelties. It is far in advance of anything heretofore shown in this field.

DRAMATIC MIRROR:
A rare film with the most beautiful scenes ever shown in moving pictures. From every standpoint—scenic, dramatic and educational—it is wonderful.

CHARMING says the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD:
There are many charming bits of scenery in this film, and the list of the performers is a formidable one. It has many really comic situations.

We Believe

We sell you a motion picture projecting machine believing it to be the best machine that can be made.

We believe that its mechanism is perfect, that its arrangement is convenient and that its construction embodies all that is best in safety appliances.

We believe that this machine, given fair usage will run an indefinite length of time and will project the film properly.

We believe that if it does not do so under proper usage, there has been a failure on our part to deliver what you bought.

Therefore, we are prepared to guarantee that Power's Cameragraph No. 6A will run satisfactorily and permanently if intelligently cared for and handled.

The ultimate result of the concentration of the enormous facilities of the Lubin Film Manufacturing Company, the best equipped motion picture producing company in America.

Popular Plays and Players, Inc.

Will present as their first feature—their reputation-builder
ON JUNE FIRST

"MICHAEL STROGOFF"

A five reel feature with

JACOB P. ADLER

(Note the Jacob—this is the great Adler)

The Players
Jacob P. Adler, one of America’s foremost romantic actors, plays the title role. He is supported by a cast embracing the best known of the popular Lubin Players—actors and actresses who are established stars in the firmament of the photoplay. This is the first time that a great actor of the speaking stage has been surrounded by a cast of real motion picture stars. The combination is a most valuable one.

The Thrills
Spectacular scenes, each one big enough to carry an ordinary feature picture, abound. They have been staged absolutely without regard for expense and bring into full play the enormous Lubin producing facilities.

The burning of Moscow.
The river ablaze as the fugitives try to escape on a raft.
The blinding of Michael Strogoff at the Tartar camp.
The burning of Irikutsk.
Bokhara, the big Tartar camp.
The big court and palace scenes.

The Story
Michael Strogoff, "the courier to the czar" is the central figure in one of the most famous virile and fascinating romances ever written. It is a story specially fitted for production in motion pictures and its full worth is well realized.

Where Does M. A. Neff Stand?

WHERE does M. A. Neff stand?
He fathered the Ohio State Censorship Law. He advocated state censorship at the Toledo Convention in June, 1912. By his influence, the convention endorsed it. He urged such a measure upon Governor Cox. He was active in securing its passage through the legislature.

And now—
"I am opposed to state censorship," he declares.
And he conveys the impression that he has always been opposed to state censorship.

If Mr. Neff’s attitude is not a contradiction, it is a paradox. It is more. It is positively unintelligible until one remembers his recent declaration that the vast majority of the Ohio exhibitors desired the law, and were satisfied with it.

Then Mr. Neff appears in the light of a man forced to advocate because it was the alleged will of the men he represented, a law that was against his better judgment and private convictions.

THIS is important, if true.
The canvass now being made of the Ohio exhibitors by the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors’ Board of Trade will demonstrate whether they really wanted state censorship and are satisfied with it.

"All this criticism of the Ohio Censor law and the action of the censor board is pure humbug," observed Mr. Neff. Motion picture exhibitors and film makers favor the law; he is certain of that.

Since even so well-informed a person as Mr. Neff may err in gauging public opinion at times and permit his wish to become father to his beliefs, we shall await the replies of the exhibitors upon this all-important question.

In the meantime some other well-known facts concerning Mr. Neff’s views on censorship may be reviewed with profit to this inquiry.

A WOMAN kissing a horse, dog or other dumb animal.
A white person kissing a negro.
A woman smoking a cigarette.
To eliminate these three possibilities from motion pictures, Mr. Neff framed, fathered and secured the passage of the Ohio State Censorship law.

By his own admission, the possibility of the appearance of these features in any film—acts which may be seen every day on the legitimate stage without creating comment—form the basis of his argument for censorship.

Neff’s “kissing and cigarette bug” has been the source of much comment in Cincinnati ever since he made his position known several days ago in the presence of a number of exchange men and exhibitors.

WHILE the statement of the learned president caused many smiles because of its oddity, it set the men who are most directly concerned in the enforcement of the law to thinking.

"Why," they began to ask themselves, “did he not make these views public or communicate them to the manufacturers before the law was passed?”

“If these are his chief reasons for objecting to uncensored pictures, why did he not give the manufacturers a chance to eliminate them in the making of the film, instead of waiting for the enforcement of the law to have these objections sustained in the cut-outs of censors, which will cost the producers on an average of $25,000 a year?”

Why, indeed?

"STATE censorship was forced upon us," says Mr. Neff in his interview.
The facts just related hardly corroborate him. By whom? By what?
"Don’t blame Cox; blame me," he cries.
But, put his two utterances together and they amount to:
"DON’T BLAME ME: BLAME THE EXHIBITORS!"

WHAT interests are behind the News in its fight?” inquires Mr. Neff.
The interests of the exhibitors of the country, Mr. Neff, are behind the Motion Picture News in this fight.
What interests are behind YOU?

The showing of the picture will be made the beginning of a campaign against habit-forming drugs in Detroit, which is exceptionally bad in this particular. A special showing of the film was made for preachers, teachers, city officials and others interested in the movement.

SHUBERTS WON'T PUT FILMS IN WILKES-BARRE

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 21.—The report that the Shuberts would run motion pictures during the summer at the Grand Opera House, Wilkes-Barre's legitimate theatre, proved wild when it was announced that, beginning May 25, stock would be the policy.

Will Censors Close Pennsylvania Theatres?

Two Weeks' Limit Is Passed but Exhibitors Fail to Apply for Examination of Films—Warning Issued May 16; Board May Act

Harrisburg, Pa., May 21.

A SITUATION in which not one of the motion picture exhibitors in the State of Pennsylvania will be prepared to display films bearing the mark of approval of the newly created State Board of Censors, as required by the board's regulations will be enforced on June 1 if the board's regulations are to be enforced to the letter.

It was learned today in the board's office in this city that, although the date on which the censors will begin exercising their authority is less than two weeks distant, not one exhibitor or producer of motion picture films has as yet applied to have films passed upon, notwithstanding the rule requiring that "all applications shall be filed with the board at least two weeks before the date fixed for the release."

The seriousness of the situation may be gleaned from the fact that on May 16 the board issued a warning that after June 1 no films will be allowed to be shown without the stamp of approval of the board. The board supplemented this formal declaration with the assertion that arrests will promptly be made of exhibitors who show films that have not been approved.

The law governing the operations of the Board of Censors and the rule the board has prescribed for producers and exhibitors have been widely circulated in the state, and the failure of the picture men to make application to have films examined two weeks before June 1, is largely their own fault.

Obviously if the board carries out its declared intention to enforce its regulations literally, the Pennsylvania exhibitors will not be able to run their theatres between that date and the dates on which they ultimately have their films approved, without the danger of arrest.

In announcing its intention to bar unapproved films after June 1, the Board of Censors emphasized that anyone displaying unapproved films "subject himself to a penalty of not less than $50 for the first offence and not less than $100 for each subsequent offence."

The board announces further that exhibitors may protect themselves against the imposition of any penalty by refusing to accept any films from the exchanges without this stamp of approval, and the exchanges may also protect themselves by refusing to accept any films sent to them by the manufacturers unless the stamp of approval is marked thereon.

After the first day of June a sufficient number of persons will be provided with inspectors' cards for the purpose of inspecting films on exhibition to ascertain whether the same are being displayed without the approval of the board."

Breach Widened in Operators' Strike

Dallas Exhbitors Firm in Decision Not to Recognize Union—Say Strikers Were Unfair—Musicians Won't Walk Out in Sympathy

Dallas, Tex., May 20.

The fourth week of the strike of the operators brings no change in the situation. The operators are still out and the exhibitors are firm in their declarations that they never will recognize the union.

According to Tom P. Finnegan, president of the Texas Exhibitors' League and manager of the Hippodrome Theatre, the operators did not conduct the strike on a fair basis.

"It is true," Finnegan said, "that we refused them, but they did wrong in leaving the machines at seven o'clock in the evening when the trade is heaviest. And besides that they damaged the machines and the wiring as much as possible before they left the booths."

"They should have notified us they were going to strike, They did not. I have spent over $300 for repairs to my booth as a result of this strike."

Finnegan said that the walk-out was conducted in "kick" fashion and for that reason, if none other, that the strikers would not be taken back. All of the shows are running on schedule, but attendance has dropped considerably on account of the picketing.

The musicians have aided the operators, but they have refused to leave the pits, claiming that they had a larger representation in the houses than the operators. It is not entirely improbable that dissension has arisen between the two unions.

Since the strike, several operators have been fined in the city court for violating the electrical code.

M. A. Neff "Throws Down" State Censorship

BY ROE S. EASTMAN

CINCINNATI, O., May 20.

"I AM OPPOSED TO STATE CENSORSHIP."

M. A. NEFF, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, gave utterance to this paradoxical statement.

He was seated at his desk in the league headquarters on the tenth floor of the Mercantile Library Building, Cincinnati, on the afternoon of Wednesday, May 13.

The occasion of the statement was the call of the Cincinnati representative of The Motion Picture News.

Pressed further for an explanation, the self-admitted father of the Ohio Censorship law made a nice distinction.

He pointed out that he was opposed to the passage of censorship laws in any other state until the law has been given a trial in Ohio.

"If, after trial, the law proves to be a failure, what will you do?" ventured his caller.

"Repeal it."

"If public demand was responsible for the passage of this law, as has been claimed, how can you hope that a referendum vote of the people will force its repeal?"

Mr. Neff smiled broadly, kindly, nay, almost pityingly. "WE WILL REPEAL IT THROUGH THE LEGISLATURE," he said.

Mr. Neff had a great deal to say that afternoon.

Some of the things were not at all complimentary to his caller or the publication represented by him.

Some of his picturesque descriptions had to do with lighted fuses and exploding bombs, red flags and whiskey glasses, political accusations and graft charges.

But, back of all his words was Mr. Neff's clear and complete declaration that he is opposed to state censorship of motion pictures.

"We were forced into having this law passed for our own protection, I tell you," he said.

"Your paper says I am advocating censurers in other states. I am not. I want the law to be given a fair trial in one state first."

"Why was Ohio picked out for the trial?"

"Ohio was not picked out at all. I told you before we were forced into this situation.

"We did not want censorship, but with home rule for cities starving us in the face we had to protect ourselves."

"If the cities of Ohio are to be governed by charter, how will this state law prevent the creation of local censors in each city?"

"Censorship will not be mentioned in the charter. We have made that arrangement with the charter commission."

From this phase of the question, Mr. Neff launched upon the sea of politics.

"THE Motion Picture News is trying to inject politics into this matter. I tell you there is no politics connected with it in any way."

"I am a Democrat but I recommended Maddox and Vestal for membership on the board. They are both Republicans.

"I did not recommend William Lord Wright, who sought the appointment and wrote letters to me approving the law. He was not appointed and now he writes stories trying to mix politics in the censorship question. It is easy to see why he is howling."

"Why was Governor Cox so keen for the passage of the law?"

"GOVERNOR COX WAS KEEN FOR IT BECAUSE I WAS FOR IT AND I RECOMMENDED IT.

"DON'T BLAME COX, BLAME ME. I'M THE FELLOW WHO DID IT, BLAME ME," and Mr. Neff struck his expanded chest a number of vigorous blows with his clenched fist to make this self-accusation more impressive.

"You are going to be surprised in the appointment of the third member of the board," he said. "The Motion Picture News has stated that Sam F. Cary of this city is slated for the position, and gives his political record."

"Mr. Cary, at least, would prove a liberal-minded censor," interpolated Mr. Neff's caller.

"Yes, that may be true, but politics will have nothing to do with this case. Democrats, Republicans and Prohibitionists and Socialists all look alike in Ohio now. You are going to be surprised when the appointment is announced."

"The Motion Picture News is treading on dangerous ground in this censorship question.

"What interests are behind its fight? Let me tell you it is inciting the people and they will begin to think about this question seriously soon, and then look out, for there will be trouble.

"National censorship, I agree, is the logical way in which to dispose of this problem, but we cannot have National censorship until we have state censorship."

"You cannot have Senators and Congressmen without having state legislatures, can you? Well, censorship is the same thing. The Ohio Censorship law provides that this board may act in conjunction with any other state boards as a National Board of Censorship. This answers the question, doesn't it?"

"Why, it's the most simple thing in the world.

"The trouble is, my boy, you don't understand the situation. You are being misled."
ASSOCIATION BALL DRAWS THOUSANDS

Chicago Coliseum Jammed by Crowds of Guests at Gala Event in Filmdom—Attendance Estimated to Have Been About 20,000—Players Receive in Companies' Boxes About Hall

Chicago, May 20.

It seemed as though all Chicago had turned out to meet its photo-play favorites at the first annual ball of the International Motion Picture Association, held in the spacious Coliseum building, Thursday evening, May 14. The affair was a huge success. From the time the doors were thrown open at seven-thirty in the evening until after two o'clock in the morning throngs of people crowded the sidewalk and street in front and the lobby of the great building that has been the scene of so many national conventions and expositions.

The interior, with its tasty and timely decorations, was a stage setting that might have been well used for the background of some big photoplay production. Thousands of people gathered here to pay homage to the motion picture player.

Not only Chicago turned out to witness this epochal event, but many of the nearby towns were represented by both exhibitor and the picture-going public. For the first affair of its kind held in Chicago it was a real success.

To state that there were any definite number present would be impossible. It is estimated that there were between fifteen and twenty thousand. It might be said that everybody that was anybody in the film business was present. To mention each one individually would require the reprinting of the motion picture "blue book."

Next to the players, the popular event of the evening was dancing. Many fancy dancers were hired for the occasion to entertain. Singers were supplied and other forms of amusement offered. For the big success of this affair the members of the association deserve credit, also everyone connected with the business in Chicago, and the committee consisting of Robert Levy, Christopher Whelan, Samuel Katz, Harry Hyman and William J. Sweeney.

Each individual actor was called on during the course of the evening to give a short talk. As each one appeared on the platform they were received with applause.

The manufacturers present were George K. Spoor, Guy Klein, C. J. Hite and William Kalem Whiting. The manufacturers' representatives were Henry Bouchelle, of Essanay, and R. K. Neil, of the American Film Manufacturing Company.

The Selig players present included Adrienne Kroell, Rosita Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Duvall, Lela Frest, Lorna Frest, Grace Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Bowman, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Engel, Renee Kelly, Mr. Talton Alyn, Mr. and Mrs. Curt Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Flick Weed, Baby Ruth Haydelt, Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Jensen, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Reid.

The Vitagraph booth was occupied by Mrs. Clara Kimball Young, Mary Charleston, Harry Asbury, Billy Quar, Mrs. Clara Kimball, John Rock and wife and J. Doly Florence LaBadie and Margaret Snow represented the Thanhouser company. Len McNesney, Marc McDermott and Miriam Nesbit did the honors at the Edison booth. In the Latin headquarters Rosemary Thoby, Lee Leslie, Florence Hackett, Harry Meyers and Joseph W. Smiley entertained. The Historical Feature Film Co. was represented by Mabel C. Green, Dorothy Kingdom, Herbert Evans, Wm. Burton, Cheo F. Bitt, W. J. Florence, Edward Byrnes, and Bert Angeles.

"The Only Son," Next Lasky Feature

BRANERD BECOMES PRESIDENT OF TRANS CONTINENTAL RAILROAD

Tbe next release of the Jesse L. Jones Lasky Feature Play Company, will be Winchell Smith's most recent dramatic success, "The Only Son," with the original star of the legitimate production, Thomas W. Ross in his original role.

Mr. Ross has been at Los Angeles for the past six weeks working before the camera and is now en route back to New York with the print of "The Only Son," which will be released June 13.

Whereas, in the stage production, the action of the piece is seen with the only son as a full grown man, in the photoplay production two reels are devoted to developing the story from the time the boy's father began life as a prospect, and showed the mother diligently working to care for her husband.
CENSORS A COSTLY LUXURY FOR OHIO

By William Lord Wright

Their Fancy Expense Bills Alarm Even a Generous Industrial Commission and "The Lid" Is Put On—"Strong Sentiment" Aroused—Yes, Indeed! But Not the Kind Neff Meant.

It is really unfortunate for the Neff-Finley-Durbin coterie in Ohio that the news has leaked out right now, when Mr. Neff is busily engaged in defending the Ohio State Board of Censors in Ohio, and urging a National Board of Censorship in other states.

But the fact that Mr. Vestal and Mrs. Miller have been living on the fat of the land at the expense of Ohio exhibitors of Motion Pictures and Ohio tax payers, already heavily burdened, has set Ohio afire from end to end with indignation.

The film inspectors have been indulging in $1 meals and $3 rooms.

The stenographer turned in an expense account of $6 per day. The State Industrial Commission has given the Censorship Board a sharp reprimand, despite the fact that the political play has been to smooth over censor doings until The Motion Picture News revelations are over with and, perhaps, forgotten.

Mr. Neff recently confided to the Associated Press that attacks on the august Censors was all buncomb and that they were all that is good and that their labors were economically performed.

Let us quote the Associated Press of May 15 instead of giving our own account of the situation:

"DOLLAR meals, three times a day, $3 a day hotels rooms and taxicab transportation, constitute expenses too high for members of the State Board of Film Censors, according to the State Industrial Commission, which has given public orders to Harry E. Vestal, of Ada, and Mrs. Maud Murray Miller, of Columbus, film censors, requiring them for turning in alleged excessive expense accounts.

"While working in Cleveland, Mr. Vestal and Mrs. Miller each spent an average of more than $2 a day for hotel expenses and meals. Mary M. Barnhart, a stenographer, employed by the Board of Censors, is paid $75 a month salary, but turned in an expense account for about $6 a day, which was approved by the censor board. Taxicab fare and chair car charges, when traveling, are frequent items of expense, as shown in accounts turned in by the censors.

"Mr. Vestal's ordinary meal account, while working in Cleveland, during April, was as follows: Breakfast, 40 cents; lunch, $1; dinner, $1.25. One day he spent $7.50. His room at a hotel cost $3 a day.

"Mrs. Miller spent $8 a day for hotel apartments and usually more than that for meals. A typical meal account is as follows: Breakfast, 95 cents; lunch, 95 cents; dinner, $1.25."

The following columns are taken from various Ohio newspapers and show the "strong sentiment," to quote M. A. Neff, that is now prevalent in the Buckeye State for the State Board of Censorship:

"One item of Harry Vestal's expenses as a picture censor is $8 for meals in a Cleveland hotel in one day. The fact that he has gone into the newspaper business in Ada shows that he never expects to eat as heartily again."—Lima, Ohio, News.

"Objectors to the inspectors must have ravenous appetites according to the dollar meals they have been eating three times a day. That is nothing less than wicked waste."—Bellefontaine, Ohio, Examiner.

"According to reports, Mr. Harry Vestal expended nearly $9 in a dinner en route from Washington to Ohio. Two meals are generally sufficient on that trip."—Ohio Exchange.

"Mrs. Mauda Murray Miller, Ohio Movie Censor, pays $3 a day at Hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio, for a room. The Statler is a luxurious hotel. The taxpayers of Ohio have been paying Mrs. Miller's expenses."—Ohio Exchange.

"The State Industrial Board has notified certain state employees that they must cut down their expenses. It seems accounts have come in for $2 and $2.50 dinners, and other items in proportion. The industrial board is to be commended for calling attention to this matter, but they should go farther—they should find out the employees who are so free with the people's money and send their names to the Governor with a request that they be dismissed from the public service.

"It is a serious offense to be extravagant because the people's money pays for it. A faithful employee should be as careful of the people's money as he is of his own; and if he isn't he is not a faithful officer. An expense account is a very important part of official duty, and it is a bad sign when it is abused by extravagance.

"It would be a good idea to publish some of these extravagant expense accounts in the auditor's reports, so the people may know who are plundering them in this manner. Any indifference to the rights of the public should be known, and one of the common ways of showing it is in the expense account. o one has a right to be extravagant or careless because he is a public agent."—Ohio State Journal.

REPEAL FIGHT IS IN FULL SWING IN CANTON, OHIO

By Gilbert Canterbury

Canton, Ohio, May 20.

EXHIBITORS of this city are behind a movement gathering force in Ohio to have repealed the law passed by the last regular session of the legislature providing for state censorship of motion pictures.

The stand taken by most of the managers and proprietors of photoplay houses is that the national board of censors... can be depended upon to cut out all objectionable matter from reels, and that the State Board of Censors, which the new law created, is little more than a joke.

New legislators will be sent to the next session of the general assembly, and the exhibitors in this northeastern part of the state are actively forwarding the campaigns of men pledged to vote for the repeal of the law.

V. L. Schram, manager of the Orpheum, one of the largest photooplay houses in the city, is the leader of the exhibitors in this move to do away with the state censors. According to Schram, the new law is striking direct at the exhibitors, and unless repealed will eventually serve to greatly impair the motion picture business.

"I have been exhibiting photoplays for eight years," said Schram, "and I feel that I am qualified to speak with some little authority on picture censorship. I know by actual knowledge that the Ohio Board of Censors are not accomplishing anything in the way of purifying motion pictures, and I know also that in many cases the work of the censors have injured pictures, so that the exhibitors who ran them suffered a loss in consequence."

"I was in Cleveland the other day and saw Mrs. Maude Murray Miller, of the State Board of Censors, view a number of reels for the Mutual Film Corporation. "She displayed an absolute lack of understanding in her work, in my opinion. Some pictures she passed without looking at them. Some she passed after looking at a few hundred feet. A great many she cut unmercifully."

"I submit that no one person is capable of censoring motion pictures. One person is bound to have personal idiosyncrasies and private grudges against certain sorts of scenes.

"There are three members of the Ohio board. Mrs. Miller may have cut out of pictures things that the other two members of the board would have approved. Even if a state censorship were needed all three members of such a board should work together. Here in this state Mrs. Miller does nearly all the work. The exhibitor is the fellow who will suffer by this broadening censorship, and we of Canton are going to fight it."

"I think the Motion Picture News is the friend of the exhibitors in this matter. The stand it has taken should commend it to every exhibitor and exchange man. I, for one, extend to it a vote of thanks. When a journal helps me to improve and take care of my business I am going to boast it."

"The one solution of this censorship problem is to let a national board do the work. State and city boards of censors lead to nothing but graft, and state boards are bound to get into political intrigue. Our censorship law in this state is nothing more than a political statute created by Governor Cox so that he will have a few more jobs to fill."

E. E. BENDER, owner of the Odeon Theatre, is another advocate of the repeal of the state censorship law.

"I am not prepared to say," he declares, "that our state law is the result of political intrigue, but I do say that the law is not accomplishing what it assumes to accomplish. The pictures shown in Ohio now are no better than they were before we had a state board.

"In my opinion, the national board is entirely competent to censor all pictures. Then, too, in my opinion, the managers of theatres themselves would be able to keep objectionable pictures off the screens. A bad picture can do nothing but injure a house's business."

CENSORS' BIG EXPENSE BILLS OPEN EXHIBITORS' EYES

By Paul C. Mooney

Cleveland, O., May 20.

THE censoring of motion pictures by politically appointed censors is no joker game. Indeed, no!

To some of the old-timers in the business who started when nickels looked as big as "iron men" do now the expense bills of the Ohio censors just paid and recorded at Columbus would read like fiction.

That they are no myth is certain, for the Industrial Commission has issued notice to the censors that the lobster and squid and other out-of-season delicacies must be cut out.

H. E. Vestal, of Ada, Ohio, where they say that pork and beans is the stable diet, apparently went in for the good things when he came to Cleveland to censor films. At one dollar a censor, for Governor Cox and M. A. Neff.

Of course the salary is only $1,500 a year, and that does not permit of luxuries, so the state pays the expenses in addition.

In the last bill turned in, so the reports goes, Vestal had charged up $129.95 for 17 days' expenses during April. This period was spent in Cleveland, where he and Mrs. Maude Miller Murray are reviewing the films.

This figures up from $4 to $6 a day for meals alone, and $3 a day for room.

ONE item in Vestal's bill made the industrial commission gasp. While traveling from Washington to Columbus, on censorship business and at state expense, he ate $8.75 worth of grub.

Mrs. Miller, who weighs about twice as much as Vestal—judging from appearances—gets along with a few dollars less for feed per day. Her bill amounted to the trifile of $4 for meals. That would get a nice little breakfast for a dollar, a luncheon for the same amount, and left a scant $2 for a real dinner.

Mrs. Miller, while censoring, also is a newspaper reporter in Columbus, it is claimed, and local newspaper men sit up and wonder at a reporter having the physical constitution to get away with that much "eats" every day of the week. It costs just as much to room Mrs. Miller as it does Vestal—$3 a day.

There is much satisfaction in these figures just made public at Columbus, because the motion picture exhibitor can see now where his money is going. If he must support political censors to strengthen the Cox administration, he would like to know where the money goes.

The leading lobster palaces of the city, it is claimed, are mighty glad that the censors are working in Cleveland and would not sign a petition to have censorship done away with. It is too good a thing for them.

RIOT AT "JIM CROW" THEATRE

Jackson, Miss., May 19.

Attempts to open the Old Majestic Theatre at Jackson, Miss., as a moving-picture house for negroes, almost precipitated a riot. Threats were made to destroy the place, and in spite of the vigilance of the police, several glass windows in the front of the building were smashed, and the interior furnishings somewhat disarranged.

The theatre, which is located in the heart of the West Capitol street business district, is surrounded by white mercantile houses. The place was recently leased by Herbert Swift. It is now closed.

PICTURES CAPTURE NATIONAL LEAGUE PARK

Otto Luedecking, a well-known Cincinnati exhibitor, opened the Cincinnati National League Baseball Park as a motion picture arena Saturday evening, May 9.

Exhibitors in the West End joined in arranging for the pictures at the park to protect themselves from the possibility of outsiders leasing the grounds and showing pictures cut rates. This was done last year to the injury of business in that end of the city.
Do Exhibitors Want Censorship?

St. Louis Men Opposed to State Censors: Approve National Board—Influential Cincinnati Exhibitors Lament State Censorship; Deny Public Demand; Scent Graft Behind the Law—"Unnecessary and Ridiculous." Their Comment

de censorship symposium came as a pleasant surprise to Picture News. The consensus of opinion is strongly against state censorship, and almost equally strong against censorship of any kind. Here and there a voice is heard doubtfully professing a belief in the efficacy of state censors. The majority, however, have no faith in anything but a national board, and preferably the present National Board of Censorship.

St. Louis, Mo., has no censorship problem to meet at present, but some of the leading exhibitors have been decidedly outspoken in their views.

W. J. Flynn, manager, the Associated Theatres (Park Broadway, St. Louis, Lumina, Arco, Union and Air dome), St. Louis.

"I am not in favor of censorship of the motion pictures. The people, the public, large, censorship their own pictures; they will, just as they always have, by their good sense and judgment, cast out anything they did not want, or anything they considered unfit. I would not exhibit a picture in a theatre controlled by myself which I thought would have a bad effect on the people's morals, and I do not think any man should show a picture in a theatre which he would not himself show. The people who are in the motion-picture business are not in it to corrupt the people's morals; they are in it to make the business pay, to earn dividends on their capital outlay."

"If there had to be a choice, I would prefer state to local censorship. I think the National Board of Censorship is able to solve the censorship problem; it is a body that is representative of the producers, and do not think they would pass films that would injure the morals of the people, when they know that at the same time they would be working an injury to their own business. There is little or no censorship problem here now, and politics is therefore no mixed up with it. My solution of the censorship problem is to let the producer alone; they have surely and steadily improved the output of films from the day the first motion picture was released, and they are making the pictures better all the time, and I believe they will continue to improve them. The producers are intelligent men who know that to succeed they must reach the public, and that they can not please the public by giving them immoral or otherwise objectionable pictures."

E. W. Dustin, manager, Eclectic Film Exchange, 3310 Locust street, St. Louis.

"I am not in favor of state censor. I think the exhibitors are the best censors we can have. They will not run pictures that will cause them to lose money, and there is no doubt that if a manager uses questionable films he will lose money, because he will not get good clean entertainment. I regard the National Board of Censorship as a body well able to handle the censorship problem. I think the censoring of films can safely be left to the exhibitor. He is usually a man of considerable business judgment; the unwise ones have either been educated or eliminated long ago. I am not going to use films that will injure his business, when he juvenile the morals of the people that come to his theatre. I do not want any, but would take more kindly to a state than to a local board. I believe the National Board of Censorship is able to handle the situation. My opinion is that the public, with the aid of the exhibitor, is perfectly able to censor their pictures without the aid of any officials."

Meyer & Prack, managers of the Knickerbocker Theatre, at Park and Compton avenues.

"We do not want state censorship. We do not see that it would improve the situation any; there is no fault to find with the present system of censoring pictures. We would prefer state to local. We think the National Board of Censorship is doing good work. If the producers will continue to give us a good list of subjects to select from, there will not be any need of censorship; we will pick all good, clean subjects and feel capable of censoring our own program."

From Cincinnati, the national center of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, and in the heart of the state censorship situation in Ohio, comes some of the most uncompromising opinions against state censorship.

George Horning, manager, the Americus Theatre, Northside, Cincinnati, O.

"I have been opposed to state censorship from the beginning. At the last state convention in Columbus, I told the exhibitors who favored it then that they were making a big mistake. State censorship is unnecessary because the National Board of Censorship is adequate for our protection. If we have censorship laws in all states, our films would be ruined because of the individual views of the censors. So much would be cut out of the films in each state that there would be nothing left worth showing. I believe politics was behind this law. I am not mentioning any names, but I believe a censorship law, because they were led to believe that it would be a protection for them. I do not think that censorship at all state censorship can protect the exhibitor in any way. We have had no real demand in Ohio for the purging of our Motion-picture houses. There could be no such demand, because our patrons were satisfied with what we were giving them.

Funkhouser Speaks at Advertising Club

Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, Chicago's censor Czar, told the advertising men of Chicago all about motion pictures, the harm they can possibly do the dear children and the rest of his general line of argument. To prove it he ran his reel of cut-outs, the majority of which are claimed to have been made for the major's private use.

Many of the advertising men desired that some of the motion-picture people present tell their side of the subject, but all being gentlemen, refused, as the major was the invited guest. The Association, however, is determined to have another motion-picture luncheon soon, at which time, it is stated, some one in the motion-picture business will have the floor.

SAN FRANCISCO LOOMS AS PRODUCING CENTER

Dozen New Concerns Formed in Coast Metropolis Within Six Months—Studios at San Rafael Busy—California Exhibitors Hold Outdoor Gathering—Notes of Exchange Men and Exhibitors

SAN FRANCISCO, May 16.

New producing companies are starting up in numbers in the San Francisco district and this section promises to become an important manufacturing center.

Statistics have been compiled by the United States Weather Bureau and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce as to the number of hours of sunshine each year here and it is shown that no other large city in the country can boast of such favorable conditions for the making of pictures.

During the last six months no less than sixteen producing concerns have been formed here and at least half of these are now turning out pictures.

Within a radius of twenty miles is to be found some of the finest scenery in California, with many other advantages, including a great harbor with shipping, a state penitentiary, an international Exposition and a cosmopolitan city of seven hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants.

The California Motion Picture Corporation has completed the erection of a studio at San Rafael and is now engaged in staging a number of important productions, featuring Beatriz Michelena, the well-known prima donna, and House Peters, until recently with the Famous Players Film Company.

The name of the first production has not yet been announced, as it is taken from an uncopyrighted work. Charles Kenyon, the author and playwright, is now associated with this concern and is adapting a number of literary works to a suitable form.

The technical part of the producing end of the business is in charge of Arthur Cadwell.

Up to the present time the attention of the company has been directed towards commercial work and the getting out of a weekly, but feature productions will be specialized upon from now on.

No word has been received at the offices of the California Motion Picture Company since April as to the expedition that left San Francisco, late in March, on the yacht Iola to take motion pictures of savage tribes on Tiburon Island, off the coast of Mexico.

The yacht touched at San Diego early in May and a cablegram was to have been sent within two weeks from a Mexican port. On board the craft was Arthur Payne, brother of Herbert Payne, president of the company, and six companions.

Secretary of State Bryan and Rear-Admiral Howard, at Mazatlan, have been appealed to to locate the party.

Among the latest producing concerns to enter the San Francisco field is the National Film Producing Company, which has just established offices at 111 Turk street. This firm is making a specialty of commercial work, but has plans drawn for the production of a number of feature films.

The features will be produced in a studio in Forest Hill, one of the fine new residence tracts being opened west of Twin Peaks. The management of the firm is in the hands of E. N. Dusenberry and the productions will be made under the direction of E. E. Beers.

SAN FRANCISCO BRANCH No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League, of California, held a picnic at Fairfax on May 22, and the arrangements were made with a view to caring for an attendance of at least three hundred.

In addition to the San Francisco exhibitors and exchange men, a number attended from the cities across the Bay and many of the officials of the state organization were present. The visitors had the opportunity of inspecting the fine new studio of the Keenograph Company, which adjoins the picnic grounds and which has commenced the production of features.

The Golden State Film Company was incorporated at San Francisco a short time ago to engage in the production of feature films. The incorporators were R. B. Kurre, P. C. Mason, A. W. Biggers, G. F. Cosby and L. Golsalves. Under the direction of R. B. Kurre work has been under way for some time on a large feature production at the studio that has been fitted up at San Rafael.

Still another concern recently added to the already long list of producers at San Francisco is the Robbins Photoplay Company, which filed articles of incorporation on May 6th with a capital of $10,000. This company is headed by Jesse J. Robbins, until recently with the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company at Niles, Cal. Associated with him is M. O'Brien who is interested in a theatrical venture in San Francisco. No announcement has been made as yet of a studio site.

THE Globe Film Exchange, Inc., has secured offices at 933 Market street, San Francisco, and will shortly open for business. President and General Manager Marion H. Kohn is still in New York, purchasing features and during his absence, Treasurer P. N. Lilienthal is perfecting arrangements for the opening of the exchange. It is planned to open branches at Los Angeles and Seattle.

C. B. Price, who has had charge of the San Francisco branch of the World Film Corporation for some time, has been appointed manager of the Los Angeles office of this concern and has left for the South with his family.

R. H. Clark has charge of the San Francisco branch temporarily, and will remain in the capacity of assistant when Manager Harry C. Drum arrives from Denver. The changes were made by E. H. Duff, of the World Film Corporation, who is now on the Coast.

A school of motion picture acting has been established at San Francisco by W. L. McGinn, of the Macograph Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, a local producing concern, assisted by V. A. Van Antwerp, H. K. Eakle and Miss Lurlene Lyons, the latter until recently with Pathé Frères.

Another motion picture school for San Francisco is promised, the Marvel Moving Picture School, having just been incorporated by C. and B. Green and H. M. Harrison with a capital of $10,000.

FRED C. AIKEN was in San Francisco from the main office of the General Film Company, inspecting the fine new quarters of this concern. Eddy street recently fitted up under the direction of Manager L. Boreis.

The Vitaliside Company, 76 Turk street, San Francisco, manufacturers of a novelty slide that has met with a splendid reception on the Coast, has sent a representative to New York with a large sample line of slides, and exhibitors and exchange men there will shortly have the opportunity of inspecting these.

The Larkin Photoplay Theatre, being erected on Larkin street, will open about the middle of June under the direction of C. Rothschild.

The Haywards Theatre, a motion picture house at Haywards, Cal., is now being conducted by David Solari, who also has a large house at Napa.

THE Claremont Theatre opened for business at Oakland, Cal., early in May under the management of L. Purdy, who formerly conducted the De Lave Theatre nearby. The location is on Telegraph avenue, not far from Idora Park.

A. A. Richards, who is well known in the motion picture field in the upper San Joaquin Valley, has taken a long lease on the theater and will erect a new building and open this early in June.

J. French has disposed of the Past-tine Theatre at Sisson, Cal., to Arens & Morgan.

C. G. Kaulmann is now conducting an air-drome at Colusa, Cal., and during the summer will rebuild his theatre, adding largely to the seating capacity.

F. F. Kicke has purchased the Mosswood Theatre, Oakland, Cal., from W. Cunningham.

Turner & Dahken are erecting a handsome playhouse at Berkeley, Cal., this to be ready for occupancy by the time the University of California opens in the fall. The house now being built, there will be abandoned when the new one is ready.

An air-drome has been opened at Woodland, Cal., by H. Langenour. He plans to establish a circuit of these in the Sacramento Valley.

To Enforce License Law for Operators

Rochester Authorities Plan to Put Measure into Effect in Near Future—

President Wolff in Favor of the Movement—The Regulations

MOTION picture operators in Rochester will soon have to take out licenses to continue at their business. To get the licenses they will have to undergo an examination, and conform to certain rules which have been drawn-up by Assistant Corporation Counsel B. B. Cunningham.

There is a state law providing for the licensing of operators, but so far it has not been put in force in Rochester. The licensing of the operators and the enforcement of the law is left to the city administration.

Some revenue to the city will undoubtedly be obtained from the licensing of operators. There are forty-five motion picture houses in the city, some of them employing as many as three operators.

President A. N. Wolff, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Rochester, is in favor of licensing the operators, and of requiring some knowledge of the business from them before giving them licenses.

Many of them, he said, know how to run the machines, but when it comes to making repairs or additions to the equipment, many of the operators were at sea, and had to call in electricians. Theaters have frequently got into difficulties with inspectors, too, it is said, because of faulty construction work by ill-informed operators.

The regulations for the licensing of operators, as adopted by the city administration, are as follows:

1. An applicant for a motion picture operator's license shall make application therefor under oath at the city clerk's office, city hall.
2. Each applicant will be examined by a board of examiners consisting of the fire marshall, the superintendent of police and fire alarm telephone, the city electrician and Roy J. Fisher and Harmon J. Smith.

3. An applicant must be at least twenty-one years of age.
4. An applicant must have operated a motion picture apparatus for at least six months prior to the date of the application.
5. On or before the first of June, 1915, an applicant must have served as an apprentice under a licensed operator for a period of not less than six months prior to the date of the application, and the application must be accompanied by the affidavit of the licensed operator to that effect.

6. Before entering upon the period of apprenticeship under a licensed operator, such apprentice must register with the mayor a state-mint giving his name, residence and place of employment as such apprentice.
7. The examination must immediately report to the mayor the result of each examination, and if an apprentice's license will be issued to him within six days after such examination.
8. Each license and renewal thereof must be countersigned by the city clerk, who shall keep a record of the same and file renewals issued.
9. A fee of two dollars must be paid by the applicant to the clerk for each license and for each renewal thereof.
10. A license becomes in force for one year from the date of issue.

MILWAUKEE WILL SEND TEN TO CONVENTION

Milwaukee, Wis., May 19.

President: Samuel H. Trigger, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the State of New York, addressed the members of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association at their weekly meeting, a few days ago, and extended to them all a cordial invitation to attend the convention and exhibition of the International Motion Picture Association. He was accompanied by Grant W. Anson, treasurer of the ex-

Following Mr. Trigger's talk, the members took up the election of delegates, and it was unanimously decided to send ten men to represent the Milwaukee association. The following were elected: H. Trinz, Al. Schochleber, George Fischer, J. H. Silliman, F. L. Geierwec, M. Rice, James Cochran, Otto Preussner, Phillip Gross, Jr., and Harry Graham.

OPERATORS WIN FIGHT IN SPRINGFIELD

The fight which has been on for several weeks between motion picture theatre owners and the members of the machine operators union is draw-

A majority of the houses where pictures are shown have signed up with the union and it is expected that the others will adjust differences with the union within a short time.
DETROIT UPHOLDS NATIONAL CENSOR BOARD

After Police Censor Retires on July 1, Exhibitors Bind Themselves to Show no Films Not Passed by That Body—Measures Taken in Self-Defense to Forestall a Funkhouser Regime

Special to The Motion Picture News.

DETROIT, May 29.

A meeting of Detroit motion picture exhibitors and film exchange managers held Thursday, May 14, the question of local censorship was taken up.

Police Commissioner Gillespie has announced that censorship of motion picture films will be discontinued in Detroit on July 1. The meeting was called to determine what course the exhibitors should pursue after that date.

A resolution was adopted without dissent, providing that each film exchange and state rights agent should furnish with each reel a certificate, sworn to before a notary public to the effect that the reel had been viewed and approved by the National Board of Censors; that exhibitors should refuse to accept pictures not approved by the National Board of Censors and that the certificate accompanying each reel should be displayed in a conspicuous place in the lobby of the theatre as a guarantee of the attractions offered within.

A motion to appoint a committee of exhibitors to wait upon Commissioner Gillespie and ask him to continue in office Police Censor Lester Potter was offered by Lester Levy, of the Calvert Theatre, and voted down after considerable discussion.

The situation in Detroit is this: Mr. Potter has proven an eminently satisfactory censor, but the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs desired to have a woman censor, and at their solicitation Commissioner Gillespie put into his annual budget the sum of $4,500 for the services of an assistant censor, intending to appoint a woman to the place, and the fitting up of a room at police headquarters where all films brought into the city should be passed upon before being exhibited.

Exchange men and exhibitors objected to the manner of regulating their business and told Mr. Gillespie so. They informed him that if left alone they would properly regulate their own affairs, that they were not to be classed with crooks, saloon keepers and pawn brokers, upon whom the police must keep an ever watchful eye.

They declared that as they were catering to the public, they had no intention of offending the public taste and bringing odium upon their business.

Further, a tentative proposition was advanced for the fitting up of a room by the exchanges themselves and the passing upon of pictures there without the necessity of taking them to the city lockup.

The appropriation for additional censorship was not pressed, but after it had been thrown out by the estimators, Mr. Gillespie appeared peeved at its failure to pass and announced that all censorship would be discontinued.

This would appear to be the ultimate desire of motion picture exhibitors—the removal of censorship, but fear was immediately expressed that the removal of all supervision might result in the slipping in of objectionable state-right features, though none could come through the exchanges, and that the showing of such features in a few of the houses would bring down meddlesome and unfair interference with all exhibitors. Hence the calling of the meeting.

Managers A. J. Gillingham, of the General Film Company exchange; George W. Weeks, of the Universal; Ward, of the Mutual, and Dickerson, of the World Special Feature Film Company, were the dealers present, and about 40 of the city's 130 exhibitors. Peter Jeup, president of the Detroit Exhibitors' League was in the chair, though the meeting was open to all exhibitors.

Asking by Mr. Jeup if all their films were approved by the national board, each of the exchange managers present declared that they were.

Mr. Jeup asked the members if a resolution to indorse the work of the national board and favoring a continuation of the present censorship would meet the approval of the exhibitors.

Mr. Gillingham said: "You have told the commissioner that censorship is unfair and unconstitutional. How can you consistently ask the man to do what you have asked him not to do? You have told him you could regulate your own business.

"Commissioner Gillespie has told me that he does not think censorship should be handled by the police department. If a film that is radically wrong is put on in one of the theatres, the nearest exhibitor should call up and notify the police. The police always have the power of revoking the license of a theatre which offends. "It might disgrace the exhibitor who offends, but all the exhibitors are to be considered. It is for the greater good." Mr. Gillingham then advanced the proposition for a certificate of approval which was later embodied in a resolution.

Mr. Weeks, of the Universal, indorsed the idea of an affidavit and said if exhibitors would refuse to accept any film not so indorsed, they could starve out the man who handles uncensored features; he did not believe there would be enough exhibitors buying uncensored features to keep the agent alive.

Mr. McCarren, of the Family Theatre, suggested that the exchanges should refuse to supply programs to any exhibitor who showed uncensored features, but the managers present all declared such an arrangement obviously impossible.

There was considerable discussion of the possibility of having Mr. Potter retained as censor, and Mr. Levy declared that it was the first time he had ever heard motion picture exhibitors asking for censorship.

He later offered the motion for a committee to call upon Mr. Gillespie and ask that Potter be retained.

Mr. Levy declared that the certificate plan was adopted a year ago in Detroit and had fallen into disuse.

Objecting to the proposal for retention Mr. Potter, Mr. Jeup said Potter might not hold over after the first of July, and then a crank, a woman, a fanatic might be appointed; that an opening was left by such an indorsement of censorship which the exhibitors might regret.

"I would hate to abide by the judgment of a fanatic," said Jeup. "What assurance have you that another man as fair, as broadminded as Potter will be appointed?"

He referred to the absurdities of the Chicago censor, Funkhouser, in cutting out character parts because those of the nationality caricatured objectured.

Mr. McCarren declared he believed in choosing the lesser of two evils and not recommending a commissioner. To abandon local censorship, he said, would be to open up the way for state censorship and a bunch of farmers would be passing on the films.

Opinions pro and con were offered by others present. The Levy motion was finally voted down but those who favored it threatened to go themselves to the commissioner and make the request for Potter's retention.

SUNDAY FIGHT MENACES LIFE OF RESORT

New Haven Exhibitors Win Cases Over Opening of Savin Rock Theatres, but Prosecutor Will Continue Fight—May Go to Highest State Courts—Rock's Popularity Depends on Pictures

SPECIAL TO THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS
New Haven, Conn., May 20.

Upon what action the authorities of the town of Orange take in the matter of permitting or prohibiting Sunday motion picture exhibitions, or at best upon the outcome of proceedings that may be instituted in the higher courts of the state, may be said to depend the fate of Savin Rock, heretofore one of New England's most popular amusement resorts.

An attempt to enforce that one of the old Connecticut "Blue Laws" under which all Sunday amusements are barred brought matters to a head and divided the town into factions now almost at continual strife. So bitter is the feeling between the parties condemning Sunday amusements and those defending, that it is impossible to foresee the result of the "war."

The question first arose several months ago when public agitation resulted in the arrest of the proprietor of The Orpheum, one of the largest motion picture theatres at "The Rock." In the town court he was found guilty of violating the Sunday laws, and fined $10 and costs.

Dr. DeWaltoif, the exhibitor, appealed his case to the court of common pleas and won acquittal. He continued to keep his theatre open Sundays throughout the winter.

A FEW weeks ago the town again began talking, and in consequence the police, aided upon Savin Rock arrested Dr. DeWaltoif again, employees at his theatre, musicians, etc., and proprietors and employees of two picture theatres. At the same time they arrested proprietors and employees of other amusement stands, merry-go-rounds, etc.

This time the court held in favor of the picture men, and acquitted proprietors, employees, musicians and all. Those connected with the merry-go-rounds, etc., were fined. The court ruled that so long as the motion picture exhibitions were quietly conducted they might be permitted, and again the theatres started Sunday shows.

The trouble finally assumed its present proportions, which are terrifying. There are two prosecutors in the Orange town court who alternate every two weeks. Both have been approached by any number of citizens, coming singly and in groups, to make personal complaints and as delegates representing various churches, societie etc., opposed to the Sunday opening.

Prosecutor O'Keefe has practically refused to recognize the complaints, and is said to have determined to abide by the court's most recent finding, which favors the motion picture men.

He has turned away many complaints, it is reported, and will let matters take their own course.

The other prosecutor, however, Attorney Martin, goes on duty this week, and he, it is confidently believed, will act against the exhibitors.

Although he does not oppose Sunday opening, he has said that he wishes to be fair to both the town and the theatre-owners, and that for the benefit of the latter they ought to be taken before the court once more to definitely establish their position.

But even if the matter does go before the town court again, it is hardly probable that the matter will be settled, for threats have been made by those opposed to the pictures that in the event of a decision being returned in favor of the exhibitors, they will take the matter to the higher courts. Likewise, the theatre men will go higher if they are convicted in the town court.

To say that the Sunday pictures may mean the life or death of Savin Rock may be strong, but it is a fact.

Savin Rock business men depend principally upon their Sunday trade for profits, and look to the picture theatres to bring them this trade.

Inasmuch as the great majority of those who go to the "Rock" on Sundays do so mainly for the purpose of seeing the pictures, it can hardly be doubted that business will suffer greatly if the Sunday exhibitions are not permitted. In fact, a number of business people at the "Rock" have threatened to go to other cities if the motion pictures are barred.

However, it is hardly possible that the theatres will be closed, despite the activity of the people who say that Sunday opening at the "Rock" interferes with their observance of the Sabbath.

WAR against flies, in this city, will be conducted largely through the medium of motion pictures, this season. The Anti-Fly Campaign Committee, of the Civic Federation, has rented a series of films from the General Film Company, of New York, and proposes to exhibit them in as many theatres in and about New Haven as possible.

The committee, of which ex-President William Howard Taff is a member, hopes to have the films in time to show them from early summer throughout the season when the fly nuisance is greatest.

It also expects to exhibit a number of stereopticon views of fly-life, and to teach the community how to deal with the deadly pest.

The motion pictures will depict the life of the fly from its birth, through its wanderings from disease-infested places to the kitchen, and through its breeding period, the intent being to give an object lesson that will lead to cooperation on the part of the public at large in the effort to exterminate the dangerous insect.

LIVELY SCRAMBLE FOR SERIALS IN BELTOIT

One Exhibitor Began It and It Succeeded So Well that Every Manager Since Then Has Been Running Them

SPECIAL TO THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Beloit, Wis., May 19.

Competition between motion picture exhibitors in Beloit is very lively at the present time, due to the wave of advertising fever which reached here a short time ago. The wildest scramble is for the weekly serials.

When the "Adventures of Kathlyn" series first started, the Lyric immediately secured the Beloit rights. The pictures were an enormous success and Manager Quinn worried because his seating capacity was no larger.

Then came the Star, bent on showing its patrons something exclusive.

"Dolly of the Dailies" became a regular visitor. Not to be outdone, the Gem brought "The Perils of Pauline" to the city. Another success.

Manager McCarthy, of the Lyric, added "Our Mutual Girl" to his bookings, and although the adventures of the Muriel miss are not so thrilling as many may desire, still he congratulates himself over the move.

Then "Lucille Love, the Girl of Mystery," providentially came to the aid of Manager Hogan, of the Rex. So there has been added to our list of available features.

It's one all around.

Feature Firms Form Marketing Combine

Famous Players Film Company, Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and Bosworth, Inc., Unite to Organize Paramount Pictures Corporation—102 Pictures a Year Promised

Though on the face of it appears to be the most important affiliation of feature film organizations in the history of the industry was consummated this week when, through joint arrangement among the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Film Company, the Famous Players Film Company, and Bosworth, Inc., a combination was effected whereby a collective distributing agency for this allied program, known as Paramount Pictures Corporation, with offices throughout the world, has been organized and incorporated with the following officers: President and general manager, William W. Hodkinson; vice-president, James Steele, of the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Chicago, Ill.; secretary and treasurer, Raymond Pawley, of the Famous Players Exchange, Asbury Park, N. J. Directors, Hiram Abrams, of the Master Productions Film Co., Boston, Mass., Wm. L. Sherry, of the Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Co., of New York.

The policy of the new firm is announced as follows:

It has long been known, Bosworth, Inc., producers of the film versions of Jack London's celebrated works, the Famous Players Film Company, with their program of leading stars in recognized dramatic successes, and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Film Company, producers of well-known dramatic successes and famous novels with recognized stars at the head, have been making the most representative and pretentious feature productions obtainable. It is with the object of delivering the productions of these three producers, adding to this number the subjects of other master producers which measure to the standard set by the three companies above named, that this company is formed. This will allow the exhibitor to secure from the one central point a program of sufficient calibre and consistent standard so that he can go on day after day showing pictures of an absolute assured sterling calibre, never varying in quality, never varying in point of pretentiousness, and ever continuing a standard now difficult to maintain under the present disorganized condition of distribution.

The standard set by Lasky, Bosworth and the Famous Players must be met by other producers if they would have a place on the program to be distributed by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, and as these three companies contemplate the creation of only 102 productions a year, the Paramount Pictures Corporation will have experts in all the leading producing marts of the world seeking out material of sufficient calibre to be affiliated with the productions of the Famous Players Bosworth and Lasky, thus complete the program.

By placing it on this basis, the exhibitor is encouraged to conduct his show in a business-like manner. If he desires, for instance, to run a week of celebrated plays and famous novels with notable actors, the Paramount Pictures Corporation will be the central point through which he can get his program; whereas at present it is necessary for the exhibitor at any given point to work through some half-dozen different distributing agencies, and then such a program is jeopardized by the possibility of securing films of uneven merit.

The Paramount Pictures Corporation will be the connecting link between the exhibitor and manufacturer, and indirectly with the public itself in that a program from the Paramount Pictures Corporation will be consistent, of such a standard that there will be no deterioration and yet with sufficient variety to appeal to all.

This combination of three important feature producers with the Paramount Pictures Corporation represents the first organized, co-operative system established for the production and distribution of the highest class feature program, and is the culmination of several years of experience and observation on the part of the members of the organization.
NEW JERSEY EXHIBITORS JOIN I. M. P. A.

The New Jersey branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America at a meeting held in the Meier Building, Newark, New Jersey, on May 20, formally withdrew from the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America and disbanded.

Immediately afterwards a new organization was formed and the following officers were elected: President, J. Stearn; vice-president, C. J. Hasenauer; secretary, Walter H. Meier; treasurer, F. B. Glazier.

There were fifty-eight exhibitors in attendance at the meeting, all of whom expressed their intention of attending the New York Convention and Exposition, June 8 to 13.

President Trigger, of New York, and National Secretary Rosenthal addressed the meeting on the importance of organization.

WARNER EXCHANGE MAN DIES

It is with regret we chronicle the death of John Noecker, which occurred in St. Louis, Sunday, May 17. A telegram received at the New York office of Warner’s Features, Inc., states that Noecker was stricken on the 15th, and that death came quickly.

For a number of years Noecker was manager of the Swanson-Crawford Film Exchange in St. Louis, and was one of the pioneer representatives of the film industry in the Middle West. Several months ago Noecker became affiliated with Warner’s Features, Inc., in the capacity of manager of their St. Louis branch. His sudden death will be regretted by a host of friends throughout the trade.

"LITTLEST REBEL" COMPANY BACK FROM SOUTH

E. K. Lincoln, Edgar Lewis, Ethine Ivans, and twenty other members of the company which has been engaged in filming Edward Peple’s war drama, "The Littlest Rebel," in Augusta, Ga., returned to New York on Saturday.

That the Photo Play Productions Company has overlooked neither detail nor expense in making this picture, is born out by the fact that 140,000 feet of film—enough for eight complete sets of negatives—was used up by the camera men.

Frank Tichenor, who conceived and developed the whole scheme, declares that if "The Littlest Rebel" in every separate respect, lived up to general excellence of its full five reels, does not take rank with the greatest features ever produced, it will not be released to the trade but will be made over until it "qualifies."

No date has been set for the release of "The Littlest Rebel."

Pittsbughers Hold Important Meeting

Pittsburgh, May 20.

T. H. Motion Picture Exhibitors’ Association of Pennsylvania held one of their biggest and most important meetings at the Olympic Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sunday, May 17. The main object of this meeting was the nomination of officers for the upcoming year, commencing June 1st, 1914, the nominees to be elected at a meeting to be held on Sunday, May 31.

The meeting was called to order at 3:15 P. M., President H. C. Kleinh in the chair. Minutes of the last preceding meeting were read and adopted. Copies of letters from the Chicago Health Commission, relating to ventilation of motion-picture theatres, after lengthy consideration, were accepted and placed on file on motion by W. H. Ketchum and carried.

The following made application for membership: M. Slikin, Plaza Theatre, Erie, Pa.; Frank Schle, Bijou Theatre, Altoona, Pa.; C. M. Nutting, Bijou Theatre, Erie, Pa.; Wm. Fairgrove, Grand Theatre, Erie, Pa.; Fred Domer, Jr., Gen. Theatre, Erie, Pa.; J. D. Allen, Erie, Pa. By motion of John Bender, seconded by Mr. Thomas, the said applicants were accepted as members and entered on the books as such.

A report by the Secretary was given of the action of the Committee of the Building Code Commission meeting held at Harrisburg, May 5th, 1914, and on motion by W. H. Ketchum that the report be accepted, carried. A report was had from Fred J. Harrington, the state organizer, of the progress made and the condition existing in the various places visited by New Castle, Erie, Altoona, Corry, Pa., and vicinity, which was accepted on motion by Dr. G. W. Torrance.

The nomination of new officers was as follows: President, C. Kleinh of Pittsburgh, by Mr. Thomas; president, Fred J. Harrington, of Pittsburgh, by Elmer Hulme, Vice-President: William Fritz, of Pittsburgh; A. Baltimore, of New Castle; G. W. Torrence, of Pittsburgh. Secretary-Treasurer: James Delvers, by F. M. Smith, seconded by A. G. Thomas. Trustees: A. G. Thomas, John G. Saxauer, E. J. Demas, John Hafner, Fred M. Smith, Peter Autenpolos, and W. H. Ketchum.

The question of the practice of advertising certain theatre in the city of Pittsburgh by means of large display sheets and by horse and wagon traversing the streets as a form of boycott by the M. P. M. Operators’ Union, arose. After some consideration of the matter, a motion was made by the Secretary, and seconded by A. J. Haume, that when an exhibitor in need of a motion-picture operator he shall select the one he regards regardless as to whether he be a union man or not. This motion was carried.

A large number of exhibitors signed to be in the big party that goes to New York, in June, to attend the International Convention and Exposition.

Exchanges Unite to Hunt Down “Bicyclers”

Twenty-one Firms Form Association for Protection Against Pirating and Non-Payers—Detectives Engaged—Box-Office Attractions and Eclectic in Organization

Representatives of twenty-one leading motion picture film exchanges met at 130 West Forty-sixth street and formed the Feature Film Renters Association, which is to prosecute “bicyclers,” who, as known in motion picturedom, are the men who trade their reels with other motion picture theatre proprietors.

It has long been known to the motion picture producers and renting agencies that films rented for a day or two or perhaps a week have been missued by the failure of the operator to keep his machine in proper order, but it was only within the last few months that the “bicyclist” became a known factor. By this method, it is alleged, the motion picture exchanges have been losing considerately more than $25,000 a month in rentals.

After the organization had been effected a detective service was engaged to hunt out the “bicyclers,” and a committee was also appointed to pass judgment on theatre owners accused of misusing films in failing to keep them in proper condition.

The exchanges in the association are: Unique Feature Film Co., 145 West 44th St.; Theatre Film Co., Inc., 71 West 23rd St.; Eagle Feature Film Co., 71 West 23rd St.; Exclusive Feature Co., Inc., 71 West 23rd St.; De Luxe Feature Film Co., Inc., 71 West 23rd St.; Eclectic Feature Film Exchange, 115 West 23rd St.; Box Office Attractions, 120 West 40th St.; Warners Features, Inc., 120 West 40th St.; All-Star Film Renting Co., Inc., 110 West 40th St.; Wm. L. Sherry’s Feature Film Co., 130 West 40th St.; Universal Attractions, 130 West 40th St.; Regal Feature Film Co., Inc., 71 West 23rd St.; The Film Exchange, 27 West 29th St.; Photo-Drama Film Co., 29 West 34th St.; Special Feature Film Co., 288 Market St., N. Y.; Acme Feature Film Co., 130 West 46th St.; Emby Feature Film Co., 145 West 46th St.

The officers are: Mr. Jule Burnstein, president; Mr. Abe Carlos, vice-president; Mr. Charles H. Sirene, corresponding secretary; Mr. Max Streimer, recording secretary; Mr. Robert Richter, treasurer.

"Straws" That Show How the Censorship Wind Blows

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

Dear Sir: I know the enclosed subscription has perhaps seen a number of things which I might describe the conditions here in this state more forcibly. I can only say that you can with the language at your command and in the words of the classics, "sit down, IT YOU heart and soul and please rely on my efforts, feebly though they may be, to keep it from the good cause all alike.

The sooner you start your subscription the better I will like you, for I don't want to miss a number.

Again wishing you success,

H. W. Thomas.

The Artis Theatre, Mansfield, O.

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

Dear Sir:—I agree with you that there must be a "Nigger" in the woodpile somewhere, but an exhibitor is so internally busy trying to make both ends meet now, that he can't take the time to root him out, so we must depend on you people to do it for him. But if this "Censor" business continues we don't know just where the exhibitor is going to get off as, he has all he can stand for right now. If you can find any who has not, we would be pleased to hear of that fellow.

We have not had three complaints of immorality during the seven years we have been shown, but there was one several years ago, and why? Because we refused to show that number when they were marketed. So we feel that it is the exhibitor's fault which has had complaints. After the New York Censor Board started going on the pictures, we were unable to find an immoral picture, so we could never get our heads just why Ohio needed a Censor Board and, besides, we are in the north.

We show big road shows in our theatre as well as pictures, and after showing the big successes to packed houses, such as "Damnation Goods," "Romance," "Sins of the Fathers," "The Woman," "Blindness of Virtue," "Pine Feathers," "The Common Law," etc. and have the same people about how fine they were, and what great moral lessons, those same people would raise an "awful howl" about the immorality of pictures equally as suggestive as those above, it makes you "Stop! Look! and listen," and wonder if there is something the matter with humanity.

We have only lived about thirty-seven years, but we firmly believe that some of the calumny hoaxed should be locked up with a bunch of these morality squealers in a place where they could be hanged by each other, and this grand old universe would contain a mighty fine in the good old-fashioned way that it is never pinned down into existence and the "I'mlight!

Very truly yours,

Chasen Kunz.

Opera House, Mansfield, Ohio.

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

Dear Sir: I am an exhibitor of nearly three years' standing. I am in favor of the censorship of motion pictures. My reasons are that such a course would open the opportunity for graft and corruption and in my opinion would seriously handicap the manufacturer.

I believe there is no need for censorship in an official way. I believe our patrons have already been, and will continue to be, the only censors necessary. It is perfectly natural that the intelligent exhibitor finds, and will continue, to find, the kind of pictures his patrons like. He then communicates this to his exchange, who in turn takes up the matter with the manufacturer, who, desiring to keep abreast of the times, strives to make goods for which there is a market.

No intelligent exhibitor will cater to the vulgar. There are not enough that class to support a manufacturer. My honest opinion is that the public will support the censors that are necessary for the protection of the popular industry. Respectfully,

J. B. Hales.

Dear Sir:—The writer has lived in Wisconsin for thirty years and has seen the censorship idea developed until about every duty that a man is called upon to perform is regulated by a commission appointed by the Legislature. Unless the voters wake up and vote the censure out or offer, soon a man will have to get a license from a commission to perform his family duties.

You have probably heard of the Wisconsin case. As we who live here understand it, it means that every person who has a dollar in his pocket is a thief. And the members of the legislature were elected to get it away from him.

You may think that you have a kick coming on the motion picture censorship but how you would kick if you lived in Wisconsin! We are certain you will be with you in your fight against censorship.

Yours truly,

S. S. Burenst.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed you will find a number of questions answered in regard to the censorship. I am opposed to the censorship. I believe that the members of our little league I feel that I have answered all of the questions as our members would vote. I think the law is an outrage and have talked with a number of exhibitors in Boston and Cincinnati and have never come in contact with one exhibitor who is in favor of the law.

I find that all are against Neff and am sure if some good man comes out for the president's position at our National Convention, he will have a walkover. All exhibitors here are tired of Neff and Klen Ker, and no one here who know either of them has any use for them. You can use this in any way that you see fit.

Respectfully,

J. H. Johnson, President.

Piqua and Troy Exhibitors League.

The Bijou, New Philadelphia, O.

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

New York City.

Dear Sir:—In favor of your request I will give you my opinion concerning the censorship board of Ohio. The Censor Board of General Film pictures in my theatre, and no one has ever registered a single complaint of the need of such a board, and it was created for the sole purpose of furnishing positions to hungry political hacks, not for the good of the people of Ohio, as they would have you believe. I am told this censorship board is made up of men who do not know anything about the picture show business.

I thing M. A. Neff, president of the M. P. E. L. of A. is the cause of the whole thing. He advocated this board without consulting in any way the exhibitors of the state. Mr. Neff certainly has made up the picture show business to play the part of the patrons of picture shows in this state, if he thinks they would, he as an old thing.

I want to say here that the best people in our town attend the picture show, and if I showed that anything bad that every man would have to quit my place. The public is the best censor board, and we know it, and therefore we show no immoral pictures. We want to stay in business.

Down with the grafters and traitors, it is my idea.

K. C. Woodford.

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

New York City.

Dear Sir:—It looks to me that each exhibitor should be able to do all the censoring that is needed for he is not going to show pictures that are not kept in keeping with his ideas. I see no advantage to the show business at present, but likely to be at any time.

Yours truly,

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

New York City.

Dear Sir:—My opinion of censorship is as follows:

I have been in the motion picture business over six years and have seen how inseparable censorship has been on my screen to offend the most refined old maid in any town. (We have them, too.)

The censorship is created in your locality to get someone a good job and we poor exhibitors pay for it in the long run. I am not in favor of the censorship. Please tell those politicians to seek another job for their best friends.

Yours truly,

J. M. A. Ayers.

Dear Sir:—I wish to express myself emphatically against state or local censorship, but emphatically in favor of the National Board. This latter body, consisting, as it does, of people from various walks of life whose motives are those of the general public and whose decisions are not influenced by other salaried W. ribes, are in my opinion far more fit to judge of the merits of a picture than the average politician, since the latter is open to all sorts of conflicting influences.

Besides, is the life of the average politician so clean that he might be considered fit to regulate the morals of the people in general? Leave politics and politicians out of censorship, say I, and let the only acting motive be the welfare of the people.

Dear Sir:—I am opposed to all censorship of the theatre, and the motion picture, except by the general public who patronize and pay for the same. They are the best judges of what is decent and proper to be shown.

If we must have censorship at all, I think it should begin with churches that send forth loud-mouthed, ignorant preachers to lie about and slander decent people. I do not in this refer to intelligent, honorable ministers of the gospel.

"TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE" IS COMING

John Fox's famous novel, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is at last destined for screen production, and the Broadway Picture Producing Company, of 1409 Broadway, New York City, has undertaken to put the story in motion picture form before the country.

David Young, Jr., and Thomas F. Bowers, heads of the firm, have just returned from a two months' tour of Kentucky, the scene of the play's action, where they have been motorizing up and down the state, selecting scenes for the forthcoming production.

It is expected that "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" will be on the market about June 1.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 21.

Manager Walter Foster, of the Family Theatre, had a special performance on May 11 for the benefit of the local suffrage organizations which he exhibited the latest Pathé release "A Militant Suffragette." The theatre was filled to capacity and everyone of the "future lawmakers" voted the production entirely in accordance with their views.

Mutual Plans Mammoth Publicity Campaign

Engagement of Arthur James by President Aitken, a Notable Addition to the Staff Directed by Philip Mindil—Other Appointments

THE engagement of Arthur James, who, as the "Beau Broadway" of The Morning Telegraph and in various other capacities on leading metropolitan newspapers, is one of the best known newspaper men in the United States, by Harry E. Aitken, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, as publicity expert, which was exclusively announced in The Motion Picture News of last week, is Mr. Aitken's first move in a publicity campaign extraordinary and of national scope.

Mr. Aitken has organized, under the direction of Philip Mindil, a publicity department second to none in the world. Consequently the addition of Mr. James to the Mutual staff is indicative of the big plans which Mr. Aitken has in mind.

Mr. James' qualifications to handle a mammoth publicity campaign, either as an aid-de-camp to Mr. Aitken and Mr. Mindil or in any field in which they deem it necessary to use his superior capabilities, are of a character that is unusual.

He was formerly the manager of the publicity department of one of the largest advertising agencies in this country and while there conducted national publicity campaigns for the Du Pont Powder Company, the American Tobacco Company, and other concerns of equal magnitude. His newspaper experience is of the widest, and among newspaper men he is regarded as one of the cleverest paragraphers in the country.

He has also gained a high reputation as a dramatic critic, his unusually keen appreciation of dramatic values and his faculty for genuine constructive criticism having placed him in the front rank in this field of literary endeavor. In addition to all this, occasional verse from Mr. James' pen has exhibited the same qualities which have lent distinction to his more serious work.

Mr. James will leave early in the coming week for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will act as correspondent for Reliance and Majestic, working in conjunction with D. W. Griffith, the Mutual's $100,000-a-year director.

To supplement Mr. James' work a squad of veteran newspaper and publicity men have been recruited by Mr. Mindil at the same time and for the same campaign. W. Bob Holland, formerly assistant managing editor of the American Press Association and latterly managing editor of the Newspaper Feature Service, joined the Mutual forces on May 18. Frank J. Wiltach, one of the best known theatrical press-agents in the country, is in charge of the press work for "The Life of Villa" at the Lyric Theatre, New York. Other new members are Albert S. Levino, Helen Starr and Marion Savage. Mr. Levino will be city editor.

Three publications will be issued by the department, "Mutual Movie Fillers," "Rel Life," a forty-four page magazine, and a new woman's publication of sixteen pages, entitled "Our Mutual Girl Weekly."

WILKES-BARRE EXHIBITORS SIGN WITH OPERATORS
Special to The Motion Picture News
Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 21.
The officials of the Motion Picture Operators' Union are active to-day in an effort to have exhibitors in cities and towns outside of Wilkes-Barre sign a working agreement that will help the operators. Thomas Piett is the delegate of the union and he is visiting the various owners in an effort to have an agreement signed.

Every exhibitor in this city has signed the agreement, which calls for $18 a week for head operators and an eight-hour working day. The union has met with unusual success and the agreement met with unusual success.

The officers of Local No. 325 are president, Frank Welch, and secretary, Charles Dippy.

A CENSORSHIP FOR ST. LOUIS?

A censorship bill is now before the City Council in St. Louis. The measure provides that all motion pictures intended for exhibition in St. Louis theatres shall be first passed upon by the Chief of Police. Councilman Fletcher introduced the bill.
THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

FILM NEWS FROM FOREIGN PARTS

“Padded Pictures” Cause Reaction Against Cinemas in Switzerland—Sunday Opening in England—Forbid “Marseillaise” Film in Alsace-Lorraine—Events in Italy

The long film, glaringly and inexcusably padded, has caused a positive reaction against motion picture houses in Switzerland, and exhibitors in desperation have seen their houses half-filled or less, while they are paying for expensive pictures which only bore their patrons by their length, out of all proportion to their story. To forfeit the public’s confidence is easier than to win it back, and the lesson could be heeded with profit in some parts of America.

The police of Strassburg, Alsace-Lorraine, have forbidden the exhibition of a motion picture depicting the composition of the French national hymn, “La Marseillaise,” and the historic scenes of the First Empire.

The school children of Augsburg, Germany, have been forbidden to attend the motion picture theatres in that city, except to witness films that have been passed by the Board of Education.

Figures That Talk

Statistics published in the London “Bioscope” reveal some interesting facts concerning the motion picture in remote quarters of the globe. South Africa boasts of 300 cinemas. New South Wales has 190; Bombay, 15; Tokio, nearly 100; Porto Rico, 39; Honolulu, 3; the South Sea Islands, 2. The motion picture realm is another on which “the sun never sets.” “Protea II,” the second installment of the Protea series, from the Eclair Company, of Paris, is already widely advertised in England and Germany.

Dr. Grote, an Austrian scientist, has organized a cinematographic expedition to the Arabia and received on films the life, manners and customs of the Bedouins and scenes around the oases in the great Arabian desert. Hunting scenes, showing some rare animals native to that country, will also be taken.

German Prince an Operator

Henry, of Prussia, brother of Emperor William, of Germany, is the first member of a royal family to become a motion picture machine operator. The Prince is contemplating a trip through South America and he intends to take his own pictures of his travels.

Just This Side of High Treason!

The Paris trade journals are poking all manner of fun at two unnamed members of the French Academy—France’s living Hall of Fame—who have been suspected attending motion picture theatres “on the quiet.” The compliment to the cinema is accepted with due gratitude, but, as Le Cinema sagely remarks, “If they had been discovered occupying a seat in a cinema, they would never have been offered a seat in the Academy.”

Famous Paris Theatre Closed

The famous Odeon, one of the most celebrated of Parisian theatres, has been closed by order of the Minister of Fine Arts and Public Instruction. A special appropriation had been voted by the Chamber of Deputies, it seems, amounting to $25,000, for the up-keep of the famous playhouse, which has not been a financial success this season.

M. Antoine, the resigning director, put in a legal claim for the money, was repudiated, and closed the theatre, informing M. Antoine that the money was not intended to cover his liabilities. Needless to say, the theatrical world of Paris regards the motion picture theatres as chiefly responsible for the failure of the Odeon. The fact has not served to lessen the animosity between the two factions.

Sunday Opening and the Clergy

The question of the Sunday opening of motion picture theatres has reached a ludicrous phase in England. Public officials are disposed to favor Sunday exhibitions, declaring that it keeps the men out of the public houses and reduces the amount of Sabbath lawlessness.

The clergy, on the other hand, declare that where the theatres are open Sunday, those who would otherwise be in church are at the show. The public officials favor the theatre because they say it keeps the disreputables out of saloons; the ministers oppose them because they insist it takes respectable people from church. The question was earnestly debated at a recent monthly meeting of the Calvinistic Methodist ministers of Monmouthshire.

The municipal authorities of one English town recently refused a license to an exhibitor on the ground that his theatre would be too near a theatre already established in that neighborhood.

New Film Tax in South Africa

English manufacturers and dealers are considerably disturbed over a report that the government of British South Africa is planning to meet its expenses by the imposition of an additional tax on films and cinematographic machinery.

Censor Posters, Now!

All posters for advertising film plays must be submitted to the Chief Constable, according to a clause that will be hereafter inserted in all licenses granted to exhibitors of Sunderland, England.

Some American Films in England

“Tess of the Storm Country” received its trade showing at Shaftesbury Pavilion, London, on May 12, and was enthusiastically received. It is a Famous Players, an American brand of which “Hearts Adrift,” “Clothes,” and “A Lady of Quality,” are the latest to make a reputation among British exhibitors.

Preparations for a big publicity campaign to precede it accompanied the Universal serial, “Lucille Love,” in England, are about completed. The Trans-Atlantic, which handles Universals, promises to open the eyes of the Johnnie Bulls in publicity matters. The first installment will be released there June 20.

The Thanhouiser picture, “Robin Hood and Maid Marian,” has been approved by the British trade critics for its historical accuracy, and its realistic settings and costuming.

Important New Theatres

Newcastle, England, has added another theatre to its forty already in operation among its 200,000 inhabitants. The new house seats a thousand, at prices of one shilling and sixpence. The machine has a 107-foot throw. One of the theatre’s features is an elaborate tea-room. A theatre of the same size, the La Scala, opened in Aberdeen, Scotland, April 30.

Film Events in Italy

Cristofani & Company, of Genoa, Italy, have taken the exclusive Italian rights to the Famous Players productions.

Caserni, director-general of Gloria, is leaving that firm to be associated with Milano. His place will be taken by Del Colle, now of Savoia.

Dante Santoni, who founded the firm now known as Cines, is building a large factory in Rome, where under the brand name of “Santoni-Film,” he will produce pictures.

A “Film Bourse” has been established in Vienna, on lines similar to those of “Tivoli” in Paris. The “projection centrale” is located at the Hotel Monopol. Manufacturers and exchange heads are supporting it loyally.

Ambrosio has just acquired the rights to the plays of a number of Italy’s most popular playwrights, which that house will produce as photodramas.
Hooking Success with a Hairpin
By H. S. Purser

Keeping a Fresh Supply of Hairpins on Hand for Women Patrons Was Catering for the Feminine Trade—"Win the Women's Favor; the Rest Is Easy," His Motto

C ATER to the feminine trade. After you get it, the rest will follow easily."

This is the trade slogan of M. D. Singleton, manager of the Crystal Theatre, Dallas, Texas, who believes in making the photoplay house just as attractive to the women as the commodity the "live" house-to-house canvasser sells.

Proof that Singleton has made a successful campaign for the patronage of the gentler sex lies in the fact that his theatre attracts larger crowds than any others of the score or more in a city of 129,000.

Without resorting to sensational advertising, street heralds or any other form of overworked publicity he has gradually built up a trade which is reaping rich benefits, simply by appealing to the ladies.

O N E morning when Singleton came down early he was met at the door by the janitor who seemed to be perplexed.

"Lan sakes, Mistah Singleton," the darkey began as he held forth a shoebox full of hair pins. "Look what Ah's collected from dishear floor. Ise been savin' dese hair pins, but I dunno what to do wid 'em."

"Take 'em home to your wife," and Singleton had apparently dismissed the subject lightly.

But a few days later the semi-lobby of the Crystal Theatre was graced with an ornate dressing table. Singleton decided that the women who lost those hairpins needed more to replace them.

So he hit upon the idea of furnishing the dressing table with a large box of hair pins, every size and design. Other equipment included a generous supply of face powder, with the ever-necessary puff, and corn and brush.

W HEN the theatre was opened, staid old Southern theatre-goes were surprised to see neatly dressed girl ushers instead of the usual "flip" boys. It was a saving to the management more ways than one.

Besides, the economy, the good-will of the women was acquired. It was simply a safeguard to insure courteous treatment and to prevent a disastrous disruption of feminine confidence.

This was perhaps the first time girls were ever introduced as theatre ushers in the South and the innovation proved highly successful.

"I figured that the girls would eliminate any possibility of bad etiquette," Singleton said, "and I knew it would prevent the disgusting practice of fliting among the busy ushers and girl patrons in many theatres."

A NOTHER unique idea introduced by Singleton is proving highly satisfactory. While in the employ of another owner, Singleton had started the publication of a weekly bulletin which was distributed in the theatre. It contained advance programs, descriptions of coming features and newsy bits of gossip.

Despite the fact that very few copies were left in the seats, the owner did not approve of his plan of spending nearly $10 a week for the printing of the bulletin and it was discontinued.

When Singleton took over the Crystal one of the first things he did was to make arrangements for the publication of a weekly periodical. After arranging he went to the owner and said:

"I WANT to take $20 a week from the earnings to defray the expenses of a weekly bulletin."

"Twenty dollars will buy a lot of things," the owner said, "but if you think it will help business, go to it."

Every patron of the Crystal receives the "Crystal Weekly" now mailed to his home. The mailing list is made up almost entirely of women patrons and goes into almost 5,000 homes.

When Singleton booked a picture which he thought would interest his Hebrew customers, he went through the city directory and secured an exclusive list of practically every Jewish inhabitant.

He then mailed a special edition of the weekly to them, giving a synopsis of the picture.

SINCE I have started my weekly the receipts have jumped 20 per cent," Singleton explained, "and for that reason I know I am more than paying for it.

"You know, when a woman looks over an advance program and sees the name of a picture which appeals to her, she is sure to arrange with a neighbor or a relative to see the picture."

"Once you get the ladies to talking about your methods, the gossip will spread. And gossip often leads to action."

National Censor Raps Funkhouser

Cocks Tells Milwaukee Exhibitors What He Thinks of Chicago Methods—Urges Support of National Board—Predicts Rise in Prices

SPECIAL TO THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Milwaukee, Wis., May 20

"T HE National Board of Censors were unutterably opposed to the method used by Major Funkhouser of Chicago in censoring the film only for those under sixteen years and that he was dead against any form of official "censorship because it is sure to be political censorship," were but a few of the things stated by Mr. O. J. Cocks, secretary of the National Board of Censorship during a recent talk that he gave local exhibitors, exchange men and some of the members of the local board of censors at the Plankinton club room.

Owing to a misunderstanding as to the time the meeting would be called there was a rather small attendance, but all who were there were much interested in the talk. After he had finished, a number of questions were put to him, principally regarding his stand on the question of barring persons under a certain age from viewing white slave and drug pictures.

The question is being widely discussed in this city, as a number of theatres here have advertised an age limit very extensively. Mr. Cocks advised against it and warned exhibitors that they must take the opinion of the National Board, else there was sure to be a Federal censor.

During the discussion that followed the talk Mr. Cocks predicted that the high-price moving picture theatre— that is, ones playing exclusive features at 50 cents and $1.00—would soon be opened all over the country.

THANHouser ACTRESS TO WED CUMMINGS

It is officially announced that Irving Cummings and Mignon Anderson, of the Thanhouser forces, are engaged. Mr. Cummings, formerly of the Reliance and Pathé companies, has a large following among photo-play lovers. Miss Anderson is a blonde and plays ingenue leads with the New Rochelle company.

GIVING HIS PEOPLE A COMIC "APPETIZER"

A NOVELTY in the entertainment of audiences during intermissions has been introduced for the first time in Cincinnati by Joseph Hennegan, manager of the Lubin Theatre on West Fifth street.

Mr. Hennegan has secured several films, from one to three minutes in length, which are interpolated among the stereopticon ads that are thrown on the screen. All are humorous.

The first is styled 'Ladies, Please Remove Your Hats,' and to the vast amusement of the audience, tells in animated pictures, the story of discomfort felt by two male patrons of a picture theatre when two large women, with mountainous creations of the milliner's art, take seats directly in front of them, and their great relief when the women indignantly comply with their requests to remove the obstacles to a clear vision.

On another of these short films, two women comedians walk into the theatre and from the screen point out imaginary friends in the audience and cut such capers that they put the audience in a good humor for the more serious features that follow.

"I'd like more stuff like that," said Mr. Hennegan. "This is the first time it has been tried in Cincinnati, and if the manufacturers can furnish them, I know they will be taken up eagerly by most of the exhibitors."

A SCHOOL CHILDREN'S MATINEE

MANAGER KALISKA, of the Allendale Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., planned one of the most original "stunts" so far inaugurated by local managers. On Friday afternoon, May 15, Mr. Kaliska arranged a special matinee for the pupils of School No. 26 to come to the Allendale and see "Evangeline." The pupils are studying this literary classic in their English courses and all were enthusiastic about the matinee.

Mr. Kaliska arranged to have Mr. John B. Mallard, of the Department of Public Instruction, come to the theatre on that afternoon and give a lecture in conjunction with the pictures. Tickets were sold to the pupils by the teachers.

This certainly put Manager Kaliska "in strong" with the pupils, who escaped from a few hours in school. It is announced that future dates when instructive films play at the Allendale the special matinee will be in order.

WANTED: A LIVE WIRE

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 21.

ALTHOUGH the majority of exhibitors report excellent business, the owners of the Uno Theatre, this city, failed to do sufficient business to keep their house open, and as a result the house is now dark.

The Uno was placed on the market some time ago and several people investigated the proposition, but none seemed inclined to take it over.

The house is located on South Main street, some distance from the central city, and at one time was considered one of the best propositions in the city.

FEATURE ADVERTISING

"UCILLE LOVE" is being shown to capacity business at the Colonial, Elmiira, N. Y. Manager Buddington is advertising the series in a novel manner.

Gold-bordered, red velvet blankets with the announcement thereon, appear on the sides of two beautiful bay horses, which are driven through the streets by a man in livery seated in a swell outfit.

Bells attached to the harness make sufficient music to attract the attention of all but the deaf.

USING A BOYS' BAND TO BOOST BUSINESS

DICK KILGORE, house manager for the Colonial, one of the three big Wilmer, Vincent & Appel theatres in Harrisburg, Pa., that is devoted chiefly to motion pictures, has been working all winter organizing a boys' band which has been brought to such a state of efficiency that he is ready to use it extensively now for advertising purposes.

The boys have been selected for their musical ability and they ap-
Stopping Suicidal Competition

How a Wise Buffalo Exchange Manager Persuaded Three Exhibitors to Standardize Their Programs for Their Own Good

Buffalo, N. Y., May 21.

A VERY interesting controversy was recently settled in Buffalo that will be of interest to motion picture men, and goes to show to what lengths some exhibitors will go in order that they may outdo their competitors.

In the South Park district of Buffalo there are three theatres, each with a five-cent admission price and of ordinary size. They are the Como, the Abbott and the South Park. All are in the same district and naturally must draw on a very limited territory.

Competition, of course, started long ago, but upon the building of the South Park, this competition became extremely strong until about two weeks ago each theatre was showing on an average of thirteen reels each day for five cents.

Patrons were becoming disgusted at sitting through such long programs, exhibitors were losing money and exchange men were kept at their wit's end thinking what to do to keep these theatres supplied with films. Each was using the limit to put the other out of business, but in fact each was being slowly ruined.

At this juncture, Mr. Daniel J. Savage, manager of the local branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, stepped in. He asked each manager to come to his office at a certain time recently, giving each an invitation unknown to the other, so that there was no general surprise when at the appointed time these three managers all walked in at the same time.

For a few moments the atmosphere was not over cordial. But Manager Savage came to the rescue and, waving each to a chair in his office, he put the proposition up to them in a business-like manner.

He showed them that each was hurting himself and that before long the three theatres would have to close. Before the men left Mr. Savage's office that afternoon each had signed an agreement to show not more than four reels each day for five cents, and not more than six reels for ten cents, which is the admission charge on Sunday. Each promised to book no other attraction than motion pictures.

And so three theatres were saved to the South Buffalo motion picture patrons, through the courtesy of Mr. Savage, and a lesson learned by three managers who now see that there is a deal to be done.

Instead of bitter enemies, all are now the best of friends and are very warm in their congratulations to Mr. Savage for his diplomacy in getting them together and "cutting the Gordian knot."

Plan State Convention in Wilkes-Barre

Pennsylvania Exhibitors Will Meet There June 23 and 24—Sessions to Be Open—Ball Will Close Convention

Local motion picture exhibitors are making arrangements for the annual convention of the State Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, which will be held in Wilkes-Barre June 23 and 24. A telegram has been received here from M. A. Neff, national president, announcing that the executive board of the state association selected Wilkes-Barre as the next convention city.

Seven cities had petitioned for the privilege of entertaining the convention, but the arguments put forth by Gilbert C. Miller, president of the local organization, succeeded in winning the annual meeting for this city.

There will be a large attendance, it is expected; the membership of the Philadelphia association alone being more than 600. Delegations from practically every city and town in this commonwealth will be present, it is hoped.

According to plans just announced, the convention will be held in the Roosevelt Hotel. Firms manufacturing motion picture devices are already communicating with the association officers to secure booths at the convention hall.

The sessions will be opened to the public, it is the intention of the local committee to have the convention come to a close with a big ball, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to some charitable institution. "Picturology" of all sorts will be discussed at the convention by the exhibitors. The discussions will not be limited to technical topics, but will have a bearing on the elevation of the picture drama, the educational side of the motion picture and so on.

The officers of the local association are Mr. Miller, president; Fred Y. Herman, secretary-treasurer; Edward Gallagher, vice-president. The last convention was held in Philadelphia.

Kerrigan's Double "Stars" (?) in Albany

Announces Himself as "J. Warren Kerrigan of the General Film Corporation," Arranges for Some Big Features, Then—Presto! He Vamooses

Albany, N. Y., May 22.

THE inhabitants here are wondering who the man was who appeared in the city a few days ago, representing himself as "J. Warren Kerrigan," and making arrangements for the staging of a number of motion picture dramas. The pictures were never staged nor did the so-called Kerrigan show up again. The man's motive is not known, for he derived no benefit from what he did.

A pleasant-talking man went to the Ten Eyck Hotel on May 7, introducing himself as J. Warren Kerrigan, of the General Film Corporation. He wanted to arrange for rooms for his company, which would come to Albany Sunday. He told the manager he was arranged for the staging of several dramas, using the public buildings of Albany for a background. Some of the stars he was to have with him were Alice Joyce, Mary Fuller and Robert Leonard. Satisfactory arrangements were made for the rooms, for which the man gave a draft on a San Francisco bank for $4,125.50, signing it "J. Warren Kerrigan, General Film Company."

He then went to an automobile firm and arranged for the delivery of several machines, to be used in the dramas. He had the proprietor take him out for a short ride, and while on the ride explained several scenes that were to be enacted and the part the auto would play.

The man started to the newspapers, where he unfolded his full plans. The first drama was to be "The Politician's Reform." It was to be a six-reel affair, with Mr. Kerrigan taking the leading role. Many of the scenes of the play would take place in different parts of the capital. Governor Glynn would also appear, the man declared. He said when he wrote the play he had Albany in mind, and as all the scenario was here, decided to give the people of that city a chance to see how the pictures were made.

A big war drama was also on the bill, and this was to take place about six miles outside the city limits. In this drama he intended to hire several hundred local people to take part.

Everything was expectancy in the capital city, and when the man failed to show up on Sunday there was much disappointment.

The hotel people got in communication with the General Film Producing Company in New York and received the following telegram in reply:

"J. Warren Kerrigan made no arrangement with us."

People who saw the alleged Mr. Kerrigan and have seen the popular Universal star on the screen several times, claim that if the man who visited Albany is not Kerrigan, he is his double. Needless to add, the real Mr. Kerrigan is one of the Universal stars.

CONVENTION IN CAROLINAS A SUCCESS

Special to The Motion Picture News

The exhibitors of North and South Carolina to-day organized here the Carolina Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, after they had participated in a motion picture exposition held in connection with the annual twentieth of May celebration. Mason, of Goldsboro; Floyd Goodrich, of Durham; L. B. Davis, of Raleigh; M. W. Jordan, of Laurinburg; R. A. Cooper, of Statesville. Alternates to the annual meeting are: A. L. Parides, of Wilson, N. The new organization will hold its first meeting at Fayetteville, N. C. Delegates to the annual convention of the national organization at Dayton were instructed to vote for M. A. Nef, for re-election to the presidency of the national organization.

J. M. Bradlee, who planned the convention, will leave shortly for Pennsylvania. At the exposition feature pictures were shown and motion picture apparatus of every kind used in the business was displayed.

The Theatre: A Criticism

The theatre herewith illustrated was built by the writer as architect and owner, designed and leased for the purpose of a theatrical and vaudeville house. It is now used almost exclusively for motion pictures. This article describes the house as designed, with observations as to how the new lessee is not getting its maximum value out of it as a picture house and how conditions might be improved.

The writer believes that the facts may be applicable to many present-day installations and the article therefore a benefit to the reader.

The plan shows a symmetrical, yet peculiar piece of property which extends from street to street. The city ordinance demands that exits be provided on two opposite sides of the house and that, where a balcony is part of the theatre, the space or alley to either side must not be less than seven feet.

The shape of the plan is most ideal for the purpose for which it was designed. It is a shallow, wide, fan-shaped auditorium and balcony, and brings all the patrons close to the stage, and makes all the seats of equal value.

ITS acoustical and optical properties are perfect, no matter in what part of the house the patrons may be in or in what part of the stage the performer is located. The softest sounds of the violin or voice are distinctly and clearly heard from every seat in the auditorium, and a perfect view of the stage is obtained.

The front rows of the auditorium are not depressed, as is often the case, to the extent that those occupying the front seats cannot see the floor of the stage. Every line of sight from the rear of the house to the high points of the stage are highly satisfactory.

Performers who have traveled throughout the country have claimed this little house from every standpoint of architecture and construction highly satisfactory.

The stage is 20 feet deep and 60 feet wide, and clear of all obstructions. It is equipped with all necessary paraphernalia, such as scenery and house properties required for complete productions.

The dressing-rooms, six in number, are provided under part of the stage.

The heating and ventilating plant is located under a part of the stage and consists of low pressure steam boiler, a large fresh air induction fan which receives the fresh air from above the roof of the theatre through a large duct and then forces it over heating coils to various parts of the house.

There are several additional exit fans which suck the air, after it has been used, from the various parts of the auditorium and forces it outdoors. With the proper use of the system, the air is kept perfectly clean.

The high-pressure sprinkler system as well as the fire stand-pipe and aux-

This setting would immediately make the throw from the booth to the screen at a decidedly different angle, obviating most of the keystone effect. At the rear of the stage it could be made stationary and any swaying or vibration would be done away with. The line of sight from all parts of the house, as well as from those standing to the rear of the auditorium seats, would be improved. The screen should be masked in blue velour to match the decorations. The stage wings and borders could be made of the same material, thus setting the picture as it were in one large handsome shadow box. We trust that exhibitors will understand these criticisms and the importance of the same, that they may likewise seek betterment of conditions that they control. NATHAN MYERS.

AN ALL-ROUND ADVERTISING MAN

More and more the rapid evolution of the film industry demands good advertising men. This is equally true of the manufacturing and exhibiting ends. But—particularly in the manufacturing end—an advertising man is greatly strengthened by a working knowledge of the film business.

ELEMER J. McGOVERN

Elmer J. McGovern, publicity manager of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, whose interesting copy on Keystone, Kay-Bee, Broncho and Domino releases has given these excellent brands a new prominence in the trade, brings to his work both advertising and film experience. He has made a close study of exhibiting conditions and knows the exhibitor's needs in an intimate and practical way. Through his affiliation with several motion-picture trade journals, Mr. McGovern acquired a broad insight into the general lines of the industry, and added incidentally to his advertising experience. His already rapid advance in the field he has chosen and likes so well is proof enough of his successful future.

Plans have been filed for building a one-story photoplay theatre for Vincent Astor, on the northeast corner of Eighth avenue and 149th street, New York City. It will have a frontage of 103.6 feet and a depth of 100 feet.

Lorenz F. J. Weiher is the architect, and has placed the cost at $23,000.
Putting New Life into "Dead Ones"

By T. A. Huntley

The Advertising "Stunts" That Ed. Pearce Invented to Resurrect Broken-down Houses Are As Original As Many An Exhibitor Ever Used—And They Were Winners

In March, 1909, after having been laid up for a whole year with an injury to my right leg, I went back to the market in Butte where I had been employed when I got hurt, to apply for my old position. The cashier asked what I wanted and I told her I was looking for my old job again.

"Why, you're crazy," she said, "to go back to hard work," and when I asked her what she thought I was going to do for a living she said, "Get a job singing in a picture show—you've got all those other singers cheated to death."

I walked out of the market and stood on the street curb thinking it over. I had a fair baritone voice which I had used chivally for my own and my friends' amusement, with occasional ventures before the public, and I finally decided to take a shot at it.

I lost no time in hunting up Mr. McKenzie, the shrewd Scotch manager of the Park Grand Theatre, situated where the New American Theatre now stands. I told him I was a baritone singer looking for a job, and was instructed to come back at four o'clock for a tryout.

The upshot of it was that I went to work at the Old American Theatre on Main street that same night at a salary—I called it a salary then, although earning several times that now—of $15 a week.

It was not long after I went to work until McKenzie, who was one of the whitest men I've ever worked with, advised me to learn to lecture on films. Soon, with lots of practice, I became proficient enough to draw down a substantial increase in pay. That was my introduction to the motion picture business.

In the course of events the Montana Amusement Company bought the theatre and I managed to hold my position through the deal. They decided to remodel the house and sent me to Red Lodge, a coal camp in the southern part of the state, to manage a theatre which they had recently put on their circuit.

It was a blue day when I drifted into that little mining town and looked over the situation. The theatre was in bad shape and apparently crowded off the map so far as business was concerned.

But I have never been a quitter, and after thinking it over I came to the conclusion that here was a real test of my abilities—here was my chance to make good if I had it in me.

The first thing I did was to induce the company to remodel the front, and when that was done I started out after the business.

I used the newspapers to advertise my program, employed handbills freely and never overlooked a chance to put on a freak street ad. I liked the street ad idea best of all, and five years at the game has confirmed my judgment that it is as good a medium of publicity as anything that can be found, admitting at the same time that a business cannot be built up on that alone.

Almost from the start I got people interested, and it was not long until I was playing to capacity.

But don't think for a minute it was all a bed of roses—it wasn't so easy as it sounds. It was a fight in which I was compelled to use every resource at my command, and I had exceptionally strong competition for a small place.

I remember one night the other house had a three-reel feature on that was drawing quite a crowd. I had only an ordinary program.

I had to cut in on that crowd somehow, so I took my piano out into the lobby, engaged three extra musicians besides my trap-drummer and gave the public some first-class music. That kept the crowd in front of my theatre, while at the same time I slowed to capacity inside.

Another time I had a feature Indian picture I wanted to play up pretty strongly, so I got some Indian blankets and some "war paint" and took my operator, trap-drummer and a couple of other fellows who didn't object to making fools of themselves and converted them into real Indians.

I must include myself in the bunch also—I was fortunate enough to secure a genuine Indian war-bonnet, buckskin vest and pants and a very loud blanket, and I flatter myself I made the real Indian chiefs on nearby reservations look like imitations. After all that I got hold of an old stagecoach, fixed up some signs and "worked" the town all day.

You might think this was time and trouble wasted, but if you did you would be badly mistaken. The natives thought the world had come to an end—they turned out in droves to see us. I had on such a good makeup... that I stood at the door that evening taking tickets, and of the three hundred who passed in before the second reel was over, not one knew or could guess who I was.

I was due for a song after the second reel, and as it was impossible to get through the crowd to the singers’ booth I had to go around to the rear door. As soon as I started to sing the game was up—I shall always remember the “hand” I got.

Just one more incident of my first experience as a manager, to illustrate the character of the obstacles I had to overcome. The great majority of the population of Red Lodge were Finns. They had a picture theatre of their own and were doing quite a business, and in order to get some of their money back, they were miners and earning good wages—I procured the services of a young fellow who could translate English into Finnish and had handbills printed in the Finnish language. The result was that I got a whole lot of their business.

SOME time later the president of the company transferred me to Great Falls, the second largest city in the state, and upon my arrival instructed me to take charge of a new theatre which was to be opened in a few days.

Well, the general manager was there on the opening day, Sunday, and as usual I was the canary bird. We got away to a good start and I was preparing to settle down to build up the business in my own way when I received a jolt from an unexpected quarter that nearly took the wind out of me.

It was the second day of my connection with the theatre. The general manager called me into his office.

“Mr. Pearce,” he said, “you will be expected to lecture a reel every show and also lecture a travelogue. As we are going to charge ten and fifteen cents admission it is up to the management to give the public a little more for its money than our other house.” The company owned another theatre on the same street, in the back.

Now to my notion the lecturing gag was a thing of the past, and when I was asked to lecture I flatly refused, giving the general manager my reasons. The other theatre they controlled was just a common store building and a regular dump of a place, managed by a street carnival “spiler,” who wanted the new theatre as he called himself a good lecturer.

WELL, he got the job and I took the dump show-shop. It rather took the ginger out of me for awhile, but I finally braced up and started to work in genuine earnest.

I started a lot of street ads that made the town sit up and was rewarded with capacity houses, while my friend up street was compelled to cut out the fifteen-cent admission. He did so without advising the company, and when they learned of it he “got his” in short order.

He quit soon afterward and the president of the company came up to see me about taking charge of the new theatre.

I am frank to say it did not take me long to refuse. They thought they were putting in a better man than I when it was first opened, and while I could see they had come around, my pride would not permit me to accept their proposition at that time, so the day the president went away found me still in charge of the old house at a little larger salary.

A local man was put in charge of the new theatre, and he came out the next morning with a big display announcement anouncing him and telling the effect that he catered to nothing but the better class of patronage—an advertisement that came near putting a padlock on the door of his house, for the live picture-show man knows that if he caters to nothing but the cultured people of Montana he will starve to death.

I learned as one of my first lessons that it is the laboring people who swell the night’s receipts in the box-office.

A few weeks later the president brought a prospective buyer to the Falls. He gave him his choice of the two houses, and to avoid making a mistake the buyer stayed there a week, going from one theatre to the other and observing the crowds and exacting the expense of operation. He soon made up his mind to buy the old one.

There was only one thing for me to do then—it was up to me to take the new theatre. The house was taking in on an average of $90 a day, with an expense of $42 a day, but in less than ten days after I took charge of it the receipts were running between $80 and $90 a day. I am not boasting—I am merely stating facts.

TO show how some managers fail to see an opportunity when it is literally thrust at them, one night while I was playing at Great Falls a showman drifted in with two trained ponies. He had been turned down at the larger houses and as a last resort came to me at the old theatre, which I was then running.

I had no stage, and when he spread his photographs before me I got him down to a reasonable price, engaged him for three days, put in a false stage and had three thousand tickets printed, reading: "This ticket and ten cents good for a ride on the ponies at the matinee Saturday afternoon."

I sent one of my ushers with the man who owned the ponies to make the rounds of the schools. Each took a pony and made the complete circuit, giving the tickets away. The children were attracted by the ponies, which wore bright red velvet blankets bearing their names embroidered in gold, and of course weren’t happy until they got the ten cents to go to the matinee and ride the ponies. Saturday afternoon the theatre was so jammed and the streets outside so crowded that extra police were detailed to the scene to keep the sidewalk clear.

After I had put the new theatre on a sound footing the wanderlust seized me and I went back to Butte and worked under General Manager Bill Cuts, of the New American Theatre. But soon discovered that I was expected to follow the amateur suggestions of a lot of wave-gazers.

The following day I left for a tour of the state with state’s-right feature films and made big money. It was while on this tour that I selected Billings as thelivest town in the state and decided to settle down here.

THERE’S one point I can’t emphasize too strongly, and that is this—interest the kids. Most managers agree that children are among their best patrons, but I don’t think they really realize how big an asset they really are.

Wherever I’ve gone I have catered to the children of the community, and I find I can interest lots of the parents through them. As an illustration of my method of getting the children and family to the matinee for children under sixteen, when a quarantine was lifted in Billings recently, and it wasn’t possible to find seats for all who came.

That and street advertising are two of the principal factors in my success, if such it may be called.

If I were to make another suggestion, I should pound on that recognized factor in success in any line of endeavor—always give the public a square deal. If I advertise anything the public knows I have it, I never advertise unless my program is worth while. People learn to know and appreciate this.

Don’t imagine that I think I’ve reached my limit or can’t learn any more about the motion picture business. I honestly believe I have a fair start toward success, and in the next few years hope to accomplish far more than I have in the past, but as for that, the future alone can tell. I can only say that that it’s a great game and one which I thoroughly enjoy.
Universal's Hat Is in the Ring

Editor's Note.—The following editorial is reprinted from the current issue of the "Universal Weekly." Of such vital interest is the subject discussed, "Contractor's" to every exhibitor and producer, that The Motion Picture News believes the attention of all whom it concerns should be called to Mr. Laemmle's article. It will be found under the title, "Straight-from-the-Shoulder Talks, No. 34."

EVERY big industry in the United States at some period in its career is told to 'throw up your hands' by the human leech known as the Political Grunter. The railroads have had the hold-up pistol shoved under their noses. So have the insurance companies. So has every other line of business that looks prosperous enough to be held up.

"Evidently, it is now the motion picture man's time to be stuck!"

"The bills now before Congress, providing for a political national board of censors, are the first indication.

"Don't imagine for a moment that these bills are of no interest to YOU! Don't imagine that they won't affect your pocketbook, for they will!"

"If a political board once gets control of the motion picture business, the manufacturers will be the first to suffer, of course, as the only people compelled to make up their losses by raising the price of films to exchanges. And the exchanges, in turn, will have to raise their rental prices to exhibitors."

If the exhibitors, in turn, could get even by CHARGING THE PUBLIC A HIGHER ADMISSION FEE THAN AT PRESENT, they would not feel the evil effects of the proposed new laws. But you know mighty well that the only way you can raise your admission fee is by giving the public better shows.

"So you may as well face the disagreeable fact right now that THE EXHIBITOR WILL EVENTUALLY BE THE GOAT if these vicious new laws go into effect."

"That is why I came out openly last week and urged you to FIGHT TO KILL THE BILLS. I asked you to YOUR PATRONS TO SEND A PROTEST TO THEIR SENATORS AND CONGRESSMEN. I meant every word of it and I repeat the advice to-day."

"Your part is easy. Just you forget it. I repeat:"

FIRST: Write a letter or a telegram to the senator and congressman from your district protesting against the passage of Senate Bill No. 1491 and House Bill No. 1495.

"Second, ask every employee in your theatre to do exactly the same thing."

"Third, ask YOUR PATRONS TO DO PRECISELY THE SAME THING. You can explain the situation to your patrons by means of slides, just as I told you last week. Or you can print notices on your program. Or you can talk to the people as they enter or leave your house. Do this day after day. Don't let up. Don't do it once or twice and then imagine that you have saved your flag and country. Keep everlastingly at it."

"This is serious, gentlemen!"

"Remember, the proposed Political National Board would first pass on films (for a fee) but they would still have to be passed by state and local boards. It means a double or possibly a triple censorship and SOMEBODY'S GOT TO FOOT THE BILL."

"It's better to boot the bills now than to foot the bill afterward!"

"The Political Hold-up Man is loading his gun. Which are you going to do, TAKE HIS BULLETS AWAY NOW or let him load them into his gun, stick it behind your ear and growl, 'Hands up!'"

Art and Pictures United by Lasky

Wilfred Buckland, Former Associate of Belasco, Engaged as Artistic Director —Realism Will Be Abandoned—Higher Forms of Suggestion to be Employed

"MY" aim will be to produce artistic pictures, to produce visualizations on films as an artist produces his visualizations upon canvas.

"Too many picture productions of the present day are only commercial photographs, accurate and clear in detail, but with no artistic value or meaning.

"I am entering the motion picture field, because that field offers what the stage does not—an opportunity to create new methods of production to take the place of those which we have outgrown. And these ideas I believe necessary to the future of the motion picture."

There, in a few words, are Wilfred Buckland's reasons for bringing to a close years of association with the foremost theatrical managers of twenty-five years—among them Augustin Daly, Charlie and Daniel Frohman, and David Belasco—and assuming the position of artistic director for the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company.

Imagine a man who is at once artist, illustrator, interior decorator, architect, electrical engineer and stage director and you have Wilfred Buckland. The stage settings and mechanical effects for "Omar" this season, and "The Poor Little Rich Girl" last year, are his devising. While with Belasco, Mr. Buckland created most of the lighting effects for "The Darling of the Gods," "Adrea," "Dubarry," "The Girl of the Golden West," "The Rose of the Rancho" and other productions. The architecture, color scheme and interior decoration of the Belasco Theatre, Forty-fourth street, New York, are his. The "baby spotlight," as it is called, was his invention.

Mr. Buckland's numerous and varied talents will henceforth be devoted to the Lasky productions. He makes no pretense of explaining the reasons for his choice. The big producing concerns, he discovered, are bound by hard conventions. They resent the introduction of new ways and means. The progressive, far-seeing spirit necessary to the carrying out of his ideas he found in the Lasky firm alone.

As artistic director, Mr. Buckland will co-operate with Cecil De Mille, whom he has known intimately for a number of years. To make every element of the pictures contribute to kicking the mood and sentiment of the scene to the audience will be Mr. Buckland's aim.

"On the stage," said he, "realism has gone as far as it can. Detail has been multiplied until it has ceased to convey a meaning. The old method is outworn; the new—so successfully used in Europe by Beardsley and Gordon Craig—has not yet been adopted. The same is true of pictures.

"The mere physical, photographic reproduction of life is paramount now and it has already begun to outlive its usefulness. The result has been commercial photography instead of artistic visualization of dramatic events.

"The higher forms of appeal to the imagination, through artistic suggestion, must be brought into play. I used them in 'Omar.' I shall put them into practice in these productions. The result, I believe, will be a new source of strength and popularity for the pictures."

Mr. Buckland is already on his way to the Los Angeles studios of the Lasky Company. Here he will familiarize himself thoroughly with every detail of picture production, before attempting to perform his new duties.

KENTUCKY DERBY FILMED

Louisville, Ky., May 20—The Kentucky Derby, which was run in the presence of 40,000 people, brought a big crowd to Louisville, and increased attendance at the theatres will be in evidence for a few weeks, during the time that the thoroughbreds are running. Many of the visitors are from the rural sections, and make a holiday of their trip to Louisville, and the movies of course get a considerable proportion of their attention.

The Derby was put on the film for Alf Oldham, a local exhibitor, the work being done by the Industrial Motion Picture Company, of Chicago. The day was clear and the crowd a record-breaker, and it is thought that the pictures will make a great hit when exhibited. Old Roschud, said to the greatest three-year-old since Colin, won the Derby. Out of all his starts, he has been beaten but twice, finishing second each of those two starts.

Speaking of racing recalls the fact that Henry Strube, treasurer of the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and owner of the Empire and Sun theatres, of Louisville, won a big sum last year on Doncraill, a long shot which won the Derby at odds of 91 to 1. Mr. Strube did not have an opportunity to repeat this year, for Old Roschud was too great a favorite.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING THAT COUNTS

MANAGER M. Schlesinger, of the Academy Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., has been doing some unusual advertising with such features as The Daily World's "Smashing the Vice Trust" and "Wrecking the Merchant." He has been using five-column, 14-inch ads in all the Sunday papers and says that his returns have justified his outlay for publicity. In addition to his extensive advertising, the lobby display at the Academy has been covered with oil paintings, advertising the above features.

EDISON GETS VIOLA DANA

Viola Dana, well known on the legitimate stage, since her appearance in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," has signed a contract to appear in pictures produced by the Edison Company.

Her debut on the screen will be made in "Molly the Drummer Boy," a Civil War picture.

The Edison Company may congratulate themselves on obtaining such a valuable addition to their staff.

Putting Productions Across

That, in Three Words, Is the Aim of A. H. Sawyer, Inc., Who Proposes to Make a Specialty of Marketing Pictures

"MARKET specialists." Has the phrase any particular meaning for you? Not now, perhaps. But it is acquiring more and more importance every day.

Market specialization is almost an unknown thing in the motion picture field. That is why A. H. Sawyer, Inc., has entered it. The production of motion pictures has developed and progressed, while the marketing of them—intelligent, systematic marketing that implies a knowledge of sales conditions, methods and possibilities—has lagged behind. For the want of proper marketing, the best production may go a-begging.

Of specialists in production there are many, but specialists in marketing there have been few—until now. The demand is a crying one. A. H. Sawyer, Inc., is equipped and prepared to supply it, for big manufacturers and small ones, for big exhibitors and little ones—to bridge the gap that too often exists between the manufacturer and his market, between the exhibitor and his source of supply.

A production, for instance, is placed in the hands of this concern. A. H. Sawyer, Inc., will advise authoritatively whether the best results can be obtained by booking the picture direct, or selling it state rights. They will undertake to handle all the advertising necessary to promote the picture. Advertising campaigns will be mapped out by them, the best lithographs and posters that can be devised will be prepared, heralds, readers, newspaper advertising, and every other publicity project that can further the success of the production will be supplied. And all this at less expense to the manufacturer than such a campaign on his own part would involve.

The offices of A. H. Sawyer, Inc., at 1600 Broadway, New York City, are a fitting environment for the realization of such a system as this. Every possible convenience is here offered to the exhibitor for the trans- action of his business. Telephones, messengers and stenographers are at his disposal. The offices are built in his honor and are his, in the quiet buff-and-blue color scheme of the decorations is restful.

On Saturday, May 23, the purple-and-gold Pompeian projection room is to be formally opened and promises to take rank as the most elaborate room of its kind in the city. With the opening of this department, the full resources of A. H. Sawyer, Inc., will be brought into play.

A. H. Sawyer, the man, is generally conceded to be one of the best all-around men in the industry today. A. H. Sawyer will, before long, stand for a system as well as a man, and that one of the most efficient systems that can be employed for the marketing of pictures.

Exhibitor Defends Lease in Court

Blames Mails for Landlord's Failure to Receive Check for Rent—Waterbury, Conn., Case of Interest to Theatre Lessees

Special to The Motion Picture News

Waterbury, Conn., May 29.

The following news item will interest lessees of motion picture theatres. The trouble arose over the failure of a check to reach its destination on time owing to a delay in delivering a mail. When the case comes up for a hearing it will be decided whether a lessee of a motion picture house can be held responsible for discrepancy. On Uncle Sam's mail, especially when a contract is at stake.

The facts are these:

Robert H. Molzon, who runs the Bank Hotel in this city and owns the Scenic Theatre, one of Waterbury's largest motion picture theatres, applied at the office of the superior court for $250 which Carl F. Mitchellfelder, of Montclair, N. J., is alleged to have deposited there as one month's rent for the Scenic. He did not get the money, which was in the form of a check. Some time ago Mr. Mitchellfelder brought an action against Mr. Molzon for an injunction to prevent him from ousting him from the Scenic, charging that he had paid his rent promptly.

The papers in the case set up that the Molzon man sent his check as usual for the monthly rent and because there was a delay in delivering the mail, Mr. Molzon did not receive it in time and held that the lease was broken accordingly.

The Montclair man gave his check for the amount to the clerk of the superior court with the papers in the case to prove that he was willing to stand by his lease and held that the mails were responsible for the delay in delivering the check to Mr. Molzon.

The case is attracting wide attention in motion picture circles here. Mr. Molzon in addition to owning the Bank Hotel and the Scenic Theatre, also owns the Lyric Theatre in this city.

Here Are a Few Big Eclectic Features That Mean Enormous Box Office Receipts For Any Exhibitor

4 PARTS

An intensely interesting and thrilling drama of the real horrors of war and the toll it takes from the fathers and brothers and sons and sweethearts.

Here is an opinion of this feature from Kewanee, Ill: "War Is Hell" is one of the most satisfying pictures I ever ran. I consider it a masterpiece and its drawing power is remarkable. I did a greater business the second day than I did the first, and this in spite of the fact that the evening of the second day it rained very hard. Had it been pleasant I would not have been able to accommodate the crowds.

6 PARTS

The little boy, stolen from his parents, wanders from town to town and leads the life of a typical street arach of the Continent. The scenes are laid in their true settings. The life shown is true in every particular. It is a thrilling story of the training of the future criminals. Forced to beg and steal for a living, the high principles of the little waif keep him straight till, after wandering over half Europe and England, he is reunited to those who love him. This is a heart-throb story for grown-ups as well as children.

4 PARTS

The original criminal gets away with the crime, which is blamed on another. Later in life the son of the real culprit has the power to make the life of the daughter of the blamed man miserable through his knowledge of the crime. The son has followed in the footsteps of his father and is pressing his advantage. Just as he seems to be going to succeed, an old partner of his father arrives and clears the name of the blamed man. This picture carries a lesson and is bound to make a big hit wherever it is shown.

"The Cream of American and European Studios"
A bombshell was thrown into the Philadelphia film mart when it was announced that Harry Swalbe, who has been branch manager for the General Film Company there since its formation, had resigned. The office is in charge of J. C. Hennessy, of New York, acting as special representative of the General with W. U. Bethell as assistant branch manager.

It is impossible to find out at the present writing whether Mr. Swalbe left of his own accord or whether he resigned under pressure. The change went into effect May 18.

All of Mr. Swalbe’s friends are sorry to see him go and are waiting anxiously to know where he will tie up.

By the time this number of The Motion Picture News goes to press, Buffalo, N. Y., will have lost one of its most popular motion picture exchange men, in the person of Mr. E. Meadows, manager of the Special Feature Department of the Buffalo branch of the General Film Company for the past year. Mr. Meadows announces that after a ten-day trip to Bermuda, for some fresh air as he puts it, he will return to New York and assume an important position with the new Colonial Film Corporation, hinting that he will be head of the sales department.

While in Buffalo Mr. Meadows has made many friends by his genial personality, and he will be missed by a host of local picture men, who found it a pleasure to deal with him. He will assume his new position with the Colonial Film Company June 1, and will be at his corporation’s booth at the exhibition in New York to meet his old friends.

W. Bob Holland, formerly assistant managing editor of the American Press Association News Syndicate, has just joined the publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation, under the general direction of Philip Mindil. Mr. Holland is well known in New York and elsewhere as a newspaper man, and his editorial experience covers a number of years and many departments of the “game.”

The Broadway Picture Producing Company have sold the New Jersey rights to “The Trail of the Lonesome Pine” to George W. Jacobs and William B. Putnam, two live-wire buyers. The offer made is said to have been several hundred dollars more than the usual price paid for such pictures, and that Messrs. Jacobs and Putnam have a good proposition is evidenced in the offer of a large bonus for their contract.

Leo Fisk is with the Primagraph Film Company, and is busy with the big feature, “The Flames of Justice.”

The engagement of Joe Smiley, Lubin director to Lile Leslie, the popular Lubin actress, was announced by the former at the Baltimore Convention Ball, which was attended by a large number of motion picture people.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, author of “Rodney Stone,” from which the film, “The House of Temperley,” was made, sailed from Southampton, England, on the Olympic Wednesday, May 20, to visit America.

Daniel V. Arthur, of the Playgoers Film Company, returned to New York recently on the steamship Kronprinzessin Cecilie of the North German Lloyd line. He has brought over a number of new pictures of Lina Cavalieri and some scenarios.

Anna Laughlin, who has played the lead in several Broadway successes such as “The Top of the World” and “The Wizard of Oz,” has been cast for the ingénue role in the Life-Photo Film Corporation’s next release “The Greyhound.”

Miss Laughlin will play the part of Bess Allen, a part to which she is peculiarly adapted. She will be assisted by a most capable cast.

By the end of this month there will be twelve companies presenting Annette Kellermann in “Neptune’s Daughter.” There will also be companies in London, Paris and Berlin.
Frank Bates, general manager of the Eclipse Company, of Paris and New York—the same firm as the Charles Urban Trading Company of London—returns to Europe in a few days, after a short stay in the United States. R. Ferrand, Mr. Bates’ right-hand man, will be located in New York City to represent the Eclipse in this country, at 110 West forty-third street, at the offices of A. Blinkhorn. Eclipse releases will total three thousand feet a week; comedy and educational, and a two or three-reel picture twice a month.

Hayward Mack, the actor and director, has been engaged by the Progressive Motion Picture Corporation to assist Harry Carey with “The Master Crackman.” When this picture is completed, Mr. Mack will take up the direction of the “Busi Issy” series.

Frank G. Terwilliger, of Albany, has made arrangements with the Pan-American Film Company, 110 West Forty-fourth street, New York, to obtain the exclusive agency for that company in his district. He has opened offices at 29 Maiden Lane, Albany, New York, where exhibitors may book these features.

James McEmnry, the head of the James McEmnry Syndicate, of London and New York, is returning to this country on the Olympic, with a number of big English productions. Among them “The World, the Flesh and the Devil,” and “Little Lord Fauntleroy.” These have been secured in conjunction with the Shuberts and are to be released on a state-right basis.

There are others in four, five and six reels, the titles of which are: “A Blind Man’s Secret,” a drama declared to be the first genuine Hungarian feature ever shown in this country; “Kleptomania,” and “For Love and the Crown,” in the disposal of which Mr. McEmnry will have as his assistants Thomas Savage Graham, resident manager, and Arthur Lovey, associated with the McEmnry Syndicate.

The William L. Sherry Feature Film Company have secured the New York rights to “The House of Temperley.”

A telegram recently received by the All Star Feature Corporation from the Seattle office of the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., which concern handles the All Star output in the Northwest, reads as follows: “Permit us to congratulate you upon the picture, ‘Pierre of the Plains,’ just received. It is the best we have yet seen made in America.”

Mme. Bertha Kalisch has recently finished the production of “Marta of the Lowlands” for the Famous Players Film Company. Madame Kalisch has never before been seen in picture but her versatility made the work easy for her. A Chicago critic has said that the leading part in this production, which she created on the speaking stage, is the most difficult part on the stage.

Madame Kalisch is a noted operatic performer in English, German and Jewish. She has played in Harrison Grey Fiske’s “Sapho” and also in “The Kreutzer Sonata” and “Mona Vanna.”

Herbert Rawlinson, leading man for the Universal Special Feature Company, under the direction of Otis Turner, has, like all stars, been in Canada, Herbert took to the road with a small company, in which before long he was playing leads.

He is an Englishman by birth, and was born in Brighton on the South Coast. He was formerly leading man for Selig and played also with Hobart Bosworth in the “Sea Wolf.”

Mr. Lucchese, of the Italian American Film Company, of New York City, is planning for his first release “Spectro, in the Hour of Midnight,” a five-reeler, for state right buyers.

This is the first feature of a series of six features, all spectacular. Mr. Lucchese was for years manager of three theatres in Philadelphia and an exchange in that city.

Frank T. Highfield, of the Asco Inc., has gone to New York to establish a factory for the manufacture of Radium Gold Fiber Screens. This will not curtail the activity of the plant in St. Louis, which will run as usual.

The factory of the National Film and Rain and Flame Proofing Company has been running night and day for a full week. He first entertained them by giving a dance and later a supper.

The scene was a typical Bowery café, and after the good time Mr. Powell asked them to "muss it up" for the camera—they did. "THE IDLE RICH"
(Warner's Features—Three Parts)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

It is quite within the bounds of probability that this picture will be beneficial to the whole industry. Those laymen who have watched countless dramas and comedies on the screens have probably never thought of the deeper calling the films have for the world as an educator and business assistant. Sidney Olcott, the producer, has taken it upon himself to show one manner, at least, in which the animated picture may be made most serviceable to any large business house.

A manager goes to his employers' mine and finding conditions showing delinquency, takes a series of pictures, which are flashed on the screen in the home office, and the defects pointed out. Mr. Olcott shows this on the screen so that a picture is projected within a picture.

Valentine Grant, leading woman for the S. I. D. company, has a very charming part to play in this drama of society life, and interprets it with much grace. She is one of the few born actresses, for although this is but her second appearance upon the screen, and she has never been on the stage, her work is of the very best, and shows a technique that could hardly be bettered.

There are a number of innovations throughout the three reels. The idea throughout seems to have been born in mind to get away from the time-worn ruts of conventionality as much as possible and strike out anew. In order to show that the villain has received his just deserts, and not wishing to use the old trial scene, the director shows a prison scene and the "heavy" having his hair actually cut in the most approved style. Likewise when it is wished to get the effect of a bullet actually knocking the cigar out of a man's mouth, a bullet is used.

There are several long and thrilling automobile chases with the usual firing, but for a change several persons are struck by bullets and drop from the speeding car. The pictures were made in Florida and throughout the chase the scenery was beautiful. Tall palmetto trees and sandy roads, with here and there just a glimpse of water through the straight trunks.

James Vincent, one of Mr. Olcott's stock members, did some good work in a part that seemed excellently suited to his talents. As Reginald, a society do-nothing, he merely posed for the ladies, quite bored with everything.

Sid Olcott was simply himself throughout. He played the dashing hero type in a convincing manner. The remainder of the players did their share.

The story tells of a young man who assumes charge of a mine in the South. Many views of phosphate mining are given. He drives out the former reckless manager and so excites his anger. The owner's daughter is rescued by him and he, of course, marries her. In the telling, the story assumes the cloak of a very old tale, but in the playing it is original.

"THE LOVER'S GIFT"
(Majestic—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Wonderful riding marks this release, which features Earle Foxe, Francella Billington and George Siegemann. The sub-plots are rather obscure, but the main plot, the sacrifice that one man made for his favored rival, cannot fail to appeal to all, young and old.

The two reels are full of action; the riding is most daring and sensational. The photography is bright and clear and the few interiors that appear are well laid. Earle Foxe, in the last reel, goes through the ravings of a delirious person, lost on the desert, so realistically that one can hardly realize that a camera was clicking away before him.

"THE ROYAL BOX"
(General Film Masterpiece—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

After the celebrated play by Charles Coghlan, which for many seasons played the best houses in the country, Mr. Coghlan also played the leading part, and on his death a revival was made by his daughter, Gertrude Coghlan. The action of the drama is unique, inasmuch as it is a play within a play, and differs in this respect from the many others that for the most part contain nothing but slapstick comedy. It is made by the Selig Company. The cast, consisting of Thomas Carrington and Gertrude Coghlan in the leading parts, Walter Roberts as the "heavy," and Clifford Bruce, Palmer Bowman and Adrienne Kroell, are all worthy of mention.

The sympathetic tone of the story adds greatly to the interest of the audience. James Clarence, the leading char-
"PERILS OF PAULINE"
(Eclectic—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

The fifth of the series, released May 18. Two new characters are added in this installment, namely Miss Sampson and Signor Gaskinelli. Both of these characters assume important proportions as the chapter progresses. Eleonor Woodruff plays the part of Miss Sampson and Sam Ryan the Italian. The latter was particularly clever in a difficult role. The others in the cast, Crane Wilbur, Pearl White, Paul Panzer and Francis Carlyle, are the same as hitherto.

Chinatown is utilized in this picture as the scene for doing away with the heiress. The fight scene, staged in one of the joss houses, is one of the most realistic imaginable. Mr. Wilbur is attacked by a number of real Chinamen, engaged for this purpose by Pathé, and thrown heavily to the floor. This scene, it is said, was rehearsed a number of times, but the realism was lacking. L. J. Gasnier, the director, worked the Orientals to such a pitch of excitement that they went after Crane Wilbur in a manner that would make a football captain proud.

The exteriors were actually made in New York's Chinatown. Objection was made by the natives to any scenes of violence. Several "white slave" scenes have been staged there and the reputation they have given the settlement has not made the Chinese amiable towards the camera.

The story is as follows: Harry keeps up his efforts to get Pauline to marry him at once and give up her love of adventure. It is useless, for she will not consider it. Harry, believing jealousy will help, starts flirting with Miss Sampson, Pauline's friend. This, however, causes Pauline to flirt with Signor Gaskinelli, an Italian adventurer. At the suggestion of Owen, the secretary, the Italian suggests a slumming party and on its being accepted, makes arrangements to have her captured on arrival there.

The plans all work successfully. She is captured and hidden away behind an idol. But Harry, having missed her, returns, and the fight starts. The police arrive at the opportune moment and Pauline and Harry are freed.

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA"
(Pathé—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

To one who had never heard of either Antony or Cleopatra, this picture would tell the story perfectly, so fully explanatory are the scenes and sub-titles. The picture is magnificent in every point—settings, photography, lighting, scenes and individual acting as well as the battle scenes.

The return of Octavius, after his victory over Antony, is most impressive; he and his army are seen marching along the Nile in the darkening light, the leaders astride camels.

All the battle scenes are good; a large number of men appear in the old Roman garb and armed with spears, battle-axes and knives. The last scene is tragic and true to its purpose, in which Antony kills himself after his defeat, and the proud queen, not willing to survive the triumph of Octavius, bares her breast to the deadly sting of a serpent.

"MONGREL AND MASTER"
(Excany—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN, the winner of The Ladies' World Hero Contest, is featured in this drama, which besides giving the observer a delightful change from the ordinary picture in regard to plot and acting, shows up the political boss in his true light. Mr. Bushman has a part here that most actors would fall down on, for the character depends on the actor, not the actor on the character, as is very often the case. Of course he handles this part well as he does any part he takes.

Rapley Holmes takes the part of the "Mongrel"; the impression is a typical boss of the lowest class. Ruth Stonehouse, as the mayor's daughter, is good. The drama, though true to life in many places, is rather far fetched in others, but as a whole the piece cannot fail to please the most fastidious.

The action is not fast, or thrilling, and no sensationalism appears in it at all, but it is of a kind that holds one with an absorbing interest from the beginning until the end, and as said before, the acting is what makes the picture, not the picture the acting.

Big Bill and his pal (Mr. Bushman) are in the act of burglarizing a house when the latter sees a picture of a little girl he had met the day before and who had given him a flower. Her picture and the words she said to him cause him to forsake his trade and live straight.

Big Bill goes on in his evil ways and later becomes a political boss. Stone is elected mayor and the reformed crook becomes his secretary and later falls in love with his daughter. Big Bill also seeks her hand and when she refuses him, he determines to ruin her father.

But the faithful secretary overhears the boss plotting the division of some dishonestly gained money with his confederates, rounds them up and has them arrested. In a rage Big Bill tells of his captor's past and of entering the house many years ago. But the mayor, recalling the burglar's tools he found the morning after, learns that his secretary is the reformed burglar, and instead of condemning him, admires him all the more.
“Shorty’s Strategy.” (Broncho. Two reels. May 13.)—A picture portraying further experiences of Shorty after his first episode in “Shorty Escapes Marriage.” This series gives promise of being exceptionally interesting if the first two pictures may be taken as criterions of the ones to follow.

Although a drama, the spectator gets many a laugh from Shorty’s doings, who is quite a character and a good actor. This time his friend gambles away his father’s money while in town. Shorty gets it back by making the winner drink until he is drunk and then calmly walking off with the “roll.”

“Suzanne.” (Eclair. May 10.)—For light entertainment this cannot be bettered. A charming romantic drama, of which Barbara Tennant and O. A. C. Lund are the principals. Suzanne has neither friends nor entertainment, though pretty, until the statute of Saint Catherine, to which she had prayed, brings her a lover, in the son of her landlord.

“The Accusing Eye.” (Pathé. Two reels. May 2.)—A drama that cannot help “getting across.” As a scenic alone it would be a success, but combined with a novel plot, its value is doubled. The opening scene is a good one. The water scenes, though well photographed, move too much as is usually the case, owing to the camera being in a small boat.

Scott, through jealousy, has ruined a happy love affair and drives Fred, the man in the case, insane. Fred, on seeing Scott again, has his memory restored. He follows him everywhere, and finally when Scott goes for a sail Fred gives chase in another boat, cuts Scott’s craft in two with his and the frail boat soon sinks, carrying Scott with it.

“When Conscience Calls.” (Lubin. Two reels. May 7.)—A fine offering, somewhat impossible, but interesting throughout. Kempton Greene, Mary Keane and Earl Metcalfe are the stars. The mad ravings of Duncan (Kempton Greene) wandering in the everlast flight from the police, are worthy of great praise and are quite impressive. The burning of the overglades, toward the end, is real as well as realistic.

The plot is old, but nevertheless it is a good one, and in this case it is handled well and different from most. The small points are especially well handled and will hardly escape the eye of the most unobservant.

Duncan has a growing bank account, a happy home, and above all a faithful wife. His false friend induces him to invest his money with him. He does this and loses it. Seeking revenge he breaks into Miller’s house and attacks him, takes his money and flees. The police cannot find him, but a detective, watching his wife, locates him and his arrest follows. But Miller, relenting, will not identify him, and a happy ending follows.

“The Mystery of Room 642.” (Essanay. Two reels. May 8.)—This is the second of the adventures of Richard Neil, private detective, featuring Francis X. Bushman. It is both interesting and pathetic and full of action, not sensational at all, but lively enough. The photography is much better than in many Essanay pictures. From the very outset the production scents of mystery, nor is the mystery cleared until the very end. The culprit is concealed from our eyes for a long time, and when he is unmasked the audience is quite taken aback.

Neal is called upon to solve the mystery of the disappearance of some valuable papers which were locked in the safe. After a lot of novel situations are introduced, he finds the thief is Ward, the secretary and coming son-in-law of his employer, the owner of the papers.

“Behind the Footlights.” (Lubin. Two reels. May 6.)—An excellent feature with Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe playing the leads. It shows how the efforts of a simple stage electrician saved the honor and happiness of a newly arisen star. The settings are true to life, the photography is of a high class, and the drama will certainly please all those who are fortunate enough to see it.

John, one of the Western mounted police, is engaged in rounding up a gang of outlaws headed by a man known as the Fox. The Fox, really John’s long-lost brother, takes refuge with his sister in John’s cabin. When John comes in he escapes but is overtaken at the top of a high cliff. A battle ensues and John triumphs, his brother going over. He is much elated until told by his sister that he has killed his own brother.

ROBERT LEONARD AND HAZEL BUCKHAM IN “AURORA OF THE NORTH”
“Cast Adrift in the South Seas.” (101 Bison. Two reels. May 30)—The atmosphere in this picture is perfect, and, aided by a good story, fine photography and capable acting, forms a release worthy of note. The plot is laid in the South Sea Islands and the pictures are taken there. The native customs and manner of living are shown. Their queer canoes, houses, and so on, make the film most interesting. William Clifford, Marie Wolcott and Sherman Bainbridge are the principals.

Marie, cast on an island, is rescued later by her former shipmates. One of them kills a native, and the savages in revenge kill all but Marie Clifford and her father, who manage to escape.

“The Dog of Flanders.” (Thanhouser. Two reels. May 19)—Featuring Marguerite Snow as a boy. Winter scenes and well-staged interiors, together with fine acting and a unique and pathetic plot, stamp this drama as a valuable release. The use to which the Flemish put their dogs, that is, hauling their little milk wagons, is portrayed in a picturesquely way; one of these dogs plays a prominent part in the production, which is pathetic from start to finish.

Rendered an orphan, homeless and penniless, a little boy tries to eke out a living. He goes to the home of his little sweetheart and leaves his dog there, then he wanders away in the winter night. They find him next morning lying in the art gallery, dead, with his dog, who found him, standing watch over him. Ouida’s famous story is the basis of the picture.

“The Bride.” (Victor. Two reels. May 25)—A Florence Lawrence-Matt Moore drama. The play does not make a particularly good vehicle for Miss Lawrence. A political story in which hypnotism plays a large part.

Clark and Matt are rivals for the hand of the Judge’s daughter. Clark, through his servant, who has hypnotic powers, gets the Judge to change a decision in a case. He also gets Flop to come to his house at night. Through the quick action of Matt, however, the papers are saved and the Judge is able to turn in his correct decision.

“The Test of Western Love.” (Three reels. Warner’s Features)—A fine Western release produced at Miller Brothers 101 Ranch in Oklahoma. It is a drama dealing with Indians and the villainy of a disappointed lover, followed by his final repentance. The three reels are crammed full of good live, thrilling action that does not allow one’s interest to falter once. The battle scenes, preceded and followed by long chases, are realistic to the extreme. The drama is well photographed, considering the difficulties that must have been met. The poorest points in the production are the love scenes, but they are few; only those dealing directly with the plot are shown. The whole piece is remarkable for this point—lack of unnecessary scenes.

The plot is simple. Emma’s disappointed suitor betrays her into the hands of neighboring Indians, who bear Bill, her sweetheart, an ancient grudge. Bill and a number of rambunctious Indians pursue the Indians to rescue her. They are ambushed and most of them are killed. Bill is among the survivors, but he falls into the hands of the Indians and they plan to burn him at the stake.

Emma persuades Bill’s treacherous rival to aid in her escape, but he only consents after a terrific struggle with himself. Emma meets the troops, who are looking for the Indians, and Bill is rescued.

“Women and Roses.” (Rex. May 14)—After the poem by Browning. The backgrounds in the sub-title boxes are particularly attractive, being composed of a bank of roses over which by double exposure the words appear. The story is good.

Meeting the woman at a masque-
"In the Northland." (Lubin. Two reels. May 12.)—The snowstorms of the past winter have afforded the producers many fine chances to produce a picture laid in the North. Many have been produced, and it will not belittle the others to say that Lubin has put out the best. From every standpoint the picture is an excellent one. The scenes convey the atmosphere of the North Canadian wilds admirably.

In some scenes a heavy snow is falling; it blows in the doors and can be seen falling by the windows, and it is real snow. Aside from this merit the picture contains a story that will appeal to the severest critic of the film. Probably such a good man as Jean never lived; he gains the spectators' sympathy from the outset and holds it until the very end.

His wife is dissatisfied and runs away with another man. Jean follows, and finds them both half dead from the cold. He first rescues his wife and then the man, because he thinks he is loved by his wife, but she discovers what a man her husband is and denounces the other. John E. Ince, Rosetta Brice and Joseph Kaufman are the main characters.

"The Toreador's Romance." (Kleine-Cines. Two reels. May 12.)—A large amount of people appearing in a picture never fail to make an impression on the audience, so in this picture when the huge amphitheatre is shown, with many thousands of persons seated, the impression given is a vivid and realistic one.

The picture is one that everyone will appreciate.

The story is that of a Spaniard who was misunderstood all his life. Finally his best friend accuses him of making love to his wife, and to prove his innocence José enters the ring and allows the bull to kill him.

"Our Daughter." (Eclair-Universal. May 17.)—A picture containing a good argument for any anti-suffragist. Father is busy, with business, and Mother is busy with the suffrage cause, so "our daughter" is sent away to boarding school. At school she falls in love with a chance acquaintance, but one day while out riding with him, he is killed when his automobile dashes over a cliff, and she returns home broken-hearted. She tells so pathetic a story to her parents that her mother decides to withdraw from the "Cause," and devote the rest of her life for caring for her daughter.

"The Fires of Ambition." (Domino. Two reels. May 21.)—A gripping drama ending in a tragic scene. Ambition causes Jim to stop at nothing to obtain his ends. After many years, when he is a senator and revisits his old town in the West, he meets his former partner, whom he thought he had killed, but who had fallen in the hands of Indians.

Joe causes Jim to be stripped to the waist, bound and turned toward the desert. His end is left to the imagination. There is an excellent battle scene near the end.

"The Redskins and the Renegades." (Kalem. Two reels. May 20.)—A drama full of live action, featuring Princess Mona Darkfeather and Art Ortega, two of Kalem's most popular Indians. Although guns are drawn many a time throughout the two reels, not once is one fired. The photography is of a high standard, and the Western atmosphere almost makes one believe that he is present at the scene of action.

The treachery of the renegades, the loyalty and suspicion of the Indians, and the final settlement of affairs makes a pleasing story.

"The Sea-Gull." (Vitagraph. May 14.)—A tragic Indian story. The scenery is beautiful. The cast consists of Myrtle Gonzales, Alfred Vosburgh, Beatrice Dominguez and Charles Lugo. The Panther has two wives. Red Fox, the pejepungo, plans the murder of Sea-Gull, the older. She fails and meets death herself.

"Her Mother's Weakness." (Biograph. May 14.)—The acting is poor and the story rather far-fetched. The girl's mother is a kleptomaniac, and the old and devoted maidservant meets her daughter in a peculiar manner. The ending is horrid.

Heast-Selig News Pictorial. No. 22. (Selig. May 14.)—Scenes at the Washington Horse Show, a view of the yacht "The Resurgam," the Shakespeare celebration in England, and some scenes of Mexico, which are good. Only the friendship, but poor revenue, are the main items in this number.

"Madam Coquette." (Lubin. Two reels. May 14.)—A good lesson is taught by this dramatic comedy, and another, too. Some of the scenes are tense. Rosemary Tchey, Bradley Shaw and Joseph Kaufman are the principals. A husband neglects his wife, and she, to amuse herself, steals with another man. After a series of experiences that come near being a tragedy, husband and wife are both made all right.

"Pathé's Weekly. No. 36. (Pathé. May 15.)—The Mexican news is worthy of praise here, as the first real combat is shown. If it isn't the real thing, it looks enough like it to fool.

"Marian, the Holy Terror." (Selig. Split reel. May 12.)—On the same reel with "Doc Yuk the Marksmen." One of the few parlor comedies that keeps one in a continual laugh. All the cowboys are in love with Marian, but the wife is even more enamored of her.

"Doc Yuk the Marksmen." (Selig. Split reel. May 12.)—On the extreme end of the reel with "Marian, the Holy Terror." Tricks of the pen and tricks of the photography make this a comic cartoon.

"In Real Life." (Essanay. May 12.)—A drama winding up with a good comedy. A playright needs melodrama for his play. For a while he can't find it but then it comes in a bunch. Incidentally, he finds his mother and captures a noted swindler. The light is poor, Bryant Washburn, Cyril Leonard and Richard Travers are the principals.

"The Wallflower." (Lubin. May 12.)—Justina Huft is the "wallflower." Clothes don't make the woman, in the moral of this picture. No one pays much attention to Mary at first but when the wife of the bishop is quarantined, she is the only one that can cook and who survives is soon established. This is a fine comedy-drama that will please everyone.

"A Pair of Stockings." (Selig. May 13.)—That some one thought of the title and then went to work to carry it out, and made a bad job of it, is the impression conveyed by this drama, which is poor and lacking in interest.

"The Acid Test." (Vitagraph. Two reels. May 13.)—Mr. F. M. Goff and Mary C. Johnson lead. This drama is quite slow in some places but amusing in others. It teaches a good lesson, and remarkably makes F. M. Goff look hereafter for his wealth. To test her he pretends to have leprosy. She withstands the test, although severely tried.

"Buddy's First Call." (Vitagraph. May 15.)—Young Paul Kelly is featured in this comedy, at which even the most pessimistic will laugh. Buddy's first suit with long trousers, his gray hair, and lead him to call on a young lady. The results are extremely comical.

"A Lady of Spirits." (Edison. May 25.)—The seventh of Wood-Beed's sentimental experiences. He is all but married to a widow this time, but the spooks in her house are too much for him and he makes haste to leave.

"The Mystery of the Amsterdam Diamonds." (Edison. May 26.)—Another page in the Chronicles of Cleek. In a cleverly laid detective he clears up a mystery of stolen diamonds.

"Lost A Pair of Shoes." (Edison. May 27.)—A slow comedy. Shoes employed as missiles for Quietening the neighborhood are discovered to have contained money. A wild rush to get them follows.

"Mother and Wife." (Edison. May 30.)—An excellent William George Chase to leave his wife rather than her, of whom his wife is ashamed. But the wife thinks better of the drama of her death and the three are happily reunited.

"Batty Bill Almost Married." (Melies. Split reel. May 14.)—On the same reel with "Sammy's a Foolish, but comic in parts. Bill thinks he has found an honor for his wife, but it turns out to be her cook's.

"Sammy's Dilemma." (Melies. Split reel. May 14.)—On the same reel with "Batty Bill Almost Married." Sammy tries to get rid of his wife, whom he thinks he has killed. Some of his attempts are funny.

"At Last We Are Alone." (Selig. May 15.)—This comedy is dry and may displease some, as it is rather risque. Dave finally marries his sweetheart, foiling her angry father.

"The Signal." (Lubin. May 16.)—Velma Whitman, Raymond Gallagher and L. C. Shum are the principals. It is a comedy of the West. Dave, turned down by Ruth, rescues her from a Mexican. The second time he is not turned down.

"Bunny Buys a Harem." (Vitagraph. May 16.)—Lilly Batistine (Rita Bori) has a good figure, and is the object of the great annoyance of her wife (Flora Finch). He even dreams about the great actress and his dreams are as funny as his actions in reality.

"Almost an Outrage." (Biograph. Split reel. May 16.)—On the same reel with "While the Bully Played." Reverend Banks thinks his aunt's dog is in the soup. Their actions are comical.

"The Taint of Madness." (Selig. May 16.)—An inconstant drama and rather vague. The plot is a poor one and the picture not well produced.

"Brachico Billy's Leap." (Essanay. May 16.)—Billy plans to rob the stagecoach; instead he saves the driver's daughter, who is being carried away by a desperate house. His leap from his horse to the stage coach is daring and cleverly done. Outside of this the picture is slow.

"Countess Veschi's Jewels." (One reel. May 16.)—The California alligator industry.

"While the Band Played." (Biograph. Split reel. May 16.)—On the same reel with "Batty Bill Almost Married." Percy gets a traveling license while he is married to his daughter. Rather poor comedy.

"The California Alligator Industry." (Vitagraph. Half-reel. May 16.)—This picture is the last reel of "The Countess Veschi's Jewels." It is extremely interesting, as it shows the alligator hatching and then at its different ages.

"The Precious Twins." (Pathé. Two reels. May 16.)—R. S. Rice and Tiny Downing star in this comedy. They are so funny that even the audience when the picture ends. Charles LePere, George Day, Sam Ryan and Caroline Rankin complete the cast. John, who has deceived his child, is faced with a child, when he is forced to find a wife and a child, and his hakespeare acts as his wife and he hires a midwife. His hakespeare acts as his wife and he hires a midwife. His wife comes as an unwelcome daughter. The results are most comical. The comedy is of American make.

"The Forged Parchment." (Selig. Two reels. May 16.)—The seventh of the "Adventures of Kathlyn." Kathlyn is taken for granted by the producer. Those who have missed the first installments will fail to catch the drift of the story. Kathlyn is rescued from the paws of her father and Bruce. They prepare to return, as the money is not ready, but he isn't. he regains his throne, and the last reel closes with some of our friends still subject to his tyrannical power.

"Heart-Selig News Pictorial. No. 23. (Selig. May 16.)—The latter half of this reel in this up with the funeral of the seventeen sailors who lost their lives in Mexico. It is a very solemn affair, and every audience in the country will appreciate it. The first part of the reel is devoted to minor happenings.

"The Father's Scapegoat." (Biograph. May 15.)—An old drama with a new turn. George's future mother-in-law accuse by his father of stealing some valuable jewels. He does not say that it was the father himself who stole them. The ending is pathetic yet happy.

"Dorothy Danesbridge, Militant." (Vita graph. May 15.)—Tommy Kelly and James Morrison in a comedy and its success is assured. Dorothy thinks she will be a suffragette and scorches her erewhile face. But she has no idea of militancy and returns to him before the film is ended.

"The Mystery of the Fast Mail." (Kleine Eichlos. Two reels. May 19.)—An absorbing detective story, with scenes of mystery from the start, and remaining interesting until the finale. The photography is beautiful and the scenes are at very well laid. George's future mother-in-law disappears from a fast train; everyone saw her get on, but no one saw her get off. It develops that George's chauffeur robbed her and threw her off the train and then cast aside his gun, saying he was the guilty man is finally brought to justice through the cleverness of a detective.

"He Won a Ranch." (Lubin. Split reel. May 19.)—On the same reel with "Her Horrid Honeymoon." He won the ranch, but his cowboys made it too hot for him and he speedily left. Not very humorous.

"Her Horrid Honeymoon." (Lubin. Split reel. May 19.)—On the same reel with "He Won a Ranch." He won the ranch, but his cowboys made it too hot for him and he speedily left. Not very humorous.
“A Ticket to Happiness.” (Selig. May 21.)—The plot of this drama is poor and re- semblable of another picture put out at about the same time. Robinson, who works for Olsen in the West, tells him that the girl wants to make money and for him to send for her, hoping that she will marry him. But she prefers a decent man, and marries Olsen in place of Robinson.

“Johanna the Barbarian.” (Vitagraph. Two reels. May 19.)—Although right good in this drama, this picture contains many comic situations which are mixed in among the dramatic parts. For this reason the picture is amusing as well as pathetic. Johanna is presented as a well-to-do stage hunter. When the main road is blocked by landslides, she refuses to let any one trespass on her property, which happens to be the only way to get to the mill. Business is later started, and the story is complete with part of the superintendent opens her up road.

“And the Dance Went On.” (Kalem. May 18.)—This film tells a story about a lost road, but it is a poor comedy and the action is weak. After a hard time two girls are able to take their sweethearts to a dance, but after dancing for a few minutes they carry a进行.

“The Bottled Spider.” (Kalem. Two reels. May 27.)—Art Ortega, Rex Downs and Priscilla West. Their plot is the leading drama is an unusual one and pleasant to see. Rex, the spider (Charles 먹), takes over with the former sheriff’s wife. He is followed by the new sheriff and his posse, who secure the aid of Red Indian, an Indian trader. After a long and thrilling chase, Rex is captured by Red Bird. In the struggle they are both killed.

“Sisters.” (Rem. May 27.)—A story of money versus poverty. Jim, a poor man, enters his plan to steal. He is thought out and this brings about a reconciliation between the rich and the long estranged.

“Hearts and Swords.” (Sterling Two reels. May 28.)—Ford Sterling at his best. As usual there is no real plot or story, just a combination of slap stick comedy that will always amuse. Rivals in love as usual. They fight a duel with sabers, but these get mixed up with their feet. Finally they all land in the water and there we leave them.

“The Reunion.” (Vitator. May 29.)—In which a hot-headed but well-meaning rather friendly learns to see himself as others see him. This begins to up his pathetic tendencies and wins a wife.

“The Spark of Manhood.” (Nestor. Two reels. May 29.)—An attractive drama. All the townspeople have fun of the “Good-for-Nothing.” But when the sheriff is wounded he takes command of the police and guides a band of outlaws to rout. By this act wins a wife.

“Universal Ike Is Kept from Being an Actor.” (Universal. Two reels. May 26.)—The best of the series, alternating the country productions of “Uncle Tom’s Cabin.” Ike’s attempt to break into acting is the plot of this story. It is told by the Smalls in a powerful manner. Included to melodramatize.

“Claws of the Dragon.” (Nestor. May 27.)—The tragic old story of a woman who goes wrong. After seducing a young girl she finds that she is her own daughter.

“Their New Lodger.” (Crystal. May 24.)—The right Baron de Vanamo, an escaped lunatic, and the wrong Baron de Vanamo, a hobo, who finds his clothes, makes things general- ly.

“Dead Broke.” (Crystal. Split reel. May 26.)—Charles “Eats” and fools his creditors. He comes to life to win the same reel.

“A Change of Complexion.” (Crystal. Split reel. May 26.)—On the same reel with “Dead Broke.” A cook blackens the faces of his master, but knowing each other, they cause some trouble, which the police finally squelch.

“The Fatal Letter.” (Joker. May 20.)—Great slap-stick. A man gets out too much, Schmitz is ordered to the country, the man eludes his “nurses” and goes home, fearing his wife has read a love letter in his pocket.

“Universal.” (Universal. Two reels. May 26.)—The plot is told of a farm hand who wins his employer’s daughter.

“When Reuben Fooled the Bandits.” (Keystone. May 21.)—One of those excellent Keystone comedies in which chases are used to supply the fun. In this picture the police department chase several bandits on trolley lines, and the re- tact is caused by his old pal. The sub titles are rather vague and will bear improvement. Regina Basket, Charles Decker, Margaret Arnold and Alfred Densher are the main characters.
"THE TWO VANREVELS"
(Edison—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE
T o say that this two-reel drama is an adaptation from Booth Tarkington's well-known novel of the same name would be enough to insure "The Two Vanrevels," a great success. But aside from this point, the way in which the picture is produced, taken in the charming surroundings of Florida, doubles its value. It is doubtful whether the theme of the drama has ever been used in photoplays before. A good production like this is a treat to see after the many sensational and morbid dramas that flood the market, and anyone who does not appreciate it doesn't know a good thing when he sees it.

The acting is of a high standard; all the characters admirably conform to the manners and customs of people before the civil war. As before said, the settings are perfect, nor are they marred by bad photography; it is clear and bright from beginning to end.

One fault might be found, but that lies with the drama itself. As the plot is based entirely on a deception, some will find it a little hard to grasp, often confusing Tom Vanrevel and Craily Grey, but solely at the beginning of the second reel no doubt remains as to who is who, and the producer, Mr. Ridgely, has done his best to enable the observer to distinguish between the two men.

The briefest outline of the plot will suffice. Tom Vanrevel is threatened with death by old Mr. Carew if he sets foot on his property. Betty Carew thinks that Tom is engaged to her schoolmate, while in reality it is Craily Grey. Grey allows Betty to think that he is Tom and carries on a harmless flirtation with her. But later Mr. Carew shoots him, thinking that he is Tom, discovers his mistake and flees.

Tom and Betty plight their troth before he goes away to the war. The story is worked up in a masterly way and keeps one's interest always at the highest point. The picture will surely be a great success.

"ASHES OF HOPE"
(Essanay—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE
W ith such as cast as Francis X. Bushman, Ruth Stonehouse, E. H. Calvert, Bryant Washburn, and others less prominent, this picture can hardly help but "get across." Mr. Bushman again displays his great versatility, as Fred Willard, the manager of Zalata, a dancer.

The light effects could be improved upon; in places the film is unintentionally dark, but as a whole the production is a good one, the theme is out of the ordinary, the acting excellent. The court scene that appears in the second reel is unusually good.

Through the efforts of Fred Willard, Zalata, a dancer, has become a great success; then she meets Calvert, a lawyer, who takes her to dinner. His advances become disagreeable to her; she slaps him in the face and leaves him. She quits the stage and becomes a teacher; after an experience that comes near being a tragedy she meets Willard again and they are both happy.

"LINE-UP AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS"
(Knopf Feature Film Co.—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL
I f this picture may be taken as a criterion, the life of the metropolitan detective is certainly one full of thrills. The story as told on this film, has, it is alleged, its foundation in actual New York police records of a case which George S. Dougherty handled. The latter has been responsible for the facts and is featured in the picture, playing an important part.

With the exception of the first reel the plot is a detective drama, with a pleasing mixture of romance. In this regard the finale is especially effective. The young detective, who has captured his prisoners after a thrilling fight, directed by Commissioner Dougherty, also captures his sweetheart.

The two are linked together with the sleuths' handcuffs, after being thoroughly frightened. With the exception of two small improbabilities the story is intensely interesting and instructive. It is one of the year's best releases of its kind.

In the first reel, Commissioner Dougherty conducts a tour through the police department of New York. The visitors are shown the various departments and get a good conception of the Bertillon system, the detective department and the uniformed force. Drills by the mounted men in New York's Central Park would have been appreciated at greater length.

A hand-to-hand fight is staged, depicting an actual attempt on the life of Dougherty. For fierceness and realism it equals anything the writer has seen. The opening of the safe, by use of an electric drill, presents a splendid piece of photography. The actual cutting is shown by close-up views. The story starts with the release of the Morgan brothers from Sing Sing and their arrival in New York. Tom, the younger, decides to lead a straight life, while his brother, Ben, immediately rejoins the gang. With two other men, Ben opens a safe in the Webster home and extracts a valuable necklace. The chase begins from that moment. Detectives follow one clue after another, finally running down the leader. During the course of the work there occur such adventures as a fight on a moving aeroplane, a typical raid in the actual streets of New York's Chinatown, a fight on the decks of an ocean steamer from which the combatants dive, and the third degree in headquarters when the arrest has been made. This last is similar to the scene from "Within the Law" in one particular. It is cleverly executed and will interest. The interiors were excellent.
HANDSOME GIFT TO BOOKING CLERK

Fred Mitchell, booking clerk at the People's Branch of the General Film Company, 260 West Forty-second street, New York City, was the surprised recipient of a handsome diamond and pearl stickpin presented by a number of exhibitors who have been Mr. Mitchell's customers.

The presentation took place at Volk's Hotel, Forty-second street and Eighth avenue, New York, one afternoon recently. Among those present were A. Bauerfreund, of the Model Theatre; H. F. Kertscher, Howard A. Robinson, James Robinson, the Bronx; Irving Clement, Brooklyn; Charles Henry, Brooklyn; E. Rosenbaum, New York City; Louis Gross, New York City; F. Michelson, Pleasantville, N. Y.; M. L. Feltenstein, Brooklyn; William F. Kertscher, E. M. Needle, New York City; and R. Tiefenbaum, Brooklyn.

TRY VANOSCOPE SUIT IN FULL

The suit of William J. Robinson against the Vanoscope and Louis C. Van Riper, the inventor, came up before Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court, New York, a few days ago. On demurrer the court held that the complaint should be amended, as there were two actions, one against the Vanoscope Company for damages, alleging breach of contract, and a separate action against Van Riper for a half-interest in the foreign patents on which Robinson claims he has advanced considerable money.

Mr. Van Riper is at present in New York on his way to London, where, it is rumored, he is negotiating for the sale of his foreign patents. Whether such a sale would be valid while the foreign patents are under litigation in this suit is a question.

The suits will be tried in the autumn. Two million dollars damages are asked. Robinson, it will be remembered, claims that Van Riper cested him from the presidency and directorate of the Vanoscope Company after contracts had been made with him.

LAMBS TO BE SCREENED

The Lambs, the greatest actors' club in the world, are taking a good picture of all the important happenings connected with their recent tour of the principal cities of the country.

When completed, this film will constitute a valuable acquisition to the archives of this famous club, and it can be truthfully said that never before has such an array of talent been assembled in any one picture.

The Lambs have appointed as sole distributors of the films, Sawyer, Inc., through whom it will be marketed.

Getting Ready for the I. M. P. A. Convention

Baltimore Will Send Strong Delegation—Pennsylvania Plans Are Laid—California Goes on Record Against State Censorship

LOCALS of the International Motion Picture Association all over the country are preparing for the convention and exhibition in New York, at the Grand Central Palace, June 8 to 13.

Baltimore will send a large delegation to the Second International Exposition Motion Picture Arts, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, June 8 to 13. Last year at the convention of the Exhibitors' League, this city was represented by about 30 exhibitors. Fully the latter number will go to New York next month, if anything a larger party will attend.

The affair is being generally discussed in Baltimore, and exhibitors are becoming quite enthusiastic. A meeting will be held in the next few days at which definite plans will be formulated for the New York trip.

A special car will be chartered and the party will probably leave here on Sunday night, May 7. The headquarters of the Baltimore delegation will probably be the McAlpin Hotel. Several Baltimorans are talking of motoring to New York in their cars and will take a party of friends with them.

Among those who have already announced their intention of going to the exposition are: J. Howard Bennett, Guy L. Wonders, William A. Hovey, Joseph Brodie, Bernard Depkin, Harry Lewy, Marion S. The Co-operative Exhibitors' Association of western Pennsylvania and western New York, will hold their next monthly meeting at the Hotel Martinique, New York City, on Monday, June 8, after which they will spend the rest of the week in attendance at the convention in the Grand Central Palace.

The following are the officers and some of the members of the association who will attend:

At the regular meeting of the Southern California Moving Picture Men's Association, held at their hall on May 6, among other things the following resolutions were adopted:

Further Resolved, That this Association, therefore, endorses the International Motion Picture Association andpirit of cooperation, and the money gathered in all in our power to advance its work, and earnestly request all of our exhibitors in the state of California who can possibly spare the time to attend the said convention, it being to the advantage of this Association to have as Arkansas representatives as possible. There will be business brought up before the convention the importance to the welfare of the exhibitors in general, and we wish to go firmly on record as being opposed to State censorship.

K. H. Rau, Secretary.

FOUR STATES' CONVENTION IN BIRMINGHAM

The first Southern States Motion Picture Exhibitors' convention convened in Birmingham, Ala., at the Hotel Hillman, Thursday and Friday, May 21 and 22. A good attendance rewarded the leaders and delegates were present from Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

Following is the letter sent to an prospective delegates by National Vice-President Alex Wall, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League:

"Dear Sir and Brother: This is the first time in the history of the Exhibitors of Motion Pictures in the South that more than one State has ever been called together in convention. This time four States, the strongest four, as far as exhibitors are concerned, will meet together.

"This means that we are going to accomplish a good we must in considering film rentals, licenses, rents and expenses and the things that are troubling us. Now, it is due time we should raise our hand and be our own rights, joining in together and taking some action. We can not do this single handed, but must all join in and sing the chorus as one. Then we can control that is being controlled. In a few months you will be confronted with subjects that will force a strong arm to control. This is enough said.

"Be here on the above dates by all means. The biggest crowd ever in session will be there. There will be a few State representatives and exhibits of all kinds, and our National President, Mr. M. E. Smith, will be there.

"Write me at once in reply so I will know you need not send this letter. I am a post card. ANSWER.

Yours fraternally,

A. ALEX WALL,
National Vice-President.

P. S. You can meet face to face with your film manufacturer and exchange man. Be here."
“WOLFE, OR THE CONQUEST OF QUEBEC”
(Kalem—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This picture, produced on the actual battlefields in Canada, where Wolfe and Montcalm fought for the supremacy of Quebec, years ago, cost the producers over fifty thousand dollars, and took them over three months to turn out the complete picture, besides causing them countless other difficulties. And why struggle through a tiresome English or French history dealing with the subject, when by witnessing these five reels one learns just as much and more? A subject dealing with well-known history as this picture does cannot fail to delight any audience. Over a thousand men took part in the picture, and it is obvious that they were trained in the ways of old-time warfare before they appeared before the camera. The costumes that the soldiers of the English and French armies wore were bought especially for the purpose; they are exact and correct in every detail. General Wolfe’s flagship is the same one used by General Wolfe; the others are copies of those used in the eighteenth century.

The picture, taken up on the St. Lawrence River and its environs, is perfect in photography, and as every scene, even the interiors, were taken in the open, the light is of the brightest in all parts. The battle scenes, of which there are many, are so realistic that one can almost smell the gunpowder and hear the cries of the dead and dying. The spectacle of the French camp, with its flags and emblems waving in the air and the many soldiers hurrying about, is most impressive.

A scene which stands out above all the others is that in which the French, after learning that the English are coming up the river, send the fire ships down hoping that these will destroy the English fleet. As these ships go down the river the flames from them shot high up in the air, and the whole picture is redounded by their fires.

In beauty and artistry the picture excels. A beautiful picture of Montmorency Falls is shown, and the English scaling the Heights of Quebec and then coming out on the Plains of Abraham are the two that stand out more than the others. The last scene is beautiful, in which the two lovers of the story stand on the shore watching the disappearance of the English ships, their figures silhouetted against the sky by the setting sun.

The picture was staged under the direction of Keenan Buel. His task, as can be imagined, was not an easy one, and great credit is due to him for his efforts. The cast is made up of a number of Kalem stars—Guy Combs as General Wolfe, and Arthur Donaldson as Montcalm, are the leaders of the English and French armies, respectively. Anna Nilsson, Jere Austin, Harry Livingston and John Shannon, supported by others less important, make up the rest of the cast, besides the large amount of soldiers, who deserve great credit.

The story is mainly history, and does not have to be related here. The love story that runs through is unimportant though true in part; it is only prominent in parts and adds a touch of romance to the picture which would be only battle scenes otherwise. The final battle, which takes place on the Plains of Abraham in which both brave generals lost their lives, is the crowning scene of the picture, and makes an admirable finish.

“LUCILLE LOVE: THE GIRL OF MYSTERY”
(Gold Seal—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

There is no end to the thrilling adventures and hairbreadth escapes of Lucille and her arch-enemy. Hugo Loubeque, and this, the sixth of their experiences, certainly maintains the high standard set by the preceding installments in this regard. Not satisfied with the numerous thrilling water scenes already produced, Mr. Ford has put on another, entirely different, and it may be said, better than the others. A new idea is pictured in the edition; the actions of a maddened mutinous crew, and their cold-blooded vengeance, occupy the entire last reel.

Lucille has the misfortune of starting the mutiny by showing up the captain of the crew as a bully and a coward. The crew takes sides and a fierce combat is waged in every quarter of the ship. Hugo, who is the owner of the craft, aids Lucille and her party, and due to his courage and prowess many of the villains crew are thrown overboard.

In the midst of the struggle a battleship is seen, and the crew knows that it is pursuing them, as the ship is smuggling ammunition to China. They all unite, therefore, and put Lucille and Hugo adrift in a small boat. Each thinks the other has the papers, the cause of all the trouble, but each is wrong as they are now in the possession of the captain of the ship.

It is peculiar to note that after the villainous manner in which Hugo has acted toward Lucille, that here in this number they seem almost friendly. Their mutual misfortune draws them together, and Hugo shows that he is a gentleman as well as a villain, and cares for Lucille as if he were in love—but perhaps he is.

As this production takes place altogether on one ship, a large variety of scenes is not obtainable, but those that do appear are of the highest class. A noticeable detail is the rolling of the ocean seen through a port-hole in one of the cabins; this lends a realistic atmosphere to the picture, so that one can hardly help thinking that he is on the high seas.

The last reel closes with Lucille and Hugo adrift on the ocean, in a small boat, with only a cask of water for company, and no visible means of rescue.
THE CHRISTIAN
(Visagraph-Liebler—Eight Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

On Saturday evening, May 16, "The Christian" started a run at the Harris Theatre, New York. Previous to this it was shown at the Manhattan Opera House, New York, but this was its first entrance into a Broadway theatre. The house was by no means full, partly due to the fact that it had been shown before and that Saturday was its first night at the Harris Theatre, but if the picture may be judged according to the greeting it received from the audience there, its success is assured.

E. W. Lynch, head of the E. W. Lynch enterprises, presents the picture, which is adapted from Hall Caine's famous novel of the same name. The cast consists of a group of well-known Vitagraph players. Earle Williams as John Storm and Edith Storey as Glory Quayle head the cast, which Edward Kimball, Charles Kent, James Morrison, J. W. Sambrooke, James Lackaye, Harry S. Northrup, Donald Hall, Carlotta De Felice, Alberta Gal-latin and Jane Fearnley complete.

The two principals appear in a great many scenes by themselves, in which their acting is tense and awe-inspiring, especially those scenes in which Storm is fighting between his love for Glory and that which he terms his duty, his religion, and his chosen work—uplifting the poor. After a bitter struggle love conquers.

In regard to photography, lighting and settings, little or nothing is left to be desired. Before the drama starts the characters are introduced with a sub-title explaining the character of each one. The sub-titles throughout dissolve in and out of the picture.

Success should attend Mr. Lynch in his handling of this production, and if it isn't a success, there is something wrong with the people, not with the picture.

"THE ELDER BROTHER"
(Essary)
REVIEWED BY C. J. VERHALEN

The opening effect of this two-reel production makes it interesting from the very start. Slowly the darkness fades away and a beautiful café scene is unfolded, with its cabaret, its diners and everything complete. This particular scene is used a good deal throughout the entire picture to splendid advantage.

Francis X. Bushman, in the rôle of the elder brother, carries his part well. As the younger brother, Irving Washburn is seen in one of his best-acted parts. Gerda Holmes, who has been with this company only a short time, is well cast, and convincingly portrays the part of the dancer. Miss Holmes, besides possessing good looks, is a capable actress.

The story is well worked out and very interesting. The situations are well portrayed, making the two acts of a reel each a worth-while photoplay.

The story is virtually the tale of two brothers, one of whom has taken to the gay life, while the other applies himself to the practice of medicine. The younger chap is in love with a cabaret dancer; incidentally the elder brother makes her acquaintance when he gives her medical aid. He falls in love with her, but when his brother takes him to the café to show him the girl that he admires, Phillip recognizes in her the girl he loves, and when she tries to explain he casts her off and departs.

In a spirit of revenge she agrees to Leider's plan of doping the younger brother. Leider makes Irving a present of a box of cigarettes in which he has placed several grains of cocaine. The drug effects Irving and he is finally overcome by it. When she sees the critical condition of Irving she insists on nursing him through his illness. Leider, no longer able to quiet his conscience, confesses to Phillip that he is to blame for the whole thing. Phillip forgives the dancer and it is surmised that they live happily ever after.

IMPORTANT

Attention is directed to the fact that we have been granted the right and license to import, use and sell to others to be sold or used during the life of the United States Letters Patent No. 610861 (the so-called Goodwin Patent) both AGFA and GEVAERT cinematograph or motion picture film.

This action on our part has been prompted mainly by our desire to relieve our customers of any concern that may have been caused by any claims made in the past or that may be made in the future, to the effect that film purchased from us infringed upon such patent.

We shall continue as heretofore to market AGFA and GEVAERT negative and positive motion picture films which have become famous throughout the world for their superior photographic qualities.

Samples, etc., furnished gratis upon request.

Write Your Slides on an L.C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

Do you know that you can throw your announcements on the screen in typewriting? It's no more trouble than to write on a card and it looks far better than the scrawling and illegible handwriting that is so often seen.

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter is especially adapted to writing these slides. Write for information.

GOOD IMITATION—Not Enough

THE ENLIGHTENED Exhibitor today demands more. He demands a machine made of parts that will last—not such parts as brittle die cast parts made of Zinc and Lead so often used by manufacturers today, with the intention of increasing their repair part sales.

The 1914 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH parts are adopted and designed for the purpose of saving the Exhibitor money. Our hardened and ground tool steel star and cam will wear for a long time to come.

That's why the MOTIOGRAPH has the LONGEST LIFE and is the BEST machine made

CLEVELAND EXHIBITORS PERFECT BOARD OF TRADE

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Cleveland, O., May 20.

The organization of the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors Board of Trade was completed at its meeting held Wednesday, May 6. This does not mean a complete reunion of all Cleveland exhibitors. Cleveland Local No. 1, Motion Picture Exhibitors League, retains its charter.

Some of its members have been elected to the board of directors of the new organization and there probably will be no further attempt to bring all into one body until after the national conventions of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors Association in New York and of the League in Dayton.

Hope is high here that after the Dayton convention there will be but one national or local organization. The directors of the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors Board of Trade are: For one year, E. N. Downs, S. E. Morris, W. J. Slimm; for nine months, Walter Horsey, Sam Aubley, Frank Kenney; for six months, Sam Bullock, Foster E. Simmons, E. W. Sprosty; for three months, L. C. Goldman, E. L. Sindlar, Herman Henn.

THEATRE ANNEXES $100,000 CAFE GARDEN

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Omaha, Neb., May 19

The Empress Theatre, one of Omaha's most important motion picture houses, now has as a part of it one of the prettiest cafe gardens in the West. The cafe, located in the basement underneath the theatre, was built at a cost of near $100,000. The garden recently went into the hands of a receiver and Joseph B. Fradenburg, proprietor of the theatre, took charge, paying off the debts.

The All Star Feature Corporation
PROFFERS

A five part motion picture of the most daring and widely read writing of modern days—THE JUNGLE—a production which the makers are fully confident will occupy a lofty position among the accomplishments of American manufacturers of motion pictures. Upton Sinclair, the author, himself appears in the production while in the star roles are George Nash, former star of “The Gamblers,” “Office 666” and “Panthea”; and Gail Kane, the All Star favorite, star of “Seven Keys to Baldpate.”

Replete with sensational scenes of the stockyards, stampeding cattle, packing house methods, curing hams, making sausage, the lard vats, etc., etc., THE JUNGLE will make an exceptionally wide appeal.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

Ventilation Cooling Heating

"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

TOUR OF THE WORLD

You know that when these two world famous teams were on their trip every newspaper in the country ran columns about their playing in Japan, China, Australia, Ceylon, Egypt, Paris, Naples, Rome, and before the King of England. This tour received more advertising than could have been bought with hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Every baseball fan in the country will want to see these pictures. They are not alone baseball pictures, they show scenes in all the places visited. And the Baseball bug went along. He beat his way in the most interesting manner. He was at every game. He got home safely. He had to ride the brake beams, was a stowaway on the steamers but he got there. The natives could not understand his rooting, but he had a good time and provides a lot of comedy. The scenic portions are exceptional. It is a picture that will crowd any house. It ran for a full week in one of the largest Broadway theatres and played to crowded houses.

SIX GREAT REELS WITH 600 LAUGHS

Endorsed by Press, Public and Filmdom’s Severest Critics as a Smashing Hit, at its premier presentation at the Comedy Theatre, New York.

The first BIG FEATURE to carry a laugh through six reels.

Morning Telegraph:
Seldom, if ever, has a play been more artistically shown or more thoroughly appreciated. The scenes around the audience to “Ohs!” and “Ahs!” The acting was of the highest order. The theatre was packed, and it looked more like the presentation of an important opera than the opening of a feature film.

Moving Picture World:
There are many charming bits of scenery in this film, and the list of the performers is a formidable one.  It has really comic situations.

Motion Picture News:
A very marked success. And moral maniacs are still raving over its many novelties. It is far in advance of anything heretofore shown in this field.

The Certainty of a Good Show

When you go to the theatre you have some idea of how good a show you are going to see because other people have seen it first—and told you about it.

When you buy a book you have a reasonable assurance that you are going to like it because of the reputation the book has gained.

The Moving Picture play, on the other hand, has, in the past, been a gamble—it might be good, it might be bad.

It came today, and was gone tomorrow.

Nobody could tell you about it, because by the time the other fellow had seen it, you could not see it.

Today you can be sure of a good show—if you find the sign of the wing-ed clock in front of the house.

Every Mutual Movie doesn't pretend to be the best show ever put up, but every Mutual Movie is a good show—good from the first flash of the first scene on the screen until the Good Night sign comes at the end.

To build up such a programme as the Mutual is sending out today has taken years of effort and hundreds of thousands dollars in money.

But it has been worth while.

Worth while to the Mutual Company because its service is more in demand than any similar service ever has been.

Worth while to the exhibitor because his steady patronage has grown steadily greater.

Most worth while of all to the patron because now at last he can be sure of a good show.

Whether it be a rousing Keystone comedy, a strong Flying A drama, the sweet simplicity and smart style of "Our Mutual Girl," or, one of Griffith's Reliances or Majestics, every picture that bears the sign of the wing-ed clock is an interesting, entertaining picture of the type that brings people back.

If it be a multiple reel feature like "Home Sweet Home" or the up-to-the-minute excitement of the Mexican War, you will find the sign of the wing-ed clock standing for progressiveness in moving pictures.

And now comes the great Thanhouser production—"The Million Dollar Mystery"—by Harold MacGrath and Lloyd Lonergan—to be released two reels a week, beginning June 22nd. Too big to talk about in part of an advertisement.

Just mentioned here as another example of Mutual Progressiveness.

If you, who read this, are an exhibitor, you know the money value in your pocket of the reputation of a good show.

If you are a patron of moving picture houses you know how far you will go out of your way to find a good show.

To both the answer is MUTUAL.

GET TOGETHER!

TWO national conventions of exhibitors will be assembled within the next two months. Many topics of national importance have been announced and will be discussed at each convention. Much business of moment to the trade will be transacted at both.

But none of the official topics that will engross the attention of the delegates at New York and Dayton rank in importance or moment with the topic, announced but already uppermost in the minds of the leaders, the delegates and their constituents, the great body of exhibitors.

That topic is—AMALGAMATION.

THE spectacle of two organizations, both claiming to be national, each asserting it fulfills the missions of the other, is a disgrace to every exhibitor who countenances it.

The situation is ludicrous to those who are not exhibitors and disastrous to those who are.

The United States is large, but it is not large enough to furnish a valid reason for the existence of more than one exhibitors' organization.

And the time has arrived when the existence of two organizations is not only superfluous, but a positive menace to and an obstruction in the way of the exhibitor's forward progress toward better things.

THERE are battles to be fought that only an organization can fight—and win.

There are conditions to be reckoned with that only organized effort can meet—and remedy.

There are problems to be dealt with that only united co-operation can grapple—and solve.

And the undivided, harmonious effort of all the exhibitors in the country is none too much for the winning of those battles, the remedying of those conditions, the solution of those problems.

So essential is it that the strength, ability and purpose of all exhibitors be fused into one solid and indivisible unit for the accomplishment of those purposes, that it may be truly said, the exhibitors would be no worse off without any organization than they will be if two organizations continue to compete for their allegiance.

THE body of American motion picture exhibitors, torn between two factions, is like "a house divided against itself." And like a house divided against itself, it cannot stand.

There must be union.

There must be co-operation.

The men, in either organization, who will, consciously or unconsciously, intentionally or unintentionally, oppose the union and co-operation of their fellow-exhibitors, should be branded as the enemies of the exhibitor and driven from among them.

THE time is ripe. The hour is at hand.

If the exhibitors of the country have not learned, during the last two years, the futility and costliness of discord and disunion, of divided effort and conflicting energies, when and by what means will they ever learn them?

Fortunately for the future, the spirit of arbitration, conciliation and reunion is in the air.

IT emanates from both camps.

The trend of exhibitor opinion is toward amalgamation. It promises to manifest itself unmistakably at both conventions.

And when those two conventions are over, the fact that there ever were two exhibitors' organizations in the United States should be a matter of history, no longer of fact.

IF the exhibitors at New York and at Dayton, Ohio, fail to accomplish everything else, and bring about the merging of the two organizations they represent, they will have done more for their fellow-exhibitors than all the conventions that have preceded them.

UNITE! CO-OPERATE! FIGHT!
Waterbury Exhibitors in Trouble

Two Managers Fined for Alleged Immoral Exhibition—The Old Connecticut Blue Laws Pertaining to Sunday Admission Invoked

Waterbury, Conn., May 28.

THE motion picture exhibitors in Waterbury are "up against it," so to speak. Only a few weeks ago a member of their fraternity was fined $100 and costs for exhibiting an alleged obscene and immoral play, entitled "Traffic in Souls," and on May 19, two managers of local theatres were pulled over the coal and each fined $50 and costs for permitting children under fourteen years of age to enter their theatres without being accompanied by an adult.

The alleged violation of the law took place on Saturday afternoon, May 9, but the cases were not heard until this week. The managers fined were Benjamin Tint, of the Alhambra Theatre, and William Carroll, of the Carroll Theatre, Waterbury's newest motion picture house. The fines, with costs, amounted to $119.04, Carroll and Tint taking no appeals.

In fining the motion picture managers Judge Thombs said something that has created a furor among exhibitors here. It was to the effect that unless the law appertaining to children entering theatres without an adult was obeyed, he would close all motion picture theatres in the city on Sunday. There is a state law against allowing these houses to do business on Sunday.

As most of the motion picture theatres in Waterbury "get by" on what they make Sunday evenings, Judge Thombs' statement put them on the qui vive, and no doubt from this time on managers will conduct a strict campaign against youngsters entering their houses without an adult.

It came out at the trial that these young boys and girls get older people to secure their tickets and then enter the theatre at the same time as these men and women do. Of course, when the latter leave the youngsters are left behind. It was just such a condition of things that resulted in the arrest of Carroll and Tint, at least that is what the defendants claimed.

Features Win Recognition from Press

Rochester Newspapers Pay Same Attention to Pictures as to Legitimate Attractions, Since Advent of the Multiple—Notable Change

Rochester, N. Y., May 28.

The finest kind of theatrical weather has been enjoyed by the motion picture houses of this city in the past two weeks, and excellent business is reported. The managers already are beginning to prepare for summer campaign, and the newspaper advertising, as soon as the weather gets warm, will begin to assure the public of the coolness of the various houses.

Gradually the newspapers of this city are coming to realize the importance of motion pictures as a public institution, and as a big factor in the theatrical world. Slowly but surely they are paying more and more attention to the pictures.

Advance notices of the attractions coming are now printed in the same columns as notices of regular attractions in all the local papers but one, which still separates the photodramas from the regular attractions, putting the films in a column by themselves.

The practice of giving a reading notice after the presentation of multiple reel features which are booked for more than one day is also growing. This notice is usually in the line of a criticism of the picture, the same as a dramatic criticism.

There was a time when such a thing as a criticism would be laughed at, and even advance notices were given grudgingly. That, of course, was at a time when only the one-reel pictures were shown, and then only for a day at a time. With the coming of the multiple reel features the papers began to pay more attention to the productions.

Rochester at present hasn't a house in which pictures are given at performances starting only at stated times. The Gordon comes nearest to that, with three or four performances a day of a lengthy program. A new house now building may adopt the policy of giving only two or three performances a day, at stated times, for which reserved seats may be sold. The city must first be educated to that plan of showing pictures.

TEST KEYSTONE CENSOR LAW IN COURTS

Injunction Fight Looms on Horizon and Manufacturers Refrain from Asking for Examination of Pictures to Be Able to Make Legal Issue of Situation—Censors Anticipate Battle and Hold Back—New Construction Ideas

Harrisburg, Pa., May 28.

A FIGHT to a finish against censorship of motion pictures in Pennsylvania is planned by manufacturers whose films are marketed extensively in this state, and the first skirmish will come June 1, when the new law under which the recently created board of censorship will operate becomes effective.

The law prescribes that all applications to have pictures examined must be made two weeks in advance of the date on which one of the films for exhibition purposes.

Despite this provision practically no applications had been made on May 17, or two weeks before the date on which the board declares it will begin making arrests of exhibitors who display pictures not containing the mark of approval of the Pennsylvania board.

Obviously if the law is to be strictly enforced on June 1 there will be no pictures that have passed muster of the censors on that date and the exhibitors all over the state will be subject to arrest and heavy fines, amounting to $50 for first offense and $100 for each subsequent offense.

It is explained now, however, that it was the deliberate intention of the manufacturers to refrain from applying to have pictures passed upon within the prescribed two weeks' period so that the film-makers will be in a position to raise a legal issue at once to test the constitutionality of the law.

It is learned from a reliable source that it is the purpose of film manufacturers to seek an injunction, probably in Philadelphia, restraining the censors from making arrests and from enforcing the law in any way.

Just what form the application for an injunction will take has not been learned here, but it is believed to be the intention of some of the manufacturers to apply for a temporary injunction the moment the board makes its first move to enforce the law.

Under such an injunction made permanent, it is held exhibitors could continue to display pictures without the mark of approval of the Pennsylvania board, pending a final decision of the courts as to the constitutionality of the law.

Under this plan, the manufacturers believe, it will be possible to go on exhibiting pictures not passed on by the Pennsylvania censors for at least one year and they hope ultimately to knock the statute out entirely on constitutional grounds.

It has been intimated from an unofficial source that the members of the Board of Censors themselves are acquainted with the intention of the manufacturers to fight the constitutionality of the statute. It was intimated to-day that the members of the board feel so certain that they will be prevented by injunction from making arrests and from requiring "exhibitors to display the certificate of approval that they are not taking any very active steps to be prepared to examine films.

It is pointed out that the task of censoring all the new films that are introduced in Pennsylvania would be a gigantic one for the two censors, as there would be from 30 to 40 to be examined daily, but that despite this the board has not publicly designated any places for examining films.

If the law actually becomes effective in this state, the burden will rest chiefly on the manufacturer of films. They are the ones who must submit the films for examination and they must pay a fee of $3.50 for each film examined, whether it is accepted or rejected.

The applicant to have a film approved must also stand all the expense of examination, which includes providing quarters and apparatus for the showing of the pictures in Harrisburg, or at such other places as may be designated by the board.

The fight in Pennsylvania, based on the constitutionality, of the act, is likely to be one that will have bearing on the subject of state censorship in other commonwealths, and for that reason is likely to be of national importance because it is intimated that an effort is to be made to show that state censorship is in conflict with federal statutes.

Some new ideas in the construction of motion picture theatres that have been brought to the attention of John Price Jackson, Commissioner of the State Bureau of Industry and Labor, and which may be adopted by that bureau as models for use in regulating the construction of other theatres in this state, are being introduced by J. M. Lenney in a new picture house he is building at 1426 and 1428 Derry street, this city.

Mr. Lenney, in addition to having experience as a manager of motion picture theatres through the operation of his photo-play theatre, 5 and 7 North Thirteenth street, is a contractor and builder, and he believes that the plans on which he is constructing his new picture house will serve not only to make it as nearly absolutely safe against fire and panic as is possible, but also so attractive to patrons as to insure far greater box-office receipts than if the house were built upon the lines of the ordinary picture theatre.

Some of the radical departures from the ordinary methods of construction that Mr. Lenney has introduced are that the screen will be at the front of the building and the booth for the picture machine at the rear.

The main entrance will be beneath the screen. By this plan, Mr. Lenney says, the patrons entering the house will have less distance to walk to reach the best seats. Moreover, the musicians will be seated in the front part of the theatre and will thus be in a position to attract persons from the street who might not be induced to enter if the music were far away as the rear of the theatre.

The placing of the machine booth at the rear, Mr. Lenney argues, will isolate the one possible source of danger from fire and relegate it to that part of the playhouse which is not occupied by patrons.

Mr. Lenney believes that the greatest danger of fire and panic in picture houses lies in the fact that ordinarily patrons, in case of an emergency, will head for the main doors through which they entered, in the efforts to escape, no matter how many side and rear exits may be provided. With the booth in the rear, the greater part of the audience, in making for the front or main doors in case of fire panic, would be going in a directly opposite direction from the usual source of danger—the picture machine.

To add to the safety of the house, it is to have no galleries and nothing brought above the theatre proper. The ceiling will be 22 feet high. It will be a brick and tile building on a site 50 by 150 feet, and will seat more than 1,000 persons.

The plans have been approved in every detail by the State Bureau of Industry and Labor, which is now prescribing very strict regulations for the construction of new motion picture houses in the state.

Mr. Lenney says the officials of the Bureau have told him his ideas may be backed by the state as a basis for construction of other motion picture theatres in Pennsylvania.

GOODWIN LICENSES RAW FILM SUPPLY COMPANY

The Raw Film Supply Company, through an agreement recently entered into with the Goodwin Film and Camera Company, has been granted the right to buy, use and sell for selling purposes, Aiga and Goodwin cinematograph films. At the same time permission was granted to the Ambrosio American Company, permitting the same rights.

After the settlement of the Goodwin-Eastman suit, the Goodwin Company made a complaint against the Raw Film Company for manufacturing and selling their film without a license. A retroactive settlement brought this case to a close, so that now the Goodwin Company cannot bring suit against any of the former customers of the Raw Film Company, as they have waived all claims for damages in consideration of the agreement.

The Goodwin Company, whose sole agent is the Anseco Company, won the famous Goodwin patent case from the Eastman Kodak Company on March 10, 1914. The defendant company subsequently made a settlement and was licensed to make and sell the contested films.

Kentucky Balks at Censorship

The People Are Wise to the Political Finger in the Censor Pie and Act as Own Censors—Recent Bill Promptly Killed

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Lexington, Ky., May 27.

A MOTION picture censorship will never be established in Kentucky. The idea of such a move is repellant to motion picture men the state over, and to those of the public who have been asked regarding the matter is the same. The recent legislature, which has ended its sessions, had a bill for censorship introduced, but it was promptly killed.

The people throughout the state feel they are about as competent to judge a picture for themselves, as to have some board, appointed for political purposes, pass on every film they care to see. They look on that as they would filtered water—perhaps healthier but not particularly palatable.

Kentucky people, as a rule, patronize only those theatres which offer a good lot of reels. For instance, a "nasty" offering will be let alone by most people, while clean reels, no matter how sensational otherwise they may be, will draw packed houses.

The theatres throughout the state have begun to realize more than ever before the great value of judicious advertising, and they are using a lot of newspaper space. And whenever there is something particularly good, especially in the country towns which do not support a daily newspaper, they put sandwich men on the streets.

PROBE FIRE LAW CONDITIONS

Elizabethtown, N. J., May 28.—Mayor McClellan is investigating the fire protection laws as they apply to motion picture theatres. These houses, according to a state law, are under the jurisdiction of the Board of Fire Commissioners. It is understood that several minor complaints against a few Broad Street motion picture house have been made by Building Inspector Brennan.
IN FAVOR OF CENSORSHIP
A Mystery Play in One Reel
BY ROE S. EASTMAN

Being the Opinion of Otto Luedeking, Cincinnati Haberdasher and Investor in Motion Picture Houses, as Interviewed by a Representative of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS in the Presence of M. A. Neff, President, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America

LUDEKING—You, see, the public doesn't care whether films are censored or not. The popular demand is for pictures that are "loud," and the exhibitor will show them and ruin the entire industry in time if something is not done.

E. N. G.—Do you mean that you would show immoral or "loud" pictures if you could?

LUDEKING (glancing at Neff)—Yes. I'd show them if there were no censors. That is what the public wants. Look at all the big houses. Watch the films they show. We are after the money. This censorship law was designed, as I understand it, mainly to protect business in the future. The production of immoral pictures and their exhibition now would ruin our business later.

E. N. G.—To your knowledge, are there any political aspirations or schemes back of this censorship law, Mr. Luedeking?

LUDEKING—There is absolutely no politics to it. It is our only protection.

NEFF—Tell me what your politics is. Go on. (To N. G.) Ask him that question.

LUDEKING—I am a Republican.

E. N. G.—I was aware of that fact before coming here, Mr. Luedeking. Not as a matter of politics, but as a matter of business, I take it, you are unequilibrated in favor of state censorship.

LUDEKING—Yes, that is right (smiling at Neff).

E. N. G.—You are an officer in the Cincinnati Local No. 2 M. P. E. L. of A., I believe?

NEFF—He is the treasurer. F. L. Emmert is the president. E. N. G.—As an exhibitor, in what theatres are you interested, Mr. Luedeking?

(L. and N. exchange meaning glances as E. N. G. writes.)

LUDEKING—I am interested in the Royal, the National and the Freeman theatres and also the airidrome at the baseball park. The company is known as the Waldorf Amusement Company.

E. N. G.—And who are your partners?

LUDEKING (looks to Neff for aid. Neff's eyes are on a particularly brilliant neecktie)—Well—Mr. John J. Huss, Mr. Phil Bock and Ed. Knauf.

E. N. G.—Is that all?

LUDEKING—No, there are also Mr. Frank Huss and H. S. Koops.

E. N. G.—Oh, yes; Koops, the dry-goods man. Is that all?

LUDEKING—No; let me see—there are Mr. Steinkoenig and Mr. Strauss also.

E. N. G.—Is that all of them?

LUDEKING—I believe so.

E. N. G.—Haven't you forgotten one—one of the most important of your stockholders?

NEFF (looks up defiantly)—Oh, you might as well tell him, Luedeking. I am one of the stockholders, yes! Is that what you wanted to know?

E. N. G.—Ah! So I was informed, but I wanted to get it direct.

LUDEKING—I believe that is all I can say to you. Will you please excuse me now? I have an engagement.

E. N. G.—Certainly. (Exit Luedeking.)

NEFF (turning to the door)—You see, my boy, you and THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS have the wrong idea entirely. This man is a real exhibitor. He knows the needs of the business. Go ahead, now, and get some more interviews from people who know, like him. (Exeunt Neff and Eager News Gatherer still arguing censorship pro and con, mostly con).
CHATTANOOGA OPERATORS’ STRIKE SETTLED

$20 Scale Accepted by Exhibitors and Union, in Force Until 1916—Disorderly Tactics Employed During Strike—Police Take Control of Situation—Patronage of Houses Suffered—Alleged Iron Worker JAiled

Special to The Motion Picture News
Chattanooga, Tenn., May 27.

Following one of the longest and most memorable strikes in the history of the motion picture operators union at Chattanooga, Tenn., peace has been restored between that organization and the picture exhibitors. Striking operators have returned to their work.

Terms of the agreement as signed by representatives of their union and the exhibitors are to the effect that the chief operator shall receive $20 per week, the first assistant operator $18, and the relief man $7 a week. According to the old contract between the parties in question the chief operator only received $18 per week for services, while the first assistant’s salary was $16 and that of the relief man $12 a week.

Members of the operators’ union struck for $20, $18 and $14. Matters were compromised by the relief man’s wages being cut to $7, thus in reality placing the total amount of salary under the new terms at the same figure as before the strike.

By agreement the new contract holds good until 1936. Of some significance in connection with the recent strike of operators is the fact that once every year during the past four years, according to those familiar with the picture situation, there has been a strike of members of this union. But never before during other disagreements of members of the union and exhibitors were such tactics resorted to by the former parties as were employed in the affair which has just closed.

During the course of the strike the union operators paraded the principal downtown streets day after day and night after night, until pedestrians had deserted the thoroughfare.

They decked themselves in painted coats, on the backs of which were signs urging the people not to patronize non-union picture houses as they were unfair to organized labor, and besides were using incompetent operators. Cards of a similar nature were distributed.

The strikers, however, were orderly and maintained that they were in the right in demanding more money. There are about twenty-five union operators in Chattanooga.

Matters finally came to a climax when valerianate of ammonia balls were placed in the Bonita, Colonial, Alhambra and Picto picture theatres. Of a highly offensive and stilling odor the “stink balls,” as they were termed, were sufficient to damage the picture business to the extent of many dollars.

It was almost impossible to rid the theatres of the odor, and no sooner had the smell been abated than the performance was repeated.

While the strikers denied any connection with the placing of these balls in the non-union houses, many people were inclined to think that the entire blame was traceable to them. As a result of the “stink ball” situation, the chief of police issued orders that the striking operators be expelled from the streets and furthermore that they be disallowed to distribute any more cards or parade the streets.

During all this time the non-union houses did a rushing business and little change was noted in the production of the pictures by the new operators. Two of the operators, who had formerly stuck by the union, refused to walk out and remained loyal to their post.

Consequently, when the agreement was signed with Manager Howell Graham, of the Theatro, Colonial and Alhambra theatres, it was with the understanding that these men be reinstated into the union. This was done.

The condition of affairs was further intensified by the arrest of W. J. Lewis, of Birmingham, Ala., on whose person was found valerianate of ammonia balls, and who following a grilling by detectives, confessed that he had placed the balls in one of the theatres.

He claimed that he was paid $3 a day by the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers’ Union, of Birmingham, to do this. He is now in jail under heavy bond awaiting trial for his connection with the “unpleasantness.”

It was through the clever sleuth work of James Cohn, sixteen-year-old employee of the Theatro, and Tommy Thompson, advertising manager for this and other theatres owned by Howell Graham, that Lewis was run to earth.

Other unpleasant incidents occurred during the strike.

Patronage of the theatres the week following the return of the strikers to work was considerably less than it was before the strike closed.

Feature War Begins in Milwaukee

Twenty-five Cent Houses Commence Battle Royal for Patronage—Heavy Advertising Campaigns Planned—All Theatres But One in Pictures.

Special to The Motion Picture News
Milwaukee, Wis., May 27.

It looks as though Milwaukee would witness a battle royal between the twenty-five cent photoplay houses this summer. At least four of the big downtown houses which have been playing vaudeville or legitimate shows have dropped to pictures and another one is expected to open with the screen dramas very shortly.

In fact, so complete a hold have pictures taken upon the city that they have driven all vaudeville out of town and the next ten weeks will see Milwaukee, a city of over 400,000 population, with but one house not showing pictures, and that house the Shubert, a stock house, situated on the east side in a location unsuited to pictures.

The Orpheum Theatre is already playing features and has “Les Miserables” for an indefinite engagement from Sunday, May 24. The Davidson, the big K. & E. house, opened on the same day with “Samson.”

The Crystal Theatre, for the past ten years a popular-price vaudeville house, goes into pictures June 8, when they open with “From Dusk to Dawn.” The Majestic, the Orpheum circuit house, is expected to open either June 1 or 8 with pictures.

All of these houses intend billing their attractions as though they were straight dramatic shows, and their press copy is to be handled in the same way by the regular house press agent.

Already the eight, sixteen and even some twenty-four sheet stands on “Les Miserables” and “Samson” are out and the town has been prepared as though for a circus, with one sheets and half sheets. Just what the outcome of this unusual situation will be is being watched with much interest.

One effect that the “two bit” houses have had has been on the ten-cent houses which have woke up and bent their efforts not so much to securing big features, but rather to be sure of a good program of exceptional one and two reel features to fight this competition with.

Neff Tries to Gag Censorship Discussion

Issues Edit Puzzling Muzzle on League Exhibitors—Tries Similar Tactics with Trade Journals—Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors’ Canvas Goes on Just the Same—Thirty-two Added to Total of Those Against State Censorship

TWO attempts within a week, on the part of M. A. Neff, to “put the lid” on the discussion of the Ohio State Censor Law by exhibitors of the state and by the trade journals of the country, have failed to diminish the returns in the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors’ Board of Trade canvas in the least.

Partially compiled returns for the last week show that Cleveland exhibitors voting against the law, and eight exhibitors from outside that city following their example. The rest being classified and will be published as soon as the list is compiled. One hundred and twenty-three exhibitors have voted, but all one against the law.

Mr. Neff’s edicts—the one signed by him, the other inspired by him—are cunningly devised to choke the exhibitors’ expression of opinion, on the one hand, and put an end to the crusade of the Motion Picture News against censorship, on the other.

The inconsistencies and contradictions in each, viewed in the light of the other, prompt one to ask again the question The Motion Picture News asked last week:

WHERE DOES M. A. NEFF STAND?

HERE are the two “edicts.” Their motive is as obvious as their pretense to a large-minded view of the situation is shallow:

“In view of the publicity and discussion that is being given to the censorship question by the trade papers, the Special Convention Committee of the Fourth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America wish to have it understood that the parent organization, namely: The Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America, is taking no part in this discussion whatever.

“The position of the National League is plainly set forth in a resolution unanimously adopted at the semi-annual meeting of the National Executive Committee, held in Cincinnati, O., January 26 to 28, 1914, which is as follows:

“RESOLVED, That it is the sense of this committee by reason of the censorship question now being in the hands of the Federal Court and that a decision is pending as to the legality of a Censor Board, that this committee recommend that no further action be taken at this time in regard to the matter and further recommend that League members in all state branches and locals refrain from any agitation and action pertaining to the censorship question until the National Convention, to be held at Dayton, O., the week of July 6th, 1914.

“We wish to make clear that the National League has no jurisdiction over their respective state branches, in regard to matters of this kind, and therefore assume no responsibility. As laid down in the above resolution, no officer of the National League has authority to state what action may be taken by the coming National Convention.

“The undersigned committee extend a cordial invitation to manufacturers in all branches of the motion picture industry to attend the coming National Convention to be held in Dayton, O., the week of July 6th, 1914, and we wish to assure them of the hearty co-operation of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America.”

(Signed) M. A. NEFF, President.

AN ANSWER FROM NEFF

“The question has been asked, where does M. A. Neff stand on the censorship question?”

Section 5, of the Ohio State Censor Law positively states that Ohio may work in conjunction with censor boards of other states in forming a national censor congress, and that the action of said congress shall be the same as the action of the Ohio Censor Board, in other words, all pictures censored by a national censor congress shall be shown in the state of Ohio the same as if censored by the Ohio State Censor Board.

“I have favored state censorship because it is the only plan that has so far been suggested whereby a national censor board can be established that will relieve all concerns. I stand for a square deal for all, both great and small in the motion picture business; for a national censor board that can protect all, and when a picture passes the board, it is certain to be shown in every state and territory in the Union without interference from any source whatsoever.

(Signed) M. A. NEFF, President.”

(Signed) M. A. NEFF, President.”

At this juncture, the following statement from S. E. Morris, president of the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors’ Board of Trade, and until recently a strong supporter of Neff, is peculiarly apropos: “It is gratifying, indeed,” says Mr. Morris, “to see the way in which our brother exhibitors have responded to our bulletin requesting their opinion of our censor law. It was my idea to be almost the last, if not the last, to make any statement in reference to this great menace that now confronts us.

“You who know me are aware that I am an ardent exponent of ‘peace and harmony.’ It was with that idea in mind only invite but urge the attendance of every manufacturer of films, film exchange owners and editors of motion picture journals throughout the United States and territories, and the members of the National Censor Board to meet the national exhibitors in conference during the National Convention at Dayton, O., for the purpose of discussing the censorship question and to arrive upon a plan to be followed out by all concerned, whereby the exhibitors, manufacturers, film exchanges and all others interested may work in harmony for the best interests of the public and the uplift of the motion picture business in general.

“I believe that this question should be settled definitely and for all time to come. The censorship question is not theory, but a stubborn reality, which can be settled easily and harmoniously by concerted action and co-operation of the exhibitors, the manufacturers and film exchanges.

that I have always worked in the interest of the business in which we are all concerned.

"It was that policy I assumed with those on the committee with whom I had the honor to serve. Now, as to the censor law appearing on the statute books. That law was never read nor seen or voted on or O. K'd by any person or persons, as it was revised and arranged to suit the legislators, in whose hands it was left, much to the disappointment of us all.

"When censorship was first spoken of at Toledo, we never knew it was to be such rot as it is; and furthermore, the Industrial Commission, in whose hands it is, was not in existence then. It was created since the Cox regime.

"I sincerely believe the governor is unaware of all the present conditions. Had he known the facts we would have made him his own today.

"The cry from Neff has been, 'Just a few disgruntled members from Cleveland are opposed to it.'

"Well, I shall never forget the reception our committee got at Columbus when we went in the interest of the trade to confer with Neff and appear before the House Committee.

"When we walked into the hotel, Mr. Neff, surrounded by his lieutenants, Wilson and Maddox, could have stabbed us with a look, and if I had been meeting my bitterest enemy the greeting would not have been more gracious.

"Why did they act like this? Wasn't every exhibitor and exchange man in Ohio and the United States interested? We were grilled by Mr. Neff until 1 a.m. He appointed Mr. Maddox chairman of the meeting, and he was made chairman of the censor board on our next visit to Columbus.

"Mr. Neff has been in Cleveland four or five times. Why didn't he challenge us then, when our differences could be threshed out before any number of responsible people?

"He would rather write a trade journal and attack you when you are defenseless. I could dwell all day on petty attempts which were made to gag myself and a few others in Cleveland; but we wouldn't be gagged.

"Let the exhibitors of this country have their say, and if a man is their leader, let him lead them to benefits, not destruction. If ever anyone can convince me that rigid censorship is necessary I am willing to submit. But censorship is not needed.

"The pictures of to-day are getting better and better. We have made such strides that we are receiving the highest praise on all sides.

"Let us not have legalized censorship. If all were to abide by the National Board, local or not, you could rest assured that our business would remain, with the help of those who are in the business, a clean industry.

"So, brothers, I ask you all to draw your own conclusions. If you want freedom instead of suppression, a good organization instead of an iron hand, select the right kind of a leader."

THE names of the latest exhibitors to reply in Cleveland Board of Trade canvas are printed in the box accompanying this article. Some of their individual opinions are quoted here as a further example of "the strong sentiment" upon which Mr. Neff relies for his declaration that the law is satisfactory to the exhibitors of Ohio.

Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors Board of Trade.

"Gentlemen: For the past nine years I have been employed in a secretarial capacity by the Young Men's Christian Association, six years of that time as the executive officer. I am interested in motion pictures and own a half interest in a 250-seat new theatre primarily to keep people from going to what I consider undesirable places. As it happens a large per cent of our audience are church going people, and we have never had one complaint on the moral scenes in any picture. On the other hand, we run many, many pictures that tell a more forceful story in thirty minutes than any man I can get turns to address a meeting. Personally I am confident that the person or persons who framed the Ohio censor law and legislators who voted for it have no real experience with motion pictures, and therefore do not understand the subject they were trying to handle.

"Yours very truly, H. E. BROWN.

"The Photoplay Theatre, Fairport Harbor, O.

"Gentlemen: You wish to know where I stand on that censorship law. I think it opens up a new line for grafters. It is ROTTEN on its face of it. I would have just as much right to say that bull men should wear overalls, or that all soda fountains should serve none but chocolate soda. It seems so absurd that three persons should dictate to us the kind of products we should handle.

"I say, give that censorship graft a fight to a finish and all exhibitors should remember every politician that fights to retain the censor law. We should use our screens in campaign times. Fight them and fight the censor law!

"Yours truly, "A. R. BOYD."

"Cupid's Theatre, Tippecanoe City, O.

"Gentlemen: We think the present Ohio Censor law one of the biggest grafts we have ever heard of.

"Yours very truly, "ROGERS & BERTSCH."

"Broadway Theatre, Jackson, Ohio.

"Gentlemen: This censor law is an insult to the flag of freedom and to the general public.

"Yours fraternal, "H. HUTENFILLER."

Exhibition Room in Cleveland Exchange

Manager Holah, of the Eclectic, Introduces New Feature That Attains Immediate Popularity with Exhibitors—Will Have Regular Days for Showing

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Cleveland, May 28.

THE Eclectic Feature Film Company is showing enterprise in the fitting out of its exchange in this city. A space of more than 25,000 square feet in the Mandarin Building, Prospect avenue, has been finished in suitable manner for offices, exhibition room, shipping room and poster department. The Picture Weekly has an individual office in the same exchange.

The resident manager of the Eclectic exchange is Howard Holah, a thorough film man who has been in the business in this city from the earliest days of the systematic exchange, although he still is a young man. Mr. Holah formerly was with the General Film Company, and in selecting him the Eclectic Feature Film Company secured the services of one of the best film men in the city, local exhibitors believe.

A feature of the Eclectic exchange that appeals to the exhibitor is the exhibition room, where a small screen, fifty opera chairs, booth and a late model projection machine is always ready to show the motion picture man the latest Eclectic releases.

Manager Holah holds that each exhibitor knows his own audience, and a film that may be a great attraction in one house would not please in another. For that reason Mr. Holah, rather than describe his film in glowing terms and try to urge its booking, invites the exhibitor into the model little theatre and lets him see its projection.

"The plan is working well," said Mr. Holah in discussing the exhibition room. "Thus far we have shown the films whenever an exhibitor wanted to see them, but we intend to have regular exhibition days when all the picture men can come in and see the new features."

Manager Holah is now busy with the bookings for "Perils of Pauline" and the Cleveland release date will soon be announced. Already fifty theatres have been booked. It is expected that the Cleveland Leader, now running the "Lucille Love" series, will carry the serial story of "Pauline."

EDISON SCENARIO CONTEST

In an attempt to get new and original ideas for scenarios the Edison Company has started a contest between the college men of the foremost universities in the country. A prize of $100, in addition to the purchasing price, has been offered to the writer who submits the best, and the sum of $35 will be paid for all single reel manuscripts accepted.

The ten colleges competing are California, Chicago, Wisconsin, Columbia, Cornell, Harvard, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Yale. The contest closes December 1, 1914.
SAD it is to state it, but the fact is that the “premature” announcement in The Motion Picture News that Sam F. Cary, of Cincinnati, was slated by Tom Noctor, Queen City political dictator, and Marion A. Neff, to become third members of the Ohio Censor Board, has ruined Sam’s opportunities to serve as a censor.

The failure of Sam to land can also be construed to mean that no more of Neff’s recommendations will be considered by Governor Cox.

How’d it leak out in the first place that Cary was to be appointed? Neff swears he doesn’t know.

He tells the truth.

However, Cary, who formerly worked with Cox on the same newspaper, will be cared for. He will probably be given the place as head of the Publicity Department of the Ohio Committee at San Francisco. Cary was head of the Cincinnati Bureau of Complaints under Mayor Henry T. Hunt, who was defeated last election. A new job has been created for Cary.

It has been decided to appoint no new censor until the present storm blows over.

Two hundred applications are on file with Cox for the vacant job.

It is hoped to appoint some one who will add some prestige to the present galaxy of talent that is viewing films, and to select an authority who will not live on the fat of the land at the expense of the people.

However, there will be no hurry about this appointment.

“I’m not going to be stung again if I can help it,” is a statement attributed to the administration.

JUST here—a consideration of some past events in the light of present knowledge may be interesting.

“I see,” M. A. Neff is quoted as having said not long ago, “that a contingent in Cleveland which failed to destroy the Ohio law, is talking about submitting to the people of Ohio the repeal of the present Censorship law. It is my prediction that their effort would be overwhelmed by ten to one.”

“And the Motion Picture Exhibitors League would not only be willing but would assist in every way possible to secure a vote upon this subject, and then possibly a few paid agents of those who are profiting by keeping those disturbers active would be thoroughly exposed to the public.”

The above statement from Mr. Neff was given to the press before The Motion Picture News revelations were far advanced, and also before State Auditor Donahoe, in an ill-advised moment, gave to some prying reporters the item about the “high-cost-of-living.”

Now be it understood that the state auditor made a grave political mistake in giving out the expense accounts of Mr. Vestal and Mrs. Maud Murray Miller at just this time. Mr. Neff never dreamed of such a blunder until it was all in type. Didn’t Mr. Donahoe know that an attack was being made on state censorship, and that all was to remain quiet?

The state auditor was the only one that did not know—and, oh, well, the fat was in the fire!

THE statement of Mr. Neff in defense of state censorship is now being recalled.

Doesn’t it sound just like pure piffle after the expense accounts turned in by the censors who have been living like princes at the taxpayers’ expense; and after the facts that have been published in The News?

Do you think that Mr. Neff would like to have a vote on the Board of Censorship proposition right now? He would not, I think.

Because instead of the “effort being overwhelmed ten to one” in the manner Mr. Neff would desire, it would be overwhelmed ten to one by the Ohio electorate in a way that would sadly surprise Mr. Neff et al.

The “Film Man” in the “Dramatic Mirror” also calls attention to some rather inconsistent assertions on the part of Neff, who seems to be rapidly losing his free and easy attitude. We quote:

“PRESIDENT NEFF, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League, according to report from the recent New York State convention, now opposes local and state censorship, but is in favor of national supervision of the motion picture.

“Always providing that President Neff has not been misquoted, we would like to see the League head explain to Ohio exhibitors the reasons for this suddenly developed opposition to the form of censorship which he fought so hard to saddle upon the Buckeye State.

“Why the change of mind when the pet system has not yet received a trial farther than the appointment of the members of the board, or were the appointments sufficient to change the right and wrong of the principle of state censorship? Should we secure national censorship, have we any assurance, Mr. Neff, that this will be permanently satisfactory should the choice of censors not coincide with your views? What next—a world-wide censorship? But then, perhaps, the correspondents have misquoted the League president, and he still pins his faith to Ohio’s board.”

Isn’t it puzzling?

In Ohio, Mr. Neff says opponents to state censorship are “disgruntled,” and that state censorship would be supported by an overwhelming majority, and in Rochester, N. Y., Mr. Neff is quoted as stating that he opposes state censorship and favors national censorship.

And there are others who would like President Neff to explain his exact attitude right now, among them Gov. Cox.

We herewith, and for the final time, reiterate our allegation of Mr. Neff’s, fearless of successful contradiction, namely: That Harry Vestal, friend of Bills Durbin and Finley, and approved by M. A. Neff, edits a newspaper, conducts a theatre and—

Censors motion pictures.

That Mrs. Maud Murray Miller is on the pay roll of the Columbus “Evening Dispatch,” and—

Censors motion pictures.

That all applicants for positions on the board were obliged to take a pledge to devote their entire time to work of censoring.

That Cox, Neff, Finley and Durbin, between them, selected or approved the members of the censorship board.

Our contentions have been clearly put; recent revelations other than our own have proven to all thinking people that the Ohio censors are living like princes and potentates, and are really enjoying a holiday, with rides in chair cars, expensive meals, and luxurious hotel accommodations.

And in the meantime, capital worth millions of dollars is tied up in film productions purely at the whim and fancy of these two censors whose notions and nostrums are considered by many, not only a menace to great film industries, but very dangerous to the existence of cinematography as an art.

The Life Photo Film Corporation has completed their five-part feature release, "The Greyhound," adapted from the legitimate production written by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner.

A private exhibition of the production was given May 29 by the Life Photo Film Corporation at the American Theatre, and will be reviewed in the forthcoming issue of The Motion Picture News. No expense was spared in the filming of this deep-sea drama, the company taking a large number of interior and exterior scenes on board the SS. "Olympic."

Miss Catherine Carter, formerly of the Famous Players, takes the female lead, Miss Anna Laughlin, who played the lead in the stage production of the "Wizard of Oz" and "The Top o' the World," assuming the role of the ingenue. Mr. David Wall, who played the lead in "The Banker's Daughter," released by the same company, assumes the male lead in "The Greyhound."

The title role is taken by Mr. William H. Tooker, who also appeared in "The Banker's Daughter."

The feature release of the Life Photo Film Corporation, to follow "The Greyhound," is "Northern Lights," a western psychological drama.

FAMOUS PLAYERS TO FILM "COUNTY CHAIRMAN"

Macklyn Arbuckle has been engaged by the Famous Players Film Company to appear in their forthcoming photo-dramatization of George Ade's celebrated play, "The County Chairman," in which he starred for four successive seasons.

At the same time the Famous Players obtained the services of Jane Grey to appear in "The Little Grey Lady," Channing Pollock's drama of Washington "civil service" life. Miss Grey appeared recently in "Nearly Married," with Bruce McRae, a Famous Players' star, and in "The Conspiracy." "The Little Grey Lady" will be ready for the screen in the near future.

EXHIBITOR PRAISES SERIAL

The following letter was received by the Eclectic Film Company, of 110 West Fourth street, New York City, regarding their feature "Perils of Pauline." It is from the Palace Theatre, of 506 Sycamore street, Waterloo, Iowa. It reads:

Dear Sirs:

Pauline is growing. Our business on the opening episode was shown to 369 people, but she closed the fifth episode last night to 3260 people. There is a reason. First Pathé is proud of most the Pathé players, Pearl White, Crane Wilbur, Paul Panzer, Donald MacKenzie, "The Pirate" (still in the seas), and Francis Carlsile, and third Charles Goldfish who knows how to write a story. Wish you continued success, I beg to re- mind.

Very truly yours,

Lasky Gets All Belasco Productions

Past and Future Productions Granted to Them by Great Producer—"Girl of the Golden West," "Rose of the Rancho" and Others to Be Filmed

DAVID BELASCO has entered into an arrangement with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, through their executive head, Samuel Goldfish, for the production as screen features of all the famous successes of Mr. Belasco past, present and future.

Mr. Belasco's attitude is shown by the following letter which accompanied the sending of the contracts:

My Dear Mr. Lasky: I am forwarding you, under separate cover, contracts giving you the motion picture rights to all my productions, both past and future, and even while writing this acknowledgment I am congratulating myself upon the fact that my productions are to see the light of day in the motion picture field, under your auspices.

For the past six months, in fact ever since dramatic successes became popular upon the screen, I have made a careful study of the situation. Personally I have seen numerous feature motion pictures and concluded after seeing the three productions already made by the toral board which placed Abraham Lincoln in the presidential chair, will take part in the scene in which Lincoln is supposed to be elected.

Original Belasco stars will be secured for the production of the Belasco pieces whenever possible, and you, that no other firm is as open to conviction as to the value of untried methods, no other firm as willing to innovate and no other firm allows their directors the freedom to create new methods of production to take the place of those which we have outgrown.

Yours very truly,

DAVID BELASCO.

Among the recent successes from the Belasco house which will receive production by the Lasky concern are "The Girl of the Golden West," which will be produced in the exact locale of the play with several of the scenes laid in the petrified forest of Calistoga, Cal.; "Sweet Kitty Bells," "Years of Discretion," "The Warrens of Virginia," "The Woman," "The Lily," "The Case of Beck," "The Rose of the Rancho" and "The Darling of the Gods." The latter will be produced in Japan. In "The Warrens of Virginia" Judge Dittenhofer, the sole surviving member of the elec-

LORIMORE WITH FOX

Alec Lorimore has resigned his position as sales manager of the Gaumont Company and publicity manager of Molies, to take over a selling proposition with the Box Office Attractions Company.

In this capacity he will travel over the country, making arrangements with state right buyers for the handling of the new Balboa features, which the Box Office has recently bought. This department was started by Abraham Carlos, of that company, who will still take an active part.
WOMEN FAIL TO HALT SUNDAY SHOWS

Aldermen of De Ridder, La., Pass Law Permitting Motion Pictures on Sunday and Mayor Signs It Over Women's Protest—Bandy Talk of Criminal Charges—State Censorship Law Impossible in Louisiana

Special to The Motion Picture News

New Orleans, May 27.

So far as Louisiana is concerned, a most astonishing state of affairs has arisen, caused by a combination of Sunday motion pictures and open billiard halls on the seventh day. De Ridder, a comparatively new city in the western part of the state and one of the centers of the huge lumber industry, has just passed an ordinance allowing films to be exhibited and billiards to be played on Sunday.

A large portion of the population, probably nineteen-twentieths, is engaged in lumber, and the aldermen decided that these people were entitled to amusement.

However, various women's societies have arisen in protest, the prosecution of one member of the board of criminal charges has been threatened, and there is excitement generally in the lumber city. Despite the protest of the women's mass meeting, the mayor signed the ordinances and they are now effective.

In almost any other state this action would not be significant, but in Louisiana, where the laws are liberal and where Sunday is practically universally considered a holiday so far as innocent amusement is concerned, the protest is amazing.

It can be explained only in that the city council saw fit to link the motion pictures and poolrooms in ordinance for passage at the same meeting.

Throughout Louisiana and Southern Mississippi, especially in the Catholic sections, Sunday is the best business day for the motion picture houses.

Proprietors put forward their efforts to supplying high-class films on those days, and the pulpit generally has supported such productions.

Attention was called to the De Ridder situation in connection with the fight of The Motion Picture News against state censorship. All of the local managers are strong in opposing such censorship, but happily, their opposition is purely theoretical, so far as local conditions are concerned.

It would be impossible to pass such a measure in this state, for it would have the positive opposition of the public generally, and of every influential newspaper in the state.

Louisiana and Mississippi theatres have kept their performances clean, and there is not on record a single protest against the class of films that has been exhibited.

Louisiana, especially, has had experience in other lines with various boards of inspection, and the people are familiar with the forms of so-called "legitimate" graft that such laws afford.

The laws of Louisiana give the police authorities liberal powers in the way of regulating amusements, and the police of the cities and the board of police jurors in the parishes (corresponding to counties in other states) has general power to stop any exhibition that tends to corrupt public morals.

Careful examination of the records of this city and inquiry through the various parishes fails to adduce a single instance in which a proprietor of a permanent motion picture exhibition has attempted to infringe on the general law.

This is an unusual tribute to New Orleans, a city which in the eyes of the world is considered "gay," and where the various women's organizations that might be expected to make protests in such cases are probably stronger than in any other place in the South.

With practically no exceptions, the motion picture houses of New Orleans are located on the main business streets or in the better residential sections. In the latter instances they are operated chiefly at night and their principal patronage comes from women and children.

The managers have realized that questionable films would injure their own business, and even from a selfish point of view it would be folly for them to take chances.

New Orleans managers express sympathy with the other states which are laboring under censorship laws, but all agreed that such legislation is impossible in this state.

Louisiana is highly educated, so far as the film business is concerned, and the people have come to know the theatres as part of their life and any attempt on the part of state lawmakers to set up a board as public censors would prove the undoing of the lawmakers the first time they ran for re-election.

New Orleans and Louisiana have not been frankly treated by public opinion in being considered "wide open." Public sentiment in this state simply requires that the laws be liberal, but that laws against the improper and harmful be strictly enforced.

It is for that reason that narrow-minded legislation aimed at harmless Sunday amusement has been impossible, that a board of censorship would be considered an insult to the people themselves, and, incidentally that the crime rate among the white people of the state is probably the lowest in this country.

Announcement that there will be neither vaudeville nor a musical stock company at Spanish Fort, the public asylum of the state of New Orleans, during the summer, and the change of the Lafayette Theatre from vaudeville to motion pictures, is striking testimony as to the growth of the films among the pleasure seeking folk of this French-American city.

This is the first year that Spanish Fort has not had either vaudeville or musical comedy. Last season the performances were closed with motion pictures and these were found to be more popular than the remainder of the performances. This year the street railway company, which owns the park, has reduced the fare one third and has abandoned all effort to compete with the movies, dancing and the usual "midway" features being the only amusements offered.

The Lafayette, after a winter of vaudeville, is devoting its entire time to motion pictures. There is but one theatre now running, it representing musical comedy, rendered by a stock company, to small audiences.

This change in the public taste is probably more significant in New Orleans than in any other city in the country, for this has always been known as a "pleasure mad" community, the people with the fnallement of French and Spanish blood and the descendants of the wealthy planters, believing in mingling their work freely with play.

However, the changes this summer were not unexpected, for only one high-class theatre was able to operate through last winter while two of the handsomest "movie" houses were opened on Canal street, the main business artery. Within four blocks on this street, where the highest of rents are paid, there are to-day eleven motion picture houses in operation. In practically every one of the high-class houses serial stories are being used, and within the past sixty days possibly half of the time is occupied by five and six reel films, taken from popular plays or books, for which an admission of twenty and twenty-five cents is charged. In fact, it is apparent that these higher class plays, instead of failing to draw the business on account of the higher admission fee, are outdrawing the cheaper films.

ONE film which was shown for three days at a Canal street house at twenty-five cents turned the public away at every late afternoon and night performance.

Another story on the order of "The Perils of Pauline" have gained such a vogue that local managers declare even the society folk will make no other engagements for the nights the next of the series are to be shown.

During the evenings the number of automobiles parked in front of the high-class houses have become so numerous that the police have been compelled to adopt new parking rules to prevent the blockade of traffic, this law forcing the machines to back up against the car tracks after discharging their occupants.

Two of the largest syndicates now operating here, both of which have recently completed new houses, are reported to be planning to build still more theatres in the business section.

GET-TOGETHER PLAN ADOPTED IN MICHIGAN

Special to The Motion Picture News

Detroit, Mich., May 27.

President Peter Jeup and Secretary C. M. Orth, of Detroit, of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, made a trip to Flint Friday, May 22, for a "get-together" conference with the Flint exhibitors. Up to the time of this visit the exhibitors in Flint were not acquainted with one another and to all appearances had nothing in common. When they had been introduced to one another by the Detroit gentlemen, a friendly talk led them to decide to get together twice a month for the good of the motion picture business, and several new memberships for the league were secured by the Detroit gentlemen.

After the talkfest, the party of ten piled into one automobile and went for a joy ride. Those at the confab were E. L. Booth, of the Star Theatre; Manager McDonald, of the Orpheum; Col. Butterfield, owner of the Bijou; E. J. Stanton, of the Royal; Lester Matt, of the Della, and two representatives of the Lyric.

Birmingham, Ala., May 27.

At the second annual convention of the Alabama branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America held in Birmingham, Thursday and Friday, May 21 and 22, much important business was transacted and the largest attendance at a Southern motion picture exhibitors' convention was recorded. It was the first convention of more than one Southern state combined, the four states of Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama being represented.

The matter of Sunday pictures in these four states was one of the main subjects discussed, it being chimed by the convention delegates that the matter should be brought to their respective state legislatures for action, and it was so agreed.

The delegates professed the belief that by proper presentation of their plea for Sunday pictures to the state legislatures a law could and would be passed covering the subject. The business session of the convention was executive and full details of the matters discussed were not made public.

There were present 186 delegates from the four states and 16 different exchange men. The second feature of the convention was the new spirit of co-operation developed between the exhibitors and the film exchange representatives. Both parties expressed themselves as highly delighted with their deliberations.

They agreed that they had many mutual problems in which the exchange men could protect and aid the exhibitors, and vice versa; the exchange men will not allow a new man offering a high price for films to cut the old exhibitors out of their supply, and the exhibitors promised to look after the interests of the film exchanges in a like manner.

THE new officers elected for the ensuing year by the Alabama association are as follows: J. G. Wells, president, Anniston, Ala.; W. J. Howell, first vice-president, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Walter Levi, second vice-president, Anniston; R. B. Wilby, secretary and treasurer, Selma, Ala.; A. Alex Wall, national vice-president, Birmingham.

Delegates to the national convention were elected as follows: A. Alex Wall, Birmingham; J. N. Cason, Syra- cuase, Minne. Russell, Tuscaloosa; H. L. F. Lasby, Eutaw; O. T. Chain, Avondale; and Walter Levi, Annis- ton.

The convention was held in the Hotel Hillman and National President M. A. Neff, of Cincinnati, was in attendance. The banquet proposed for Friday night was called off as there were many of the delegates who could not wait. Exhibits of screens, films, machines, and all appliances used about a picture theatre were made during the convention and attracted much attention from the exhibitors.

All the delegates expressed themselves as highly pleased with the meeting on account of the many benefits they derived from it.

Among the delegates were: F. W. Sweatt, Power Machine Company, New York; Mr. Al. H. Butterfield, Life Photoplay Film Company, New York; O. P. Hill, All Star Film Manufacturing Company, New York; H. M. Savin- leur, delegate, New Orleans; Walter J. Bracken, Bambridge, Ga.; U. T. Kochin, Augusta, Ga.; C. A. Griffin, Meridian, Miss.; Fred W. Absley, Gulfport, Miss.; Mowell Graham, Chattanooga, Tenn.; W. H. Washburn, Nashville, Tenn.; J. G. Wells, Anniston; R. R. Wyle, Selma; E. H. Calley, Tuscaloosa; E. F. Howell, Tuscaloosa; Archie Moran, Greens- boro; Mr. Hicks, Montgomery; "Doc" Elton, Talladega; Dr. Halliday, Jasper; J. H. Cain, Mobile; J. H. Snyder, Bessemer; W. P. Haddy, Ensley; Dan McCachin, Ensley; Joe Steel, Ensley; O. L. Chain, Avondale; Sam Block, Selma; Mr. Custred, Pratt City; Mr. Perolli, Pratt City, and others.

THAINOUSER STARS GLICKMAN

Ellis F. Glickman, one of the foremost Jewish character actors, is being starred in his own photoplay, "The Last Concert," by the Thainouser Company. The arrangements were made through Charles J. Hite, president of that corporation.

In this four-reel picture Mr. Glick- man plays the leading part, and is said to bring humor into the play just as the right moment. He has played more than eight hundred char- acter parts on the speaking stage and was at one time leading man for Bertha Kalish.

"The Last Concert" will be Mr. Glickman's second appearance before the camera, his previous story, "Re- pentance," having proved so success- ful. He will be supported by Minnie Ber- lin, who will play opposite him, and Nolan Gane, who will play juvenile lead.
Do Exhibitors Want Censorship?

Idaho Exhibitors Will Support National Board, but Are Opposed to State Censorship—Cincinnati and Detroit Exchange Men and Exhibitors Add to Protests Against State Censors—Other Opinions Indicate Trade Aversion to Project

Strongly opposed to a local board of censorship and determined to oppose such a measure should it be agitation here, but finding no fault with the National Board of Censers, is the position taken by the picture show managers of Boise, Idaho. Most of them, however, are of the opinion that the public are the best censors and find that the classes who patronize the shows here demand good clean pictures and the four houses are certainly providing that class and receiving a patronage which the shows justify.

W. F. Bozner, pioneer of motion picture shows in Boise, Idaho:

"I have no fault to find or criticism to offer on work of the National Board of Censers. I would oppose a local censors board for the reason that I have found they are usually dominated by political bosses, that their work must of necessity be of a small city be of a narrow caliber and, further, I believe such a board would injure the business to such an extent that many of the houses would be forced out because of being unable to get reals to take the places of those which would be ordered not run by the board. I am of the opinion that the manufacturers should produce a class of pictures and the public should be the only ones that should be passed prohibiting the manufacturing of any pictures of a class which could not be shown to children without corrupting their morals. I believe that the picture manufacturing and picture-show business should be placed and kept on a high plane, that the pictures should be of a class that could be seen and enjoyed by the most sensitive without embarrassment and until the time comes when the manufacturers are placed under the control of some law, I favor the national censorship board and commend its work."

J. A. Ludington, Rex Theatre, Boise, Idaho:

"I do not favor the National Board of Censers, although I have no objection to their work. I believe the people themselves are the best censors. If a bad picture is put on, the house operates, and it has been experienced that picture-show managers are just as desirous of securing good pictures as the public demands, and that they are fully as particular as any censor board would be, for the reason that their business depends on it."

H. Kaiser, The Kaiser, Boise, Idaho:

"I believe that the work of the National Board of Censers is all right, that pictures should be censored which are not fit for the public to see, but I am opposed to a local board of censors, believing that one censorship is sufficient and that a local board would handicap the business and especially when a show is removed any great distance from a film exchange, the house would often be left without a program. The fact that politics enter into the appointment of local censors, that their opinions of good and bad pictures are based upon their own ideas and not because of any special study which might fit them to censor pictures, I believe are the chief reasons why local boards are failures and a detriment to the business and a disappointment to the public."

Ott & Farquhar, The Isis, Boise, Idaho:

"I believe that the National Board of Censers is a good thing, as they eliminate much of the foreign stuff which would not appeal to the American public and, further, because it does away with the pictures which it would not be good for the public to see. I do not believe that politics enters into the work of the national board as it does in local boards, which it opposes. In sections remote from film exchanges, many houses would be put out of business by the petty notions of a local board of censors, who are picked to pay some political debt, have their ideas confined to their own viewpoints and should they be narrow in their scope and see evil in their own minds, pictures harmless would be immoral and distasteful to them and ordered prohibited."

A. J. Gillingham, manager, Detroit Universal Film Exchange:

"I see no necessity for state or local censorship. If somebody is appointed by city or state to censor, they are going to censor something. It becomes with them a matter of making a showing. The work of the National Board of Censers is satisfactory and disinterested. I have no criticism of the police censorship in Detroit. It has been very satisfactory, but if a woman were appointed on a censorship board she must be very strong to withstand the opinions of other women who will bring pressure upon her. The demand for such an appointment all comes from a group of women. All the demand there ever was for state censorship in Michigan came from a certain gentleman who wanted an appointment. He had a bill introduced in the last legislature which was not reported out of committee."

"The standard of exhibitors is constantly improving. There is rarely a one who would run an objectionable feature, and the public has power to revoke the license of such one. Our company will not accept any films not approved by the National Board and then we run them off for an inspection here before we allow one to be exhibited. We have a reputation for sending out nothing but clean pictures. I favor the appointment of a committee by the local exhibitors which will pass upon all films brought into Detroit and the mutual agreement of all exhibitors to run no films not approved by this committee. President Roosevelt, you remember, had the proposition for finding an act for a censorship in the District of Columbia declared such an act un-American, un-democratic and probably unconstitutional. After all, pictures are but photographic stories."

W. Lester Levy, Calvert Theatre, Detroit:

"I do not favor state censorship of motion pictures because it will become a part of the political game and soon bring about a chaotic condition. I favor local censorship because, in my opinion, the local police board is a lot of overie-investigators, and unless they can be properly appointed no films cannot be shown. I do not think the work of the National Board of Censers is adequate because things are judged from a New York point of view and New York stands for many things that other places wouldn't. In my opinion, there is no public demand for either state or local censorship. The public is not clamoring for censoring of pictures. It is a class of meddlers who want a finger in everything and who imagine nothing can be right unless they say so. Unfortunately for the picture theatres, all pictures are judged from a downtown point of view. It's the downtown houses which can pay the price and they only use what will bring them the money, the more sensational, the more money, and the more notoriety the picture gets the harder the meddlers go after the picture theatres."

W. W. Schoneherr, manager, Casino Feature Film Exchange, Detroit:

"We have been satisfied with conditions as they have been in Detroit. The police censorship has been intelligent and has, in the main, followed the lines of the national board. State censorship there has been no demand for. In the cities which we serve out in the state the local police authorities have agreed to accept a Detroit certificate of censorship and we have had no trouble. We would not want to see a woman on the Detroit board, though; we fear her judgment. Censorship by the National Board alone would be all right if the exchanges and film dealers were all alike, but we fear the state-right features which are brought in uncensored, criticized and charged up to the motion-picture industry in general."

Maurice Lynch, Mirth and Catherine Theatres, Detroit:

"If I do not favor state or local censorship, I believe the work of the National Board adequate, that it is what censorship should be. I think that the National Board of Censorship is doing all the good work that can be done. The board is composed of some of our best and well-known people and should be strong enough to handle all films.

C. C. Hite, manager, Mutual Film Supply Company, Cincinnati:

"I believe it impossible for any board of censorship, whether national, state or local, to properly censor pictures for reasons of motion-picture house management, because conditions are not alike in the various parts of the country and no two persons hold the same views as to what is right and wrong in motion-picture production. Motion pictures should no more be censored than every show that is played in the legitimate show houses. Censorship will ask for things that are unreasonable which will cost the film manufacturer 25 per cent. extra in production and in turn will cost the exhibitor 50 per cent. more to operate."

"Censorship is a reflection on the capability of the exhibitor to handle his business and places a tremendous power in the hands of unscrupulous politicians. The only solution of censorship is its elimination and I hope every exhibitor in Ohio will join with the exchange men and the manufacturers and fight the evil until it is a thing of the past."

G. J. Trask, manager, World's Special Films Corporation, Cincinnati:

"I am opposed to the censorship of motion pictures on the ground of personal privilege. The state or city might just as well, or better, try to censor all the books and newspapers that are published. Before the censorship of films should be considered plays should be taken up, I think, for surely worse things are shown upon the stage than have yet been shown in pictures. And the stage, with its actors in flesh and blood and speaking in words as well as gestures, imparts a realism that cannot be attained by the moving picture. The exhibitor will be the worst sufferer."

E. P. Bernardi, associated with John Huss in the management of the Colonial and Sun Theatres, Cincinnati:

"I have already voiced my sentiments on this question for the Motioon Picture News. I am opposed to censorship of all kinds because the up-to-date manager does not need to be told what kind of pictures he should or should not show. The exhibitor is in the best position to know what the public wants and does not need to be dictated to by strangers and politicians in a different part of the state. The present National Board of Censors, I believe, has satisfied exhibitors all over the country and its members are capable of protecting the exhibitor and the public alike. There has been no complaint against exhibitors in Cincinnati that I know of. If this law is upheld in the Supreme Court, the motion picture men will have to get together and make a united effort for its repeal if they do not wish to have their business ruined."

S. P. Hettenberg, manager the Eclectic Feature Film Exchange, Cincinnati:

"I do not believe the state has the right to let the minority dictate to the majority, which would be the case in the state censorship of motion pictures. The state would have the right by the same principle to censor the news which appears in the newspapers. The rulings of the National Board, are fair, and should be final. I believe this law was gotten up by Mr. Neff for an honest purpose, but it went beyond his expectations. I believe if the question is left to a referendum vote of the people in Ohio, it will be defeated as the public has never made a demand for censorship, nor will they submit to having their amusements censored by a board of three people who cannot represent the vast tastes of all the people of the state. The individual likes and dislikes of the board may be such as would condemn many pictures which would appeal to the public taste. Censorship, if allowed to rule, will have no hold upon the public only in this but in other states on the trade, for this situation in Ohio is being watched closely by politicians in all parts of the county."

Harold Edel, manager, Strand Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.:

"Censorship, except by a national board, composed of very learned men, is to be discouraged at all times. I believe that the edict of the National Board should suffice for an entire country and all cities abide by its rulings. Personally I would not permit any film of questionable character to be shown at the Strand, and I believe that this is the policy with all managers, who have the welfare of their theatres at heart."

"This idea of a local censor is all wrong, in fact, it is incongruous for any one to imagine anyone holding such a position. Imagine a man going around and looking at films all day and night and passing patents on them. I think that local censorship is the worst evil that the motion picture business has so far encountered. I hope that the National board will turn down all white slave playphotos in the future. It is a shame that there has been so much of it allowed to pass already. Patrons do not want to go to a motion picture theatre and literally 'sit on pins' during the whole performance because of the questionable scenes throughout the film. Here is one instance where I am in favor of censorship, and I think that no white slave film will ever 'get by' the National Board. No respectable theatre would countenance the exhibition of such films."

MANY BUFFALO THEATRES WILL USE FILMS THIS SUMMER

Buffalo, N. Y., May 28.

The Garden Theatre is the first of the local legitimate houses to go to motion pictures for the summer. Manager William F. Graham put the summer policy into effect about the middle of May.

Before the first of June the Majestic, another first-class legitimate theatre, will have adopted the policy of the Garden. Foster Moore, the local manager of the George Kleine attractions, and Manager John Laughlin have closed contracts for the showing of the Kleine features at the Majestic during the summer months. A large new pipe organ will be installed at the Majestic, as well as new scenic effects. Press Representative Edward Scanlon announces that "Spartacus" will be one of the big attractions and that a one-week revival of "Quo Vadis" has been requested.

It is expected that before many days have elapsed the Teck and Star will announce the showing of motion pictures for the summer.

UNIVERSAL EXHIBITORS PLAN AUTO TOUR TO DAYTON

Special to The Motion Picture News

Detroit, Mich., May 27.

A Universal tour to the Dayton convention is being arranged by Manager George W. Weeks, of Detroit. There will be twenty-five cars coming from Detroit and other points in Michigan and each car will be decked with a Universal banner.

Outside of Detroit there will be a car each from Kalamazoo, Saginaw, Bay City and Pontiac. At Toledo the party will be joined by ten more cars.

The first night's halt will be at Toledo, the second at Columbus, where John Swain, manager of the Pasini theatre, is arranging for other cars to join the tour.

EXHIBITORS WILL VISIT FORD PLANT

Special to The Motion Picture News

Detroit, May 27.

One of the features of the Michigan convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, in Detroit, June 9-11, will be a visit to the immense plant of the Ford Automobile Company, on the afternoon of June 10. The delegates will be taken through a portion of the plant and then escorted to the photographing room of the factory, which is fitted up for an assembly room as well.

Here motion pictures of such portions of the plant as they have not seen with their own eyes will be shown them. This room is fitted with seats which can be moved in or out as wanted and will accommodate an audience of 300.

The “Milwaukee Plan” and Other Opinions

Editor, The Motion Picture News, New York City.

Dear Sir: I notice that you have taken up the fight against legalized censorship, and being very much interested and having had experience with reference to local censorship in our city, I have been successful in convincing our Mayor and the Common Council that local censorship is an unnecessary and expensive luxury this would eventually cause a hardship to the exhibitor and create a political board that would not be competent to the censoring of pictures.

I suggest that you appoint seven persons, selecting them in the manner following: Two motion picture men, one member of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association, one member of the City Club, one member representing the Bench and Bar, one member of the University Extension and a Unions local; these six persons, the secretary of the commission, to act without compensation. The Mayor appointed such a board and after its appointment he adopted the following policy:

1. The Mayor agreed to revoke the license of the exhibitor, upon the recommendation of any three members of the commission, who refused to comply with the mandates of the commission.

2. If a commission deals entirely with the exhibitor and puts pressure upon the exhibitor not to exhibit any pictures which have not been censored by the National Board of Censors.

3. If a picture has been exhibited and complaint is made to the commission, three members of the commission will immediately view the picture and order cut-outs or eliminations or will prohibit the running of the picture, as they may see fit.

We have had several complaints, but in every instance we have found that the manufacturer or exchange man failed to make the eliminations ordered by the National Board of Censorship. In cases of that kind, we ordered the exhibitor to make the cut-outs.

The exhibitors are complying with the demands of this commission and we have found that our method is very successful in prohibiting the running of indecent and obscene pictures in our city. We have also found that it is not a burden upon the exhibitor and the distributing agents or exchange men are readily complying with our demands and are beginning to realize that it is the only method to prohibit further agitation for either state or local censorship, and this splendid safeguard has elevated the motion picture business in the city of Milwaukee.

I am writing this letter as secretary of the Citizen’s Commission on Motion Pictures and as president of the International Motion Picture Association; also as a local exhibitor.

Mr. Cocks, secretary of the National Board of Censorship, spoke before the local exhibitors recently, and I believe that he was very much pleased with the system in vogue in our city.

Our board is not legalized and consequently the members are without salary or compensation of any kind. We receive a small fee for every picture that we view, but this fee has hardly been enough to cover the expenses connected with this commission; but we are in hopes that the Milwaukee Common Council will make an appropriate sum towards the payment of the expenses of this commission.

Respectfully yours,

CHARLES H. PHILLIPS
President International Motion Picture Association.

Editor, The Motion Picture News, New York City.

Dear Sir: I think censorship is unnecessary because the film companies know better what takes with the public than the censors can know. I am having a hard time of it here. Every preacher and most of the school teachers are fighting the picture show, and it is all published in the newspapers. The censorship does not amount to a pinch of snuff to them or to anybody else here.

A FUSION TICKET

Editor, The Motion Picture News, New York City.

Dear Sir: It is well enough to theorize on the subject of censorship. One needs to be in the motion picture business personally, to have some accurate knowledge of life, and must have cars wide open, and with the demands and actions of the public when pictures making light of the marriage relations are displayed.

Such titles as “She never was a wife but was a—”, “Along with Her Sin”, “She Left Her Shame at the Wrong Door”, “In the Midst of Passion”, show, without going further, the need of censorship. While the picture, “Law in the End of the Road,” was being shown to two women, in a house full of people, held the following conversation loud enough for all to hear. “She said, ‘Oh, what did she get that?’ The other answered, ‘Oh! one of the three helped her to it.’”

W. H. HORSEY,
Secretary, Cleveland Local No. 1 of the M. P. E. L. A.

Sneering, occasional laughing outright and buzzing conversation in the audience follow suggestive scenes. All ample evidence is given that senseless indecency or anything that makes light of the moral order should be eliminated from the motion picture.

Why are such things permitted? Can any one expect to get 3 or 4 per cent of the receipts produced that have the faults above mentioned and yet make a picture business in this country? All these things show the absolute need of censorship.

We do not want Europeanized American pictures that have been made out of ten it is unsafe for a woman to be alone on the street after dark. We have prided ourselves on our decency. Let us maintain our return in dollars or cents can compensate for the loss of moral citizenship.

If your fight is confined to the elimination of government officials and censorship and if you stand to uphold and strengthen and encourage our present National Board to do better work, I am with you heart and soul, but censorship of some form is needed and we urge that the whole apparatus of the Motion Picture News and motion picture proprietors combined will never succeed in flooding the audience that is now going for clean pictures.

Let us have one entertainment that meets with the approval of all.

Yours very sincerely,
L. C. SMITH,

Editor, The Motion Picture News,

Dear Sir:

It looks as if we must have censorship whether we want it or not. It makes no difference if the reformers make something, and the motion picture field looks fertile to them for it. We write that the only logical, sensible solution is a federal censorship as the only solution for direct films for exhibition anywhere in the United States.

Yours, H. H. HARRISON, General Manager, Queen Theatre, Dayton, Galveston, Galveston, Tex.

Nashville Has Film Censor Board

Campaign Will Be Directed Against Some of the Negro Theatres—Ordinance Provides for Fine if Forbidden Pictures Are Shown

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Nashville, Tenn., May 27.

All motion pictures shown by local theatrical houses are to be censored, judging from the activities of Mayor H. E. Howe, who has appointed a board of board of trustees for the special purpose of inspecting questionable films shown by Nashville picture shows. The new board is composed of Charles Cohn, chairman; W. J. Wallace, George W. Brandon, D. P. Wrenne, E. C. Faircloth and J. W. Dashiell.

Up to the present no complaints have reached the mayor in regard to lewd or immoral films of any kind being shown, hence the new board has not had any duties to perform as yet. However, there are two motion picture houses in the city who have several films held back for the purpose of allowing the board to pass, on them, since they are of the questionable variety and the proprietors of the shows are not inclined to run over the law.

When the board was appointed an ordinance was passed covering vicious films in Nashville, and included the following pertinent paragraphs: "The board of censorship will receive complaints from anybody and any films to be used by local picture houses which are in any way obscene, or otherwise criminal, moving or stationary, may be forbidden. When the said censorship board passes on said films and directs that the use of them shall be discontinued, said persons operating such places of amusement continue use of same, they shall be subject to a fine of not less than $5.00 nor more than $50.00."

The new board is anticipating some hard duties within a few weeks, when they will visit the negro picture shows of the city and direct that certain classes of films which have been exhibited daily by the blacks be discontinued. Before the board of censorship was appointed, it was freely known that some pictures shown in negro motion picture houses were unusually criminal. The first work of the new board will be directed toward the blacks.

The board of censorship, of which the mayor is a member, met with the motion picture men of the city on Tuesday, May 26, for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to censorship and with a view to regulating pictures.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

Providence, R. I., Plans Civic Sunday Theatre—Parish Priest in Minneapolis Turns Parish House into Motion Picture Theatre During Evening—Minnesota State Immigration Board Will Send Colonializing Pictures to Norway—Other Items of Interest

A CIVIC THEATRE, with Sunday evening entertainment in which motion pictures will play the principal part, bids fair to become part of the established order of things at Providence, R. I. Rev. James D. Dingwell is the leader of the movement and, backed by a large number of citizens, is preparing to put his Sunday educational idea into effect. "To educate, instruct and amuse," is the avowed aim of the organization. Entertainments, once started, will be continued as far into the summer as the people show a disposition to support the project.

This "Civic Theatre," it is expected, will be supplemented by provision, on the part of the park commission and city council, for public exhibitions of motion pictures in the parks of Providence. Councilman, Carl O. R. Anderson, of the 4th Ward, has introduced a resolution calling upon the park commission to report upon the feasibility of such a plan.

Would Use Educational Pictures

Mr. Helander's idea in presenting his resolution is that pictures of an educational character, dealing with the care and treatment of tuberculosis, and of persons suffering from other contagious diseases, may be shown with much benefit to the public, also that many practical lessons in hygiene and sanitation may be imparted in the same manner.

The Fifth Ward councilman has investigated the subject to some extent, and has found that the project has been successfully carried through in New York and Philadelphia. In those cities, he says, the matter is in charge of the health department, and the pictures to be presented are selected by the health authorities.

Mr. Helander believes that the pictures should not be entirely confined to health subjects, but that films which would furnish amusement to the children might also be used.

The councilman is of the opinion that the project could be carried out at a comparatively small expense to the city, and that much benefit would be derived from it by the people in the crowded sections of the community.

Parish Priest Opens Theatre

Realizing the good, both in educational and humane ways, that is derived from motion pictures, the members of the Parish of Holy Cross Church, the second largest Catholic church in Minneapolis, Minn., have decided to turn their parish hall into a motion picture house during the evenings.

The city aldermen have granted the parish the theatre license and plans are now under way, headed by Rev. T. Kryiewski, for making the parish theatre one of the best and most popular in the city. The parochial hall, which has all the modern equipment necessary for the carrying on of a "movie" theatre, will rank among others as one of the largest motion picture houses in the city.

It has a seating capacity of 3,000 and includes also a large pipe organ. It is planned to give the first "movie" performance this week.

Immigration Board Uses Films

Over a mile of motion picture films showing resources of the state of Minnesota will be taken to Norway and exhibited this summer by the state board of immigration, in a plan to induce new settlers to come to this country.

The films will be shown at the Centennial expositions to be held in Stockholm this summer, and will include pictures of the lumbering industry, the state's lumber interests and of its vast farming sections. Dr. C. A. Johnson, of St. Paul, will manage the pictures in Norway.

Iron Mining Shown in 8 Reels

Eight reels of motion pictures showing the mining operations as carried on in the "iron ore country" of northern Minnesota were taken a few weeks ago by the Oliver Iron Mining Company, a branch of the United States Steel Corporation.

The pictures were exhibited in Minneapolis on May 17 at the Norwegian Centennial celebration. The reels, which were made for educational purposes, show the miners at work underground, the hoisting of ore and work in and above the open-pit mines. Scenes from the Hibbings Mine, the largest iron-ore mine in the world, were also included in the pictures.

How Pictures Can Aid Libraries

The Library Board of West Holoken, N. J., has launched a movement to enlist the motion picture theatres of the community in an endeavor to increase the public use of the library. Paul Konertz, the librarian, is of the belief that the theatres can, by a judicious selection of the films they show, stimulate the patrons' desire to read. Exhibitors who have been approached on the subject regard the proposition of the library officials with favor.

Films That Children Like

An editorial that deserves to be reprinted far and wide for its accurate revelation of the child's attitude toward motion pictures is the following from a comparatively recent issue of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) "Times." It is entitled, "movies for Children," and advocates the establishment of children's theatres. "Two thousand school children were quizzed about the movies," it is said of the work of a Ridgefield, R. I. They were asked to tell the kind of pictures they prefer.

"Strange to relate educational films got most votes. Western and cowboy scenes came second. Crime films got only 63 votes out of the 5,000, and drama fared but little better. Three hundred and sixty-four liked comedy best. The older children preferred the educational films and the younger ones were strong for Indians and cowboys. The boys had no use for love films.

"Less than ten per cent of the children said that they did not go to movies. "The establishment of children's theatres where suitable films only are shown would be a great advance. It would remove the danger of evil suggestion and increase the pleasure and educational value. There would also be less danger of contact with men of bad character. Woman attendants should look after the welfare of the children."

High School Buys Projector

Realizing the advantages of the motion picture machine over the stereopticon for educational purposes, the teachers and students at East High School, Minneapolis, have raised a fund for the purchase of a motion picture machine.

The Tuttle School, a grade center, is another school in the same city to have a motion picture machine.

A Complete Equipment

The Buckingham school, Springfield, Mass., is to have a complete motion picture house a confirmation of the addition, now building, is completed. The city property committee a short time ago contracted with E. J. Pinney, the contractor, and Gregg & Thurston, the electricians on the addition, to build and equip a fireproof shed in the new school auditorium where the cinematograph is to be operated. The complete cost is to be $317. The committee also decided to have E. J. Pinney grade two lots adjoining the new school and build a concrete walk around them at a cost of $557. An abatement of $3.50 was voted to former councilman C. A. Albee, who paid for, but did not get, a desk and chair from the old municipal building when that structure was vacated by the city government.

Pictures for Sunday Schools

The use of motion pictures in teaching Sunday school lessons was advocated by Dr. William Corte, New York, at a recent conference of Sunday school leaders in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia.
Waterbury Prosecutor Acts as Censor

Carries Case Against "Traffic in Souls" into Court and Wins—Manager Appeals from $100 Fine and Costs—Grudge Suspected

WATERBURY, with its 80,000 population, has no local board of motion picture censors, for which the public at large—the motion picture public—appears more than satisfied.

Recently, however, the prosecuting attorney of this city, James F. Lynch, took it upon himself to act as a censor board regarding the exhibition of a much heralded production. The facts in the case are these.

James Sheehan, an amusement promoter, leased the Jacques Theatre, in this city, in the summer of 1912, and a few weeks ago, advertised the showing of what he termed “Traffic in Souls.”

The feature was widely advertised, following which some prudery of prudges must have gained access to the prosecuting attorney, intimating to him that it was a “red-light” affair and should be prohibited.

The picture was shown for the first time on the Thursday afternoon in question and Mr. Lynch made it his business to be there. According to his own statement, what he saw prompted him to bring action against the management of the theatre.

A warrant was sworn out for Mr. Sheehan and subsequently served. The manager appeared in court the day following the serving of the warrant and after a vigorous prosecution of the case was fined $100 and costs.

The prosecuting attorney (Mr. Lynch), contended that the motion picture was not only obscene, lewd, indecent and immoral, but that it constituted an overt act against society. He claimed that it was a direct portrayal of crime.

Former Judge Cole defended Mr. Sheehan and pointed out that the production was based on the actual reports of the Rockefeller white slave commission and was not detrimental to society in any way. "It is an exposition of an evil and vicious practice," the former judge contended.

One of the things Former Judge Cole said was that if "Traffic in Souls" should be exhibited at church entertainments he was certain that it would accomplish much good. In closing the case, Prosecuting Attorney Lynch said that the picture taught no lesson and only served to excite the passions of the young.

Mr. Sheehan appealed from the verdict of the court and some interesting discussion is anticipated when the appeal is heard. No date has been set, but it is expected to be assigned for a hearing shortly.

"Mr. Sheehan has been in bad" with a certain class of people in Waterbury ever since he started running burlesque in Waterbury. As in every city there are people who do not favor this form of entertainment and they have had axes to grind ever since burlesque was brought here several weeks ago.

It was not surprising that Mr. Sheehan should be singled out when he billed "Traffic in Souls." To many it appears that Waterbury, like New York, has its "Anthony Comstock."

No Censor Problem in Atlanta

There's a Board, but Members Trust the Exhibitors and Depend on National Board Rulings for Precedents—State Censors Not Wanted

The Atlanta censor board has never made a police case against an exhibitor.

"The best exhibitors," declared William Everett, head of the board, "telephone us when they see in a film anything they think might be objectionable, and some member of the board goes over and passes on it. Outside of this we depend on the national board, and of course drop in and look at a film when we can."

No member of the local censorship board gets a cent of salary for his work, and not a member of the board has yet consented to accept a complimentary ticket for himself or any member of his family. The board is composed of trustees of the Carnegie library.

LINN K. STARR.
THE FIREMEN TO THE RESCUE

T HE Lyceum Theatre, of Scranton, Pa., has hit upon a novel advertising scheme that is bringing much favorable press matter. Arrangements have been completed by which the firemen of Scranton are to have the use of the theatre for a period of five weeks, beginning Monday evening, June 1, and ending Saturday evening, July 4, inclusive, for a series of benefit films for their pension funds.

Meyer Cohen, owner of the Lyceum, has pulled many novel stunts since he started to run motion pictures at the Lyceum, formerly Scranton's high-class house. He launched the theatre as a picture house by having various department stores give tickets to the Lyceum with every ten-cent purchase.

When Scranton's fire laddies announced they needed money for the pension fund, Mr. Cohen jumped into the breach with an offer that was accepted by everyone from the Mayor down to the city scavenger.

The plan is to turn the theatre over to the firemen on a percentage basis. Eight prizes are to be given to the four boys and four girls who dispose of the most tickets. The tickets will be on sale at every fire house in the city, and will enable the buyer to see two different shows each week, the films being changed semi-weekly.

It has not been decided what the prizes will be. Mayor E. B. Jermy has suggested that the boys be given baseballs, bats or footballs. The prizes for the girls will be decided later. The prizes are to be the contribution of the management of the Lyceum.

The firemen will be allowed fifty per cent of the proceeds of all tickets sold at the fire houses, but nothing of those disposed of at the box-office.

DECORATING THE SCREEN

ONE Cleveland, Ohio, exhibitor has produced something new in the way of interior decoration. The screen end of the Majestic Theatre, West Twenty-fifth street, of which Gustave Schroeder is manager, presents an appearance in contrast with the usual blank wall and its white screen.

About the screen is a frame of artificial, electrical flowers. The colors and tints of these are changed at will, from the stage switchboard. The tiny lights are so placed that no light reflects upon the screen and while the scene is a brilliant one before the picture starts, it is dimmed as the photoplay comes into view and does not interfere with the picture in any way. It decidedly brightens the appearance of the house, and by working various colored lights as effects to the scenes of the photoplay produces an effect entirely novel and original.

"The screen end of the theatre is always its most unsightly part," said Mr. Schroeder in describing his innovation. "We spent lots of money on outside decorations, but there has been little or no progress in the decorating of the interior. My plan gives the first opportunity for electrical effects with pictures simulating the stage effects with 'legitimate' attractions."

MIGHT DO IN MISSISSIPPI

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that immediately on completion of the new Istrione Theatre at Jackson, Miss., Manager A. I. Carleton will put on a contest offering prizes to the patrons guessing nearest as to the meaning of the somewhat extraordinary name of this playhouse.

WHERE PREMIUMS FAIL

AFTER several years' experiments, both in the general merchandise and motion picture business, Houston Bowers, manager of the New Majestic Theatre at Jackson, Miss., has abandoned the old-time, but still generally utilized, system of offering prizes and awards as an incentive to patronage.

"Give them the very best show that can be put on the screen for ten cents, with an orchestra and comfortable surroundings." This is the principle on which Mr. Bowers is now running capacity crowds daily.

Speaking of the premium system, Mr. Bowers says: "No matter how fair and square you try to be, about 995 out of 1,000 will be hollering fraud. It makes more enemies than friends."

A DRAWING SLOGAN

ARTHUR JOHNSON, manager of the Majestic Theatre at Rochester, Minn., has added the motto, "All Sadness Abandon, Ye Who Enter Here," to the sign at the front of his theatre, with the result that overflowing business is reported.

The motto is also being used in advertisements of the theatre in the daily papers.

WHERE HIS VERSATILITY COUNTED

AS a means of advertising his house, boosting the particular district in which he is located and aiding the general "get acquainted" spirit of the community, George F. Horning, manager of the American Theatre, Northside, Cincinnati, recently staged a minstrel show for members of the Northside Business Club.

Horning, who spent several years on the vaudeville stage as a black-face comedian, planned the performance, staged it and took the part of an end-man himself. The fact that prominent men were in the cast was a great drawing card. The play was given in connection with the regular motion picture show of the week, and was given a two-nights' run. Horning made a distinct hit in the suburb through this effort and the theatre was packed each evening. He says a class of patronage he had not previously enjoyed was attracted by the attraction of the minstrels and he has had no difficulty in keeping this trade since.

OMAHIA EXHIBITORS JOIN PRIZE SCHEME

PRIZES amounting to several hundred dollars are being offered to "movie fans" all over Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota—points reached by exchanges in Omaha—by the Omaha "World-Herald," a newspaper having an extensive circulation in these states, in a sort of unique advertising scheme that is being entered into by dozens of exhibitors.

Each exhibitor, in installation each week, a thrilling story of "Lucille Love." Those sending in the forty most satisfactory endings to the story will be given prizes ranging from $50 down. The story is being run in films in the different theatres through Willard's three states. Seven Omaha theatres are using the films.

LEARNING THEIR FAVORITES

If you want to discover what actors and what class of pictures your patrons like best, try the plan of giving away players' photographs," said O. E. Jacobs, manager of the Liberty and the Columbia theatres, Cincinnati. For thirty-five weeks on a certain night each week, Mr. Jacobs distributed on an average of 2,000 photographs a week among his patrons. The result of the experiment was given away only on one night.

After that, on request of the patron, the photo might be had for five cents. In this simple manner Mr. Jacobs caused his patrons to prove for him who are the favorite screen actors in the locality.

PRACTICAL CHARITY

MANAGER F. WEHRENBERG, proprietor of the Best Theatre, on South Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, runs a five-reel Universal program for a five-cent admission. Mr. Wehrenberg gave away through the police and charitable societies in his neighborhood, several hundred bushels of coal and many baskets of provisions last winter.

This was done partly as an advertisement, but mostly through good will and the Best Theatre is deservedly popular and plays to packed houses all the time.

L. C. Barnes, of the R. E. B. Amuse ment Company, Los Angeles, Cal., has asked Mr. D. R. C. to change the name of the theatre, and the theatrical business, to "The Rex," to his name, and is expected to open the Rex, in at the new theatre.

The Rex Theatre, the largest motion-picture playing in the city, is in the hands of Mr. Vir ginia, Minn., May 15. The theatre has a seating capacity of 600 and is foreordained that it will be the one of the new theatre.

The Grand Theatre, at Sauk Center, Minn., owned by J. F. Lembke, has been sold to M. O. Hill of Kentucky. Mr. Mans will take immediate possession and intends to re build the theatre, making it larger and enlarging its seating capacity to 600.

The motion-picture theatre at Le Sueur, Minn., owned by Simon Hogan, burned recently, with a loss of $9,000, partly covered by insurance.

J. M. Totten, manager of the Milo Theatre, at Moline, Wis., has made some improvements in his motion-picture house. The seating capacity has been increased to 60, a new ventilating system added and the fire escape of the theatre rebuilt.

J. Scott Graham has been taken charge of the Princess Theatre for moving pictures in Lexington, Ky. Two young women have been operating this house for several months, but out of funds, sold the business to a Mr. O. Grimes, who has a larger house at Grimes over to Graves. He has had long experience, and has added General Film pictures to the equipment.

Tom Normand, former booking manager for Carl, is now running the motion picture at the Rosine Theatre in Racine, Wis., and after re modifying the theatre, plans to make it a home for General Film pictures.

Roy Cummings, of the Cummings Amuse ment Company, has opened his third house at Ohlinsville, Wis., with General Film pictures.

Isaac Libson, manager of the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, which opened last week showing "The Tipperary," has added a three-week summer season, has arranged for a two-weeks' run for "Los Miserables." The theatre is owned by the late Edward Smiley, under whose management the theatre has been operated for several years.

With the motion picture show already running in Springfield, two more opened for business in the city. Of the two new theatres one is an open-air attraction.

A. R. Trabard, former manager of Englehard Park, Louis, Mo., is the proprietor of the new open-air motion picture theatre at Eleventh street and South Grand avenue, and is the second show to open in a residence district here. His theatre seats 300 and he is showing a sincere program.

Another new motion picture house will open downtown in Springfield, Ill., within the next month. This is the Princess of which Thomas Lawrence is proprietor. The theatre, when complete, will be the most attractive in the city. Universal films will be shown.

The Missouri Excelsior Club is considering a proposition made by O. W. Lamb, representing the Paragon Film Company, to take views of the city in the movies and exhibit them about the country.

The Chicago Life Company of Desatur, III., has completed plans for the erection of a building which will house a motion picture theatre, green house, offices, bachelor apartments and a gymnasium. Mr. Tuckahoe is head of the company.

Despite the threats made by William Hardy Ryan, manager of the Lincoln branch of the General Feature Film Company, to take views of the city in the movies and to book "The Folks From Way Down East" in this city, the theatre is on the look-out for the near future. He promised that the General Feature people would spring a surprise in the way of a new program shortly.

The above invention relates to an application to Motion Picture Machines of a clock-work or similar device giving beats at equal intervals for use when recording mainly dancing figures so as to photograph in same time the conductor of the orchestra accompanying the dance.
The inventor proposes to directly photograph the conductor on the corner of each picture so that the orchestra will get the time for the music by simply looking on the screen.
1,097,175. Arc-Lamps Electrodes. H. Ayrton. The Patent issued to Mr. Ayrton covers a negative electrode, applicable to projection apparatus, which consists of a hard carbon core and a soft carbon shell containing other substances, or which is otherwise caused to burn more quickly than the core, and a thin protective outer film of copper or other metal.

By variation of the dimensions of those parts, such an electrode may be made to burn at the same rate as any given positive electrode under given conditions.
A negative electrode of 15 millimeters diameter, having a hard core 4 millimeters in diameter, and a copper skin 0.02 millimetre thick, burns steadily at the same rate as a cored positive carbon 25 millimetres in diameter with a current of 85 amperes in a fairly cool enclosure.

The Y. M. C. A.'s Version
Mr. M. H. Schoenbaum, Motions Picture News, New York City.

Dear Sir: In order to correct a wrong impression that may occur if your readers see only your account under "Trade Notes" and "An Operator's Protest" regarding the establishment of a school for Motion Picture Operators, I am giving you below our reasons for the establishment of a school.

1. Educational, institutions, settlement houses, churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, etc., are purchasing machines. A licensed operator only can be employed. Some of these institutions, of course, would only need an operator for one or two evenings a week, and must have one of their own men trained.

2. Leading motion picture machine manufacturers state that a great many machines are being sold throughout New York City and the state. The future use of the machine is most encouraging and qualified operators must be secured. Correspondence with fifty motion picture companies brought replies from the majority stating that they felt a course should be included among the courses of study for other classes which this institution provides.

According to the authorities at the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, only 8 men in every 100 were passing the examination successfully. This percentage has been raised recently to 11. This shows that although there are many schools they have not been successful in getting their students through.

1. The reports that have come to us about motion picture schools have been very bad. From all reports, if not all the schools will take any number of men in the school, get their money and promise a job, without any pretense of filling their obligations. We were told that we would be doing a real service to have a school where fair treatment would be given.

2. Our idea is not to turn out great quantities of men. Each class is limited to 15 men, and with the evening instruction takes 12 weeks. If after the third lesson a man finds that he does not believe that he is qualified to be an operator, or our instructor upon test finds that he is not qualified, all the money that he has paid is returned to him.

We are not encouraging men by flattering statements to give their time as operators, because there are many disagreeable things in connection with it. We are simply providing a place where a man if he must learn can do so and get a square deal.

Yours truly,

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT, Y. M. C. A.

What Becomes of Patents?

The demand for a reliable illuminant for the motion picture projector caused Mr. Baker to think of his "gearing" of 1908, the principles of which he applied to an arc controller for motion pictures and which may be considered as a mechanical masterpiece.

The above fact should serve as an example to all those who believe in an idea, as the invention in question has not only been realized by making a working model, but has been taken charge of by a serious concern (The Speed Controller Company) which now makes and sells the arc controller.

The success of the invention in question is due to the fact that since 1903, when Christopher Banks made the first attempt to obtain effective control of the arc, no device has solved the problem to the extent that Mr. Baker may claim to have done, and there is not the slightest doubt that when known by operators and exhibitors everywhere, the arc controller will prove profitable to the inventor and his company as it is really a necessity in every machine wherein an arc is used.

The feeble part in the motion picture projector has always been that there is only one operator in the booth to attend to everything and that it is scarcely possible for one man to obtain an irreplaceable picture with the known arc lamps, it being necessary to watch the framing and general order of the machine, and above all the film. The arc controller has done away with the former trouble in making the light in the arc steady as an incandescent lamp, so that the operator is free to attend to his real duty, which is to obtain a bright, well focused, well framed and clear picture, reproducing normal life and movement as near to nature as is humanly and mechanically possible, and it will not be contested that, with this alone, he has plenty to do.

The following will give an idea of the construction and working of the apparatus:

There are two shafts, 1 and 2. 1 is driven by the motor; 2 controls the intensity of the application of the power by means of suitable connections to the feeding handle of the lamp, or in other words, controls the size of the arc.

Shaft 1 revolves continuously, and carries with it the governor parts, and also a steel worm, 3. A ball thrust bearing is situated at one end of the shaft.

Worm, 3, meshes with a worm wheel, 4, located on shaft 2, but free to rotate theron at all times. Worm wheel, 4, has a bevel gear, 5, driven into it; the pair revolving continuously on shaft 2, and independent of it.

Adjacent to the worm wheel and bevel gear is the stop wheel, also free on shaft 2, and carrying a planetary bevel gear, 6, freely revoluble on its axis, and meshing with a bevel gear, 7, which is pinned to shaft 2.

The action of the governor is such that at motor speed above a predetermained limit the governor weights are gradually forced outward, and in doing so, their bell crank arms produce a forward thrust upon a long sliding bushing, B, which carries a ball thrust bearing, which bears against a suitable seat in a saddle located at the center of the skeleton pawl, P, forcing the pawl forward so that its steel tooth obstructs the path of those in the rim of the stop wheel, S, causing the latter to halt in its revolution, and so transmit power from the worm, 3, on the shaft 1, through a worm wheel, 4, and bevel gears, 5 and 6, to gear, 7, which rotates shaft 2.

The control spring, 10, acts against the governor and serves to adjust the speed at which the pawl, P, shall come forward or retire, either in full or in part.

The slightest burning away of the carbons, and therefore, the slightest increase or decrease of motor speed from the normal, causes the pawl, P, to advance or retire, actuating shaft 2, or leaving it at rest.

As it may readily be understood from the above description and the drawing any responsible operator should be able to use the apparatus without any prior instructions as every driving part in it is visible and at hand and thus explains itself.

M. H. Schoenbaum.

Keeping a Five-Reel Picture at One Theatre for Two Weeks, in a Town Where It Had Never Been Done
Before, Is an Achievement—Pierce and Personal Appeal Did It

TO OUR PATRONS:

Through the efforts of our president, Mr. John H. Kunsky, we are able to present as the attraction for the week beginning Sunday, March 29, "the ever-popular" Mary Pickford in the famous story of a woman's heroism, "Tess of the Storm Country," dramatization of the well-known novel of that name, by Grace Miller White.

The story of "Tess," with her quaint philosophy of life, humorous and pathetic, is one of the most powerful character sketches ever written. "Tess" is an elemental type of womanhood, a primitive heart, struggling with modern conditions, and the delicate tortures of civilization. The theme of the play is full of uplift and dramatic situations.

Miss Pickford, in her characterization of "Tess" the ragged little "squatting" girl, dirty, but nevertheless beautiful, rude, willful, saucy, yet noble and self-sacrificing, renders a portrayal of inexhaustible fashion and is certain to endear herself more than ever in the hearts of Liberty audiences.

As a photo-drama, "Tess of the Storm Country" will give Liberty patrons a subject out of the beaten path, with many thrills, mingled with the sweetest of human traits—compassion. Without doubt "Tess of the Storm Country" is one of the greatest, strongest and one of the most beautiful plays presented as yet upon the screen at the Liberty, and it is with the greatest pleasure that we can recommend it as such.

Thanking you for past patronage, we are Very sincerely yours, week I mailed this card to 1,000 names of the 1,500 on my list, and he handed me a neat little folder on wedding stock artistically lettered in gothic and old English and printed in gold ink inside a neat border. The announcement read:

"The Liberty Theatre, Inc., announces that due to popular requests, arrangements have been made whereby the appealing photo-drama, "Tess of the Storm Country," with Miss Pickford and capable cast, will be given its second week's showing at the Liberty Theatre, commencing Sunday, April 5."

"Of course we covered our usual billboards and we took a two-inch double in the dramatic page of the Sun and Sunday papers and thereby secured a reading notice in the dramatic columns.

"Then my traveling billboard carried the announcement, and the result of it all was that we did almost as much business the second week as we did the first."

What is your traveling billboard? I asked.

"It is a board mounted on a wagon and drawn over a regular route on the down-town streets from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is the best advertising I have.

"I put a four-sheet on the back and have painted on each side an announcement of the current attraction in as few words as possible so that it may be read at a glance."

"If the play is well known and the star little known I paint the title of the play big, if vice versa, I feature the star. This traveling billboard and my mailing-list are my best aids.

"My mailing-list is so classified that I can call attention of patrons of the house to just the attractions that will interest them."

"I don't send letters every week because they would become too common and be thrown aside unread. I make them rather longer, more detailed than I would a business letter because they go largely to the homes and are read by the women.

"Sometimes on a particularly good attraction I write a personal letter to a number of people instead of sending Beneath the canopy was the photograph-case for the next week's show.

Under the electric sign above the theatre entrance a swinging sign carried a four-sheet.

Upon the roof of the building at the corner was a brief announcement of the current attraction and beneath that on the side of the building a large poster.

"HOW extensively do you use the billboards?" I asked.

"We have 32 stands in Detroit, from a one-sheet to a 24-sheet." Upstairs he had showed me a neatly printed card about 24x30 inches, calling attention to Mary Pickford in "Tess," which had been placed in the leading confectionery store of the city in place of the regular poster.

"I have 15 stands in Windsor," Mr. Pierce continued. Windsor is a city of 20,000 on the Canadian side of the Detroit River. "They cost me only the complimentary tickets. The owners of the windows come and see the show and go back and tell their friends about it. They are satisfied and bring us more business."

Heralds Mr. Pierce uses in addition to his other advertising. He put out 4,000 on "Tess of the Storm Country."

"What percentage of your audiences do you class as regulars?" I asked him as we parted at the corner.

"Sixty per cent," he replied, "and it is all built up by personal interest."

THE DOUBLE KNOT

(Majestic—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This picture touches on many kinds of lives than the ordinary multiple reel picture. Some of them are superfluous, but as a whole they add to the charm of the story. The opening scene is that of a coast town, there has just been a wreck and the sole survivor, a little boy, is cast on the shore. He is picked up by an old fisherman, who has a son the same age. He tattoos a double knot on both the boy's breasts.

Twenty years elapse. One of the boys is a young prospector. He is betrayed by his Indian guide, and is then taken half dead to the house of a young ranchman who intends marrying the other sweetheart—he happens to be his adopted brother. They proceed to fight over the girl, but just as the prospector is about to be killed by the other, he recognizes him by the knot on his breast. He silently goes away and leaves the other with the girl.

KERRIGAN'S DOUBLE GOES TO JAIL

The alleged J. Warren Kerrigan, who fooled several people in Albany, N. Y., a few weeks ago, came to grief in Binghamton, N. Y., where he attempted the same tricks as he did in Albany. In Binghamton, however, he secured $50 on a forged check, for which he was arrested. He said his name was William McKean and that he came from San Francisco. Upon his plea of guilty he was sent to the Elmira Reformatory for not less than thirteen months nor more than five years.

Uninstructed Delegates

SIX more exhibitors' state conventions, those in Nebraska, Minnesota, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, will be held before the National Convention goes into session at Dayton, Ohio, July 6.

These state conventions have one chief object, to elect delegates to represent the exhibitors at Dayton.

Every delegate should go to Dayton without instructions. Fair play demands it. The interests of the exhibitors demand it. A body of instructed delegates bids fair to make the Dayton convention a futile farce, instead of the epoch-making concave that it might be, and ought to be.

There is immediate need of one national organization, embracing all the exhibitors of the country, to fight the battles which are being waged or must presently be waged for their good and the good of the industry.

No exhibitor is proud of the fact that there are two organizations of exhibitors, each purporting to be national in scope. Every exhibitor knows that it means weakness where there should be strength.

Union and co-operation are words that must mean more to every exhibitor now than ever before. And the possibilities of union and co-operation in the Dayton convention should make every exhibitor pause and weigh the consequences before he refuses to avail himself of the opportunity.

To bind the delegates with instructions to vote for this man or that is a deliberate casting aside of this opportunity.

There can be no hope of reconciling the two organizations so long as one of them persists in committing its representatives to issues that only emphasize and keep alive the old misunderstandings and enmities.

Where there has been an estrangement of this sort between two groups in the same organization, both sides are necessarily in the wrong to a certain extent. There must be concessions from each, before any healing of the breach can be undertaken.

Delegates without instructions are, in themselves, a tacit admission of a willingness to compromise, to enter into negotiations that will lead to a reunion of the discordant elements.

Instructed delegates are, implicitly, a stiff-necked and haughty defiance of arbitration. They will inevitably widen the gap between the two organizations and put the day of reunion farther off than ever.

There is only one sort of instructions that should be given to delegates to the Dayton Convention. Instruct them to vote for the best men that can be obtained to serve the exhibitors, the men they know to be the best.

Instruct them to avoid politics and political deals, to lend themselves to no man's scheme to elevate himself to a position of power.

Instruct them, in a word, to do their duty toward the exhibitors and toward the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

These are the only instructions the delegates to the Dayton Convention need. There is no excuse for any others.

Crawling into the Limelight

In a lame and obvious effort to worm itself into the censorship limelight, a hybrid publication in the field of motion pictures prints an attack upon the News' fight on censorship, which is distinguished only as a rare sample of journalistic billingsgate and gutter-snipe rapidity.

We regret having to notice it, even once and even so briefly; we do so only in behalf of a contributor, William Lord Wright, who is made to bear the brunt of this scurrilous article.

The charge against Mr. Wright seems to be that he is an honest gentleman who makes a living decently with his pen, and who once made the serious error of writing a friendly letter to Mr. Neff in the fatuous belief that the letter would be treated confidentially.

That is all. Happily the censorship issue will not be mired by such tactics. The article referred to is an insult to the motion picture industry and a decided boost to every publication in this field.
NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY AT THE EXPOSITION

The Nicholas Power Company, manufacturers of motion picture projecting machines, will have a large exhibit at the Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, June 8 to 13.

The exhibit of this company will occupy one of the largest spaces at the exposition, and all the various types of projecting machines invented by Mr. Nicholas Power, from the Peerlesscope to the Power's Six A, will be shown.

One of the most important of the exhibits of this company will be an enlarged model of the cam and four pin intermittent movement, which will show why there is so little wear and tear on the film when this exclusive patented device is used.

The exhibit will be in charge of Assistant General Manager, Smith, who will be assisted by L. W. Atwater, sales manager, traveling representatives Swett, Bohannon, Griffin and Raven. A cordial invitation is extended by Mr. Nicholas Power to all exhibitors and friends to make the Power booth their headquarters during the exhibition and to visit the factory at any time during the week.

RHODES VISITS ECLAIR COMPANY

Eugene Manlove Rhodes, a noted writer of Western fiction, that is being filmed by the Eclair Company, recently paid a flying trip to the New York offices of that company, and after a week's visit returned to his home at Apache Junction, N. Y.

He was induced, after much coaxing, to appear before the camera in the studio at Fort Lee, N. J., and after a number of rehearsals, a film was secured showing the writer in characteristic poses. He also watched with interest a number of scenes being taken.

The Eclair will release "The Bar Cross Liar" on May 31, to be followed by another of his tales, "Transfixed in Arcadia," later.

COLONIAL SUPPLIES SERIES FOR CHILDREN

The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation will give, beginning with May 30, a series of educational motion pictures, "Children's Movies," at the leading theatres of Chicago. The pictures are being held under the auspices of the Federation of Women's Clubs and the Board of Education. The entire program is being supplied by the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation.

This goes to show what an advance the motion picture is making in the educational field.

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Newspaper Starts Real Film Weekly

St. Louis "Times" Co-operates with Pathé Frères to Make an "Animated Edition" of the Paper—Exhibitors Eagerly Catch at the Idea

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

St. Louis, May 27.

THE old-time phrase, "A live newspaper," has at last become a reality. The St. Louis "Times" is filming every public happening that is capable of being photographed, and presenting it to the public in the shape of living action on the motion picture screen, instead of in cold type.

This phase of motion picture development has been talked of for some time, and while there was a general consensus of opinion that the newspapers would eventually be operated in conjunction with motion pictures, no one looked for the wedding of typography and animated photography quite so soon.

Russell T. Edwards, motion picture editor of the St. Louis "Times," who originated and put the "live newspaper" idea into practice, says that an animated edition of a daily paper has been a dream of his for years.

and that the present film, which will be issued but once a week, is but a starter to what the idea will grow to be, and some day every newspaperer will find a motion picture camera as much a necessary part of his outfit as pen and pencil now are.

Mr. Edwards was the first to formulate a plan of co-operation between "The Times" and Pathé's Weekly. Pictures are taken in four states with the co-operation of Pathé Frères. Since that time similar plans have been worked out with many large papers of the country.

"The Times" Movie Review will give special attention to the filming of scenes in local institutions, that will have a tendency to awaken civic pride in the citizens of the city, as well as every public event and happening that is susceptible to the motion picture camera.

The Review is proving very popular and has been booked in all of the prominent theatres in town.

A New Feature Producing Firm

Popular Plays and Players Inc., Enters Field with Strong Array of Men Well Known in Theatrical Circles at Head

THE Popular Plays and Players, Inc., a comparatively new firm in the motion picture business, gives promise to become an important factor in the feature end of the motion picture industry. The officers of the company have long been connected with theatricals of one kind or another.

L. Lawrence Weber, the president, was one of the men who elevated the burlesque show to its present standard. He was in the burlesque business for a long time, but this did not occupy his entire attention. He has associated with Weber and Fields in their various attractions. He is at present interested in "A Pair of Sixes," now running at the Longacre Theatre, New York. With such an extensive intimacy with the theatrical situation he will be a very valuable president for the company.

Harry J. Cohen is general manager and treasurer of the firm. He has been associated with the General Film Company from its start, and was also business manager of the Selig Polyscope Company. Mr. Cohen was the man who put "Quo Vadis?" on in the Astor Theatre, the first motion picture to compete with the legitimate attractions.

Bobo North, one of the directors of the company, is very well known in theatrical circles. He has been connected with the stage in one way or another for some time. He has appeared in several musical comedies such as "Hanky Panky" and "The Pleasure Seekers.

Aaron Hoffman is another who is interested in the Popular Plays and Players. He is a writer, his specialty being musical comedies. He has furnished material for some of the best-known Broadway stars.

The first feature produced by this firm will be "Michael Strogoff," featuring Jacob Adler, an actor who is well known on the speaking stage, especially for his facial expression and pantomime acting. With such a reputation his success is almost assured.

The picture is in five parts and will be produced by Lubin. A large number of their stars will compose the cast. Their second release will be "The Ragged Earl," with Andrew Mack, and other pictures featuring legitimate stars will follow.
Music and the Picture

Play with Your Brains as Well as Your Fingers

By E. A. Ahern

(Editors Note—This is the first of a series of articles written especially for The Motion Picture News by E. A. Ahern, a motion picture pianist of experience having for a work on that subject. Mr. Ahern's articles will appear at intervals of two or three weeks, and will form a comprehensive series of articles that will be of practical interest to pianists as well as exhibitors.)

In this series of articles I do not intend to criticise anyone's way of playing the pictures, neither will I try to tell my readers how to play the piano. What and how to play for the pictures is the object aimed at. I do not claim to be infallible, but experience has shown me the practicability of my methods. In the hope of assisting others in this particular occupation I offer the result of my own observation and study.

I realize there are no fixed rules for accompanying the pictures, as there is such a vast difference in the plots that, while a certain rule might hold good in one picture, it would be absurd to follow the same plan with another. We have to use our brains as well as fingers if we want to make a success of this business, and common sense is essential.

We continually read about the music dealt out in the motion picture shows by an objectionable type of pianist. You will notice it is always directed at the player who is forever looking around at the audience or talking to someone nearby. He has no regard for the pictures and is indifferent to the kind of service he gives. Such people don't know the meaning of common sense.

But in my experiences I have found the application of common sense necessary everywhere for holding down my job. To illustrate my meaning: Say we are playing for a drama that requires music such as a waltz, modéré, all the way through—nothing dramatic, but the picture is of a solemn nature. We start out with a waltz, moderate; it through twice, and when we have finished, play another through twice just as the first.

Suppose this ends the picture. Where does your common sense come in? The music fitted the picture; certainly. Just what the doctor ordered. But did you ever get too much of "what the doctor ordered"? Well, that's what, in this instance, the patrons of the show get on that one reel.

Here is what common sense would say: "Why not play a waltz through twice and then a nocturne, revenge, or some 4-4 andante movement?" Because when you play one waltz, then play another right after it, the audience will think you are still "sawing" on the same tune. To avoid this misapprehension, break the rhythm but still have appropriate music. You get away from rhythm monotony and give patrons something tuneful at the same time.

This is but one of the hundreds of instances where common sense comes in in playing the picture. Try to give your employer the best that is in you. You are hired to entertain and help uphold the story on the screen.

Adapt the music to the country. If the scenes are laid in Ireland, play Irish music. Keep the tempo true to the action of the players. Do you realize that you have as much to do with making a picture a success in your house as any of the players? A pianist can make a picture fifty per cent more impressive and hold the attention of the audience in the picture by playing something appropriate.

This leads to the question, "What is appropriate music?" It is the kind that has "atmosphere"; I mean music that helps to bring out the location in which the play is staged and the "time" of the plot. For instance, in stories of the Louis XIV period I use such music as "Amaranthus," "Stephanie," "Amaryllis," "First Heart Throbs," "Pizzicato."

For the "Adventures of Kathlyn" series I never introduce any of our modern music unless it be in a minor key.

As the scenes of this picture are supposed to be laid in the Orient, I use only such music as "Zallah," "Tiger Skin," "Cairo," "Whirling Dervish," "Perle de Persia," "La Moria," etc. For the pathetic scenes, when long enough, I play a waltz like "Perle de Perse," "Le Poem," or something like these in a minor key, and play the tempo according to the action.

When scenes like the ending of Series No. 2, "In the Lion's Den," use "Terrible Turk" tempo, presto and ff.

Try this: it helps the effect. I finish Series No. 2 with the "Terrible Turk," and open up Series No. 3 with the same piece, same tempo, presto. By doing this you help to connect each series.

As our show begins at 7:30 o'clock we open the house at 7:15. I begin with a popular overture and a little song hit, played in a lively manner. Put lots of ginger into your "openers"; don't use anything "droll"—let it be good and snappy.

The first picture is a Pathé Weekly. I use a 6-8 march through twice; then stop for a few seconds; a 4-4 march through about once and a half, which brings me to the Jeff and Mutt scenes. These reels show Mutt watching an organ grinder. For this I play "Good Old Summertime" up in treble clef, both hands, accenting the bass a trifle louder than the treble; this through once and right into the "Jim-a-Da-Jeff" burlesque song, by Allen.

When Mutt gets the organ with Jeff as the Monk, I imitate again the organ, playing "In My Harem."

These are my reasons for using the marches.

In most of the weekly scenes, taken up with drills, marches, and public events, I try to convey to the audience the idea of a band somewhere back of the crowd. Of course, I had to copyright a band in loud tones. Here is another reason for using marches. I find one can keep the tempo and catch the step of the men in the procession. As there are no foreign scenes in this weekly event series I composed my own music. But if there were foreign scenes, long enough to warrant a change, I would play atmospheric music.

In this particular weekly there was a Mexican scene. I interpolated "Santiago You're a Dago" just enough to let the audience catch the allusion; then I kept right on with the march. By practice, one can run in some of these song choruses, and then go right on with the march without stopping the music.

There is another point I want to bring out: I use two pieces of music for the first part of the weekly, but both are in keeping with the picture; and at the same time I play enough of each piece to complete a musical scene and also help to entertain the audience.

Picture playing does not, as some suppose, consist of merely fitting song titles to scenes, or seeing how many musical changes can be made in one reel.

Perhaps some pianists will not agree with me. I always try to follow the pictures and bring out every important incident, but at the same time I try to play something in keeping with the scene and give the audience a little music.

In a "music suggestion" sheet, sent out by a film manufacturer, the play is an old classic, and the music cues were written by a musician of authority. I have not had copies of that part. Play four measures, page 3; then two measures, page 12; then two measures, page 10, etc. There were eighteen changes of music in one reel—a change every fifty seconds. I am not criticizing these cues or the music. They are all right, I suppose. But suppose you were sitting in the audience. What kind of music did you hear? Just a little bit of this and that, some in the front of the book and some in the back. No two of the melodies were connected in any way. When I read this cue sheet, I thought to myself, the writer is not a picture musician. It would be similar to taking eighteen men of different nationality, and letting one man at a time talk 20 seconds in his own language. There would be no sequence nor harmony.

People go to a theatre to see the picture and expect to hear pleasing music.

Here is where the knack of playing pictures comes in. We must follow the pictures, and at the same time please the audience. Sometimes we find it rather hard to do this, especially in plots where there are so many short scenes and there is such a vast difference in the music. But where scenes are long enough, try and give your audience something tuneful by selecting music creating atmosphere.

Here is the way I played an Indian picture the other evening:
The first few scenes showed an amusement park. A jolly young party of girls and boys. Music lively. The party comes to an Indian cario shop and a redman tells the history of the figures on a basket. This story was acted out, transformation process. As the picture dimmed, I also diminished, and played "Silver Heels" when the picture was in full light again. I made this change without a stop in the music and it was done so pianissimo it would have been hard to tell where I left off. I played "Silver Heels," pp. light and airy through twice. About this time the action became a little dramatic and we were coming to the climax of the story; so I used "Red Moon," increasing the tempo with the action of the players. One of the Indians was sneaking along the bushes; I played the music staccato, in bass clef, and followed the step. As the Indians came together in a hand-to-hand struggle I increased my tempo and put my foot on the loud pedal hard, and made it dramatic. As one of the Indians fell dead I cut right down softly and andante to go. Now all the time I was using "Red Moon" and played it in the bass clef. Then the story became pathetic. The Indian girl found her dead lover. I played "Indian Summer," adagio, with all the expression I was capable of putting into the piece. The spirits of the Indian maid and her lover were then shown in the "Happy Hunting Ground," in double exposure. This ended the story and then came the transformation back to the party of young people. After the solemnity of these events had ceased to affect the young people, I reverted to the opening music.

I had played four different pieces, dramatic, hurried, mysterious and pathetic, supplying all of this with changing the tempo so as to fit the action of the players. Each one of these Indian selections was played through one and a half times.

Women in Japan coal the ship faster than it can be done with the most modern machinery. Human monkeys in New Guinea throw down coconuts from the tree top to the players.

The pictures are one continued string of interesting features showing the most wonderful scenery and the great world famous events witnessed by the players. One of these was the great carnival of Nice in which the players took part.

The Perils of Pauline

READ THIS—It Means Much To You

The first episode of The Perils of Pauline is pulling the crowds just as much NOW, although it is more than eight weeks since the first release. Last Thursday in the Avon Theatre in Newark the crowds were lined up for hours waiting to get in. This in spite of the fact that there had been a new theatre opened within a few doors of the Avon with a full programme for the opening of big features. The first episode was released in Newark more than eight weeks ago and yet this theatre could outdraw the new one. Learn a lesson from this and get Pauline right away. There is a tremendous "patron Pulling" power in this series that means big box office receipts.

The manager of one of our branches writes "The first episode will be a big puller in my territory for three months."

Wholesome Pictures Versus Scavenger Pictures

Some people go to see "scavenger" pictures from choice. Some have it forced on them when they go to what they think is a good theatre. The first class are "Floaters," the second class never go back to that theatre. Pictures do not need to be unclean to be interesting. Nor do they need to be uninteresting to be clean. There are some manufacturers at the present time who think that a picture to "get over" must appeal to the baser qualities in the minds of men and women. But no manufacturer ever made or will make for his firm a lasting name and a success who follows this line of endeavor.

The Eclectic Company have made for themselves a name for putting out only that class of pictures which are clean and wholesome and yet which carry a "Punch" in every reel.

The STAIN

A Dramatization of the Great Novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert Davis

The Stain is the first of the American multiple reel pictures made specially for us by Pathé. It is a masterpiece in every way. The Play is a dramatization of the great novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert Davis. The parts are played by Edward Hose, Tharlow Bergan, Virginia Pearson, Eleanor Woodruff, Sam Ryan and others of great ability. You are probably familiar with the story of the bank clerk who has ambition to become a great lawyer but is prevented by poverty. He steals some of the bank's cash and deserts his wife and small child. Later after becoming a judge, and having remarried under the impression that his former wife is dead, he is called upon to try his daughter on a framed-up charge. He is being very severe but just as he is about to pass sentence he is recognized by the wife he had deserted and his infamous past is laid bare.

The story itself is very strong and the critics who have seen the finished picture predict a very hearty reception. There is not a slow minute in the whole six reels. The dramatic incidents are exceptionally strong. You will be protected if you send your order to us now.

"The Cream of American and European Studios"
WITH a daring equalled hitherto only on the screen, four men entered and robbed the new Strand Theatre, New York, on May 18, of $2,228.53. Posing as detectives the men gained admission. Once inside it was easy work to bind the watchmen and several painters and blow up the large safe. The watchman was forced to ring in his signal at the point of a gun. It was at first given out that $10,000 was stolen, but the treasurer's report later gave the figure first mentioned.

Beginning with May 27, all pictures to be shown in Ohio will be viewed by the Ohio Board of Censors at the board's offices, 175 East Rich street, Columbus, Ohio.

The Edison Company has secured the services of Viola Dana, who recently starred in the Broadway success, "The Poor Little Rich Girl." Hereafter she will appear in a large number of pictures produced by the Edison Company. Her first appearance will be in "Molly the Drummer Boy," a Civil War picture, which will be ready early in July.

Police Censor Lester Potter, of Detroit, who has been on a two weeks' furlough to Pittsburgh and Toledo, is now back on his job, which is scheduled to last until July 1, when censorship ceases in Detroit, so far as the police department is concerned.

Francis Xavier Bushman, leading man for the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, has won the hero contest conducted by "The Ladies' World." There were seven contestants for this prize, the winner of which is to portray the role of John Delancy Curtis in Louis Tracy's novel, "One Wonderful Night." The story was published serially in "The Ladies' World" and will be filmed by the Essanay company with Mr. Bushman in the role mentioned.

A business' change takes from the field of motion picture publicity a writer who is credited with establishing the first photoplay department in any newspaper in the United States. Ralph P. Stoddard, for the past six years associated in an editorial capacity with the Cleveland "Leader," leaves to become the executive secretary of an organization of fireproof manufacturers in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Stoddard's page, which now has developed into a stable editorial feature of the Sunday edition, has been the example for hundreds of other newspapers. Mr. Stoddard also was one of the first writers to sell scenarios to the picture manufacturers and his text-book upon photoplay writing has a wide circulation. He is the scenario editor of the Photoplay Syndicate, of Cleveland; secretary of the Plotters Club of this city, and a member of the Ed-Au Club, of New York.

In leaving the newspaper field Mr. Stoddard says he does not intend to get out of touch with the photoplay business. He says that he has been too busy for the past three years to write many scenarios, but he contemplates writing a series of stories, to be filmed, promoting a better grade of home building, in line with the duties of his new position.
Lee Shubert has recently returned from London and the continent and has brought with him enough good films to satisfy his new company for some time, Lord Fauntleroy and Romney's Second African Hunt are two of his latest, and are excellent in every respect. These pictures have a drawing capacity for all ages and classes of motion picture lovers.

It is said that Mr. Shubert's stay in London at Murray's was most interesting and beneficial.

The possessor of the official program of the Lambs' Gambol, held at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, May 22 and 23, is this year the Twentieth Century Feature Film Company, of 216 West Forty-second street.

Fred Beck bid the treasure in for the company at the winning figure of $500.

MEMORIES AND HOPES
Scene from "The Link in the Chain"—(Eclair-Universal—Three Reels)
"LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY"
(Gold Seal—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE beautiful yet trouble-causing ruby necklace is the foundation of a tense and well-laid scene in this, the seventh chapter on the adventures of the mysterious Lucille. But this scene comes further on in the story. To begin with, Loubeque and Lucille are adrift on the ocean in a small boat. Lucille becomes delirious and in this scene Miss Cunard performs some remarkable acting. A delirious person is no easy one to imitate, but here this character is impersonated perfectly.

After two days on the ocean without food or water, the boat drifts ashore and the two, heroine and heavy, are cared for. Lucille is laid in a Chinese house, where the servant plans to rob her of the ruby necklace. By a clever ruse she foils the plans of the servant and her confederates, clothes herself in a charming and attractive costume, and escapes.

In the meantime, after a fierce and realistic battle, Hugo has secured the papers from his false captain, and plans to leave the island. Lucille overhears his plan and follows him.

The Chinese settings are remarkably realistic in these two reels, and while some of Lucille’s spying and then escaping seems rather extraordinary and far-fetched, the action is entertaining and rapid. In this release, practically nothing is gained by either party. Hugo has the papers, but now they are worthless, for he is many miles from civilization. With the race no farther advanced than at the start, except for circling half the globe, it bids fair to have a thrilling finish, but the finish is far away and many adventures are yet to come, as there are eight more installments to follow.

"HOME, SWEET HOME"
(Mutual—Five Parts)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

PRODUCED by chief director D. W. Griffith and a most capable company. The story of the song, if it may be called that, consists of a biography of the writer, John Howard Payne, and finishing up with some of the supposedly good acts caused by the song’s influence. Payne’s mother’s greatest sorrow was the fact that her boy, John, had never accomplished anything in life; that it was all waste. Then the film brings out the fact that his one deed, the writing of “Home, Sweet Home,” has caused more good than books of lectures and tons of serenading.

The production is undoubtedly an inspiration. It is impressive so that when one has seen it they are not inclined to speak for several minutes after the last scene has faded from the screen.

The cast is a very notable one. Mae Marsh has, perhaps, the greatest chance to distinguish herself. Henry Walthall played the part of Payne, and shows the wild yet loving boy, whose thirst for travel and adventure carried him all over the world. His tragic death in Africa, far away from the sweet home he wrote of, is beautifully portrayed.

His mother was played by Mrs. Crowell, and his sweetheart and sister were played by Lillian and Dorothy Gish, respectively. Mac Marsh played “Apple Pie Mary” and Spottiswoode Aitken, the father. Robert Harron played the Easterner, who nearly ruined Mary, and Mirian Cooper played his sweetheart. Donald Crisp and James Kirkwood, played brothers, and Jack Pickford, the half-wit, Courtney Footes, Owen Moore, Edward Dillon, Blanche Sweet, George Berringer and Teddy Sampson completed the cast.

"FACING THE FOOTLIGHTS"
(Pathé Photoplay Masterpieces—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM REISSMAN ANDREWS

CAREFUL stage direction in the minor scenes, as well as in the more important parts gives the drama a finish and balance that might well cause envy among less capable managers. Superb acting of the principals and the support they receive from the rest of the company convey a pleasing sense of dramatic ability formerly expected only in the “legitimate.” It is excellent work like this which has advanced motion-picture plays to their place of high rank in the dramatic arts, and justifies the expenditure of money and labor in the production of feature masterpieces.

“Facing the Footlights” will prove popular because of its strong emotional appeal. The sentiment is wholesome and free from that sickening mawkishness often regretfully observed in many pretentious photoplays.

The resolution of the wife, a woman of delicate sensibilities, to assist her husband at all costs in the family crisis, and her pathetic efforts to keep the injured man from finding out the means by which she lifts the burden of debt, are delineated in scenes of touching pathos.

The wife further wins sympathy by her readiness to forgive her husband’s hasty and unjust reproach.

The laboratory explosion is a piece of gripping realism not soon forgotten. The interiors and outdoor scenes have been selected with due regard to the aesthetic value of proper stage settings.
"THOU SHALT NOT"
(Ramo—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM KENSMA ANDREWS

THIS drama, which is essentially one that deals with elemental instincts, depicts animated scenes of the great Northwest gold country. The toils, hopes, discouragements, and the elation of sudden wealth in that most uncertain of occupations—mining—are well portrayed.

Frontier types work out their destiny in the strange, distant environment of a grim, lawless wilderness, where the Darwinian "survival of the fittest" exacts its ruthless measure from men for their deeds.

THE MEETING IN THE DANCE HALL

Jane Dawson's love for a lucky prospector whose life had been saved by the unsuccessful miner brings misery and danger into the lives of five men and results in her own tragic death.

Fortunately, her frailty can be forgotten in admiration of a strong character, Helen, whose courage and womanliness preserve the life and secures the happiness of the wronged husband.

Edith Haller played Jane Dawson, the impulsive wife, with a thorough conception of the requirements of the part.

Fredia Boch, as Helen, the loyal heroine who accompanied her brother to the gold fields, acted with naturalness and grace.

Stuart Holmes gave a clear impersonation of the manly Bob Cooper.

The shooting in the fight outside the music hall was needlessly drawn out and made the observer wonder if that was the termination of the play; for, considering that the participants were supposed to be crack shots, the firing at such close range would in real life have resulted in complete annihilation.

However, this defect will not be noticed by the average person on account of the rapid action in the situation.

The numerous animated episodes like this and the life and death struggle between two burly contestants for a pistol on a lonely mountainside, will make the drama popular with spectators demanding unusually tense scenes.

MAY REVIVE CENSOR BILL IN MILWAUKEE
(Special to The Motion Picture News)

Milwaukee, Wis., May 27.

Local motion-picture exhibitors will have a fight on their hands within the next few months to prevent the reformers and the would-be censors from establishing a drastic censorship and building-code bill.

Though the work of the Citizens Committee in censoring pictures, and the present license law with a fee of but $50, has worked most satisfactorily for all concerned, it seems that certain factions are not satisfied. It is understood that bills that have lain dormant for over a year will be revived and an attempt made to pass them.

"THE RING AND THE MAN"
(Famous Players—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BRUCE McRAE, the distinguished dramatic actor, makes his debut on the screen in "The Ring and the Man," another picture added to the long list of Famous Players' triumphs. With such a story and a fine plot running through the picture, although it is somewhat mythical, it could hardly help being a success, even without its capable cast. The author, Cyrus Townsend Brady, is a well-known playwright and novelist, and many of his plays have been adapted to motion pictures, always with success.

Bruce McRae is a familiar figure on the legitimate stage; his most recent triumph was in "Nearly Married." Although he himself doesn't appear as debonair on the screen as he does on the stage, his acting does, and his appearance count for little when the acting is of the best. Wellington
A. Player and Violet Horner are next in line in regard to importance and in praise. Robert Broderick, Helen Aubrey, Albert Andruss, Charles Douglass and Albert S. Houston complete the cast.

The first reel is laid entirely in the wild and woolly West.
It is full of action, and the unexpected always happens. The Western atmosphere is conveyed admirably, and the scenes are not exaggerated in regard to settings and appearance. At the end of the first reel the "wild and woolly" passes out of the picture entirely. The last three reels take place in New York City, and are as different from the former as possible.

The Famous Plays have the happy faculty of securing the services of the prominent legitimate stage stars. The large number of actors they have taken from the stage cause the motion picture exhibitors as well as the fans throughout the country to look forward to their next picture with delight, wondering what actor their next feature will bring to the screen for them from Broadway.

As regards photography, lighting, settings, and the like, no room is left for improvement. The picture is clear but not too bright, and with perfect projection will not strain the eyes in the least. The interiors are handsomely staged, and the exteriors account for themselves.

The story, that of an honest man fighting against a corrupt political ring, is one that will appeal to all classes. And it is so produced that until the very end it looks as if George Fordyce would be trapped by the wiles of the crafty politicians. Everyone breathes a sigh of relief when he is finally freed from the unjust suspicion of having murdered a man.
He is elected mayor by a large majority, and besides winning the election, he wins his bride, for whom he was willing to sacrifice everything.
"A BORN WARRIOR"
(Warner's Features—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Numerous pictures dealing with the life of Napoleon have been produced, and many hundreds of war pictures, dealing with war of every kind, and in every age and nation, but none of the former are so fully explanatory of Napoleon's great and varied life, and none of the latter are so realistic, powerful and competent as this.

Going over each scene and analyzing them carefully, it can safely be said that not a fault appears in any of them in regard to acting, photography, lighting, scenes and realism, those things which are the essentials of a good picture.

Of course, the picture does not delineate every incident in the life of the great Napoleon; it would take nearer sixty than six reels to do this. But none of the main occurrences of his life are left out, all his important battles and campaigns are portrayed, and besides these glimpses of his private life and insight into his character as a peaceful man as well as a soldier, are given.

The minor details have been attended to with the same care as have the larger happenings. In battle scenes one seldom sees an actual shell shot from a cannon, land in the midst of the opposition, and then explode, spreading death about it. Usually the cannon smokes, and a few soldiers fall dead, and no shell explodes; here it is entirely different and the effect given is wonderful. Once in the entire picture a touch of humor appears, but only once.

The battle of Waterloo, which terminated Napoleon's great career, appears in the last reel. Besides outstripping all its predecessors in reality and effect, it is unapproachably pathetic and touching. For after following the great leader through all his campaigns and watching him win every battle he entered, to see him lose and in losing, lose his liberty at Waterloo, the audience is greatly affected. At the end of the battle, the last few of his faithful army are desolated, huddled together in the center of the field, with the armies of the allied European forces rapidly closing in on them.

After this Napoleon was exiled to the island of Saint Helena. In the closing scene, he is seen standing on the rocks looking toward the land which he once ruled.

The leading man makes an ideal Napoleon. Young at first he gradually grows into a man, as a general he embraces the popular idea of Napoleon to perfection.

The picture was made abroad, and the battle scenes in most instances occur on the same spots where the actual battles occurred generations before.

The picture will appeal to all classes. For those who love the battle scenes, there are plenty; for those who desire the love scenes and the political side of Bonaparte's life, there are many of these; the scenes, too, are wonderful.

Thé picture is controlled by Warner's Features, and produced by the Ambrosio Company, and is released in two parts, the first three reels being termed "A Born Warrior," and the last three "Exiled." This is for the benefit of those who do not wish a six-reel feature. It can be had all at once or in part, whichever the exhibitor desires.

"SPORT AND TRAVEL IN CENTRAL AFRICA"
(Eclectic—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

To witness this four-reel production of the Eclectic Company would teach the student of natural history far more of central Africa than listening to a dozen lectures or reading a dozen books dealing with the same subject. Aside from its strong educational value, the picture contains more thrilling incidents than many a drama with a long and drawn out plot, which are certain to send shivers chas ing up and down the spine of all who see it, young and old.

The sub-titles, more in the form of a brief lecture than merely relating incidents of the trip, explain fully all the happenings; the spectator is not left in the dark in regard to any scene in the entire production.

Captain Mecin was in command of the party, and M. Julien Doux, the operator. Great credit is due the latter for his readiness to be on hand at all times when something "was doing." All the scenes in which wild animals are filmed are wonderful.

It seems almost impossible that a human being should be able to get so close to the carnivorous creatures without endangering his life—and doubtless M. Doux's life was greatly in danger several times.

The light effects are marvelous, and this seems a miracle, when one stops to think that chance necessitated the taking of most of the films.

It is known that to induce the wild tribes of Africa and other countries, to pose for the camera is exceptionally hard, owing to their superstition that the camera is the evil one, but Captain Mecin and M. Doux must have exercised a hypnotic influence over the natives, for they act very well and go through their war dances and their daily habits especially for the camera.

The explorers started at Cairo, and from there worked their way up the Nile, finally reaching Africa's darkest depths. Many picturesque views, both along and on the river, are shown. A fine idea of the Sahara desert and some of its barbaric tribes is portrayed.

A few of the interesting incidents caught by M. Doux with his camera are: A crocodile devouring a goat and afterwards the capture of the crocodile by the natives, a species of wild cat robbing a bird's nest, the shooting of elephants and giraffes, and the rollickings of some lion cubs. In fact, all of the four reels abound in interesting incidents, one following the other in rapid succession, too many to enumerate here, so that at the end of the last reel the spectator is truly sorry that there is no more to come.

But he goes away, carrying with him a store, of knowledge that he did not possess before.
SPECIAL FILM REVIEWS

"The Dogs of War." Pathé. June 2.—Two attachments of the Swedish army appeared before the camera especially for the Pathé Frères in this picture. The film faithfully portrays their methods of war, and combined with this are some beautiful scenes of snow-covered mountains. The methods that the Swedes use in sending messages from one post to another when no other means of communication is possible is by sending Airedale terriers with the messages.

Soldiers are seen in fierce pursuit of one of these dogs in order to intercept the message, but they are unsuccessful after a long chase. Many other of their customs are shown which make the film altogether an exceedingly interesting one.

"With His Hands." (Edison. June 2.)—This, the fifth story of "The Man Who Disappeared" series, can be recommended to be seen by all those that think an actor's life is an easy one. It takes a large amount of nerve to do some of the things that Marc MacDermott does here, as the action takes place on top of a skyscraper.

In this number there appears a seeming inconsistency. John Perriot, alias John Pottle, is wanted for murder and is hiding from the police, yet he comes face to face with the police quite often, and none of them seem to recognize him.

The picture closes with a hand-to-hand fight on the top of a high building between Pottle and a detective. Pottle is worsted and falls to the pavement, many feet below. The fall is so cleverly executed that it looks sensational real.

In this story Pottle is working on a building as a riveter's helper. He is accused of inciting a strike and is closely watched, which leads to the fight and his fall.

"Golden Dross." (Reliance. Two reels. May 16.)—Cortenay Foote, Miriam Cooper and Irene Hunt, three of Mutual's most popular screen actors, play the leads in this drama. The production is remarkable for its few scenes and sub-titles, but still making a connected and enjoyable story. The apartments of the wealthy actress are handsomely staged and the entertainments are most realistic. The country scenes are beautiful and excellent photography marks the entire offering.

Paul is of a poetic nature, his plain sweetheart is unpooetic. Then an actress appears and Paul falls in love with her. She plays with him at first, but when she sees the sorrowful Madge, she becomes the means of his return to her.

"The Wharf Rats." (Broncho. Two reels. May 27.)—Many sensational scenes are produced here; one especially is far from the ordinary. Jim, who has escaped from the police, runs to the roof of his house, and crosses over to the next house by going along a wire, hand over hand, many feet above the streets. A scene like this, supplemented by others of a varied nature, can hardly fail to awaken interest.

Edward has committed a burglary. His brother takes the blame and escapes from the police. He is in another city when he learns his mother is seriously ill; he returns home, too late, and falls into the hands of the bluecoats. The last scene is most touching.

"The Lost Sermon." (American. Two reels. May 25.)—William Garwood as the minister, Vivian Rich as Rosamond, and Jack Richardson as Philips, are the principals. The drama will more likely appeal to a religious, church-going audience than the average. It contains a pretty plot, upheld by pretty scenes, backed by good photography and acting.

On his vacation the minister falls in love with Rosamond, but hesitates to propose, thinking she is wealthy. After he has left, her mother dies and leaves her penniless. She is greatly bothered by Philips, a creditor. In the city she and the minister meet again and are married. There is a good mob scene in the last reel—the minister speaking to the strikers from the top of a high building.

"The Light on the Wall." (Edison. May 19.)—This picture of the Man Who Disappeared Series does not come up to the standard set by the three preceding instalments, although it is extremely interesting.

In the last picture we left John Perriot, alias John Pottle, escaping with Jeannie and her lover. The gang is still after Jennie and Pottle. Pottle has a thrilling adventure with them on the river wharves. Later both he and Jeannie are trapped and locked up in a room. By means of a mirror they attract the attention of two tailors across the way and are rescued.

"The Voice in the Wilderness." (Essanay. Two reels. May 22.)—Francis X. Bushman, Irene Warfield and Gerda Holmes play the leads. Much attention is given to detail, which adds greatly to the charm of the story. The settings are good.

The author is married to a woman who cares nothing for him or his work. Through an accident in the country he is taken care of by a sculptress. His wife thinks him dead, leaves for the city and marries again. The author is perfectly happy with the sculptress, whom he has found interested in him and his work.

AWAITING THE RETURN MESSAGE
Scene from "The Dogs of War" (Pathé—June 2)
"The Lost Heir." (Pathé. Two reels. June 6.)—A well acted and well produced drama, and a drama in which the villain is a natural villain and the hero a natural hero; neither of the two parts are carried to excess. The rural scenes are beautiful to look upon and the excellent photography greatly adds to the whole picture.

Count Bevins' only child wanders from home and is picked up by a traveling circus. The Count dies, and thinking in all probability that his son is dead, leaves all his estate to his brother, unless his son returns before his twenty-first birthday. The new Count is of course in deadly fear that his nephew will turn up, and does his best to 'stall' him when he does come ten hours before his birthday.

But the rightful heir is only too glad to share his estate with his uncle. He marries the daughter of his faster parents and brings them from the circus to live with him, making a pretty ending to a pretty story.

"A Million in Pearls." (Victor. Two reels. May 15.)—A cleverly written and cleverly staked crook story, terminating in the capture of the principal offender by a clever detective after a series of startling and unlooked for happenings. The scenes are so arranged and the action so rapid and intense that to the onlooker hardly a minute has passed before the picture is on and over.

Photographically the picture is about perfect; no extremely difficult scenes were filmed, but clearness predominates through the two reels.

Anne is the thief, after stealing a valuable necklace, in a simple but well-planned and moreover a novel way, she is pursued to her den, and at length is captured.

"A Soul Astray." (American. Two reels. May 11.)—A sociological drama, appealing more to deep thinkers than to the average person. The piece is well produced, and variety is obtained in the scenes. Unusual is the correct word for the plot, which contains nothing sensational, thrilling or startling—just a sad story.

Young Gorden, after wasting a fortune, leaves home and goes to the South Sea Islands. His faithful sweetheart, Edith, waits for him, but having lost his ambition, he writes an anonymous letter to her saying that he is dead. Edith at last yields to a persistent suitor. Later he decides to return, but second thought dissuades him, and he elects to remain where he is.

"Tennessee." (Kay-Bee. Two reels. June 5.)—The scene of action of this drama is laid in the Tennessee mountains; the plot is woven about a group of old moonshiners, with the usual revenue officer trying to run them down. But the story has a new turn to affairs, and the officer does not succeed in capturing them.

It is possible for him to do it, but he lets them go for the love of the daughter of their leader. After this he resigns from the revenue service, and leaves the girl with her mountain lover. The story is produced in such a way as to appear most interesting, and although the plot is old it is one that will always please the public.

"The Link in the Chain." (Relair-Universal. Three reels. May 27.)—A drama that is greatly involved and rather hard to follow. Aside from this, the plot is carefully built and commands attention continually. The settings are nearly all interiors but staged in such a manner as to deepen the interest.

Marie’s father is falsely accused of stealing the Zulieka necklace. He is imprisoned. Marie sets out to find the real thief and finds two, one who substituted a paste necklace for the original, and one who stole the paste necklace thinking it was the real one. Her father is released and restored in the graces of his employer, the owner of the necklace.

"The Ambassador's Envoy." (Domino. Two reels. May 28.)—A political drama, improbable in the present age and place, but making a good, intense and entertaining story. Moreover, it is well produced and keeps one always wondering what will happen next.

The scenes are for the most part interiors, well laid and well photographed. The scene of action is laid in Washington. A Japanese spy is commissioned to procure some valuable papers in the keeping of Rogers, Senator Daniel’s secretary. Through the heroism of Roger’s young wife they are foiled, thus preserving the peace of the nation.

"Was She Right in Forgiving Him?" (Thanhouser. Two reels. May 26.)—The title of this picture is somewhat misleading. The plot is not essentially one of those "sobby" melodramas. Little Helen Badegeley plays an important part, together with Maude Peley and Harry Benham.

Having deserted his pretty model, who soon after gives birth to a child, the artist wanders away. He becomes engaged to an heiress, who is a friend, unknown to him, of the girl he has ruined. The truth comes out, and he, remorseful, marries the girl on her deathbed. Years later the heiress and he become reconciled.

"In Search of the Castaways." (World Special. Five reels.)—A very thrilling picture following the story by Jules Verne, "The Children of Captain Grant." The picture was made by the Paris Eclair Company. The atmosphere is excellent. Tremendous glaciers are pictured as well as sun-baked lands. An earthquake, a wonderful lightning storm, a wreck at sea, a cattle stampede, a balloon, many large interiors are among the few features. Some excellent trick photography is also used.

The picture tells of the journey of a number of people in search of some lost sailors.
funny picture. The worthies and the leaders are underestimating the town. They are blackmailed by two thieves, their former associates, mutual confession follows, and all is well.

"Like Father, Like Son." (Melies. Split reel. May 21.)—On the same reel with "Dick as an Expressman." The plot is that a man who is a great deal of money to the expressman and is engaged, and his hand is kept secret. The town is blackmailed with the help of the two thieves, for their former associates, mutual adoption, and all is well.

"Bunny's Swell Affair." (Vitagraph. May 21.)—John Beebe and Williams to make up the cast. The theme is a beautiful one and the plot is a great success, to speak of it. A motion picture actor who is a failure, and spoils the whole picture by his awkwardness and his amorous traits.

"Music Hath Charms—Not." (Selig. Split reel. May 22.)—On the same reel with "As Time Rolled On." A poor comedy. The German harem is a strong element among the tenants of the tenement. The musicians are sent to jail.

"The Road to Plantdale." (Biograph. May 23.)—Some of the inconsistencies in this drama. Two stories, one as a news paper being printed in two minutes as the picture is shown. The latter becomes a problem of the soul. The music of the siren is heard by theinned brother. He is released after the efforts of the sweet heart.

"The Estrangement." (Selig. May 23.)—A pleasant drama pointing out a good moral. The two families, a secret and a glut, and later returns is the means of starting his two wayward children on the right road.

"Red Riding Hood of the Hills." (Essanay. May 23.)—Hooded and hooded characters in this drama. A happily married couple, the girl decides to travel to the city by herself, but the modern dances, and their associates do not appeal to her, and she returns to her husband.

"A Country Girl." (Lubin. May 23.)—Lubin and Lubin characters in this drama. A happily married couple, the girl decides to travel to the city by herself, but the modern dances, and their associates do not appeal to her, and she returns to her husband.

"The Barrier of Ignorance." (Kalem. Two reels. June 1.)—Unconventionally marks this drama. The ordinary is different than the regular. While some of the scenes show poor acting, the drama as a whole is excellent. Marin Sais, George Mellif, Cleo Ridgeley and Mr. and Mrs. Durell in the cast. The lovers deal with a mountain romance and the prevention of marriage for love resulted in misery.

"The Call of the Tribe." (Kalem. Two reels. June 2.)—Just an illustrated story that contains little action but it is interesting. The story deals with an Indian who becomes a brave. But when his father dies he returns to the tribe and marries a Muna Darkeather. Charles Bartlett and Eva Smith in the popular Western cast, appear.

"Reaping for the Whirlwind." (Kalem. Split reel. June 5.)—On the same reel with "A Trip to Mt. Lowe." A tolerable comedy, but a rather inferior. John E. Blanche and Rolf Roland are the only important ones. An actress owns the country paper to make ends meet for a while, but later they are united in the finale.

"The Hour of Danger." (Kalem. June 6.)—The situations introduced here are extraordinarily good and well produced, but the picture will appeal to, as it deals with a well-known case. Irene Boyle and Robert Ellis are featured. Russell finds that he was wrong in deserting his fiancee for another. The two are united in the finale.

"The Treasure Ship." (Kalem. Two reels. May 23.)—James R. Ross, Alice Hollister, Ham Miller and Robert Walker are the foremost of the cast. The drama is, as a whole, a good and most captivating. The night wares are beautiful. The letters that appear in the sub-titles are not discernable from afar. The very picturesque a variety of incidents, some old and some new, and combined they make a desirable picture.

"The Baby Spy." (Selig. Two reels. May 23.)—A civil war story of heart interest. Its only fault is that it contains a little too much dialogue. Not much swimming. And the story is pretty and will entertain young as well as old. "Baby Oliver," "Grandpa Oliver," "Little Miss Edward," "Lady Lilian Wade" play the leads. The little daughter of a Northern overears the Confederates planing the picture. She copies their message and her mother rides off to the Union soldiers and the day is saved for the Northern army.

The Motion Picture News, No. 25. (Selig. May 25.)—By far the best of the season, this number is this is the burning of the Standard oil well at Unionville, N. Y. In some athletics, which Edgar Rice Burroughs and Fred Edmunds play the leads. A marriage for money finally results in real love.
THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

A Sentimental Burglar. (Vitaphone. May 25.)—Thomas R. Mills, Mary Charleson and Charles C. Kirtledge are the main characters. A drama giving the spectator a large variety of scenes which should please the angry husband, for this act the lover helps the burglar. In the end the barrier to tactics is removed.

The Price of Drinks. (Biograph. Split reel. May 25.)—On the same reel with "Widow Muggin's Wedding." These are the frequent yet comical experiences of three tramps, all of whom have a craving for drinks.

Widow Muggin's Wedding. (Biograph. Sp Glen Buzon and the admiringly named Muggin's wife. The plot is simple but entertaining. The girl lover rolls a bandit of the money while robbing the leading bandit of a major prison at first, but later the girl obtains his release. Two villains fight for the same girl, but a scene is kept in her choice and he succeeds in winning her.

When the Wheels of Justice Clogged. (Nestor. May 31.)—A humorous offering in which gardener, both of which are appealing' and the comedy is said to be a hit.

Universal Program

Willy Walrus and the Baby. (Joker. May 25.)—A Willoughby沃尔伯特 comedy along similar lines to its predecessors. Willie, the detective, is left with a stray baby. Attempts to feed it milk with a spoon will cause considerable hazards.

The Magnets. (Joker. May 30.)—A comedy that is absolutely different. The newlyweds, having a spermatozoa, attempt to leave each other. The result is that they go to sea. The end is recompilation.

The Feud. (Powers. Two reels. May 30.)—An Irish film featuring the Irish moonshiner and revenue officer in Mexico that does not convince. Lackimg strength in much, the photography is excellent. Tom encounters the law-breakers to the revenue officers and blames Jack. This starts a feud. At the end of the film: all are killed with the exception of Jack and Margaret, his sweetheart.

A Mexican Warrior. (Imp. May 28.)—A King Becture and Arline Pretty comedy that is apropos. Just whether King's stunt would have had any merit otherwise. He claims, and attempts to prove, that by enlisting for the "war" in Mexico, he can get away from his wife and go to a dance. Getting drunk disproves his claim.

Heart Strings. (Powers. June 5.)—This makes a very pretty drama containing considerable interest. A girl is disowned for going to a dance. Five years later a recompilation is effected between the father and daughter through her child.

The Golden Ladder. (Victor. June 1.)—A Spanish drama. A heart interest story that brings tears to the eyes at the end. In the years of joy, however, Jack goes West and strikes it rich. Some time later he has a change of heart, leaves his mother from the poolroom to which she was being sent by her brother's wife.

The Stone in the Road. (Imp. May 31.)—A Spanish drama. The plot is a tragic conclusion, but the story is unusually good and pretty. A rich old man doesn't know to whom he will leave his estate. He invites all his relatives to come and see him, and places a large rock in the road. His rich relatives pass it by, but it is removed by a poor farmer who wins the legacy.

The Joys of a Chaperone. (Frontier. June 4.)—Good comedy at the start, but dragging toward the end. Need a change here.

Shadowed Lives. (Imp. May 29.)—An appealing tale of brother and sister. The younger brother changes places with his imprisoned brother, who is killed in order to support him. This biography is fair.

The Dawn of a New Day. (Imp. May 28.)—An excellent vehicle for Ethel Grandin. The story is of life and its changes, but the picture is not acted. To save her mother, Ethel marries an old man. Her former lover wagers he can repeat it, but the heroine returns to the man she really loves, because.

Universal Ike, Jr., in a Battle Royal. (Universal. June 2.)—The new Universal Ike, despite his puppy size, knows out a number of professional prize fighters. Electrical connections are responsible.

Skitz Joins the Force. (Sterling. June 4.)—Frank Cooper and Fairbanks Jr. are the leading characters. Having gambled his employers' money away, he finds no chance to make good. Kidnapping a millionaire, he sees a good chance for it in his paper. The butler follows him and kills the captured man in a fight. Tom is thought guilty, but a strange man, a wealthy man, sees the two brothers of the murdered man, fear brings a confession.

A Princess for a Day. (Victor. May 26.)—Irre Wallace and Walter Miller are the principals. The story is one of the Far East.

Disenchantment. (Victor. Two reels. May 22.)—A Florence Lawrence and Moore drama. The main plot cannot be called new, but the interesting manner in which Miss Lawrence and Mr. Moore enact their parts is charming to the commonplace. Flo and her girl friend, like all the other society women, love the wonderful Italian musician. The story ends with their hearts broken over their coldness. Flo gets a job in the pianist's. The story ends with their hearts broken over their coldness. Flo gets a job in the pianist's. Disenchantment follows when Flo has to cook his meals.

The Strenuous Life. (Joker. May 30.)—A very good comedy featuring Cobb Madison. The plot is slightly overworked, but does have its funny points. The story is that of an overworked detective and his sweetheart. The latter tries to get jobs at a motion picture company with disappointing results to the film and director's temper.

Avenged. (Imp. Rex. May 24.)—A Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley drama. Splendid water scenes and Silhouette work are especially effective. The girl's father is a smuggler and her lover is a police officer. A good fight scene.

Stolen Glory. (Rex. May 7.)—The plot is unconvincing. A playwright is "shanghaied" and his work stolen. He returns, determined to fight for his rights, but is restrained by the girl he loves in vain.

Mutual Program

The Stolen Radium. (Majestic. May 26.)—Another impossible detective story, and a poorly worked one. Staged after the radium, discovers that he is being pursued. He puts the radium in a bullet and shoots it into a sandbox, but the detective discovers it.

A Song of the Shore. (Majestic. May 26.)—Frank Bennett, Courtenay Foote and Irene Hunt are the principals. A great musician unintentionally steals a composition from a poor violinist. He discovers the real author and returns it. The scenes are the best of this offering. The ending is weak.

Three of a Kind. (Reliance. May 23.)—A fine comedy of the slapstick variety. Three would-be comedians try to commit atrocious crimes. Their efforts are side-splitting.

An Angel of the Guich. (Reliance. May 27.)—A touching drama. The minister is unable to reform a Western town, but his little daughter accomplishes this in a pretty way.

Nell's Eugenics Wedding. (Komic. May 28.)—This comedy is somewhat disgusting in parts, but a feature with two girls by Matson, Walsh, Ralph Lewis, Donald Crisp, Owen Moore, Robert Harron, Jack Pickford and F. A. Turner. With the completion of "Trifling Hearts," Harry Pollard, of the beauty brand, has made twenty-one stories for the American Company. Carlyle Blackwell had a fine reception in his home city of Syracuse, N. Y. on his way to New York. Some one had let the news out and many people met him at the station.

Margaret Fischer had the audacity to break a beautiful Spanish fan belonging to a member of her company. She has sent it to Spain to have the fan gold washed. Some one was interested in the fact that the whole company is having a good time and was received everywhere. It is seen that they are making some very unusual pictures for the Universal Company.

The Indians who work for Frank Montgomery at the Kalam have a couple of houses near the Missoula River. These houses are well kept, for most of the people are Indians, and the rooms are spic and span completely clean. The Miss Ricketts, of the American studios, is producing a play problem to be released in July under title of "The Barrier." At the Corin City, a new theatre was opened at 159th street and Broadway. The cost was $200,000. The company was composed of the leading of the city, Mauritz Costello, Mr. Costello appeared at the opening personally.
“WHOM THE GODS DESTROY”
(Features Ideal—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL
A VERY beautiful picture, featuring Maria Jacobini and released June 5. There are a number of very fine dramatic situations that allow for some very fine work on the part of Miss Jacobini. She is probably best known for her wonderful work in the production of “Joan of Arc.”

The photography is nearly perfect. The exteriors, especially the water scenes, are par excellence. Just whether at-mepberial conditions are responsible for the beauty of the workmanship or whether it is the tinting, the writer cannot say. The effect, however, is one that harmonizes. So much beauty to be found in the realistic reproductions of water breaking over rocks that it seems peculiar that more companies do not utilize this effect. In this film several scenes showing the water splashing over the beach are used with good result.

The story is quite melodramatic in character. Theresa is left an orphan at her father’s death and is surrounded by debts. Brown, an avaricious man, and his comrade, Roncory, plan to get even the small estate that remains to the girl. She appeals to her sailor uncle, but he refuses any assistance. He sales away in anger after having refused his aid.

Martin, his mate, is entrusted with a paper to deliver to Theresa when the ship sinks. Arriving ashore, he is met by Brown, who takes the paper away from him. Martin is killed by being pushed over a precipice. The paper contains the secret of some buried treasure.

The secret is also discovered by Roncory. The two villains meet at the hiding place and a fight takes place. Both fall down the well and are killed. Theresa arrives shortly after, having found the paper, and discovers the death of the two men, and the money chest.

"FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH"
(Eclectic—Four Parts)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

A STORY of the Franco-Prussian War, replete with thrilling fighting scenes, both distance and hand-to-hand fights. These are the features of the picture. The plot is excellent and unusual, but the splendid charges of the soldiers are directed in a most realistic manner. The film is really in two parts, the cause of Marian's hatred for the Prussians, the second the effect of it. The characterization of the roles is done in a careful manner.

When the war breaks out Marian is forced to take her husband's place at the telegraph instrument. In a bloody fight Marteneau is killed. The officer who has killed him arrives at the telegraph station some time later badly wounded and Marian nurses him back to life again. On his recovery she learns that he has been responsible for her husband's death. At this point this man passes entirely out of the story.

Marian, knowing the enemy is using the telegraph instruments, taps the wire and "listens in." The messages she takes to the French, and through their means the enemy is badly beaten. After doing this several times she is caught by the Prussians and after a brief trial is sentenced to be shot.

Her little daughter, hearing of this, travels to the palace of the Crown Prince, and after a lot of coaxing secures a pardon, which she carries back to the general. She is too late, however, for her mother had expiated her so-called "crime."

"ON THE VERGE OF WAR"
(101 Bison—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MANY books have been written and many lectures given on the subject of "animal magnetism" and "mind over matter," but none show to their readers and listeners such a vivid example of hypnotism as this unique drama. Of course the plot, based on this principle, is impossible as an actuality, but the story never fails to hold the interest. The photography is of a high sort, the lighting good, and all considered this a worthy production.

A Mexican spy, commissioned to procure some valuable plans from the enemy, goes to a hypnotist, who puts his daughter in the house to get the papers. As she is unwilling to take them, he uses his hypnotic influence to command her to. Due to his exertions, he dies; the spy gets worthless papers, and the young girl, who is really not the hypnotist's daughter, is married to Freeman, the owner of the plans.

"SHORTY'S TRIP TO MEXICO"
(Broncho—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

ONE of the "Shorty" series. At the present time when there is so much talk of war with our Southern neighbor the picture is most apropos. "Shorty," a clever comedian, who is being featured by the New York Motion Picture Corporation in this and other pictures, does some very good horseback riding. His acting is equally adept.

The story is a drama containing many fine points—the tale of the border smugglers whom Shorty joins in the hopes of getting together sufficient money by this means to marry the girl he loves. The party set out in an automobile. Pretty scenery is utilized for backgrounds. At the last moment Shorty draws back, and jumping into the car drives away over the International border-line to safety.

"BLOOD WILL TELL"
(Essanay—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A DRAMA of the old Colonial days interwoven with the present time. The picture is another of the General Film Photoplay Masterpieces. Irene Warfield, Francis X. Bushman, Bryant Washburn and E. H. Calvert are the main exponents of the action.

The production is perfect in regard to acting, photography and settings, and the light is unusually good for this brand of picture. The costumes of the old gentry of the Colonial days are gorgeous, and the scenes and rooms of the ancient mansions correspond in every respect with the costumes.

The story itself is not as good as the way it is produced. Towards the end when everything seems to have come out well, Georgia finds that her lover is a direct descendant of the man who had wronged her grandmother; for this reason she commands him to love her.

This act is hardly justifiable, as a man should certainly not be blamed for the faults of his ancestors. Then it may fairly be said that reversing the usual practice, almost too much is put in the three reels, so that the main events are at times neglected in order to introduce minor ones which are unimportant.

No story of this period would be complete without its duel and there is a duel in this one, but it is almost over before one has a chance to realize that it is going on, and the duel is an important point in the story. Bitter experience with crochety censors no doubt influenced the length allowed this really stirring scene.

The picture as a whole is a commendable one, and one that will please almost any audience.

CONVENTION REPORTS ARE BRIGHT

An important meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York was held at their rooms on May 26.

The Exposition Committee reported that practically all the space on the main floor of the Grand Central Palace had been sold. The convention committee reported that over 2,100 applications had been received from every state in the Union for identification cards.

A committee on theatre entertainments was appointed consisting of Mr. Linton, Utica, chairman; Thomas A. Beckett, Saratoga Springs, J. Spiegel, of Warner's Features; Jules Burnstein, of Eclectic Film Company; Moe Striener, of Theatre Film Company; Cary Wilson, P. R. Schilling, Oswego, N. Y.

G. Gordon McCarty, manager of the Toronto Motion Picture Exposition, addressed the meeting and stated that he had made hotel reservations for forty Toronto exhibitors.

SHOW "LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR" IN CHICAGO

A special invitation performance of "The Lightning Conductor," with Dustin Farnum, will be given at the McCracken Theatre, Chicago, next week. This will be done so that the Western exhibitors and buyers who could not visit New York when the first performance was given at the Comedy Theatre can see the picture.

Owing to the success of this subject, Sawyer, Inc., exclusive distributors of the picture, have made plans for an all-star production in which many novel effects, never before attempted, will be shown. The plans for this production include a trip to Spain, with a complete American producing company, among whom will be several well-known stage stars. The trip will occupy over two months, and two big feature pictures will be made during that time.

NEW POLICY OF WARNER'S

Warner's Features, Inc., have announced a new policy, which is to buy and release certain six-part features so edited and supplied with a double lobby display that the large houses can run them in one night, and the smaller houses can run them as a two-part serial.

The first release of this character was the "Ruby of Destiny" (in six parts), and this is to be followed by Marion Leonard, in a tense drama in six parts entitled "Mother Love." During the month of June, Warner's Features, Inc., will release another six-part feature production entitled "A Born Warrior" and its sequel "Exiled."

Exchanges and Express Companies Clash

Wells-Fargo Fails to "Make Good" $10 Loss by Delay in Film—Talk of Resorting to Courts

Special to The Motion Picture News

OmaHA, Neb., May 27.

Heads of exchanges in Omaha report considerable trouble with the Wells-Fargo Express Company recently, and are at a loss how to remedy the situation. There is considerable talk of resorting to the courts.

The managers of at least two exchanges have declared their intentions of turning claims over to their attorneys. The trouble lies in the failure to deliver films and in the delay in paying claims, they say.

A case in point was where a certain film was delivered to the company by the Laemmle Film Service Company for shipment to a small theatre in the state. The express company's employees overlooked the film, and as a result the small theatre had to close up for the night.

When the exchange received a check in payment of the month's bill, there was $10 withheld as pay for the one night missed. When a request was made to the express company for the $10 it was promised.

Then another letter contained a refusal. Taking the matter up with the heads of the company, both in Omaha and Chicago, proved of no avail.

The question now is, what can be done? The local managers would welcome, they say, any advice from those who have had experience in such trouble.

"SWEDE LARSEN"
(Rea—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

A ROBERT LEONARD-HAZEL BUCKHAM drama along lines absolutely different from anything ever attempted by them before. The story was written by "The Master Pen" and will be released June 4. If Mr. Leonard should leave the stage, or the screen, and never again act, this picture would stand out as perhaps his best recommendation. He has shown that he is one of the best character actors in the business, as well as a clever straight leading man.

Larsen the Swede, the character part played by Mr. Leonard, is a typical one, heavy of face, slow to think, but quick to act, with an inborn love of justice. One can see his brain working out a problem, then the realization following.

He is the foreman of a lumber yard at first, and then seeing that a saloon will pay, he buys out the owner of the one in town, and starts business. He trusts everyone, for "they must either pay or Ay fire 'em" is his motto. Business under this method is very good. Then the gambler and his wife arrive, she being the only white woman in the camp. Larsen loses his heart to her.

The phonograph, if it may be called that, is brought into camp and all enjoy the "music." Visions of what the gambler recalls in hearing the mechanical sounds, are shown in double exposures in the horn of the machine.

An opposition house is started and Larsen is beaten out, for he has made enemies in the rough camp. Lacy, the gambler, is shot, and the girl leaves the camp and goes East. Larsen also goes, but later. He reunites the girl, she playing in a low cabaret show from which he takes her.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

The Princess Theatre, on Grand Avenue, St. Louis, one of eight houses controlled by the Associated Theatres Company, has been sold to the Paramount. The house was occupied a week ago by Jas. J. and R. M. Broiter with the Brown Theatre company. The Princess is one of the handsomest theatres in the city and gives a program of high-class vaudeville and motion pictures.

The Favorite Theatre and Airdrome, St. Louis, has the unique distinction of having the most considerable papers to the city's credit. The Favorite and Airdrome have a combined subscription of over $500 per week, and these pictures are the result of the daily sales, the subscription being paid for by the patrons. The theatre is well patronized, and the patrons are always satisfied with the program.

Early in the morning the Airdrome Theatre, which is situated next to the Favorite Theatre, is expected to be sold to the Paramount. The theatre is in excellent condition, and the new owners are expected to make extensive improvements.

IMPORTANT

Attention is directed to the fact that we have been granted the right and license to import, use and sell to others to be sold or used during the life of the United States Letters Patent No. 610691 (the so-called Goodwin Patent) both AGFA and GEVAERT cinematograph or motion picture film.

This action on our part has been prompted mainly by our desire to relieve our customers of any concern that may have been caused by any claims made in the past or that may be made in the future, to the effect that film purchased from us infringed upon such patent.

We shall continue as heretofore to market AGFA and GEVAERT negative and positive motion picture films which have become famous throughout the world for their superior photographic qualities.

Ventilation  Cooling  Heating

"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans. The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue N tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

DO YOU KNOW that you can throw your announcements on the screen in typewriting? It's no more trouble than to write on a card and it looks far better than the scrawling and illegible handwriting that is so often seen.

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter is especially adapted to writing these slides. Write for information.

How Miller Won Success

Miller is a New England exhibitor. His theatre, when he bought it, was run down and unpopular. Miller is now making money.

He started by getting acquainted.

Then he capitalized that acquaintance by —

But that is the story.

It will be published in three instalments.

The first will appear in the issue of June 20th.

It is a story for every exhibitor.

It is full of ideas, both unique and profitable.

Every exhibitor in the country should read

“The Story of Miller”

The Metropolis Theatre, which has been opened by David V. Picket at 1242 street and Third avenue, New York, is equipped with a Radium Gold Fibre screen. Other New York theatres which are to use Radium Gold Fibre Screens are Burland’s at 1634 street and Prospect avenue, and the Pictorium, at 941 East 180th street.

William Garwood has been kept quite busy during his short stay at the American, for in five weeks his director has put on five single reel stories and three two-reelers.

The Pullaski Iron Company, of Eekman, W. Va., have purchased a Power’s 62 motion picture projecting machine.

“The Stone in the Road” is the title of a one-reel drama just produced by Mr. and Mrs. Phillips Smalley and their Rex brand company. Two Power’s 62 projecting machines have been purchased by the Virginia Railway and Power Company.

Marguerite Snow and Flo La Badie represented the Thanhouser Company at the Chicago Exhibitors’ ball on May 14th. They reported a very pleasant trip. A motorboat, automobiles, an airship and horses aided them to make the trip.

A Power’s 62 projecting machine has been installed in Hurtig & Seeman’s theatre at 125th street, New York.

Atseo, Inc., 218 West 42nd street, New York, announces the sale of a Radium Gold Fibre screen to the Warwick Theatre, Fulton and Jersey avenues, East New York.

Agnes Atchison Childs, formerly with the Longoeran Players, enacts the part of model in the beauty subject, “Drifting Hearts.”

Burton King, of the Ussona, with the Kay-Bee and Brochne companies at Santa Mon- tea, for thirty weeks produced at the rate of nearly sixteen hundred feet of film a week.

dots and dashes of the Morse telegraphic code, sewn inside of a coat, is the new and novel means of communication between a spy and a girl who supplies him with information, in “On the Verge of War,” a two-reel drama just completed by Otis Turner and his Universal special feature company.

The Kimset Film Company, 110 West 40th street, New York, announces that they have equipped their projection room with a Radium Gold Fibre screen, manufactured by Atseo, Inc.

Enza Masion is being featured under the direction of Charles Giblin at the Universal.

Agnes Egan Cobb, manager of Features Ideal and Union Features, 126 West 40th street, New York City, is proud of the following letter, in spirit of the “gentlemen” solution.

We quote an extract that tells the story:

“Features Ideal,

126 West 60th Street,

New York City.

“Gentlemen:

‘Have just received the libriographs for ‘By Power of Attorney.’ In all my experience in the film business I have never seen anything so great. Even from the one to the nine-sheet, is simply immense. I have shown them to several of the most critical exhibitors and to say that they were greatly pleased with them would put it too mildly.

“Yours with best wishes,

“(Signed) J. W.’inerger,

‘Editor’s Features.’

“The Script,” a new monthly magazine of interest to the photoplay authors of the country, makes its first appearance May 15 as the official organ of the Photoplay Author’s League. Russell E. Smith, W. M. Ritchie and Marc E. Jones compose the committee dedicated to get out the new magazine. It is published in Los Angeles, Cal., by the League.

“The Feud,” a two-reel mountain story, is now being put on by Wilfred Lucas and his Gold Seal Brand players.

D. W. Griffith is at work at present on an adaptation of one of Edgar Allan Poe’s stories. Henry Walthall, Blanche Sweet and Spottswoode Aitken are in the cast.

Phil Longeran’s two reelers, “The Broken Barrier,” is under way under the direction of Edward Morrissey.

“Love and Electricity” is the title of a com- edy just being completed by Allan Curtis and his Joker comedy brand company.

Eddie Dillon, in conjunction with the Majestic brand, has finished a farce comedy called “The Last Drink of Whiskey.”

Otis Turner has commenced “By Dots and Dashes,” a three-reel story. Herbert Rawlinson and Anna Little play the leading roles.

Kathie Fischer, niece of Margarita Fischer, of “American Beauty,” will join the Santa Barbara Decoration Day Parade. She will march with the Boys’ Band carrying a saber.
Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

State Rights for Sale on MEXICAN WAR Pictures made under Special Contract with Gen. VILLA

We have purchased from the Mutual Film Corporation the rights for the entire United States on the amazing series of war pictures photographed under fire in Mexico, and now have these for sale on a states’ right basis.

This wonderful feature consists of seven thrilling reels, including not only hundreds of scenes taken during the battles of Torreon, Chihuahua and other famous Mexican fights, but extra scenes showing the tragic early life of General Villa.

This material has never been shown except at the LYRIC THEATRE in NEW YORK, where it drew enthusiastically crowded houses.

Prints are ready for immediate delivery.

There will be enormous profits made in State Rights.

We are now ready to consider propositions.

Filmdom's Greatest Laugh Success

DUSTIN IN FARNUM

Lightning Conductor

SIX GREAT REELS WITH 600 LAUGHS

Picturized by Walter Hal

Endorsed by Press, Public and Filmdom's Severest Critics as a Smashing Hit, at its premier presentation at the Comedy Theatre, New York.

The first BIG FEATURE to carry a laugh through six reels.

Morning Telegraph:
Seldom, if ever, has a play been more artistically shown or more thoroughly appreciated. The scenes aroused the audience to "Oha!" and "Aha!" The acting was of the highest order. The theatre was packed, and it looked more like the presentation of an important opera than the opening of a feature film.

Moving Picture World:
There are many charming bits of scenery in this film, and the list of the performers is a formidable one. It has many really comic situations.

Motion Picture News:
A very marked success. And movie maniacs are still raving over its many novelties. It is far in advance of anything here-tofore shown in this field.

One Organization For All

TO THE EXHIBITORS IN CONVENTION ASSEMBLED AT THE SECOND ANNUAL EXPOSITION OF THE MOTION PICTURE ART AND INDUSTRY—

Greetings!

YOU are standing on the threshold of what may be made the first real convention of exhibitors thus far held and what may also be made the beginning of a new era for your own business and for the whole trade of which you are a part.

These are real matters. They are not dreams; they are downright, practical, cash-drawer opportunities. And it is right up to you whether or not they shall be brought into being.

THIS is an open convention. Not a convention already sewed up as to action; not a convention called to elect some one man president for the privilege of voting for whom you are asked to come on and spend a week in New York.

This is an open convention—the first ever held in this industry. There are no instructed delegates, no prearranged slate, no politics. This is your convention. You may be elected president or the man beside you may be.

But these are incidental matters. The great object of the convention is to arrive at the solution of a number of problems which deeply concern your daily business, and upon which your prosperity is directly dependent.

These problems are greater than personalities. Your organization and your conventions are not designed to give some man a President’s job.

Let the officers you elect be only those who display their especial fitness for their posts. And when they are elected let them sink their names within the organization. Only the organization counts, and it only counts insofar as it helps the majority.

NEXT month there will be another convention at Dayton. The action taken at that convention will be largely dependent upon what you make this New York convention stand for.

It remains with you to decide whether the silly spectacle of two rival conventions shall be continued—for the sake of the selfish ambitions of a few—and whether the conventions of the future shall be open, real conventions, your conventions or simply one-man, snap, political, sham conventions, like the futile state convention held in Ohio in March.

The Motion Picture News has a plan for your consideration, and for the consideration of the manufacturer and the distributor.

It is not original with this publication. A number of thoughtful men have had it in mind; in fact, it is but the logical conclusion to any thoughtful consideration of the difficulties which now beset this industry as a whole.

Briefly, the plan is this: The creation of a National Board of Trade which shall represent equally the three big branches of the industry; namely, the theatre, the exchange and the manufacturer.

The Board shall be in active existence, have salaried executives and shall make recommendations and rulings and conduct campaigns in the interest and for the betterment of the industry.

The motion picture industry has arrived at the point which such unity of organization is absolutely imperative. There is not a well-established and successful trade in this country to-day but that has such a body.

And in every instance the creation of this kind of a board has lifted the trade out of more or less business chaos and greatly increased the prosperity of every one of its unit members.

That the motion picture industry should stand so high in magnitude and yet be practically disunited seems almost incomprehensible.

It is simply due to the selling power of the motion picture, to the wonderful elasticity of use, to the almost universal hold it has upon the millions of the world’s population.

The growth of the industry has been inevitable; but now a secure foundation is demanded.
The same standardization that other businesses have is imperative.

In every trade there are three component parts—the manufacturer, jobber and retailer. In the motion picture industry these branches are represented respectively by the producer, the exchange and the exhibitor. These are necessarily interwoven.

In every trade successful and smooth operation has only been established by co-operation—co-operation within each branch, and co-operation between all three.

You may take any problem now confronting you as an exhibitor—price of admission, change of program, price of program, posters, disastrous competition, etc.—or the broader, graver problem of censorship, and you will find but one solution—co-operation.

And then you will find that the co-operation is not confined by any means to exhibitor co-operation. It goes on and just as inevitably it embraces the exchange and the manufacturer. Co-operation throughout the trade is demanded.

No objection will be raised to the desirability of co-operation—none can be—nor to its realization through the offices of some such body as a Board of Trade. But the same voice will be raised as in the history of every other business:

"That's all very fine; but it can't be done."

It can be done. It has been done.

There have been businesses, notably those in which patent processes played a leading part, so disorganized that manufacturers put men with shotguns at their factory doors to keep out spies employed by their competitors.

Men spent most of their time watching and wondering about the other fellow. Big fees were spent in legal fights. Everybody tried to pull down everybody else's business.

Then, in each instance, a few leaders would patiently begin the task of organization. Others said it could not be done, but it was done. Civil warfare was made to cease, and through a board of trade they joined interests and warred instead upon their common enemy—the foreign markets, the invader, the unscrupulous and unsafe house, the cut-rate dealer, the grafting legislature, the detractor in the public press, etc.

That valuable maxim of minding one's own business was put into effect, and they let an efficient Board of Trade mind their common business interests for them; so that success in full measure was wrought out of chaos that promised disaster.

In every live business there is manufacturer-jobber dealer co-operation, business co-operation to the benefit of all concerned. There is none in the motion picture business to-day; but there must be. A Board of Trade cannot effect this, but it can suggest means and show how it can be effected.

A board of Trade can be a censorship board in itself—as a matter of fact could you have a better one from every standard?—as it could support and assist the present National Board of Censorship.

A Board of Trade can fight adverse legislation, Federal, state and local. Where censorship, or Sunday closing or any form of oppression threatens the exhibitor in one town, he can, through a Board of Trade, swing the strength of the entire industry to his cause, instead of combating it unsuccessfully with his own slender resources.

A board of Trade can maintain a campaign of publicity through the magazines and newspapers in support of motion pictures and motion picture theatres and against their detractors. Again, consider the political power possessed by an organization of twenty thousand exhibitors, with practically every individual a man of standing and business influence in his community—consider this power politically if it were organized compactly and wielded intelligently by a Board of Trade.

To-day this power is utterly wasted.

A Board of Trade could eliminate from the ranks of the manufacturer the irresponsible producer who fattens upon the industry to its detriment and from the exhibiting body the cut-throat competitor. It could standardize prices, posters, programs and credit.

How else, in fact, can admission price be standardized except by this joint action? And does not every exhibitor and every manufacturer realize that if admission prices are not made adequate and standard, then the whole industry rests upon a foundation that cannot, will not, endure?

To-day there is no action for the betterment of the industry except of a spasmodic and inefficient character. Evils are decried but nothing is done. Even with censorship, though its menace is freely admitted, there is no concerted action by the manufacturers, and no action of any kind by the exhibitor.

The objects which are desired by the great majority in this industry can be accomplished by an efficient Board of Trade. It is perfectly possible.

This industry is too big to-day for personalities, or for separate and warring factions.

The idea of an exhibitors' association, dominated by one man and carried about by him in his pocket to be delivered as he chooses, is too utterly absurd.

Let us have an organization which will be so busy with practical business problems—and there are many—of the whole industry that politics will be forgotten.

Let it be just such an organization as every individual business demands for its money-making, permanent success.

And above all let the first step—and let it be a long step—be taken now at this open convention.

Let it be a get-together convention.

The result then—and only then—will be concerted prosperity.

Among those present were Mabel Trumelle, Pearl (“Pauline”) White, Barry O’Moore, Elsie McLeod, Eddie O’Connor, George Lessey, May Abbe, Jesse Stevens and Harry Beaumont. The return game will be played in about two weeks.
EVERYTHING is now in readiness for the reception of the thousands of exhibitors throughout the country who have promised to attend the Second International Exposition of the Motion Picture Art and the First Open Trade Convention to be held in the Grand Central Palace, New York City, beginning Monday, June 8.

So great has been the demand on space that the committee have been obliged to extend their rental privileges and obtain other parts of the gigantic building. Up to the date of going to press, about 40,000 feet had been taken by manufacturers in all branches of the business, from the smallest accessory maker to the largest film manufacturer.

President Woodrow Wilson will open the convention by pressing a button in Washington at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon. At the same time, a number of flags in the exposition hall will drop, disclosing his picture.

The Monday afternoon session of the convention will be open to the general public.

David Belasco will address the convention on that afternoon. This is practically the first time a theatrical manager has spoken at a gathering of film men. His address is therefore awaited with eagerness, especially as he has just made a deal with the Lasky Feature Film Company, whereby the latter will produce all his great successes.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, will also speak at this meeting. This is the only day at which the general public will be present. A large number of prominent clergy and civic officials have been invited to be present.

Too much credit cannot be awarded to the various committees for their indefatigable work in making the coming exposition and convention the success it promises to be.

Samuel H. Trigger, chairman of the exposition committee, was ably assisted by Adolph Weiss, secretary; Grant W. Anson, treasurer; J. A. Koepel, Aaron A. Corn and William Hilkenemile of the entertainment committee. The national secretary, Harold W. Rosenthal, who has prepared the program for the convention, and supervised everything else, is entitled to the amount of praise he has received for he has, like the others, put everything else aside. The officers promise that the convention will start at all sessions promptly on schedule time, regardless of the number in the hall. As there is so much business to be attended to, this plan is the only one feasible.

A glance at the program, published elsewhere in this issue, will show the tremendous amount of business that is to be transacted. Because of this, the Entertainment Committee found some difficulty in providing a sufficient amount of recreation material that would not interfere with the more serious affairs.

After considerable work an entertainment program was evolved that will make this trip to New York for all interested one never to be forgotten. There will be something going on all the time, theatres for those who desire that form of amusement, pleasing itinerary for others.

TIME will also be provided for the exhibitors to review all the exhibits in the main hall. Here will be represented every class of article connected with the motion picture trade. Every booth-holder is trying to outdo his neighbor and competitor in the beauty and elaborateness of their exhibit.

Many thousands of souvenirs will be given away. Many of the booth representatives will be dressed in costume. A number will receive in full dress at the evening sessions. Others will dress in Colonial costume, while various uniforms will lend color and pomp to the crowds in the massive hall.

Uniformed attendants will wait on the visitors to the model theatres built for the exhibiting of films. The main hall will resemble a great Italian garden with trellises of vines, with here and there an arbor. There will be innumerable ferns, palms and evergreens surrounding several fountains. There will be orchestras stationed in different parts of the main hall.

Of the model theatres erected at various points about the exposition hall, one will be occupied by the General Film Company throughout the week. The others will be in use all the time by numerous feature firms, displaying their releases.

A SPECIAL feature of the convention this year will be the presence of a corps of stenographers to whom all exhibitors in attendance are requested to give all resolutions and grievances to be submitted to the committees having those subjects in charge.

The rule has been promulgated that all grievances and resolutions must be reduced in writing to command the attention of the committees. A box will be provided in which these papers are to be deposited and thereafter they will reach the committees in due course.

The list that follows are the manufacturers who will exhibit at the exposition and their wares. The names are arranged alphabetically for the convenience of the user. They will be found in numerical order in another part of this issue with the corresponding company appended thereto. The numbers placed in parenthesis represent the booth numbers.

Nat I. Brown will be in charge of the exhibit. The Radium Gold Fibre Screen will be shown as well as the other equipment the Atsco carries. Three of the model theatres will have a Gold Fibre Screen. They will also act as the agents for the General Electric Company. Ten thousand medals made of a metal resembling gold will be given away. HEAVY FILM DEMAND IN GULF STATES

Special to The Motion Picture News.

New Orleans, June 3.

Local film exchanges are experiencing a heavier demand for films from the Gulf Coast in the past few weeks. Thousands of people from this city, the interior of the state and Texas, make their summer homes at Pass Christian, Bay St. Louis, Mississippi City, Gulfport, Biloxi and other Mississippi coast resorts, and the patronage of the motion picture theatres in the summer is three times as great as during the winter. As practically all of these houses are "airdomes," the performances are almost entirely limited to evenings.

TO NEW YORK EXHIBITORS

"To the New York State members and delegates of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and all exhibitors of the state:

"I wish to call your attention to the importance of securing your hotel accommodations for the convention at Dayton, O., which opens July 6.

"There will be a very large attendance, and in order to secure your reservations, would advise you to write C. Gross, chairman, Convention Hotel Committee, 301 Commercial Building, Dayton, O., for reservation blanks, fill in the accommodations required and return immediately, as the committee must know at once how many to provide for.

"I expect to have the pleasure of greeting the largest number of New York State members ever attending a national convention.

"Fraternally yours,

"Frank C. Pierce,

ALASKA THEATRE OPENS IN SEATTLE

Seattle, Wash., June 1.

A splendid new photoplayhouse, the Alaska, on the east side of Second avenue, between Spring and Seneca streets, adjoining the Ballard gate building, opened recently.

The ground was leased by Henry Broderick, Inc., for Capt. W. R. Ballard, for a period of fifteen years, to the Alaska Theatre Company, composed of prominent northern capitalists, who have built a monumental structure on their 60x108-foot lot costing approximately $100,000. The theatre seats 1,000.

The outside of the building has been finished in white glazed tile. Every detail in the construction and equipment of this theatre has been most carefully looked after.

As an example of the scale on which the house has been finished, attention is called to the $10,000 Skinner organ which has been installed.

Universal, Mutual Exhibitors and Feature Men Behind Move—General Film Holds Out—Defer Law's Action Until June 15

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Philadelphia, June 5.

THE Interstate Films Company, of Philadelphia, Pa., the distributing agency of the Universal in the Eastern district, on June 1 filed a bill in equity against the Pennsylvania State Board of Censorship to restrain them from censoring films and to test the constitutionality of the censorship law.

By special arrangement with the attorney-general of the state, the rigid enforcement of the law will be withheld until June 15, in order that the courts may pass on the suit of the Universal Company.

Topical Weeklies Strong in Cincinnati

Two Firms Engaged in Making Them and Motion Picture Patrons Take to Them Eagerly—A Specimen Program.

MOTION pictures of local events were inaugurated as a drawing card some months ago by Manager John Royal, of B. F. Keith's Theatre, in Cincinnati, and so popular did the idea become that many of the motion picture houses are using the "movies" of the various activities of Cincinnati on their regular programs.

The idea has proved so profitable that more pictures of civic events are probably taken in Cincinnati than in any other city in the country. Two firms are engaged in making these pictures exclusively for local consumption, irrespective of the cameramen who snap the films for the Pathé Weekly and other concerns. To show what the Keith house is doing its motion picture program this week consists of the following:

During the same week a picture of the events at the Business Men's Club, at Laughery Island, will be shown in the Lyric Theatre, Heuck's Opera House, the Orpheum and at Chester Park. This picture was taken by the Cincinnati Motion Picture Company, whose slogan is: "Cincinnati in Motion."

Protest Free Municipal Moving Picture Show

Poor Films Shown at Canton's City Dance Hall but They Hurt Business and Exhibitors Will Appeal to Mayor.

Canton, O., June 4.

E X H I B I T O R S here have become aroused over the action of Mayor A. Stolberg in adopting motion pictures as a feature for the municipal dances to which no admission is charged.

The dances are given in the Auditorium, one of the largest buildings of the kind in the state. Around the pit-floor are arranged a majority of the seats. Thousands have formed the habit of taking these seats to watch the dancers, and between dances the motion pictures are shown for these people's entertainment.

Naturally, the free entertainment has affected the patronage of photo-play theatres in the city. The pictures shown at the municipal dances are of a poor variety, in the main wornout films that could no longer be leased to a private exhibitor. The frequent blurs and scratches on the films have a bad effect on the eye.

The free city show has been encouraged by newspaper publicity such as no private exhibitor could get for love or money even to first-page news stories on the municipal dance and picture show. The free city show is under the direct management of Z. W. Kent, city service director. The exhibitors are planning a petition to have the motion picture end of the city entertainment abandoned.

A Year of Censorship

A Comprehensive Fact Review of Local, State and National Censorship Movements as They Have Arisen During the Last Twelve Months Throughout the Country—The Attitude of Exhibitors Towards Censorship in its Various Forms

With a National Exhibitors' Convention assembling, prepared to treat the question of censorship of motion pictures as the paramount issue of the year, a review of the censorship situation as it has developed since the last exhibitors' convention may be of use to the men who will inaugurate an active campaign against it at the Grand Central Palace during the coming week.

A year ago, local censorship, by the police of various towns and cities, was the only form of regulation the exhibitor had to meet.

State censorship was beginning to loom large in the foreground of the future, but it had not actually become an active factor. The Ohio state legislature had passed the film censorship law only a few weeks before.

Federal censorship was still an idea incubating in the minds of its advocates.

The situation to-day is vastly different. Still, its salient features can be summed up in a few paragraphs.

First: Laws for state censorship of motion pictures are on the statute books of three states—Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kansas.

A bill of the same sort was before the Massachusetts state legislature, but was sidetracked in committee, that body going on record as preferring a Federal censorship.

The exhibitors of Connecticut are reliably informed that the General Assembly of Connecticut will deal with a state censorship bill, when that body convenes in January, 1915.

Full particulars of the situation in the Nutmeg State will be found on another page of this number of The Motion Picture News.

Second: The ability of the present non-legal National Board of Censorship to supervise all the motion pictures manufactured in or imported into this country has been challenged.

The opponents of the National Board have succeeded in introducing into Congress a bill providing a Federal Board of Censors, or Film Censoring Commission, salaried at $4,000 and $3,500 a year—the former the chief commissioner's stipend, the latter figure representing the remuneration of his associates. This bill is now before the House Committee on Education.

Third: Two cities—Kansas City and Milwaukee—have formed citizens' committees, or bodies of social welfare workers, to supplement the work of the National Board. In Milwaukee, exhibitors are represented on this committee. These bodies' chief work is to carry out the recommendations of the National Board, and to censor only such pictures as are not shown before the national censors.

The National Board, in defending itself against the attacks which have begun to be made upon its continued existence, have taken up this plan, and are urging it upon local authorities and exhibitors in many quarters of the country, as the sane solution of the censorship problem.

The chief complaint against the work of the National Board has been that, while it kept a strict watch upon pictures of American make, importers of foreign pictures ignored the national censors—for reasons best known to themselves—and since the censors had no legal authority to compel them to submit their pictures for examination, many objectionable features got into the market. These have been notoriously responsible for the hue-and-cry that has been raised for censorship, and have furnished ground for many detractors of the motion picture theatre to stand on, in demanding statutory regulation in the interests of public morality.

Under the "Milwaukee Plan," as it is called, the local committees, if properly supported by the exhibitors, could cope with the foreign pictures that escaped the National Board, it is claimed, and the result would be a one-hundred per cent supervision of all films exhibited in the United States.

Matters in Pennsylvania, Kansas and Ohio have reached a crisis which has focused the attention of the entire trade upon those two states.

Ohio has already witnessed a Federal Court battle between the censors on the one hand, and the Mutual Film Corporation on the other. Pennsylvania is about to become the scene of a similar legal conflict between the censors and the manufacturers. Kansas is awaiting a court decision on the law.

The Pennsylvania censors formally began their duties on June 1. Early in May they had issued a manifesto to the exhibitors and producers notifying them that two weeks before the first of June all applications for pictures to be exhibited on or after that date must be on file with the censors at Harrisburg, the state capital.

Exhibitors and producers alike resolved to test the validity of the censor law in the courts. Accordingly, not an application was entered. One of the most prominent attorneys of the state was engaged as counsel, and an application for an injunction against the censors is expected to be lodged with the United States District Court at any moment.

If a temporary injunction is granted, as may well happen, the actual operations of the censors will be postponed for from three to six months, pending the decision of the court.

Ohio is commanding attention because the question of the constitutionality of its film censorship law, enacted May 3, 1913, is now before the United States Supreme Court.

And especially because a determined attempt is being made to arouse the voters of Ohio to a pitch of indignation that will impel them to compel the legislature to repeal the act. This petition for the law's repeal is being carried on under the direction of the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors' Board of Trade, organized for this especial purpose.

What has happened in Ohio is recent and familiar history.

There was no public demand for state censorship in Ohio. The film censorship law now in force in that state is in no sense a people's law.

President Neff, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has admitted as much. He personally has assumed all responsibility for the conception of the law.

According to Mr. Neff, the exhibitors of Ohio were harassed by local censorship like the children of Israel in the land of Egypt. Mr. Neff saw their tribulations with a heart full of pity and compassion, and constituted himself their Moses. He drew glowing pictures of the beautiful realm of state censorship which, according to him, was "a land flowing with milk and honey" (see the expense accounts of the present censor board) and finally induced them, at the Toledo State Convention in June, 1912, to follow withersoever he led them.

It was self-defense, says Mr. Neff, that made state censorship necessary. He was but the obedient instrument, working for the good of the down-trodren exhibitors.

The canvass of The Motion Picture News and the canvass of the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors’ Board of Trade has failed to bring to light the down-trodren exhibitors in whose interests Mr. Neff professed to be working. But for the purpose of argument, it may be assumed that there exist.

Hearing the claim to duty, Mr. Neff journeyed down to Columbus. There he earnestly labored with his good friend, Governor Cox, to persuade him that it was for the good of the hundreds of exhibitors he represented there should be a state censorship of films in Ohio. And he convinced him. The word went out. Governor Cox said, “Let there be a state censorship law.” And there was a state censorship law.

The law was passed in May, 1913. The censors were appointed during the summer. In September they began to censor.

This censorship law was supposed to be for the benefit of the exhibitors. Governor Cox had no interest in it. Mr. Neff says so. He did it as a personal favor to Mr. Neff, because Mr. Neff assured him it was the best thing to do. Mr. Neff admits all this.

One might reasonably suppose the exhibitors would have some voice in framing the law. For some sidelights on the way in which they were “frozen out” at Columbus when they sought Mr. Neff there, see the letters of two Cleveland attorneys on another page of this issue of The Motion Picture News.

The censors censored for two months. On November 29, they were halted by an injunction from the United States District Court. The Mutual Film Corporation had commenced a suit to test the constitutionality of the law, and the injunction was the result.

After four months, the judges, Warrington, Killtiss and Day, handed down their decision, early in April. It was an adverse decision to the Mutual’s case. The court ignored the constitutional questions as they related to the question of freedom of speech, and upheld the law on the ground that it was a legitimate exercise of the state’s police and licensing powers.

An appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States was at once taken.

The facts in the history of the law, and the facts behind the appointment of the censors shortly afterward came into the possession of The Motion Picture News. The censors, vindicated by the court, were preparing to resume their pleasant sires and go on examining films on the screen of from synopses, whichever suited their convenience.

The Motion Picture News decided that it was time to lay the facts of the Ohio censorship situation before the exhibitors of the whole country, as a warning to them against permitting themselves to be dragged into a similar predicament.

William Lord Wright, a well-known photoplaywright, and himself among the candidates for a position on the board, wrote the leading articles in this expose. He was in a position to speak with authority. He did so, and without malice or prejudice arising out of his defeat as a candidate for a censor’s position.

The allegations Mr. Wright made have yet to be contradicted with success. They have elicited scurrilous personal attacks. They have caused a mercenary scribe here and there to froth at the mouth at the bidding of a master. But no substantial counter-proof has been advanced from any quarter to disprove the statements made by Mr. Wright.

On the contrary, they were borne out by subsequent events and by articles from Motion Picture News correspondent in other parts of the state.

While Ohio’s exhibitors are striving for the repeal of the law that has been forced upon them, and Pennsylvania exhibitors are preparing to combat a similar law in their own state, a controversy is being waged with the national capital as its centre, over the merits and demerits of the federal censorship bill now before the House Committee on Education.

For the past few weeks the committee has been listening to the advocates and opponents of the measure who have appeared before their regular sessions.

Its principal supporters have been Canon William S. Chase, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and The Rev. Wilbur Crafts. Most of the manufacturers have contended against the bill, notably the Mutual Film Corporation and the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

What the ultimate fate of the measure will be cannot be predicted, but, like most measures that go into congressional committees, it will probably be materially altered before it is reported to the House.

As for local censorship at the present time, it can hardly be said to be on the wane, despite the number of projects for state and federal censorship that are afoot. The Funkhouser regime in Chicago has collapsed, to a certain extent, but the ultra-fastidious standard set up by the Mayor and his cohorts of reforming Amazons, have survived, much to the sorrow of Chicago’s exhibitors and exchange men.

Nashville is among the cities to adopt a censorship board within the last month. On the other hand, Chatta-nooga has rejected such an idea, and the police censor of Detroit, Lester Potter, will discontinue his duties after July 1.

The City Council of St. Louis are considering a municipal censorship bill, but when it will be passed, if ever, is still a moot point.

The feeling of the country, as it has been manifested from time to time during the past few months, may be summed up as follows:

A strong majority in favor of the present National Board of Censorship, with such co-operative but non-legal committees as may be deemed necessary.

An overwhelmingly prevalent hostility to statutory, state and local censorship, coupled with a disposition, in certain cities, to “let well enough alone,” where a reasonable and intelligent form of local censorship prevails.

Examples of this are New Haven, Conn., Detroit, Kansas City, Atlanta, Milwaukee and Nashville.

A marked preference for a federal censorship, if a legal censorship of any kind is inevitable.

A strong presentiment that graft and politics will be inextricably interwoven with any variety of legalized censorship that may be imposed upon the industry.

This is the feeling with which the national convention here in New York and the coming one in Dayton next month must reckon.

PASQUALI WILL OPEN EXCHANGES

The Pasquali American Company have announced that they will, in about a month or two, open a chain of exchanges throughout the country. The company has been reorganized and have unlimited capital.

They will control the entire output of Pasquali & Company, of Turin, Italy, and several other makes of equal merit. Several big productions are now in course of manufacture.
CALM BEFORE STORM IN PENNSYLVANIA

Exhibitors Continue to Show Uncensored Films, But They Are Pictures Released Before June 1—Censors Take No Action as Yet—Mutual and Universal Plan Injunction Move—Suspense General Throughout State

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Harrisburg, Pa., June 4.

MOTION picture exhibitors in Harrisburg and presumably throughout Pennsylvania are going right ahead displaying films that do not bear the stamp of approval of the recently created Pennsylvania board of censors, although this was the date set by the board to begin to enforce the law requiring the stamp to be displayed.

It was admitted at the office of the board "that applications for the examination of films have not been received in quantities which would permit the exhibitors to display films on or after this date in accordance with the law, as a sufficient number has not been approved."

It is believed that motion picture theaters generally throughout the state are continuing to do business despite the fact that it is impossible that any great number of them could have displayed the state stamp of approval. Up to the hour that the board's headquarters here closed for the day there had been no interference with the exhibitors in this city, and it was stated in the board's office that no reports of arrests had been received there from other parts of Pennsylvania.

It is not supposed to be the disposition of the exhibitors generally to ignore the provisions of the law. Most of those that continue to do business without displaying the stamp are understood to be acting on the belief that the board does not intend to make arrests for the display of proper films that were released before June 1, and are still running.

It is pointed out that it takes about two weeks after the date of the release of films before they are delivered to the exhibitors here, and it is the impression among exhibitors that the display of films now running that were released during May will not be interfered with unless they are regarded by the board as highly improper.

In this connection it was stated in the office of the board to-day that "the board desires also to call the attention of the manufacturers and producers to the fact that a great many of the old plays are being reproduced and that the manufacturer that makes the fact that these were presented on the stage is no indication that they are necessarily fit for the screen as there is a vast difference between the portrayal of characters, parts and the display itself on the stage and on the screen."

This rather obscure statement is construed to mean that no arrests are likely to be made except for pictures released after this date.

IT undoubtedly is the intention of some of the leading film manufacturers to force a legal issue with regard to the enforcement of the law.

The board itself is authority for the statement that the Universal and Mutual companies, according to present indications, will have no films censored as they intend to test the constitutionality of the act and will endeavor to have the court direct a restraining order.

The board adds, however, in its official statement, that "this will not prevent the board from passing on other films that may be submitted." It is further announced that the board here received information from the majority of the manufacturers and exchanges and independent features and practically all with the exception of the Universal and Mutual companies, that they will submit to censorship and cooperate with the board in its work, and the board will endeavor to pass upon all which may be submitted for the purpose of having those who desire to have films passed upon in accordance with the law in a position to furnish exhibitors with such films."

It is understood to be the hope of exhibitors generally that the Universal and Mutual companies will succeed in obtaining the desired restraining order from the courts within a few days or before films released subsequent to June 1 become the only ones available for use; that is, before the board begins making arrests of exhibitors who display films without the board's stamp of approval.

In further explaining its position the board says:

"The board will examine all films submitted either in Harrisburg (its central headquarters) or Pittsburgh, Philadelphia or Wilkes-Barre. The board has, however, received information that a majority of the manufacturers, as a matter of convenience, desire their films examined in Philadelphia and a projecting-room will therefore be fitted up for that purpose by the manufacturers, without expense to the board, where all films will be passed upon by the board. This projecting-room will be under the sole direction and control of the board."

"A sufficient number of inspectors' tickets has been issued by the board permitting the holders thereof to examine pictures on exhibition in any place of amusement, for the purpose of making a report to the board as to any violation.

"The police officials have also issued a general order, particularly the Director of Public Safety, of Philadelphia, that they permit no films to be exhibited without the stamp of approval of the board on and after June 1."

Joseph B. Hutchinson, chief of police of Harrisburg, is ready to cooperate with the board in enforcing the law if the censors call on him to do so.

The Life Photo Film Corporation is removing its managerial and executive offices from 102 West 101st street to the Candler Building at West Forty-second street, New York.

The business of the company has increased to such an extent within the past six months that they have outgrown their present quarters. The studio and laboratory will remain at the present address, and Mr. Roskam, in charge of Leonard Abrahams, the studio in charge of Howard Tobias, Messrs. Bernard Loewenthal and Jesse J. Goldburg will devote their time at the offices in the Candler Building.

LASKY-BELASCO FILM TO SMITHSONIAN

Perhaps the first motion picture feature to be installed at Smithsonian Institute will be the negative of the Lasky-Belasco production, "The Rose of the Rancho," which will be taken amidst the old Californian missions. The purpose of giving the film to the Institute is to perpetuate the fast crumbling missions of the Pacific coast. The "Rose of the Rancho" will be taken with some half dozen missions as scenic settings.
LIGHTNING STRIKES EDISON STUDIO

During the recent storm which played havoc in New York, a bolt of lightning struck a part of the glass dome at the Edison studio, Bedford Park, the Brons, and caused considerable damage.

Ashley Miller was directing a scene in a multiple release, "My Friend from India," when the sudden crash sent the performers scattering in all directions to places of safety.

Violent rain then came pouring in and demolished every piece of setting and scenery on the floor of the studio.

CHOOSE DELEGATES TO WILKES-BARRE

Among the most important items of business transacted at the regular Friday meeting of the Philadelphia Local of the M. P. E. L., were the determination to stick to the national organization; and the election of delegates to the Wilkes-Barre convention June 23-24.

The following delegates were chosen: Samuel F. Wheeler, M. J. Walsh, Jay Emanuel, L. J. Hopkins and H. M. Reis. Alternates: George H. Roth and Dave Schlaak.

The league has also contributed to the Motion Picture Protective Association in its fight against censorship with the promise of more funds when needed.

PIERROT ANNOUNCES PLANS

For nearly a month the Pierrot Film Company have been making plans for the production on a large scale of motion pictures without saying a word of it to anyone. Charles Marks, the main organizer, has, however, opened up and disclosed plans that should interest the whole business. The new company will begin work on June 8, at the studio of the Helen Gardner Players, at Tappan-on-the-Hudson, and will produce two single-reel comedies a week and one two-reel drama twice a month.

Plans have also been started for the building of a new studio of their own, the exact location of which has yet to be determined. The capitalization of the company is $500,000. It will have four branches. Wilson Decker and Company are one of the holding concerns. They were organized by Mr. Marks.

Four companies of actors have been engaged, each of which is headed by a well-known comedian. Edgar Allan Woolf has been engaged as scenario editor. Prominent exchanges have already requested information on the productions.

IOWA GATHERING SMALL BUT LIVELY

Neff Declaims Against State Censorship at Des Moines Convention—Meetings Will Be Yearly Hereafter—Elect Delegates and Officers

Special to The Motion Picture News

Des Moines, la., June 3.

A TWO days' convention of the Iowa Motion Picture Exhibitors League adjourned at the Kirkwood Hotel last Tuesday, following by the organization of a local with about fifteen members. The officers are: Charles Nemur, president; A. H. Blank, first vice-president; R. J. Hild, second vice-president; R. F. Cranford, secretary; Abe Frankel, treasurer, and R. M. Mochn, sergeant.

The actual business of the convention was pushed to an issue on the last afternoon when Abe Frankel, proprietor of the Casino, Des Moines, was elected second vice-president to fill a vacancy created by A. J. Diebold, of Cedar Rapids, who was elected also to fill a vacancy in the state organization. The following were elected delegates to the national convention of motion picture men to be held at Dayton, O., for five days beginning July 6: Albert J. Diebold, Cedar Rapids; James Martin, Fort Dodge; Abe Frankel and A. Blank, Des Moines; W. C. Eddy, Marengo; W. Ingledue, Marshalltown; A. J. Diebold, of Cedar Rapids, and Secretary W. C. Eddy, of Marengo, la., were elected a legislative committee. A third member is to be selected from Des Moines.

The first afternoon of the convention was taken up largely with a discussion of the question of state and municipal boards of censorship. M. A. Neff, of Cincinnati, president of the National League, delivered an address in favor of the national board. He criticised the idea of state and city censorship as undesirable from several standpoints. His resolution was passed unfavorably to the idea of local censorship, which the convention held to be un-American.

President Neff called attention to the danger of overcrowding the motion picture field. He would place the limit at one theatre for every 5,000 of population, excepting in exceptional cases. He pointed to Boston as an illustration of a well-balanced town in the matter of motion pictures. The city, he said, with a population of over 700,000 has but forty motion picture houses.

The attendance of motion picture exhibitors was less than fifty. The conventions have been held semi-annually. It was decided hereafter to hold the conventions once a year and to make active efforts to get larger representations. The next convention is to be held in Des Moines in November upon some date to be fixed by the president of the state organization. The convention will be held in the Auditorium or the Coliseum, and an effort will be made to get a large representation of manufacturers and others interested in the trade.

FEATURE A WEEK FOR NEW DENVER THEATRE

Opening of Plaza on June 21 Will Mark New Epoch—Week-stands For Features Only—"Million-Dollar Mystery" Opens House

Denver, June 3.

THE first theatre-de-luxe in the West which will typify the new era of the photoplay will be opened in Denver, June 21, by Homer E. Ellison, as "The Plaza." This latest addition to Denver's theatres will mark an epoch in the swiftly moving cycle of the silent art. It will permanently advance the admission price over its contemporaries and establish the unheard of precedent of playing only feature films on week stands.

The Plaza is the rechristened Garden Theatre, a former vaudeville house situated in the heart of Denver's "Million-dollar picture district," and seats about 1,200. The building is being remodeled and refurbished at a cost of $10,000, and pipe organ will be installed. The theatre will inaugurate the feature of staging its productions with elaborate sets. Ellison, at present owner and manager of the Colonial, one of the most popular of the downtown theatres, is an ardent advocate of the higher realm of the photoplay. "I am going to convince the West that there is something besides hanging up a rag and turning a crank and calling it entertainment; the screen play has passed beyond the change a day, and the nickel schedule, the new day has dawned and we are going to meet it by going just a little out of our way," he said.

The Plaza will present a two-hour entertainment, cater to the very best class of patronage, present its show on scheduled hours, and maintain a minimum admission scale of ten cents, with its scale varying with relation to the merit of the attraction. The Thanhouser serial, The "Million-Dollar Mystery," and the Griffith production of "Home, Sweet Home," will be the opening attractions.

COMBAT CENSOR LAW FOR CONNECTICUT

Exhibitors and Exchange Men of Nutmeg State Start State-wide Campaign Against Bill for State Censorship They Fear Legislature Plans Next Winter—Only Four of Twenty-three New Haven Exhibitors Want It

Special to The Motion Picture News.

New Haven, Conn., June 4.

n the belief that at the next general assembly, which opens in a bill providing for the state censorship of motion pictures and the establishment of a board of censors will be submitted, exhibitors and exchange men in this and other cities and towns of Connecticut are taking occasion now, at a time when the question is becoming a national one, and a legislature is yet to be elected, to condemn the attempt to force upon them and the motion picture loving public a measure that is bound to cause them to dig further down into their pockets.

A state-wide campaign, to be aided as far as possible by newspaper advertising, is being planned, and according to reports, exhibitors in New Haven are already active in their efforts to band fellow-business men all over Connecticut together, and to persuade them to contribute toward a fund that is to be raised for the purpose of fighting the proposed legislation.

The exhibitors are trying to rebuild the state organization, which existed for a short time under the name of the Connecticut Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, and which gradually sank into oblivion when it was found that all the association had to do was hold annual banquets and listen to occasional lectures.

Now, with the question of state censorship on its hands, and the almost equally important question of Sunday opening to be considered, the belief is well-founded that once re-organized, the order will live as long as there are motion pictures.

NOTHING definite of the proposed legislation is yet talked of, and even the exhibitors say that all they know of any impending trouble is from rumor. Some of those higher up in the city's business, however, say that there is a well-defined movement against them and that the climax will be reached at the next legislature.

They lay the desire for legislation for censorship of motion pictures to the clergy, to the people of the small towns where pictures are still unknown, and to the politicians, while they deny that a public demand has sprung up for such "rot," as they characterize.

That the "movie" men are hard against state censorship cannot be doubted. Only four favored it at all, and these equivocated by saying that state censorship would be right, if any motion picture men were on the board of censors. But for the greater part, the exhibitors said that they, the people, should be satisfied with either national or local censorship, and that the public would protest against pictures being any more severely censored than at present.

The opinions of New Haven exhibitors are, to say the least, interesting, and they follow:

B. G. Salvini, manager of the branch of the U.S. Exchange, of New York, proprietor of the Lyric Theatre, and organizer of the New Haven Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, said we could have state censorship without graft, it would be all right; so, also, with the local. But to have state or local censorship by men who only their interests lie in what they can get out of their jobs is criminal. State or local censorship boards should be made up of motion picture men, who know the business and have the interests of the public, as well as themselves, at heart.

"National censorship is the best, although it is the most censory. The best censors are the exhibitors, who know what their patrons want, and give it to them."

Philip Wittsman, manager of the "Life," and president of the New Haven M. P. E. A.: "Local censorship by all means. If we have state censorship, the question is purely one of politics and graft. The police censor pictures in this city, and do it well enough. They are fair, and know reasonably well what they are doing. State censors would only be looking out for their money, and would be robbing the people who pay their tickets and go to see the shows. National censorship is good enough, but is too general. The people in each city best know what their townspeople want, and such censors are best."

George Fahy, treasurer N. H. M. P. E. A., manager Arcade Theatre and Airdrome: "Certainly we don't want state censorship. Local is good enough. Let the politicians play their graft games in other business, but not in the motion picture business whose promoters are already fighting hard enough to get by. When they tamper with "movies" they are fooling with something the people are very directly concerned with, and are making a big mistake. There's no good in having a few clergymen, or someone else unacquainted with the business, vote on a picture. National censorship is all right, but its scope isn't broad enough, and it does not cover for one small per cent of pictures shown here are foreign."

Walter J. Stur, manager Cannon's Theatre: "State censorship would be best, if there were a board of censors composed of men who know the motion picture business. Local censorship is bigoted and inadequate, while national censorship is not broad enough. With local censors, "movies" men who are grafters would be having trouble continually."

Karl Kazington, secretary N. H. M. P. E. A., manager Junction Garden Theatre: "Local censorship is good enough. The public would have to pay if Connecticut should have state censorship. National censorship is good, but unnecessary. The people don't like too much censorship."

H. Lavitec, Pequot Theatre: "State censorship is good enough with a board of censors composed of men who know the business, but national censorship is the best. Local censorship is too narrow, because it wouldn't take much to get an exhibitor in the bad graces of the censor, and he would be having trouble. A board of censors in the city might do. People are opposed to a great deal of censorship, however, and could do without it."

William Cleary, manager Cedar Hill Arcade and Airdrome: "Just as we are now—a local censorship—is what we ought to have, and nothing else. National censorship is insufficient because one body of men can't suit pictures to the likes and dislikes of people in all parts of the country. State censorship is graft."

Robert E. Burns, manager Stella Airdrome: "State censorship is best with a good, capable board. A board made up of men appointed for political purposes would do harm, but a board of censors whose business would be the best thing the state ever had. Local censorship is good enough, though it has its faults."

Giuseppe Ferraro, manager Grand Odeum: "Sure we want state censorship. Give us men who know the business and we'll be satisfied. Censors who don't know their business will force some exhibitors out."

M. J. Slepac, manager Comique and Globe theatres: "National censorship is all that the motion picture business needs. There can't be state or local censorship without graft, and that means the people lose. The people are the best censors, and if it were possible, they alone ought to have the privilege of passing on the fitness of a picture."

J. J. Daley, Daley's Theatre: "Local censorship is good enough. We won't have any trouble if the state grafters keep out and let New Haven take care of what it has here. There's no use in the people paying more for their pictures so that some parasite can make easy money."

Benito De Lucia, Grand Avenue Theatre: "National censorship covers every need. It is sufficient for the elimination of objectionable fea-
Manager Norton, Studio Theatre: "The people would be the ones to pay if we have a state board of censors, though they might not be such heavy losers if motion picture men were represented on the board. We ought to continue with our local and national censorship, though, and not make any changes."

Manager Burwell, Marvel Theatre: "The national censorship is as good as we can find. It is well enough able to see that objectionable pictures are barred, and so long as there must be censorship, it should be allowed to continue."

Manager Nigris, San Carloino Theatre: "It would be bad for us if state censorship were made a law. Not only we, but the people would have to pay, and our money might go toward the support of some one or more persons who know no more about motion pictures than they do of a great many other things. Local censorship is good enough."

Manager Mitchell, Mitchell’s Savin Rock: "We don’t need any more censorship than the national. The state ought to keep out of motion picture affairs. We are having enough trouble as it is."

Manager DeWaltoff, Orpheum and Airdome, Savin Rock: "State censorship is only another form of graft, and ought not be tolerated. The national censorship is not of the kind that “slips up” easily on bad pictures, and has always done good work. There’s no reason why we should try anything new."

Manager George T. Gilmore, DeWitt Theatre: "The present system of local police censorship is all that is necessary. The national and local censorship ought to continue, but we don’t want any state censorship."

Manager Moore, Majestic Theatre: "We have no need of state censorship. National and local are good enough for us. The local police censors are fair and are capable of removing all objectionable features from films. They know what we want, but state censors might say a picture that is no good in Waterbury is no good here, although local people may like that particular picture."

"Ad-o-Phobia"-Seizes Albany Exhibitor

Newspapers Offer Special Rates, Run Serials, and Managers in Surrounding Towns Advertise, but Albany Men Cant "See It"

Albany, N. Y., June 3.

BUSINESS has not been very good of late with several of the picture houses of Albany, and the reason for it is lack of advertising. Only one or two of the houses ever advertise in the newspapers, or in any other way outside of showing bills outside the theatres.

The various owners seem to think that the business will come without letting the people know what they have.

One prominent paper is running a special page devoted to motion pictures, and has reduced the advertising rates to just a third of the regular advertisement rate. Still the managers will not take advantage.

Another paper is running the "Lucille Love" series, and on the day of the installments advertise at what houses the pictures can be seen. Last week all the houses of nearby towns advertised, but not one of the Albany managers thought enough of it to give it a trial.

The situation is very discouraging to the papers that are doing all in their power to make motion pictures a big success in Albany.

Do Exhibitors Want Censorship?

Leaders of Birmingham, Ala., Exhibitors Against State Censorship—Vice-President Wall of League Opposed to it—Milwaukee Men Against it—National or None.

Say Others—Nashville Man Favors State Regulation of Films

H. M. NEWSOME, president Southern Amusement & Supply Company, Birmingham, Ala., vice-president of M. P. E. L. A. "It will merely mean an added expense and the men who will pay the expense in the end will be the exhibitors. We already have one censoring board, the national board of censors, which will answer for every purpose a state board could be intended for. Why do the same work twice? I would not charge that there is anything crooked about those who advocate state boards of censors, because I do not know, but I do know that as far as I am concerned I do not want any in Alabama and my reason is very simple. We do not need them. The motion picture business has got to such a stage now that there is really no censorship needed at all, probably outside of one or two of the very largest cities. The national board can do all that is needed.

"The motion picture business has become so established, and has taken such a hold on the public, that any exhibitor in any town I have ever had any experience in who tried to run a film which was not proper in any way and kept up the practice for a week or ten days would find himself getting lonesome. The public would simply not patronize his show or they'd run him out of town. Why, a motion picture exhibitor has a reputation to make and keep just as much as has a clothing store merchant or a grocer. I censor every film that comes to my theatres and often drop out a few feet here and there which I think might prove suggestive and offensive to my patrons. I've got a reputation for clean and good films and that's the kind I'm going to run whether there is one censoring board or a dozen. I don't see why every other exhibitor isn't the same way, and I believe that they are. Therefore, why have a state censoring board?

A. Alexander Wall, national vice-president, M. P. E. L. A., manager the Alcazar and Majestic theatres, Birmingham, Ala. "The exhibitors of motion picture films nowadays have come to be high class business men and citizens. They are not crooks and fake artists trying to filch nickels out of the public at the expense of public morals and education. We can not afford to have one poor picture. We have one censoring board which is very well and answers the purpose. Now why should we have a state censoring board? The people of Birmingham need not worry that they are going to be degenerated by the motion picture films shown here. We want to educate and instruct and elevate the moral and intellectual standards of the public. We believe that it is the soundest basis upon which we can build our business. We don't want any state censors and I myself sympathize with the exhibitors of other states who are making a fight against state censors. It will be the exhibitor who will pay for the expense of a state board of censors in the end and the exhibitor does not particularly appreciate added expenses which do him no good."

Tony Sudekum, owner and operator of the Alhambra, Elite, Fifth Avenue and Princess theatres, Nashville, Tenn. "We haven't any desire to put on any pictures that might in any way be construed as vicious, immoral or criminal, and as far as a board of censorship for my theatres is concerned, there is no need of any. However, I am glad that a board has been appointed, since it can assure the people of Nashville that when they enter any picture house, whether it be mine or others in the city, they will see nothing that would offend in any way. Personally, I prefer both state and local censorship, since I realize that the motion picture field and influence is a vast one and every picture show should have some uplifting feature instead of anything that would tend in any way to cause any mind to be led astray. My personal opinion as to the solution of the censorship problem is to have censors in each city, who work in conjunction with the national and state boards of censorship."

H. D. Graham, manager of the Butterfly Theatre, Milwaukee. "I am against state censorship, in fact against censorship of any kind, as it is un-American and not necessary. The Federal laws are sufficient to guard against unclean film. In my estimation the National Board of Censorship is fully adequate to cope with the situation and is the best form of censorship and I am not needed at all. Politics are mixed up in the censorship problem in this state and city, and while in my opinion there is no real demand for a city or state censorship, there is an artificial one created by self-appointed reformers."

"The forming of associations of exhibitors to hire attorneys to fight the matter in courts and the local exhibitors working as a body to show local aldermen the error of their ways, is my personal opinion as to the solution of the problem."

W. C. Brimmer, branch manager for the Universal Film Company, Milwaukee. "For purely business reasons, I am unable to express myself fully on the censorship problem, but I will say that I think censorship of any kind is unconstitutional and un-American, and if the matter was ever carried to the Supreme Court it would mean a victory for the exhibitor and producer."

O. L. Meister, manager of the Vaudette Theatre, 183 Third street, Milwaukee. "I am of the opinion that the only solution of the censorship problem would be to put every show house in the country on an equal footing, have one National Board of Censorship, if we must have one at all. There is no more need of censorship for the films than there is for censorship of the dramatic or vaudeville stage. The local police departments take care of these matters for the theatres and can take care of the 'movies' equally as well."

"I prefer state censorship, if we must have it, but I think that the National Board of Censorship is fully adequate to cope with the situation, and their work conforms with my ideas of what censorship should be. Such demand for censorship in Milwaukee, as there is I think, was created by two aldermen."

George Fischer, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, Fourth street and Grand avenue, Milwaukee. "I am not in favor of state censorship, for I think it unnecessary. I think that the National Board is fully adequate to cope with the situation. There is no public demand for state or city censorship, and there is no doubt but that politics will in time be mixed in the censorship problem in this city. To leave everything to the National Board is my solution of the censorship problem."

Frank Cook, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Third and Wells streets, Milwaukee. One of the oldest and best informed photoplay men in the middle west. "I am dead against state censorship. I think it is unnecessary and I want neither state or city censorship."

"The National Board is in my opinion fully adequate to cope with the situation. There is no public demand for censorship and politics is for the present not mixed up in our local problem, but there is no doubt that it may be very shortly.

The local manager, Monroe Theatre, Monroe avenue, Detroit. "I am not opposed to local censorship as we now have it in Detroit, for the present local censor is satisfactory, but as a general proposition I do not believe in local or state censorship. It offers too many opportunities for politics to creep in and people who are indifferent will have a say with the motion picture business. I would favor a national board. Under the circumstances, however, the national board is the solution. In fact, I feel that the picture business has anticipated things and the National Board has made itself very complete satisfaction to public and managers, as I see it. "Without a doubt, politics would enter into the composition of a local censorship board. The theatre manager must be educated to know what is right and what is wrong. If he is not he will not be a success, and too much money has been invested in picture houses to take a chance with an incompetent manager. I have frequently eliminated scenes showing murders, immoral attacks, brutality and sensuality.

S. H. Goldberg, president of the Omaha branch of the Exhibitors' League of America. "An authorized national board would see all the films and that would preclude any chance of wild-cat pictures getting by. The examples we have had of state and local censorship fail to recommend them to me. I have made a close study of the question and have posted myself as far as I am able. There may be another side to the question. It has been said fanatics and grafters would control the national board, but it seems to me the danger from them would be greater in state or local censorship. Mr. Neff's position may be the right one, but if it is I would like to see the arguments that give it that aspect. I believe fighting against an authorized board is fighting against the legitimate motion picture houses. The Monroe Picture News is making an excellent fight for legitimate business, according to everything I have been able to learn. Mr. Goldberg is proprietor of the Princess Theatre, at Fourteenth and Douglas streets, Omaha.

J. S. Woody, manager General Film Exchange, Butte, Mont. "Censorship is a joke nationally or any other way. The stage, the press, playwriting and publishing are not censored except by the good common sense of the people coupled with the discrimination of the publishers and others interested. Why not picture plays be subject to the same rule? Why saddle me with a buffer or censor which is an expense, a nuisance, valueless and ineffective? Censorship boards never do their work completely. They are constituted, as a general rule, of people whose prejudice has advanced them to such a position and whose prejudices are easily aroused. The minister cannot act as a censor for he's prejudiced along certain lines. Neither can the sporting man be a censor for his vision is too large.

"The exhibitor is the man to censor. The exhibitor is the solution to the vexing question which agitates the country. And yet perhaps I'm wrong in saying the country is agitated by it. There's a ripple on the sea, but small craft are making it. No small body of men can arrogate to themselves the right of dictating what the others should see or do. Plain, common, American horse sense is the best guide. The audience will let the manager know very quickly when anything racy is shown. We can leave our pictures to the judgment of the exhibitor and the public."

Phil Levy, manager the Ansonia Amusement Company, Butte, Mont. "If the national body of censors is properly conducted," said Mr. Levy, "there is no need for a state body. It could only duplicate the work. This state has made no provision for the remuneration of a state board of censorship for pictures shown in Montana theatres, and hence such board of censorship as exists is named by various women's leagues and clubs and the censors receive no pay for their trouble, and their work is desultory. I do not favor state censorship and still less would I favor city censorship. The practical picture theatre man is aware that the sum of the work lies in the hands of the operator. He has his eye set on every foot of picture shown. If he discovers anything that in his opinion is out of place he should consult with the manager. For their own sake and for the sake of the public they will not permit the exhibition of any subject or single scene which a woman or child may not see with perfect propriety. It is in a system I follow and I find it is a good one. We have here such a thing as a local board of censorship in this city, whose endorsement was necessary before a picture might be shown, practical results would be impossible under the present system. In my three theatres we used from 36 to 38 reels a week. With an average of 20 minutes each this would mean from twelve hours to twelve hours and 40 minutes. With various delays incidental to a private performance, the time would easily extend itself to 15 hours. Where will a censorship board be found in a city large enough to donate this time to the public, especially after a national board of censorship has done its work? Were there no national board of censorship, I would favor a local board. Under the circumstances, however, the national board is the solution. In fact, I feel that the picture business has anticipated things and the National Board has made itself very complete satisfaction to public and managers, as I see it. "Without a doubt, politics would enter into the composition of a local censorship board. The theatre manager must be educated to know what is right and what is wrong. If he is not he will not be a success, and too much money has been invested in picture houses to take a chance with an incompetent manager. Mr. Goldberg is proprietor of the Princess Theatre, at Fourteenth and Douglas streets, Omaha.

C. J. Sutphen, manager of the Brandeis Theatre, Omaha. "We use feature films exclusively, and so far have depended upon the standing of the standard companies which have furnished them. I am opposed to local censorship since noting its failure in Chicago. I am not familiar enough with the state censorship question. The National Board, if it had more power, would be the best body to deal with all films, irrespective of whether they were feature films or not."

Barnowzer, manager of Alhambra Theatre, Market avenue and Fourth street, Northeast, Canton, O. "I am not fully informed about state censorship in other states, but I am certainly against the kind of state censorship we are getting in Ohio. I know something of Governor Cox, and know something about the board of censors he appointed. On this knowledge I have formed the opinion that state censorship here is merely part of a political game. I don't see any particular use for censorship by any but the exhibitors, but if we must have censorship, let the National Board do it. No one in this city ever said anything about immoral or degrading pictures before state censorship. I think the best way to settle the whole question is to let the National Board do all the censorship. In Ohio I think we will do away with state censorship when the next legislature meets in January."

A. H. Abrams, manager Lyceum Theatre, Tuscarawas street, East, Canton, O. "The whole idea of censorship is bosh. Let the manufacturers produce what they like. The exhibitors will not show pictures giving a bad impression, degrading or appearing immoral, would hurt the business of a house wherein it was shown. The exhibitors know enough to protect their business. The State Board of Censors in Ohio afford positions for friends of politicians—that is all. If the people demand censorship, though I have never heard of such a demand, the National Board will fill the bill." (Continued on page 66)
BIRMINGHAM EXHIBITORS ISSUE ULTIMATUM

Will Invoke "Blue Laws" and Close Everything on Sunday if Theatres Are Forced to Shut Down on That Day—Time for Consideration to Petition Expires Next Week—Last Appeal Made

THE thirty days time which the motion picture men of Birmingham gave to the city commissioners to consider their petition for Sunday shows will expire next week.

The motion picture men state that they will do nothing until the stipulated time has expired and they are not talkative about what they intend to do then.

They indicate, however, that if they are not allowed to operate their shows on Sunday afternoons from 2 to 10 o'clock as they have asked, they will enforce the blue laws of the city and endeavor to make the city officials close up everything on Sunday, drug stores, news stands, cigar stores, soda-water parlors, soft drink stands, amusement parks and so forth.

The petition which National Vice-President A. Alex Wall has presented to the city commissioners praying for Sunday shows follows:

TO THE HONORABLE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS: CITY OF BIRMINGHAM:

"You, as well as we, are residents of the city of Birmingham, and we all have a common interest. We, the undersigned, have large investments in business here and we pay a very large license. We help to a great extent to make this a cosmopolitan city.

"Our national vice-president, Mr. A. Alex Wall, has had our interests up with your Honorable Board for over one year. Mr. Wall also presented our claim to the Pastors' Union of this city on May 4, 1914, as a result of which his understanding was that if strictly moral, religious and educational pictures were shown and no admission charged (a contribution in basket or collection plates to be taken) there were none of the parts that could, or desired to, stop the Sunday shows from operating.

"After explaining that this would be agreeable in every way with the motion picture men, Mr. Wall promised the pastors, some of whom he talked with individually, that the motion picture exhibitors association in Birmingham would see that the shows were run only from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock in the evening and that all pictures would be of a strictly high standard, moral, religious and educational.

"Later one of the prominent pastors of the city visited Mr. Wall and personally assured him of no opposition from the pastors.

"NOW, gentlemen, we only expect an honest and square deal from you.

"First, please do not act partially toward any one. Let all come alike. One member of your body, Judge A. O. Lane, states that one section of the city code regarding "exhibitions" on Sunday prohibits our operation on that day.

"We maintain to your honorable body that if such construction is to be placed on this section that it is now being violated in many ways. The Best Park & Amusement Company, which operates East Lake Amusement park and every one of the park's concessions, are violating these laws of the city on the Sabbath. Soda fountains are being operated in violation of this code, boot-black stands, club-rooms, taxi-cab companies, hackmen and ticket agents at railway stations and many other such common violations of this law are going on every Sunday.

"NOW, when we want to do a moral good to our city and its people, are we going to be turned down daily by our city commissioner? Gentlemen, we appeal to you to give us a square deal; all we want is our rights. We are glad that we have an argument of common good to the public on our side of this question, for on that basis we believe we will win our contention.

"We believe we are doing a great good daily in elevating morally and intellectually the great mass of our people by offering them an amusement that is wholesome, educational, moral and instructive. There was for years a war on tobacco, but the sale of this article is now expressly provided for on Sunday.

"We are willing our case shall be judged alongside of these many others which are now allowed Sunday privileges. If we are to be barred from the Sunday privilege why are these others not treated upon the same basis?

"IF we open our doors on Sunday we dare say your honorable body would stop us. If so, we respectfully petition that steps be taken at once to stop all Sunday law violations and at once.

"We feel that we have been ignored and if you decide on action enforcing all Sunday laws we will be glad to co-operate with you if you will so inform us. We will appreciate an answer addressed to our national vice-president, Mr. Wall.

"Yours most obedient,

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA, ALABAMA BRANCH No. 14

By Birmingham Local No. 1."

T. S. ABERNATHY, owner and operator of the Odeon theatres in Birmingham, is planning on the construction of a new theatre in that city in the near future, although he says it will be several days yet before he will be able to make any definite announcement as to his plans. The "Odeon 2" went out of business Saturday, May 20, on account of the expiration of Mr. Abernathy's lease.

The site has been secured by the Kress five and ten-cent store corporation, which intends to erect a new building on it for the expansion of their Birmingham stores.

The "Odeon 1," just across the street from the "Odeon 2," both of which are located on Second avenue between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, will continue to operate. Mr. Abernathy states that his contemplated new theatre will not be so large, but his present plans are to make it the most beautiful motion picture theatre in the South.

"THE rottenest thing in existence, that's what I've got to say about state board of censors," said Mr. Abernathy. "They are of no good whatever to the public or to the motion picture men. I have sized the matter up this way. I believe that the state board of censors' movement was started and is being fostered by the big theatrical men who are trying to put the motion picture men out of business.

"We have put them nearly out of business and they are trying to get back at us through the state censoring, through which they hope to condemn a half or more of the films. If they once get the state board they can easily be 'buy it's members' and that's all they want.

"I'll give any man or woman or child $10 who in the last three years has seen a film run in Birmingham which had anything in it immoral or detrimental to those who saw it. We don't need the state boards and I hope they are run out of the country."

BUFFALO FACES COMPETITION CRISIS

Theatres in Residential Districts of Lake City Make Alarming Inroads Upon Receipts of Downtown Houses—Latter Retaliate by Aggressive Advertising Campaigns—Severe Summer Struggle Promised

A VERY serious problem has arisen for the downtown exhibitors of Buffalo.

In fact, so serious has the problem become that one theatre, the Lyric, will close on Sunday night "for good" with a change of policy upon its reopening in the fall.

There is also a rumor that another large photoplay house, the name of which cannot be given at this time because of the "unofficialness" of the rumor, has given its employees notice.

All the downtown managers are complaining of the decrease in their receipts.

Why?

THE reason is this: Of late, many beautiful motion picture theatres have opened in the outlying and residential sections of Buffalo.

These theatres are modern in every respect—large, well ventilated, have large orchestras, and show the same features as the downtown houses. And now it seems that patrons of the photoplay are satisfied to wait until the feature which is announced for the downtown house comes to their "own theatre next door."

The opening of the Elmwood Theatre at the corner of Elmwood and Utica streets, one of the finest and most beautiful theatres in every way in western New York, has taken many hundreds away from the downtown houses.

The Elmwood is right in the center of one of the most thickly populated and high-class residential sections of the city and is showing its attractions to capacity audiences nightly.

THE Allendale, another house in the Elmwood district, is also a modern photoplay house, and showing as it does, all the big features a few days later than the downtown houses, is also attracting large audiences who would rather wait a day of two than journey downtown.

The Premier, in Central Park, takes care of a large class of photoplay lovers in the northern part of the city.

The Globe, at Main and Ferry streets, is showing to capacity every night.

The Regent, at the corner of Utica and Main streets, is about ready to open.

In fact, in almost every section of the residential sections of Buffalo you will find at present a large and modern photoplay house showing the best features and at prices the same as the downtown houses.

A visit to these theatres in the immediate neighborhood, of course, saves ten cents car fare, which is also a most important factor in favor of the outlaying theatres.

GEORGE W. ERMANN, manager of the Elmwood, commenting upon the situation, said that he had foreseen the situation months ago and that he is not surprised to learn of the closing of some of the theatres downtown.

William C. Kaliska, manager of the Allendale Theatre, says that many of his patrons have remarked that they would rather wait until the attraction played at the Allendale than go downtown.

And now what is to be done?

Some of the downtown managers say "advertise!" and accordingly have enlarged their ads in all the papers. The Strand, while not as seriously affected as other houses, has been one of the theatres to enlarge their advertising campaign. With the opening of the new Olympic on Lafayette Square, and with the Lyric and Family not over one hundred feet away, the downfall of one or both of the latter theatres is foreshadowed.

THE Majestic Theatre, a legitimate house, has contracted for an entire summer engagement of the George Kleine attractions, but the audiences even the first week have been very slim. Monday the Teck starts showing pictures with Lyman Howe's Panama films as the attraction.

The Garden is showing pictures to small audiences, although they are playing the best of features. All these houses are in the downtown section.

From these slim audiences we have only to visit the theatres in the residential section to meet with "every seat taken," and nightly, too.

MATINEES as a rule have been an exception with some of the houses on lower Main street, as at this time there are always a large number of people shopping, visiting, and on business, who drop in to see the pictures and rest, but at night it is a different proposition; the shopping is over, the visitors have gone to the beaches, and business is over.

The opening of all the large lake resorts this week will be another means of taking away a great number of photoplay patrons.

Crystal Beach, Buffalo's largest resort on the nearby Canadian lake shore, opened on Thursday. This resort has a large photoplay house.

Erie Beach, the Bedell House, and several smaller resorts all open on Decoration Day, and then will begin the nightly exodus to the lake and its cool breezes.

IT is going to be an interesting study to watch the situation work out here in Buffalo.

At present, at least for the summer months, it looks like a serious problem to make expenses for the smaller houses and an equally serious problem for the downtown houses to attract audiences in the evening.

BUFFALO MANAGER QUITS

Special to The Motion Picture News.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 4.

There has been a move at the Family Theatre recently, the manager, Walter Foster, and the entire orchestra have resigned. No reason has been given out for this move.

Manager Foster recently took motion pictures of the parade of the Buffalo Police Department and showed the pictures at the Family to a large and enthusiastic audience.

SAWYER PROJECTION ROOM READY

The new projection room of Sawyer, Inc., at 1600 Broadway, N. Y., has been completed. It will be known as "The Pompeian Room," and is beautiful in design. A Roman fountain has been installed which augments the coolness of the room, besides adding beauty. The wisteria ceiling was designed by Mr. Rudolph, vice-president and general manager of Sawyer, Inc. A gala house warming is the next thing on the cards.
A NATIONAL TRADE ASSOCIATION

Editor, THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, New York City.

Dear Sir: As the date of the convention approaches, I can not help thinking of the question so often put to me by exhibitors in various cities I have visited in my capacity as national secretary: "What is the use of a National Organization; of what benefit is it to the exhibitors of the country?"

What shall the answer be? Is it solely for the purpose of holding annual conventions? We have already had such conventions at Cleveland, at Chicago, and at New York. And the question still remains unanswered. What has been accomplished in the past three years by the national organization and its conventions, for the benefit of the exhibitor or the trade in general?

There is only one answer—nothing.

Such a result is inevitable so long as the exhibitors attempt, by themselves, to regulate the conditions in the motion picture industry.

It is my purpose in writing this letter to rouse the exhibitor to the necessity of so broadening the scope of our organization as to include in its membership not only exhibitors, but film manufacturers, distributors, feature men, manufacturers and dealers in supplies and accessories, the trade press, and all firms and persons directly and indirectly affected by the welfare of the motion picture exhibitor, for upon the success of the exhibitor rests the foundation of the existence of all the others.

Our various interests are so interwoven that an organization of any one part of the industry can accomplish little if anything.

But an organization as I suggest would soon become a power that would make itself felt throughout the land. We could then accomplish tangible results, and be able to show the benefits of a national organization, not only to the exhibitor, but to the trade as a whole.

At the afternoon session of the convention on Thursday, June 11, I shall introduce a resolution in accordance with the above, and should it meet with the approval of the majority present, I will have a tentative draft of a constitution ready so that the convention will be able to proceed without undue loss of time, and before the week is over it is my earnest hope that such an organization will be an accomplished fact.

I will also outline a plan of successfully financing the organization, something that has been sadly wanting in the national organizations of the past.

Trusting that my plan of a National Trade Organization as above outlined will meet with your approval and support, I remain

Fraternally yours,

HAROLD W. ROSENTHAL,
Secretary International Motion Picture Association.

An Open Letter to M. A. Neff

M. A. Neff, President, M. P. Exhibitors' League of America.

Dear Sir:—In a recent Bulletin, sent by me to members of your league, you made certain statements concerning the members of the committee on censorship, of the Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors' Board of Trade, which were so misleading, and taken without foundation and in reference to myself were so absolutely false that I could not refrain from answering. Your motive for this is quite apparent to me.

The object of your bulletin is to apply the "stab" to all upon the censor question.

Free discussion and the truth are entirely foreign to your nature.

I send you a copy of my letter to your brother exhibitor, your bulletin is a mass of untruthful personalities. I am sorry for you.

Respectfully yours,

SAM LUSTIG,
Sec'y Cleveland Photoplay Exhibitors' Board of Trade.

Philadelphia vs. the League

Editor, THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, New York City.

Dear Sir:—As a member of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia branch, I have lent in the last four years my financial and moral support to motion picture affairs. During that period I visited the New York convention in 1913, not, however, as an elected candidate, nor, simply from a business standpoint. While in New York I was invited to a business session when the election was going on. The action of the national executive council at that time reminded me of the Russian gendarmerie using the knout on the passengers who dared to think differently from other people, in consequence of which every intelligent exhibitor has formed his opinion.

This, however, I expressed in the presence of M. A. Neff, he attended the Philadelphia Exhibitors' League meeting in Philadelphia on May 8 and did not get a satisfactory explanation. He sidetracked me to explain how much good the National Motion Picture business, which for the present I decline to discuss.

However, our friend succeeded in influencing the league in supposing that he, and he only, can lead the exhibitors to moral and financial success.

When the discussion came up as to whether we ought to join the national body I was one of those who did not hesitate to explain why Pennsylvania should not become a part of the organization. Perhaps my remarks were not clear enough for some reason, before I now set forth my reasons.

First—Censorship. The so-called uncivilized and barbaric idea was originally started through the national body. It even tried to convince manufacturers and some exhibitors, that it is working for their good. Censorship will pave the way for political jobs. Such a board will find opportunities to become city and State political jobbers. Be the exhibitors willing to consent to such a plan. We exhibitors are engaged in a clean and legitimate business, and nothing can be said to affect the detriment of a worldwide industry. The only thing we may object from the above plan is that of tax-exemption. Therefore we do not want censorship, especially when it will be considered for the benefit of those seeking political opportunities.

Second—Location. The National League, to my mind, is located out of the district. All bearers—manufacturers of manufacturers—distributors, jobbers and importers are located in New York City, where all the business for the United States and Canada is transacted. Should the national question arise, where will you get the national president? Out West? Why not have a league in New York to act for exhibitors?

Third—Laxness. The present national leaders have not proved to me that they are the people behind the throne, and therefore cannot ask any organization to join them and levy tax. I see no withdrawal from the league, and be neutral. I expect to be in New York for the convention on June 8 to study the situation, and when you tell the Philadelphians I will either come back to the national organization or offer an apology or start an opposition body, which I believe could accomplish more than the national organization.

Respectfully yours,

Competition

Editor, THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, New York City.

Dear Sir:—Good competition is beneficial. However, there are two bad kinds of competition—the legitimate and the illegitimate. Many of us, no doubt, have come in contact with one or the other, and possibly experienced both. The desirable sort always benefits us and creates within us a desire to do even better things along the
How Milwaukee Handles Censorship

Citizens' Committee Staved off Aldermen's High-license Censor Propositi—Board a Non-legal One, But Supported by Exhibitors

Special to The Motion Picture News.

MILWAUKEE exhibitors are rather fortunate in regard to the censorship problem. Though they have a board of censors, it is a broad-minded body comprising either exhibitors or men who have been chosen by the exhibitors.

This censor board, or rather the Citizens' Commission on Motion Pictures, as it is officially known, is the result of a compromise between the local exhibitors and Mayor Bading, at the time a number of would-be reformers and publicity-seeking aldermen were endeavoring to saddle a high-license fee and a high-salaried censor board upon the exhibitors.

Though it is doubtful if this Citizens' Commission has any legal standing, having never been vested with authority by the Common Council, the exhibitors have abided by all of its decisions. The commission does not pass upon all of the releases shown in Milwaukee—merely those that the exhibitors or exchange men are doubtful about.

Mayor Bading himself is very fond of the photodrama, though he could hardly be called a "picture fan." He has always been very fair to the exhibitor. The Mayor recently said:

"ObseRATION of conditions in Milwauk ee would indicate that there is no need of more ordinances than are now in force to control the motion picture situation here.

"The Citizens' Commission on Motion Pictures comprises seven members. This board and the licensing authority, which lies in the Mayor, are in full and complete accord. The cooperation which exists, therefore, between the censors and the Mayor, gives adequate control of the situation.

"A citizens' board of censorship should be fully adequate to eliminate objectionable features in pictures, providing the licensing power is in the Mayor; providing that the board of censors is supported by the Mayor in their efforts, and also providing that motion picture men have confidence in the efforts and fairness of the board.

"There does not now appear to be in Milwauk ee any public demand for a state censorship, such as is now in effect in Ohio.

"Is question has been asked me: 'What is your personal opinion as to the solution of the censorship problem?'

"I believe, motion picture censorship can be made efficient and satisfactory to everyone concerned, if censoring boards are made up of broad-minded, intelligent and educated persons. The licensing power for motion picture theaters should be vested in the Mayor, who may revoke such licenses for cause. In this manner the responsibility is centralized, in the licensing power of the chief executive, who should always feel that his faith in the work of the censors is not misplaced."

A $5,000 Scene in "Lucille Love"

TEXAS FIRM MAKING COMEDIES

Dallas, Tex., June 3.

The Fitzhugh-Bishop Film Manufacturing Company, which was organized here some time ago, has begun the release of one-reel comedies, which are being produced at their studio near Dallas.

W. A. Bishop, president of the Dallas Seating Company, is also head of the new concern. He will produce and play the leading masculine parts in all releases. Mr. H. Fitzhugh, well known in Texas as a camera man, is the other partner.

Mrs. Vera Bishop, wife of the president, is playing the principal feminine roles. Only one-reel comedies will be made, and these will be shown first at the Queen Theatre.

PERSONS unfamiliar with motion picture production little realize the enormous expense incurred in the making of a film story, especially that variety which is known as costume stories.

tery" series. The Chinese village, erected at a cost of $5,000, was used in two scenes only.

known leading woman, of the Lucille pictures.

More than 200 extra people are used every day in the production of the Lucille series.
EDITOR'S NOTE—It is the desire of "The Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre facilities. In fact, don't hesitate to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line.

KILGORE'S KOLONIAL KIDS
A SUCCESS

THE plan that has just been adopted by the management of the Colonial Theatre, Third and Market streets, the largest motion picture theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., of introducing band concerts as an added attraction during the summer months, already is having the effect of materially increasing the Colonial's box-office receipts.

Dick Kilgore, house manager, has been working all winter organizing a boys' band, known as Kilgore's KOLONIAL KIDS, and they are now giving concerts in connection with the motion picture shows.

The young musicians are selected from all sections of the city, and in addition to drawing big crowds of their friends and admirers to the theatre to hear their music, the forty boys are being utilized effectively as a corps of ticket sellers throughout Harrisburg.

They play excellent music and are making lots of new business for the house.

A DIPLOMATIC STROKE

MANAGER BILGER, of Hopkins' Theatre, Louisville, Ky., won the undying esteem of hundreds of young Louisvillians by admitting free of charge all children under 10 years, when they were accompanied by their parents, during the presentation of the film showing the Great Hagenbeck and Wallace Combined Shows.

There is no class of production that appeals to children more than that showing a big circus.

FITTING A BIG FEATURE TO A SMALL HOUSE

CHESTER FENNYVESSY, manager of Keith's Theatre, Troy, N. Y., brought a new idea into effect recently in advertising a feature at his house. His house has a seating capacity of two hundred and eighty and the usual admission is ten cents.

In advertising a feature, he used a band, which paraded through the streets ten minutes in each hour. He took a chance on charging twenty cents admission and his net profits for the day were $250, which surpassed any other day he had done business. This argues well for the feature picture in the small house. Several other exhibitors in smaller cities of New York State with larger houses than Mr. Fennyvessy have been afraid to try a feature thinking that they won't be able to fill their houses. Mr. Fennyvessy was formerly manager of the Colonial Theatre in Rochester.

"COMEDY DAY" A SUCCESS

INAUGURATION of "Comedy Day" with a program consisting of three reels of comedy, has proved a successful venture for J. B. Orr and P. W. Hillman, managers of the Lyric Theatre in Cincinnati. The Lyric is the only one of four big theatres, now playing motion pictures offering a program at 5 cents.

There is at least one comedy reel in the daily shows, so that the patrons have come to look on the Lyric, not only as one of the prettiest and coolest houses in the city, but as the house of funny pictures. Keystone comedies are being shown and on Sunday three comedy reels played to five hold-out audiences during the afternoon and evening.

In addition to the film show the Lyric managers have put on an excellent song number at each performance by two popular entertainers.

Messrs. Orr and Hillman are having their first experience with motion pictures, both having been connected with the Heuck Theatrical Company in the past. Orr was formerly private secretary to Col. James Fennessey for many years and Hillman was treasurer of the Heuck company.

They claim their success has been due to the injection of modern theatrical business methods into motion picture shows. They use the newspapers and billboards freely in advertising.

ANOTHER CHILDREN'S MATINEE

"RICHARD III" was shown at the Carlton Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., for two days, May 25-26. Manager William Kaliska sent out announcements to the various school principals announcing the coming of this educative feature, and the fact a special matinee for school children would be held on Tuesday afternoon.

KILGORE'S KOLONIAL KIDS BAND, OF HARRISBURG, PA.
A DIGNIFIED PASS

WILLIAM SIEVERS, manager of the New Grand Central Theatre, Grand and Lucas avenues, St. Louis, sent a neatly printed card to ministers of the gospel and members of well-known literary clubs the week of May 24, inviting them to attend the exhibition of the feature film "Quo Vadis." The card, which is in the nature of an invitation that is to be presented at the box-office for seats, is well printed, well worded and presents a dignified appearance and makes a distinct impression of class and quality and is a happy departure from the ordinary passes usually sent out.

A NEW WORD IN SUMMER UNIFORMS

MANAGER HAROLD EDEL, of the Strand Theatre, Buffalo, has bought a most attractive set of summer uniforms for his staff of ushers and the doorman. The uniforms are of the middy style, with loose jackets, and will be very cool and comfortable during the summer months. The ushers are all enthusiastic about their new costume and present a very striking appearance as they run about the theatre showing patrons to their seats. Much favorable comment was held on the first day on which they appeared.

RAIN-WATER AS AN AIR PURIFIER

ARTIFICIAL rain has been utilized to wash and render pure the atmosphere entering the spacious auditorium of the Alhambra Theatre, Canton, O. The idea was originated by J. A. Bernower, manager of the theatre, and has been voted by patrons a most progressive step.

The additional equipment used in this unique ventilating system is a motor pump, a small tank and a patented spraying device. Air entering from the open by way of a conduit is blown through a high pressure water spray before entering the theatre.

This arrangement washes the air in the same way that anything more tangible might be washed. In addition to removing all dust and practically all germs, the arrangement adds moisture to dry air rendering it more wholesome for breathing and giving it a quality that makes for longer life of theatre furniture.

To give an idea of the efficiency of this new system, Manager Bernower removed nearly a gallon of dust, soot and germs from the bottom of the sprayers three days after the system was installed.

The atmosphere in the Alhambra since the sprayers are used on the air is suggestive of the open country after a refreshing rain.

Cleveland Exhibitors Rebuffed by Neff

Artic Peace Schwartz and Sawyer, of Cleveland, Tell How Delegation From Northern Ohio Was Given "Cold Shoulder" at Columbus When Censor Law Was Passed

A NEW and interesting version of what the Ohio exhibitors played—or did not play, as the case may be—in shaping the Ohio State Censorship Law, is given to the News by a statement from Mr. Ernest Schwartz, an attorney of Cleveland, Ohio, and B. J. Sawyer, of Horner & Sawyer, attorneys-at-law, of Cleveland.

They are at variance, to say the least, with Mr. Schwartz's declaration that the exhibitors of northern Ohio had an opportunity to voice their opinions of what a censorship law ought to be, if there had to be one.

Mr. Schwartz's statement is as follows:

"As a member of the joint committee appointed by Cleveland Local No. 1 of the League, I was present at the time the Censor Bill was being considered by the judiciary committee of the Legislature, then in session, March, 1913."

"I had wired Governor Cox and the committee that was working on the bill, and also wired President M. A. Neff when I went to Columbus at the appointed time our delegation, consisting of Sam Morris, your correspondent and myself, went to see, and acting jointly with Mr. Mandelman, Mr. Willis, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Sawyer, conferred all day in the hotel while waiting for Mr. Neff to arrange a hearing."

"That same day the hotel to meet Mr. Neff, in accordance with his arrangement, and from a session with Mr. Neff, C. Kerr, Maddox, Wilson and a few other local shown.

"The reception we received from Mr. Neff and his followers was very hostile, and instead of treating us as exhibitors, we received a very chilly reception, just as though the committee were rank outsiders, with no interest in the welfare of the business, although we were sent down as a committee from the Cleveland Local.

"We made three visits to Columbus and never succeeded in connecting with the judiciary committee, though subject to Mr. Neff's call at any time.

"Mr. Neff assumed to act with the officials at the State House and never came with authority to speak for the film industry. He kept us waiting his pleasure at the hotel while he conferred with others, and the present law was passed without any opportunity being offered us to protect its passage.

"Mr. Neff has since used a very lame excuse regarding me being on the committee. I had previously represented, as attorney, a number of Cleveland exhibitors, some of whom happened to be customers of the General Film Co. He therefore insisted that I represented a film company at Columbus, although I was at that time sent down in conjunction with the other committee by the Cleveland Local, and was at that time the attorney for the Cleveland Local League."

Mr. Neff is as follows:

"I have read with much interest your statements in the Motion Picture News in regard to the censorship law in Ohio. I was in Columbus at the time the bill was pending, and observe somewhat the conditions and circumstances that surround the situation.

"The only objection I had to the bill during that time was Mr. Neff's showing of films Friday, alias Mr. Wilson, Mr. Maddox, and Mr. Pettus, of Toledo.

"The same statement that Mr. Neff has made in the Motion Picture News in regard to those engaged in the manufacturing of films is put in a very favorable light. I made at that time and the same discovered by Mr. Willis and myself sending telegrams to the parties mentioned, and receiving replies denying Mr. Neff's statements, which telegrams were shown to him without effect upon his state of mind.

"I talked to a great number of the members of the legislature, who showed much interest in the matter and would gladly drop it if the Governor would do so. By the work in the present bill, we were not able to meet the Governor nor the committee before the bill was pending."

"Mr. Neff refused to admit that I had any right to be heard because I presented an exchange, although I was then as now interested in several picture shows, which could not be said to be true of Mr. Neff.

"The facts are that the whole matter was a personal matter with Mr. Neff for his own advantage to have censors appointed in each state and then a national board from all the states, at whose head would sit our friend, Mr. Neff.

"During the time we were at Columbus we urged upon Mr. Neff that if there must be censorship that the bill should be made workable, which the present bill is not. Mr. Neff agreed to this and Mr. Schwartz and I spent a great deal of time changing the details of the bill without changing its mass features and the same were approved by Mr. Neff, until our backs were turned.

"As a man in my forty-five years I have never met a man so selfish, so unreliable, so concerning, so arrogant, and so blind to truth as Mr. Neff. He is but a mere dreamer without the sense of right."

"Censorship is nothing more than legalized graft upon legitimate business. If any man is so ignorant of the principle of right and wrong that he cannot discern right from wrong, we have a business man who should not ask the state to appoint a guardian for everybody in the business in the same capacity that he is too ignorant to conduct his own affairs."

APPROVE NON-FLAM FILM

As stated in last week's issue of The Motion Picture News the Raw Film Supply Company has received license from the Goodwin Film and Camera Company to manufacture, buy and sell the Agfa and Gevaert films, for which they are the American agents. For some time this company has been held back by the difficulty in obtaining films to fill their orders. Arrangements have now been made whereby it will be easy for them to get as much raw material as they wish.

The basic principle of the non-flam film which they are also manufacturing in great quantities, is the same as imitation silk. The Agfa company are the manufacturers of this film under the Elberfeld patents. The Gevaert are also making a non-flam film in their factory in Belgium. The films are said to be non-explosive and have been approved by a number of censorship authorities. Raw Film Supply Company will occupy booth seventeen at the coming New York convention.

Vol. IX June 13, 1914 No. 23

To the Members of the International Motion Picture Association

GENTLEMEN: It is no ordinary occasion on which you are met this year. No ordinary duties confront you.

You are threatened with a tyranny that strikes at the very foundations of your prosperity, that will mean extinction unless quickly and sternly dealt with—censorship.

It is for you to take immediate measures to place yourselves in the strongest possible position to combat that peril.

WHAT will those measures be?
Is there any doubt in the mind of any one of you as to what they should be?
Is it not plain to every one of you that everyone in the motion picture industry whose fortunes can in any way be affected by censorship should unite into one common alliance for the good of all?

THE time for such a union has come.
If you refuse it be sure that you have weighed well the consequences and are willing to take the responsibility for an act which may bring in its train untold calamity to yourselves and your fellow-exhibitors.

Do you prefer to submit passively to the consequences of censorship—higher prices, poorer pictures, perhaps bankruptcy for some of you?

IF this is your preference, what form of censorial injustice would you elect to have perpetrated upon you?
Local censorship?

Have you watched the censorial antics of Major Funkhouser, of Chicago, so ridiculous that he was taken to task for his nonsensicalities in open court by a United States Judge?

Have you considered that every community has its Funkhouser, and that every Funkhouser is eager to "serve" in such a capacity?

Will you have a Funkhouser for your king?

STATE censorship?

Have you familiarized yourselves with the process of manufacturing the "agitation" for the censorship law in Ohio, the facts behind the appointment of the censors in that state, their extravagancies at the expense of the people who put them in office?

Do you want to pay the board and hotel bills of state censors?

Do you desire to have a Mrs. Maude Murray Miller for your dictator?

NATIONAL censorship?

Do you understand what “political patronage” means?

Do you realize that fitness is the last qualification considered in appointment to an office over which the members of Congress have any control?

Do you know that such posts are awarded "for value received," "for services rendered," and that only those near and dear to the hearts of Congressmen ever reach them?

Do you wish to have politicians or politicians’ henchmen as your rulers?

ARE you aware that a Federal censorship law is no guarantee to you that you will be freed from state censorship laws in any state that chooses to maintain them on its statute books or place them there?

Do you recollect that the Judges in the United States District Court of Ohio, in the suit brought by the Mutual Film Corporation, held that motion picture films could not be regarded as articles of interstate commerce, while they were in use within the state, and expressly declared that the state law did not conflict with any Federal laws?

Do you realize that such a decision, if upheld by the United States Supreme Court, leaves each state free to legislate as it sees fit against motion picture films, regardless of the United States regulations?

ANSWER all these questions once and for all time in your own minds.
Italian Ministry Prepared to Reduce Cinema Tax—Pathé Buys Second Negative of “Nero” from Gloria—Pathé, Eclair and Others Refuse to Recognize Berlin Exhibitors’ Exchange

The Italian ministry has submitted to the Chamber of Deputies its new system of taxation, which includes particularly the proposition to tax the motion picture theatres. This, it is said, has been substantially modified, and certain classes of theatres exempted. The total revenue to the government by this tax will be 6,500,000 lira about ($1,200,000) instead of 7,500,000 lira, as formerly drawn up. Even so, the conditions of the tax are as essentially outrageous and oppressive.

A general coalition of the Italian cinematographic press to fight the tax threatened by the government upon the theatres, had a lamentable sequel. Only two journals sent representatives to the “Congress,” “Film” and “Cinéfilms,” both of Naples. Some bitter comments on the short-sighted commercialism of the press, which, some critics declare, has produced a deadly rivalry equally injurious among the manufacturers, have been the result of the fiasco.

$20,000 for Five Films

Twenty thousand dollars for a series of five pictures and a percentage of the profits is said to have been the price offered by Morgana Film, of Italy, for the services of Giovanni Grasso, the famous Italian actor. Maria Carmi, the noted Cines star, has been engaged by the same company for a series when the Grasso pictures are finished.

A company has been formed in Naples, Italy, for handling motion picture scenarios, examining and appraising them and submitting them to the various “maisons d’édition.” A legal staff has been retained to conduct negotiations with the authors’ associations for the film rights to various plays and novels. “Cinografia” is the name of the new company.

“Gif Blas,” the famous Parisian publication, has decided to publish a motion picture department every week.

Two new motion picture trade journals, “Le Cri du Cinema” and “La Petite Presse Cinematographique” have made their appearance in Paris. Italy, too, has given birth to a new one, “Ars E Cinema,” published at Naples. During the spring a trade journal, published in Roumania and destined for circulation in the Balkan states, arrived. Still they come!

Pathé Buys Rights to Nero

Reports from Paris reveal Pathé Frères as the purchaser of the second negative of the Gloria production, “Nero and Agrippina,” with the details of which this department dealt a few weeks ago. Pathé, it is understood, has obtained the rights to “Nero” for North America, including Canada, and France, Holland, Switzerland, Greece, Albania, Montenegro, Turkey and Turkey in Asia. The price paid is said to have been a staggerer.

Proving Safety Appliances

An interesting demonstration of the effectiveness of certain attachments for projectors and types of projectors to prevent a fire in the operator’s booth of a theatre took place recently before the official commission appointed by the ministry of Belgium.

A royal decree recently put into effect a stringent series of laws against inflammable film that the manufacturers and exhibitors united to convince the ministry of the needlessness of such extraordinary precautions. Numerous demonstrations of the power of these devices automatically to stop the machine in case of accident were made in the presence of the commission. The board is reported to have been favorably surprised and impressed by the efficacy of the apparatus shown them.

Rents Crush Swiss Exhibitors

The crisis among the exhibitors of Switzerland has resolved itself into a feud between the exhibitors and their landlords.

The former declare that rents are so exorbitant they cannot afford to use pictures of the grade necessary to retain their clientele. One instance is quoted, where an exhibitor was compelled to pay $4,000 a year rent for a theatre seating from 200 to 350 persons. Considering the difference between prices in Europe and those in America, the rent is more prohibitive than it seems at first glance.

Princesses Praise Pictures

The Grand Duchess Marie Adélaide of Luxembourg, her five sisters, the Princesses Charlotte, Hilda, Antoinette, Elisabeth and Sophie, and the entire court, visited the Cinema Parisiana in the ducal capital recently, to witness an exhibition of the film made on the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen of Belgium to Luxembourg in April. Their Highnesses expressed themselves as highly delighted with the performance in an acknowledgment conveyed to M. Marzen, the director, through the marshal of the court, Baron de Ritter.

Producers Won’t Recognize Exchange

Several of the leading manufacturers of Berlin, as well as those of other countries with offices in the German capital, have refused to recognize the projected exchange which the German exhibitors have talked of forming for renting films among themselves. Pathé, Eclair, Mesteser-Films, Otto Schmidt, Gaumont and Nordisk Films have served notice publicly that they will not recognize such an association.

The Bison 101 photodrama, “In the Jungle” is reported to have enjoyed great popularity in Berlin, deserving mention in the foreign journals along with Max Reinhardt’s latest masterpiece, “A Venetian Night,” with Maria Carmi, the Cines actress, in the principal role, and the Continental’s “The House of Mystery,” called “the best detective film ever made.”

Film “Treasure Island”

Robert Louis Stevenson’s “Treasure Island” has been reproduced as a three-reel photodrama, and was recently acquired by an English firm for exclusive exhibition in the United Kingdom.

A command performance of the Captain Scott pictures was recently given at Buckingham Palace, before the King and Queen.

American Pictures in London

Thanhouser’s “The Woman Pays” (Maud Fealy Features), Edison’s “The Brass Bowl” and “The Price of the Necklace,” “Love and Vengeance” (Universal-Sterling), Essanay’s Shadows” and “Her Fighting Chance” (American) are among the current American films to be highly commended by the British trade press.

Bishop, Pessers & Company, Ltd., are established at 29a Charing Cross Road, London, W.C., as the sole European agents for the Balboa productions, made at Long Beach, Cal.

The Celio picture, “The History of a Pierrot,” which has encountered great success everywhere on the continent, has reached England and is being widely advertised.

Edison Posters Praised

The posters issued by the Edison Company in connection with their films have elicited the commendations of several of the English trade journals. Incidentally, their film, “A Romance of the Everglades,” is cordially praised.

Giants-White Sox Tour of the World

The Greatest Ball ‘Fan’ Made the Trip

When the “greatest ball fan on earth” saw that the teams were really going to make the trip he turned into a “Bug.” He rode the brake beams, he stowed away, he begged, he worked, in fact he did anything and everything to get to the games. He got there and he rooted. It was not just what they were used to in foreign lands and he sure surprised them. The study of the faces of the bleacherites when the bug was present is a scream. He gets everyone into a pickle and the situations give a touch of comedy that will keep your patrons splitting their sides with laughter. In addition the players get into some funny mix-ups. One of them nearly marries a million dollar widow only to find that she is a married woman!

The Most Thrilling Features Were Caught

The camera man was on the job all the time. During the taking of the pictures of the Hurricane on the Pacific the waves washed right over the camera affording a realistic thrill that is wonderful. Hans Lohert runs the bases in a race against a cattle horse. The human monkeys in North Guinea throw coconuts from the tops of trees at the tourists. The ride that Germany Sheaffer took down the side of a mountain at Hong Kong is the most wonderfully exciting ride you could imagine, giving at the same time a most beautiful scenic view of the harbor and town.

The Most Interesting Travel Picture Ever Made

The film is full of true-to-life scenes not only of the native life in the places visited but of all the most wonderfully grand scenery on the way. You see actual living conditions in Japan, Hong Kong, Manila, India, Australia, Egypt, Naples, Rome, France, etc. One of the most beautiful waterfalls in the world; the great Libyan desert and the Mosque of Mohamed Ali; the tomb of Napoleon; the Khedive of Egypt watching his first game of baseball; the King of England at the game in London; the Pope, who granted a personal interview to the tourists; and the great carnival of Nice, in which the players took a prominent part, are all shown. It is truly a wonderful picture.

Why Don't YOU Make Money With

The Perils of Pauline

JUST IN TIME

Improved Standards

The time has passed when “anything as long as it is a motion picture” can draw crowds who will make money for the Exhibitor. The pictures that are successful today are those that carry a punch in every foot of film—pictures like The Perils of Pauline. This immense production has been sweeping the country and making a name for the houses showing it. The exhibitors report record-breaking box-office receipts and in many instances they have requested a return date so they could show it to those who were unable to get into the theatre on the first showing. This great record is the result of the improved standards set by the Eclectic Film Co. in the making of thrilling, realistic pictures that are clean and wholesome and at the same time intensely gripping.

Eclectic Satisfaction

If we had the space we would like to print every letter we have received from the exhibitors telling about their experience and their entire satisfaction with The Perils of Pauline. It is more than satisfaction. It is enthusiasm. We knew when we started to produce The Perils of Pauline that it would be a great big success, but we had no idea that it would run as strong as it is. We can safely say that we have broken every booking record with this serial and the end is not in sight. Every episode brings to us the tale of immense crowds that in some instances could not be accommodated. Every episode emphasizes more and more strongly the fact that any exhibitor who is not showing this feature is losing money that is going to his competitor.

The STAIN

A Dramatization of the Great Novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert H. Davis

Pathé Frères Surpassed Themselves Making This For Us

Rarely if ever have we been given the opportunity to offer to the exhibitors a photo play of the strength of The Stain. The cast is the strongest possible to gather together. The story of the Bank clerk who steals money from the bank to enable him to study for a lawyer, deserts his wife and small daughter and finally, under an assumed name, becomes a noted judge, only to have his castle come tumbling about his ears at the time when he thinks he is most successful, is replete with dramatic incidents of heart-gripping interest that will keep an audience on edge from start to finish. It is a clean, wholesome story that will prove a big puller in any theatre.

"The Cream of American and European Studios"
The Making of a Projector

Upon the Projection Machine, in the Last Analysis, Depends the Fate of the Motion Picture
Before the Public Tribunal—Some Facts Concerning the Making of the Powers 6-A Cameragraph

AMONG the numerous industrial establishments of New York, special notice should be taken of the Nicholas Power Company, the manufacturing plant which occupies two large buildings located in the lower part of the city, where the Powers Cameragraph No. 6-A, is produced.

It is a matter of general knowledge that motion pictures, which give insight into real life, are a wonderful invention, but to get an exact idea of the skill and mechanical ability that their presentation demands, it is necessary to see how projecting apparatus is manufactured.

The public found at a motion picture performance not only insists on the reproduction of interesting scenes, but also demands that the pictures be thrown on the screen without flicker, so harmful to the sight, and that all the pictures should stand out sharply and clearly, with profiles as bold as if they had been cut with the finest chisel.

This effect, of course, depends on the kind of pictures that form each film, but no matter how perfect they may be, the effect would be entirely lost if the apparatus does not project with absolute regularity, throwing each picture on the screen in the same place.

The cinematographic films generally used at present are ten thousand feet in length and contain sixteen pictures per foot, each picture being separated by means of a thin white line. These photos measure 1/4 inches of the length of the film and one inch of its width; so that the figures may be distinguished from all sides of the premises, the theatre should not be very large to require a screen of 9x12 feet. This means that the size of same would have to be increased 192 diameters and the difference of the hundredth part of an inch in the position of one of the pictures at the back of the projecting lens (a matter, at first sight, of no consequence) upon being multiplied in said proportion, gives a displacement more than sufficient to blur the outline of the best photograph.

This data will readily enable one to realize how perfectly adjusted the mechanism of these projecting machines must be, but there are also other points worthy of consideration.

To make the animated figures appear natural, the pictures have to be changed at the rate of 16 times per second. To attain this end, the film has to travel, not continually, but alternately, at small leaps, so that each picture should remain on the screen without motion during the time necessary for the eye to get all the details, and then the change has to be made as rapidly as possible with a single movement. This makes the squaring very difficult to secure with a defective machine.

The result depends largely on two mechanisms: One that produces the intermissions in the movement of the film, and another, called a revolving shutter, which prevents the passage of the light during the extremely short time taken by the change of the pictures, leaves the screen dark while the film is in motion and illuminates it while the film stops.

These two movements of the film and the revolving shutter have to take place precisely at the same time, and they should be rapid, so that the intermission in the screen should not be noticed.

THE Nicholas Power Company satisfied themselves from the beginning of their business, that to produce perfect machines it was absolutely necessary to manufacture all the parts themselves. With this end in view, they have equipped their factory with really wonderful machinery for its skilful design and precision.

The materials arrive at the factory in raw condition; the steel and the brass in bars, plates and ingots, which are examined and analyzed with the greatest care before being transferred to the foundry and tool-machines, as the case may be.

Most of these tool-machines are of the type called automatic, i.e. the machines intended for making screws take the metal in long bars or rods, the diameter of which corresponds with the head of the screws, and turn out the parts in a finished condition, doing all the threading, polishing, cutting each screw in accordance with the size required, forming the head and making the groove for the screw driver.

These machines work without any attention whatever. When the work on one bar is finished, a bell rings and the operator has to insert another bar. There is nothing very difficult about the manufacture of screws, as they are only used for fastening two or more parts which are not intended to move, but the real difficulty lies in turning out perfect live parts.

Take, for instance, the intermittent movement mechanism. We already know how it works and the way the smallest defect increases in the projection. The parts comprising this mechanism are, in fact, the most important features of the projecting apparatus. It should be borne in mind that these projectors are constantly kept at work in many theatres of the large cities during fourteen hours of each day in the whole year, and therefore, should be capable of standing heavy service, not only for a day or a week, but during many months.

Consequently, these parts are made of the hardest and strongest steel that the smelting industry affords. This method demands that the steel should be treated in accordance with special formulas which experience has proven to be the best; after the steel is smelted it has to go through twenty different processes before the parts are finished.

But the most interesting of all is the final process, which takes place after the finished and polished parts have been tempered. For final test, an extremely delicate micrometric gauge is used and the only difference allowed in the diameter or other measurement of the parts must not exceed one ten thousandth of an inch.
How can we get an idea of the measurement represented by one ten thousandth part of an inch? Very easily, by a practical demonstration. Put on the part that is being measured by the delicate micrometric gauge a human hair of medium thickness. The indicating hand will immediately start to move on the dial, which is divided into one-hundredth parts instead of sixty as in the case of the clock, and will travel about twenty-five lines, clearly indicating that the thickness of the hair is about twenty-five thousandth part of an inch.

The reader should imagine for a minute that one of his hairs could be divided into twenty-five boards of the same thickness and that each one of these boards would represent the maximum difference allowed in the size of one of the parts of the Powers Camerograph No. 6-A. This is the only way to understand the accuracy of the apparatus.

With regard to the durability of the machine, letters have been received by the Nicholas Power Company from many exhibitors and others stating that they had constantly used them constantly for a year and more without any repairs whatever.

The creator of this machine is Mr. Nicholas Power, president and founder of the company, and that bears his name and the offices of which are located in 90 Gold street, New York.

BUFFALO COUNCIL O.K.'S
OLYMPIC

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Buffalo, N. Y., June 4.

By a majority of one of the board of councilmen, last Thursday, passed an amendment to the ordinance recently passed by the Board of Aldermen which practically legalizes the reconstruction of the Olympic Theatre.

The amendment says that no building constructed prior to ten years before January 1, 1914, shall come within the provisions of the eight-foot court and other protective ordinances if plans for improvements are filed with the bureau of buildings within 30 days of the passage of this amendment, providing the Bureau of Buildings has decided the building safer as remodeled.

This resolution was adopted by the vote of Councilman Mills, who had been absent at previous meetings of the board. Those who had been opposing the Olympic amendment had figured Mills as being with them and it was understood that on account of Mills' supposed opposition, hope for favorable action in the councilmen had been abandoned.

Al. Schlesinger has resigned as manager of the Olympic. The management is now in the hands of Messrs. Jake Rosen and M. Slotkin, formerly of the Plaza Theatre.

Atsco, Inc., Opens Second Factory

A TSCO, INC., manufacturers of the Radium Gold Fibre Screen, have found their St. Louis factory to be too small to take care of all the orders for this screen and have decided to open another in East Orange,
New Jersey. From this site they can better take care of eastern customers.

The new building has 15,000 square feet of floor space, and is three stories in height. It is located at 13-17-19-21-23 Halstead street.

In referring to the popularity of these screens, Walter Hoff Seely, chairman of the board of directors of Atsco, Inc., said recently:

"Light from a motion picture machine is not white when it reaches the screen it's golden. If you use a white surface with a golden light, you have the flickering glare which results in a financial loss. We blend the golden light with the golden screen. When it is installed by our experts, it is sure to give any exhibitor satisfaction."

Wilkes-Barre Exhibitors Aid Safety Campaign

Tracton Company Claims Adjuster Acknowledges Aid Motion Picture Theatres Have Rendered—Charge Is $5 to $10 a Week

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 4.

The motion picture theatres of Wyoming Valley have done much in putting "safety first" messages before the public, according to E. L.
Lindermuth, claims adjuster for the company. For years Mr. Lindermuth and T. A. Wright, general manager, have been waging a safety crusade and they have tried every means to bring their messages before the people.
They have gained the best results through slides used in picture houses.

The Wilkes-Barre Railway Company has abandoned every other method, and is devoting time and money to slides for the "movie" houses. At the last convention of the claims adjusters of the various cities and states, Mr. Lindermuth told of his success with slides and many of the delegates decided to take the proposition up with their companies.

Mr. Lindermuth believes in short, snappy sentences. He tries to make the reading matter come straight from the shoulder and appeal to the masses.

In some houses the traction company pays $10 a week for the privilege of showing the slides, while others only charge $5. Mr. Lindermuth believes the "movie" is the best place to wage a "safety" campaign and says he is willing to express his opinion to any traction company that might desire to know the outcome of the campaigns he has waged. He says his "safety" slides prove attractive to the patron, appeal to the exhibitor from a financial standpoint, and secure the desired end for his company.

J. F. FORESTAL.
Advertising That Brings Returns

By George E. Quisenberry

The Exhibitor Can Advertise with Circular Literature, in the Street Cars, in the Newspapers and on His Own Screen, and by Making Each Kind of Advertising Support the Other Forage Ahead—This Is How One Exhibitor Is Doing It

WHAT form of advertising offers the greatest return to the owner of a motion-picture theatre?

Many owners have pondered that question, no doubt, and, fearful to risk their money in unknown, untried methods, have failed to advertise as they should.

And the result, most likely, has been a failure to obtain the fullest possible profits for the house.

Out in Kansas City, Mo., a home theatre in the residence district has worked out the problem. And the answer is: Diversified policy, the distribution of literature to the houses near the theatre, newspaper advertising, street-car advertising, and film advertising.

And by using those four agencies, which will be explained in detail, the house has prospered and so holds its patrons that it has changed its policy recently and raised its prices to ten and twenty cents.

THE theatre is the Alamo, Thirty-fourth and Main streets; the manager Joseph Spero, and the owners the Standard Amusement Company, operating three other houses in that city.

The new policy is that of a single show a night extending over three hours.

The new prices, twenty cents for adults and ten cents for children, are almost a novelty in a home-theatre.

Mr. Spero has worked out his advertising problem along somewhat the following lines:

“I have a beautiful, well-equipped theatre, cozy and comfortable—one of the best in the city. The district in which it is located is a normal one.

“I have a normal capacity for seating 800 persons and I must fill my house practically every night.

“How can I best disseminate to my patrons the coziness, the beauty, and the comfort of my theatre? And once I have told them that, how can I induce them to leave their money at my box-office?”

Mr. Spero cogitated. First he must create a desire to see his theatre itself. He must do that broadly and in big, sweeping strokes.

He must not get down too much to details in this campaign—no, he must so word his advertisements that they would startle his possible patrons into thinking of his show house.

HE MUST MAKE THEM READ HIS ADS.

All right—that suggested street-car advertising—a big, broad space, devoting only a few words in big type and colors to his theatre. “The South Side Social Center, Highest Standard Photoplays with Full Concert Orchestra,” he wrote.

An advertising psychology told him that ad carried a “punch” and would create in the reader’s mind a wonder concerning the theatre itself.

In his first street-car displays Mr. Spero made a mistake and admits it today.

He tried to tell too much and it didn’t bring results.

The corporation for which he manages the Alamo also owns three other houses.

Mr. Spero tried to advertise them all—and failed.

His space was so cluttered with little type and solid printed matter that the street-car rider did not read them.

And his money was spent almost uselessly.

But he has changed now—a single, broad statement suffices—and brings results. It is carried daily in about 200 cars on six of the most widely used lines that operate through the residence district.

The first result obtained, what next? The residents of his district had learned that he had a pretty good theatre but didn’t know much about the productions.

THREE agencies presented themselves and Mr. Spero availed himself of them all.

The newspaper—a small 1½-inch display ad in both afternoon and morning papers that went into the homes. (In this advertising, all of the corporation’s theatres are mentioned.) These ads are printed in the regular theatrical column and have been successful in attracting patrons to each of the houses.

Another agency was the photo screen in his own theatre. He uses that as much as possible, calling attention in reading notices screened that his advertisements may be seen in certain papers and in certain cars and telling of the coming program changes.

BUT what is probably his most unique bit of advertising is his weekly program.

It is a little eight-page booklet, carrying an announcement of the theatre itself on the front page and a calendar on the back page.

The interior pages are given over to the daily programs of the week, giving in detail the films to be shown each day.

Five thousand of these booklets are distributed on Saturday of each week by boys hired for the work. They cover an area of about twenty square blocks and place them under front doors, in the mail boxes or wherever the books may be found easily.

"The result has been astonishing," Mr. Spero sums up his booklet advertising.

"They are not destroyed and thrown away as you might suppose—they are kept on library tables in the homes or by the women in their pocket-books, a constant reminder of my show."

The writer of this article was visiting near the Alamo Theatre one night. During the evening the subject of motion pictures came up and someone suggested that everybody go over to the Alamo.

Some objected, but finally the lady of the household settled the matter by referring to Mr. Spero's program which she had kept carefully in her desk. "Such and such a film is there to-night," she said; "it ought to be good."

And finally the crowd went.

But if the Alamo program hadn't been handy, no one would have gone!

"GOOD, clean advertising pays," Mr. Spero said recently. "The success of the Alamo is due to two things—we have offered the best films possible."

"But better than that, we have let our patrons know that we had the best films. We backed up our show with an appeal that created a desire to see."

The Alamo has adopted the new policy of giving but one show a night.

Commencing at 7:30 o'clock with a short orchestra concert, three single reels are shown, then an intermission, followed by a special feature running five or six reels. The show closes about 10:30 o'clock and the patrons have an entire evening of amusement.

The admission is ten cents for children and twenty cents for adults.

DO EXHIBITORS WANT CENSORSHIP?

William Leyser, Marlowe Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. "A National Board of Censorship, such as that which exists at present, is absolutely essential in holding the manufacturer to certain limitations, but a local board is a thing of a different nature. I believe that every manager is capable of the capacity of a local censor, in other words I believe that every manager should be his 'own board of censorship.' His patrons' wants and desires he should know. He knows the class of patronage that comes to his theatre.

In fact, it depends entirely upon him to entertain and please his audience, and such pictures which need certain restrictions he can make. Being fully conversant with the current films, he is in a position to be the best judge of the moral, educational and entertaining films, and can tell at a glance whether they are in need of censorship, and whether they are good, bad and indifferent.

"A word regarding a suggestion for the elimination of controversies between exchange men and exhibitors regarding damaged films. I would suggest that a slip made out by the inspector accompany every shipment of films. Upon arrival, this slip should be signed by the manager or operator as to the condition of the show, then if any damage is done, it would be easy to fix the blame. As it is now many managers as being blamed for damaged films would have had nothing to do with the destruction."

Joseph Donegan, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.: "I favor state censorship because it means that I will have full protection for both my house and my patrons."

"I cannot be sure to-day that any picture sent me may be absolutely clean—may be such that it won't offend the women and children who make up a large part of my audience."

P. A. Engler, manager local branch, Mutual Movies, Kansas City, Mo.: "Film censorship as it is handled in Kansas City is satisfactory to me."

"The censorship problem must be worked out, if at all, through a national board."

Lawrence H. Smith, manager of the new Lyric Motion Picture Theatre in Chattanooga, Tenn.: "I do not believe that any person or set of persons should have the right to decide arbitrarily and finally whether a picture is good or bad. I do think the National Board of Censorship is a good thing and if it came to the point of absolute necessity of censors, I would prefer the National Board, where the decisions will be final, and finally recognized in each state and city."

E. Meadows, manager of the Special Feature department of the General Film Company in Buffalo:

"It is the unanimous opinion among picture men that such interference on the part of local authorities is acted purely and entirely by motives of graft."

"Censorship, so far as the trade is concerned, can only be a benefit when it is exercised in a constructive manner, that is to say, when real intelligent criticism is offered for the benefit of manufacturers."

Daniel J. Savage, new general manager of the Buffalo, N. Y., branch of the General Film Company:

"I am absolutely against local censorship."

"I am strongly in favor of a National Board of Censorship and local censors and officials should abide by the decision of this board."

"From what I understand, the whole movement is nothing but a political one, and makes a place for some one of the 'faithful for whom a job must be found by the local boss.'"

J. P. Freuler, of the Mutual Film Company, when asked whether he was in favor of state censorship, said that he was not, and was against censorship of any kind.

Charles H. Phillips, secretary of the Citizens' Commission on Motion Pictures, Milwaukee, replied as follows:

"I consider censorship unconstitutional and subjected to political influence. I consider the present mode of censorship now existing in Milwaukee sufficient. I con-

WHERE $1,000,000 MYSTERIES ARE MADE

It is merely a little journey to the home of “The Million-Dollar Mystery,” and a stroll through the grounds with C. J. Hite, the head of the Thanhouser company, with pauses here and there to take in some little known, but interesting features of the “works.”

Nobody needs to be told that the Thanhouser ‘hacienda’ is forty-five minutes from Broadway in the town of New Rochelle, which was discovered by George M. Cohan, who announced the fact in a musical comedy.

A short walk down Main street brings one to a distinctive group of concrete buildings, the home of Thanhouser films, and a step further down Thanhouser lane took him to the offices of C. J. Hite, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation.

Mr. Hite was busy signing a stack of checks and outside his door a swarm of players chattered in pleasant anticipation of receiving the checks.

C. J. HITE, PRESIDENT OF THANHOUSER, AND THE DUKE OF MANCHESTER, WHO RECENTLY PLAYED IN A SCENE FOR THE FORTHCOMING THANHOUSER SERIAL, “THE $1,000,000 MYSTERY”

M

R. HITE is decidedly a busy man. While he signed checks his directors, one after another, came in to report the progress of their work; and once in a while a player edged in to obtain official consideration of his woes or his dreams, as the case happened to be.

With hardly a glance upward from his desk, Mr. Hite disposed of the complaints and it was noticeable from the way the visitors walked on air as they left his magnificently furnished office that Mr. Hite believes in the motto: “Always leave them smiling when you say good-bye.”

Then Roy MacCardell, author of the “Mr. and Mrs. Jarr” series in The New York “World,” and father of a large and growing family of photo-plays, walked in with his wife and a party of “studio tourists.” It was Saturday afternoon and Mr. Hite felt free to escort the party through his plant.

A visit first was paid to Thanhouser Lane, where some interior sets of “The Million-Dollar Mystery” are in position. With pardonable pride Mr. Hite pointed to rare tapestries, statuary of classic design, a Tudor staircase which was recently taken intact from a country house in England, and a library lined with shelves filled with real books and not the customary array of faked bindings.

Mr. Hite then led the way to the new fireproof, concrete and hollow tile property room, where in a few weeks all scenery and properties not in actual use will be stored.

Luncheon time was about over, but Mr. Hite took his guests to the dining-room, where Thanhouser employees may obtain well-cooked food for half the price they would have to pay elsewhere.

The next person the party met after leaving the dainty waitresses of the lunch-room, was Al. J. Jennings, ex-bandit, two-handed gunman, survivor of six years in a Federal prison for robbing the mail, and finally paroled and restored to citizenship by President Roosevelt. The Life of Al Jennings as written by himself and Will Irwin in "The Saturday Evening

Post," now is being put into a six-reel picture under the title of "Beating Back."

"AND now we come to the technical end of things," smiled Mr. Hite, leading the way across Than-houser Lane into the developing and mechanical departments. "The first thing I want to show you is an invention of W. C. Nelson, our chief mechanic, who did all the millwrighting in the plant and, in his spare moments in the last six months, completed the duplex printer which we have in this corner.

"This is the Nelson Duplex Printer," explained Mr. Hite. "It is opcerated by an independent motor and one man can print two reels of film at the same time. It is compact and accurate and is one of the few printing machines which print the film at right angles with the light. Most machines, as you may be aware, print the film while it presents an arc-shaped surface to the light."

In a room off the machine shop
Mr. Hite pointed to two barrels, one of which was filled with what appeared to be coarse rice.

"That barrel is filled with perforations from the thousands of feet of film which go through our battery of perforators," explained Mr. Hite.
"The other barrel is filled with the cuttings of unused bits of film.

"The film ends and perforations are sent to a laboratory where the photographic silver in them is extected. The celluloid is used over again for various purposes. The salvage nets us more than $5,200 a year or about $100 a week, so you see it is well worth our while to keep the floors clean."

"YOU will notice," continued Mr.
Hite, dipping his hand into the barrel of tiny white perforations,
"that each one of these punched out pieces of film is of exactly the same size as its neighbor. Under the microscope and the caliper the same thing holds true. That means that our perforators are running smoothly and that the film when it runs over the cogs in the projection machine will not 'wobble.'

"Attention to just these apparently trivial details has made for the success of Thanhouzer films."

Mr. Hite next took his guests down along a corridor of drying drums, where thousands of feet of films revolved under the blasts of innumerable electric fans.

"Don't go away just yet," suggested
Mr. Hite, when his guests displayed an inclination to make their exit believing that they had been shown all that was to be seen. "You haven't visited 'The House of Mystery' yet."

Mr. Hite called his chauffeur and then saw that we were safely tucked away in the Thanhouzer limousine.

NEW ROCHELLE is a beautiful little town where Americans live in American houses, eat American food and, in general, live blameless American lives. Perched on a rolling knoll in the heart of the residential district of this fashionable suburb of New York, the visitors to the Thanhouser studio saw a great mansion which
Mr. Hite, with pardonable pride, pointed to as the most expensive 'prop' ever acquired by a motion picture company.

"That," he explained, "is 'The House of Mystery.'"

The visitors, before entering the $290,000 "House of Mystery," rolled past a long rambling garage through the great park surrounding the house, past fountains and flowerbeds, pansy gardens and rows of shrubbery and carefully tended terraces, up to the porte-cochere entrance to the mansion.

And the interior, it could be seen at a glance, is furnished in keeping with the imposing exterior of the mansion. Priceless Persian rugs cover the entrance hall. In the dining-room heavy carven furniture groan under the weight of the silver service and in every room on the top floors it is apparent that exceptionally good taste has been used in the selection of the works of art which eventually will be seen in the completed film, "The Million-Dollar Mystery."

They do things on a big scale at the Thanhouser plant. If a certain effect is to be achieved, cost is no consideration. Month by month the plant continues to grow. Recently carpenters and masons worked day and night erecting a new stage. This month the new fireproof 'prop' room will be finished. Meanwhile a baker's dozent of directors keep shocks of people on the run, and the cameras click merrily on.

Robbers Kill Cleveland Exhibitor

Second to be Shot Down in Six Months—$500 Taken from Victim—Board of Trade Will Take Up Shagrin and Goldman Cases

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Cleveland, O., June 4.

The exhibitor's fraternity of Cleveland lost its second member last week by the hand of the hold-up man. Leo C. Goldman, manager of the Monarch Theatre, at East 16th avenue and East 105th street, was shot and robbed of $500, May 29, on his way home from his theatre.
In December Samuel Shagrin, another manager whose theatre was located on East Nineteenth-third street, was killed and robbed. Goldman never have been captured.

Goldman has been at the Monarch for several months and it is believed by the police that the men who held him up and killed him because he refused to hand over his night's re-cipts, may be the same who murdered Shagrin. Goldman was a member of the Exhibitors' Board of Trade, of this city, and that organization will continue its effort to capture the men who committed the crime.

Since the shooting of Shagrin last December the theatre managers who live at some distance from their theatre's have been cautious about exposing themselves to attack when returning home at night. Goldman, however, lived but a few blocks from his theatre and was accustomed to walk home.

Pathé Will Issue Film Daily

Two Hundred Feet a Day Will Be Issued and Weekly Will Continue—Orders from Exhibitors Are Coming Fast

The Pathé Daily News, to be put in circulation on Monday, June 8, will, besides marking an epoch in the motion picture industry, realize the plans of those, who a year ago were laughed at for even thinking of such an idea. It hardly seems possible that we are now to have a news daily in pictures. In the morning a man can read of some event going on in the world, and then the same afternoon or night he can go to see the coverage in moving picture form.

The wonderful organization and large equipment of the Pathé company, which has sixty offices and studios in the world and thirty-seven camera-men in the United States alone, make this proposition a reality.
They are able to receive, develop, print and send out films by mail in one day. The mail is always used for such purposes.

The daily will be about two hundred feet in length and at the end of the week the exhibitor may show all the dailies together, thus making them into a weekly. The usual Pathé weekly will not be discontinued. Of course, the daily and the weekly will continue to be much the same news, and one house will not show them both.

The Pathé company have already received many applications for the daily and from the interest that is being shown its success is assured.
The Growth of Eclectic in a Year

From a Concern Practically Unknown, to One with a National Reputation. Operating Twenty-two Exchanges, Is Its Record—"The Perils of Pauline" and How It Has Been Spread Broadcast Over the Country

O f all the advances in this remarkable year of advancement in the film industry, none has been more pronounced and impressive than that of the Eclectic Film Company.

Less than a year ago this firm had just sprung into existence. It was little more than a name, like other new concerns then and now. Today Eclectic has a vital business meaning to every exhibitor in this country and Canada.

A year ago, the Eclectic Film Company had no branch offices; to-day the company maintains nineteen well-known and very active exchanges, and such still in its rapid growth that before this publication goes to press, three more will have been added, making a total to date of twenty-two. These additional exchanges are located in Denver, Nassau Building; Kansas City, 925 Main street; Omaha, 1312 Farnam street, and are now open, in addition to the following offices: Atlanta, 220 Rhodes Building; Dallas, 202 Andrews Building; Chicago, 5 South Wabash avenue; Minneapolis, 109 Kazota Building; New York, 115 East Twenty-third street; Boston, 3 Tremont Row; Los Angeles, 114 East Seventh street; St. Louis, 3210 Locust street; San Francisco, 67 Turk street; Syracuse, 214 East Fayette street; Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty avenue; Cincinnati, 217 East Fifth street; Cleveland, 622 Prospect avenue, S. E.; Portland, 392 Burnside street; Philadelphia, 1235 Vine street; New Orleans, 910 Gravier street; Washington, D. C., Seventh and E streets, N. W.

These exchanges are managed by many of the oldest and best known film men in the United States.

T he Eclectic Film Company was formed to release prominent European films in black and white and natural color process, and become quickly known for the high-class quality of its releases. Its biggest reputation, however, was scored through "The Perils of Pauline," featuring in the east Pearl White, Crane Wilbur, Paul Panzer, Francis Caryl and others.

This coalition of the motion picture with the daily press is one of the most important and yet logical developments in the entire history of this industry. The Eclectic Company in the first place scored a "scoop" by uniting with the Hearst newspapers, which cover the big centers of the country with circulations that extend around them with large circulations in each instance and which are read by several millions of people. Also included in this big circulation are all those papers which carry the Hearst news service. More than sixty papers therefore are now running the story of "The Perils of Pauline" at the present time, and more are being added to the list every week. The installments of the story are carried every Sunday by each of these newspapers. Every two weeks the films are released so that they can be booked immediately following the appearance of the serial in the newspapers. Advanced slides are used in the theatres announcing the appearance of the pictures and also calling attention to the newspapers carrying the story.

B ack of "The Perils of Pauline" has been maintained one of the biggest advertising campaigns to the public and in the trade papers ever carried on for a picture or a series of pictures. The above illustration is an instance of the outdoor advertising carried on in Greater New York and neighboring cities. Fifty-two huge painted signs were put out in New York City alone.

It is said that over five thousand theatres are now running "The Perils of Pauline."

In Europe the story of "The Perils of Pauline," which was produced in the Pathé studios at No. 1 Congress street, Jersey City, under special lease with the Eclectic Company, further arrangements have been made with Pathé Frères for the production there of other big features under the direction of the Eclectic Company.

The first of these American-made multiple-reel pictures is "The Stunt," in six parts, a dramatization of the thrilling novel by the well-known novelist, Forrest Halsey, in collaboration with Robert H. Davis, editor of "Munsey’s Magazine."

A nnouncement also has just been made by the Eclectic Company of the release of the "Giants-White Sox World Tour," a pictorial trip around the world, introducing baseball, comedy, fine scences, and many celebrities. An additional number of popular natural color prints are also being released.

In Europe a staff of agents is maintained by the Eclectic Company, one in each of the big English and Continental centres, whose duty it is to review the big European releases and secure American rights for the Eclectic Company to the most desirable. In each instance, these representatives are men who have an intimate knowledge of the American market. Before a final decision, however, is reached, a print of each picture is sent to this country and passed upon by the Eclectic offices before a purchasing decision is made.

Particular attention has been paid by the Eclectic Company to the quality of its advertising paper. All posters, heralds, etc., are supplied to the exhibitor at cost. All pictures released by the Eclectic Company are passed upon by the National Board of Censorship.
TRADE ON JACOB P. ADLER'S NAME

The announcement by Popular Plays and Players, Inc., of its first feature, a five-reel version of "Michael Strogoff," produced on a mammoth scale, by Lubin, with Jacob P. Adler in the title role, has suggested to several persons the possibility of trading on the name of the actor.

One company announces "Mr. Adler," making no distinction as to which Mr. Adler is meant.

A theatre in the upper part of New York City recently advertised by hand bills "The Bells" or 'The Murder of the Polish Jew' as played by the eminent actor, Jacob P. Adler," Jacob P. Adler does not appear in the picture, and was never on the speaking stage in "The Bells."

Adler, who is rated as a great romantic actor of world-wide reputation, and has in his repertoire more than one hundred plays, is under contract with Popular Plays and Players to appear only in their productions for two years. No other concern has a motion picture contract with Jacob P. Adler nor can a film drama be produced except by Popular Plays and Players, Inc.

UNIVERSITY TO USE FILMS

Cincinnati, June 4.

A combined lantern, reflexoscope and motion picture machine is to be installed in the University of Cincinnati this summer for the illustration of a series of scientific lectures, according to a recent announcement by President Charles W. Dabney. The Bureau of Social Economics, organized by Francis Holley, of Bryn Mawr, will arrange for the pictures.

Olcott and Company Going to Europe

Leave June 11 to be Gone Several Months—F. C. Gunning Goes as Assistant Director, Valentine Grant Leading Woman.

SID OLCCOTT, the producer of "100 per cent features," is preparing to make himself and company to foreign climes. Mr. Olcott has made quite a reputation for himself as a producer of international stories, although his name is not as well known to the public as are the names of his successful features. The first of this year Mr. Olcott organized his own company, with Valentine Grant playing the leads. In his seventeen weeks in Florida, Sid produced eight three-reel released features, which are now being released through Warner's Features, Inc.

Mr. Olcott is now working on some international productions in which part of the stories will be enacted in this country, part in foreign countries and part on the high seas, the same characters appearing all through the story.

On June 11, on the "Adriatic," Mr. Olcott and his company, headed by Miss Grant, will sail for Europe. F. C. Gunning, publicity man and film editor, who is best known to the exhibitors of the country as "Me," editor of the Eclair Bulletin, will accompany Mr. Olcott as assistant director. Mr. Gunning was for a year the sales and publicity manager of the Eclair-Universal Company and has been assistant general manager of Warner's Features, Inc., since the organization of that concern.

While with Warner's Mr. Gunning has been devoting his time to the purchasing and editing of the films and the preparation of the lithographs. With Mr. Olcott there will be a splendid opportunity for him to get first-hand experience in the actual manufacturing of features.

Mr. Olcott, Miss Grant, Mr. Gunning and the other members of the company will attend the exposition for the first three days, meeting their friends in the booths of the Warner company.

The company will spend a few weeks making scenes in London, on the Cornish coast and in the English provinces, and will then go to Ireland for two or three months.

In Ireland the company will make some scenes in Dublin and other Irish cities, in the beautiful Vale of Avoca, in the county of Wicklow, on and about the marvelously beautiful lakes of Killarney and in the other world-famed beauty spots of the Ould Sod. In the fall the company will spend some time in Paris and Southern France and will then either return to the states or spend the winter in Southern Europe.

"Sid" says that he is going to try to appear more in his own films in the future. The films with the Shamrock trade-mark bid fair to be very, very popular this year and deservedly so.

Albert Teitel is the "man at the helm" of the Multicolor Film Improving Company which has come to the fore through its work in the film improving industry. Mr. Teitel was the first to recognize the value of preserving motion picture films—of "making new films for old." He started about four years ago, long before people appreciated the necessity of a clear exhibition.

About two years ago he became connected with the Philadelphia branch of the General Film Company, and after only a few months' work with that organization the results were so visible as to cause wide comment and wonderful financial returns. He opened then another department at Twenty-third street, General Film, with good success.

Mr. Teitel then left the General Film Company to promote his own company—the Multicolor Film Improving Company. The work of this company needs no introduction.

Judging by the number of complimentary letters received from exhibitors, exchanges and manufacturers, the Feature Film Directory, published by the Novelty Slide Company, of 67 West Twenty-third street, New York, has proved to be a valuable booking guide. One theatre manager writes that with this directory at hand he can do his week's booking in a few hours, and without the necessity of making inquiries from one exchange to another.

This directory gives a listing of all feature productions released in the last three months; in addition, every feature exchange is listed according to its territory, together with the names of the features that each exchange handles. This directory is mailed gratis to all exhibitors on request.

This Lewis Pennant production will be continued to be announced under its present companion of "Rescued in the Clouds" so that it may not be confused with the Klaw & Erlanger release.

The picture as originally produced, together with the paper as originally lithographed, until further notice, will continue to be used.

CAST FOR "THE MASTER CRACKSMAN"

"The Master Cracksman," which is being directed by Harry Carey for the Progressive Motion Picture Corporation, is to have an exceptionally strong cast. The title role will be played by Mr. Carey himself.

He will be supported by Juliette Day, who played in "Every Woman," "The Yellow Jacket" and "Marrying Money"; Fern Foster, who appeared in "Montana" and in "The Heart of Alaska," and in pictures with Biograph; Marjorie Bonner, the original "Brinkey" girl, and in pictures with Reliance and Biograph; Louis Murrell, who played in "The Virginian," "Paid in Full," "Madame X" and "The Girl and the Pennant;" William H. Power, leading comedian with Anna Held for several years and co-star with Kitty Gordon in "Alma, Where Do You Live?" and in pictures with the Imp, Reliance and Biograph companies; Herbert Russell, who played in "In Missouri," "The Squaw Man," and in pictures with the Mutual Film Corporation; and Rex Burnett, who appeared in "The Heart of Alaska" and "Montana."

"A Warning from the Past." (Edison. Two reels. June 12.)—Mabel Truenele in a dual role; Herbert Prior and Yale Benner play the leads in this drama, which might be called reminiscent. Anne has a premonition that her husband will be thrown from his horse and killed—he was. Her great-granddaughter has the same premonition that her husband would die if he rode with his friend in his biplane; she pleads with him not to go, he doesn’t—his friend is killed. The beholder is always expecting to see Trevor thrown from his horse, and to see the other man thrown from his biplane, and he is somewhat disappointed when neither of these incidents happen before the camera. Otherwise the production is perfect.

"The Baited Trap." (Imp. Two reels. June 1.)—A drama featuring King Baggot. This piece, formerly ran at the Republic Theatre, New York, where the last few scenes were acted on the stage. Dennis leaves old Ireland and comes to America; he plans to send for his sweetheart, Nora, when he obtains enough money. Dennis is presented with some money by a white slaver and told to send for Nora. On her arrival she falls into the hands of the white slavers, but after quite a struggle she returns to her sweetheart and rescues her.

"The Forbidden Room." (Bison 101. Three reels. June 6.)—The feature of this picture is the mystery which throughout sustains the interest of the audience. The wonderful make-up of Pauline Bash will make an impression. Murdoch McQuarrie surpassed himself.

The child of a crazy woman is taken away from her by her brother, a doctor. Claiming to be a hypnotist, the doctor makes his niece attempt to kill a man she hates, while in a trance. Later the man is killed by the mother and the girl is blamed. The death of the mother proves the daughter’s innocence.

"The Air Torpedo." (Warner’s Features. Three reels.)—Excitement abounds in this story, which gives a fine idea of the superiority of the airship over the fastest water craft. The scenes brought out in the production are some of the most beautiful that have ever appeared on the film, and this is said without exaggeration.

The photography would be perfect if it were not for the light, which is noticeably poor in some spots; the picture at times seems light-struck. The picture contains a thrilling chase. An airship is following a motorboat, and finally when the air craft is just above the boat, the aviator drops a bomb on the boat and it is seen no more. The plot is lively and natural.

Young Crawford, heavily in debt, robs his father of the secret of his air torpedo. He gives the plans to a spy, who flies in a motorboat. He is pursued by his father, who, to save his papers, kills the man.

"The Soul of Honor." (Majestic. Two reels. May 31.)—A story of civil war times with none of the usual fighting and bloodshed. It is refreshing because of this, and the story will appeal to that large class who believe in upholding the honor of the family and the nation, at any cost. Henry Walthal, Blanche Sweet and Ralph Lewis form the cast there are only two others. The photography is clear and the Southern scenes are remarkably realistic.

The young Southern soldier delays in delivering a message, in order to see his wife. Because of this the battle is lost. The father learns of it and tells the young man that the only thing for him to do is to take his own life, which he does. The old man reloads his gun and his comrades think that he died a hero’s death.

"The Doctor’s Testimony." (Victor. Two reels. June 5.)—A two part drama featuring Florence Lawrence and Matt Moore. There is the interesting spectacle of a short circuit occurring in a room that is otherwise dark. The effect given is a thriller of the best sort. The story is partly detective, though no detective appears; the criminal is really the detective. The photography is up to the standard. Most all of the sets are interiors.

Ralph Dean dies of heart failure. His doctor has the case of John Preston, which if produced, will convict him. He tries to induce Mrs. Preston to elope with him, threatening to expose her husband, but he is accidentally killed by touching an electric wire.

"A Tragedy of the Orient." (Broncho. Two reels. June 10.)—California affords ideal scenery for pictures supposed to be enacted in Japan. The scenes, action and characters of this picture would lead one to believe that he was in the heart of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, instead of our own California. A capable Japanese cast performs, which lends added realism to the picture.

An American marries a Japanese girl. Kato, her former lover, causes him to be mobbed and killed. But Kisso-o avenges her husband’s death and stabs Kato.

Chain of Feature Exchanges in View

Allied Features, Inc., Formed for Project—Exclusive Program Will Be Handled—Herbert Lubin General Manager—Plans Announced

TO establish a chain of exchanges throughout the Dominion of Canada and the United States is the project of The Allied Features, Inc., incorporated last week under the laws of New York. The duty problem has hitherto prevented any such international business, though geographically it was a natural outcome. The new corporation has evolved a scheme of deliveries which will obviate this difficulty.

The International Feature Film Corporation, Ltd., of Montreal and Toronto, have been absorbed by the new corporation, the president and general manager of which will be Herbert Lubin.

Negotiations are now under way for an alliance with a big feature film combination whose specialty is the production of widely known plays starring famous actors and actresses. These negotiations are expected to be consummated within ten days.

For the present the new corporation will confine itself to the Dominion of Canada. In addition to the offices in Montreal and Toronto, branches will be immediately established in Winnipeg, Vancouver and in the Maritime Provinces.

The Exclusive program forms the backbone of the features already contracted for Canada. Among the brands whose entire output will be taken are Itala, Great Northern Special, Film Releases of America, Solax, Blaiché, and Great Northern Preferred.

Several Wall street bankers are interested as well as prominent film men, including Harry R. Raver, president of the All Star Feature Corporation and director-general of the Itala Film Company; Ingvald C. Oes, president of the Great Northern Film Company; Herbert Blaiché, president of the Exclusive Supply Corporation, Solax and Blaiché Features, and Joseph R. Miles, general manager of the Exclusive Supply Corporation. Charles (Feature) Abrams has been appointed New York manager and buyer, and John B. Clymer will take care of public relations.

Three features a week will comprise the immediate releases, which will be rapidly increased. Inasmuch as Canadian exhibitors run a feature at least two days, this will ensure a weekly feature program.

"JUNGLE" READY FOR SCREEN

From the offices of the All Star Feature Corporation comes the announcement that: "The Jungle," from Upton Sinclair's novel, is finished and will have its premier presentation in New York City as a theatrical attraction at a leading Broadway theatre.

Managers Issacs and Bryan of the All Star Film Rental Company, distributors of the All Star productions for the territory of Greater New York and New York State, are at the present time negotiating with Upton Sinclair for his personal appearance in conjunction with the showing of the film.

Prominent in the cast is Upton Sinclair, while featured as the star of the production is George Nash, late star of "Panthea," "Officer 666" and "The Gamblers." With Mr. Nash there is to be seen Gail Kane, leading lady of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." She will co-star with Nash in the coming fall production of "The Miracle Man." Others are Alice Marc, Julia R. Hurley, Robert Cummings and Clarence Handysides.

KING'S FAVORITE IN FILM

The cast of "The Highwayman's Honor" contains the names of several well-known people. Among these is Sir Hubert Von Herkomer, C.A., R.V.O., who was the favorite actor of King Edward VII and King George V.

His entrance into screen work was hailed with delight, but unfortunately, after he had completed his first picture he died suddenly. Lady Herkomer and Miss Herkomer also have parts in the production, which was recently purchased, on the other side, by the Mecca Feature Film Company.

An Advertising Expert

Charles Mortimer Peck, the advertising manager of the Box-Office Attractions Film Rental Company, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, is probably equalled by no other man in the motion picture industry to-day in range and variety of advertising and sales experience.

As a newspaper man, Mr. Peck was identified with the Chicago "Journal," the Chicago "Inter Ocean," and the Detroit "Evening News." He was advertising manager of the Siegel stores in Chicago, of Carson Pirie, Scott & Company and of A. M. Rothschild. In New York he has been associated with the George B. Van Cleef and the P. H. O'Keefe Advertising Agencies.

Mr. Peck is one of the first, if not the first to introduce scientific advertising and sales methods into the motion picture field.

Noted Singer in Eclectic Feature

Emmy Destinn, the noted soprano of the Metropolitan Opera House, is featured in "The Lion's Bride," soon to be released by the Eclectic Company. This is the first and only time Mme. Destinn has appeared before the camera in a photoplay. She received a fee of $20,000 for appearing in the lion's den and her life was insured for $125,000.

During the fifteen minutes the soprano was in the cage, one of the huge beasts jumped upon the piano near which Mme. Destinn was singing. To show her nerve, the young woman gave the lion a hug, and then tripped out of the den before the brute had recovered from his surprise.
“The King’s Will.” (Selig. Two reels. June 23.—With the advent of Kathryn, the bandit and for a time she is out of the power of Umballah, who is charged with murdering the former king and arrested. In the meantime Kathryn and her friend Robina make a search of the treasure that the late king had left them. Umballah escapes, gets there before them and takes the other part. They arrive on the island just as the volcano is beginning an eruption and their lives are greatly endangered.

“Death’s Witness.” (Biograph. June 1.)—This drama opens impressively. The scene is a railroad crossing, where the body of the butler is seen being carried over the falls. No reason is given for the butler murdering his master. The son is first accused, but through the efforts of his fiancee he is exonerated.

“Bunny Buys a Hat for His Bride.” (Vitagraph. May 29.—John Bumey and his usual side partner, Parke, appear in this comedy. The light is rather poor and the humor has no particular job to fill. His wife wants a certain hat and no other will do. Bunny finally gets it.

“The Test of Courage.” (Lubin, May 29.)—This is a well worked out but it lacks interest until the end. Through a combination of circumstances the girl is carried away boarding school girl, instead of an actress. The way they finally accept each other makes a capital ending.

“The Newspaperman.” (Scott. Two reels. June 26.—The same real with “The Poison of Serpents.” The picture was taken at Raymond J. Ditmas’ studio and laboratory. It is highly interesting and appropriate at this time of the world. Different species of poisonous snakes are shown and the process of extracting their venom is shown close up to the camera.

“The Clock Went Wrong.” (Selig. Split reel. May 26.—On the same reel with “Simp Simpson and the Spirit.” English’d very, this picture is short. The burglar is mistaken for the jeweler, and walks off with the clock. Later he is caught.

“Simp Simpson and the Spirit.” (Selig. Split reel. May 26.—On the same reel with “The Clock Went Wrong.” What the other half of the humor this part supplies. One of the cowboys is a victim of a stroke.

“Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.” No. 26. (Selig. May 26.)—The arrival of the “Vaterland,” the largest steamer in the world, and the story is interesting. The leaders of the debate on the Panama tolls question. The chief good point is that Vera Cruz is a change in the Mexican news.

“The Science of Crime.” (Biograph. Two reels. May 25.—This picture disproves the argument that criminals result “not from association but by heredity.” The court scene and the scene at the Siedman’s ball are the two largest in the picture. The drama is attractive and appealing from the start. The lawyer’s son is captured by crooks who make a crook out of him. Later, when he is being tried for robbery, his memory returns to him. A happy reunion with his family follows, although he does not have to serve a term.

“The Crowning Glory.” (Lubin. Two reels. May 25.—An amusing drama in which the dishonest father and his associate are foiled by the honesty of his daughter, who marries the man they expected to snub. Frankie Mason, John Ince and Percy Winter are the principals.

“Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.” No. 27. (Selig. June 1.)—This seems to be a military number, which includes several other military events in different parts of the world. Of course, the film is light in parts.

“Miss Raffles.” (Vitagraph. June 1.)—Dorothy Kelly and James Morrison appear here in another clever comedy. Every minute and every sub-title, which are in the form of conversation, is natural, and the daughter of the house is mistaken for a butler’s boy. Although the ending is romantic as well as happy for all concerned.

“Dawn.” (Selig. May 27.)—Guy Oliver, Fred Harington and widows play the leads in this delightful romance of the West. A beautiful little daughter of an injured man. He keeps her and she grows to be a young woman. She meets her father and brother and all ends well. She marries her Western sweetheart.

“The Boys of the I. O. U.” (Vitagraph. May 27.—Bill Johnson and Huntley an an an create a good bit of fun in this comedy. The boys of the I. O. U., play a clever joke on the all important Cutoff.

“The Trunk Mystery.” (Lubin. Two reels. May 27.—A comedy, but devoid of interest. Through a fake detective, a reporter desiring fame, and a good natural hobo, a happy dandy it is thought to have murdered a society lady. After a lot of trouble they find that no murder was committed.

“Pat Casey’s Case.” (Essanay. May 27.)—Edmund Redway and Louise Wilkes are the principals. Casey dislikes work, and even when he is he doesn’t do it right. A laughable chase ends the picture.

“Cutoff’s Wife.” (Vitagraph. Two reels. May 26.—Wallie Van and Lillian Walker play the leading parts. The comedy is well worked out but it lacks interest until the end. Through a combination of circumstances the girl is carried away boarding school girl, instead of an actress. The way they finally accept each other makes a capital ending.

“The Particular Cowboys.” (Lubin. Split reel. May 26.—On the same reel with “For Two Pins.” The cowboys want a good cook, but before they get one they go through a large amount of comical trials.

“For Two Pins.” (Lubin. Split reel. May 26.—On the same reel with “The Particular Cowboys.” This comedy is not as good as the first one on the reel. The rule “police” play an amusing one, and they get mixed up between a drunkard and another.

“The Voice of Silence.” (Essanay. June 9.)—A new plot and water scenes make this an amusing number. The theme is the heroine can operate a wireless instrument, and all the characters must overcome their smugness.

“The Tango in Tuxedos.” (Selig. June 9.)—This comedy will not cause many to laugh. It deals with the jealous wows of three small town men. The tango doesn’t come in till the very end.

“A Terror of the Night.” (Essanay. June 13.)—The ninth of the Daily of the Days series. This is a weird comedy-drama, one that holds the attention continually. Dolly gets a fine story by sleeping in supposedly haunted house, but she finds the ghost is only a dishonest land agent.

“Andy Goes a-Pirating.” (Essanay. June 10.)—Another of the Andy series, featuring young Andrew Clark. He will please the younger part of the audience. Through reading dime novels, Andy and his comrades pretend to be pirates, but they find that a pirate’s life isn’t what it’s cracked up to be when their ship’s cook.

“The Squaw’s Revenge.” (Essanay. June 13.)—Answering her little child’s question, “Why don’t we live with the Indians?” the squaw told the story of how the whites saved the whites from the Indians after they had killed the squaw and her husband, and captured peace. An Indian story that is better than most.

When Smolk Loves,
(Stirling. June 12.)—When Smolk loves, he moves at a great speed.

The Girl and the HoBo.
( Frontier. June 7.)—A convention called "Western." A girl by getting the money she had been trusting with in a safe.

Love and Electricity.
(Joker. June 6.)—A side-splitter throughout. Due to his father, a lawyer, and an electrical salesman, father gets mixed up in some electric wiring, with dire results.

Easy Money.
(Crystal. Split reel, June 2.)—An amusing comedy that contains lots of lightning action. Lizzie tries to act for a picture and causes a disturbance among the rest of the cast. On the same reel with "A Midnight Supper.

A Midnight Supper.
(Crystal. Split reel, June 2.)—On the same reel with "Easy Money." Charley DeForest gets himself covered with shame in this picture with causing many laughs.

The House Discordant.
(Rex. Two reels.)—A poor tale of otherwise an excellent drama. Novel in plot and entertaining throughout. The photography is better than the average. Brunett marries a young girl as his second wife. Later he becomes jealous of his wife and they are directed against his stepmother. But there was no need for his jealousy. His wife was just fixing up a happy marriage between the boy and another young girl.

Captain Bill's Warm Welcome.
(Nestor. June 5.)—A comedy with a laugh in every scene for young and old; in fact, the person who doesn't think it comical must be a complete stranger to humor. An old sea captain plans to visit his newly wedded nephew. To make the old man at home, they decide to decorate the house as a ship, and moreover to make it act like a ship—the rest can be imagined.

Love's Western Flight.
(Nestor. June 5.)—A Wallace Reid-Dorothy Davenport drama. The conventionality of the story is lost in the good features, courtesy being given her worthless husband. Reading of his death she marries against his wishes, but is accidentally killed.

Willie Walrus, Detective.
(Joker, June 3.)—For absolute originality William Wolbert, alias Willie Walrus, gets the blue ribbon. As detective he hunts for the murderer of Dolly. But, when you turn him out to be a row, excellent comedy.

Some Here.
(Crystal. May 31.)—The best comedy drama of the screen. Resolving modern detective dramas. The wicked Uncle and the unprotected girl variety of story.

Sophie of the Films.
(Nestor. June 6.)—Another comedy, with the Sterling Kid leading. The gay son is in love with a famous dancer, but father substitutes his choice for the dancer and all ends well.

Edna.
(Stirling. June 1.)—Another comedy, with the Sterling Kid leading. It is comic at first and ends in a water scene, in which the best bathroom is the main factor, which is side splitting.

The Bar Cross Liar.
(Eclair. May 31.)—After the story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. The story is straight and the film telling, but makes good entertainment. The characters are well drawn. The man the cowboys later become their idol when it is found out they had been supporting a large family with his wages.

The Awakening.
ization good. Settings are especially apropos. A saloon with a fire, and returns his affection, destroys her raiment of finding out she had but flirted.

Mutual Program.

Drifting Hearts.
(Reevey. June 2.)—The usual leads, Margarita Fischer and Harry Pollard, appear in this drama. After the death of their child the couple gradually drift apart. She is on the point of giving in, when she discovers a note of her husband's intended for his new love. She thinks it is for her and she plans to destroy her husband.

A Telephone Strategy.
(Princess. May 29.)—"Central" is the means of capturing burlington through his telephone. Through this act the man she loves is allowed to marry her. The drama is quite original, but pleasing.

Our Mutual Girl No. 20.
( Reliance. June 1.)—Margaret is still missing in this installment. The search is on, but pleasing. The crooks play an important part. Numerous street scenes are shown, and by the actions of the public one would think there wasn't a camera in sight.

A Pair of Cutts.
( Reliance. June 3.)—A novel drama featuring Billie West, through a note written in the cut, two laundry thieves are brought to bay. The action is rapid and entertaining.

A Prince of Bohemia.
(American. June 4)—A novel drama featuring Michael Kollock, through a romance and a comedy. A German delicatesse store and the burlington of the owner are the main points in this drama and many comical events transpire therein.

The Fatal Mallet.
(Keystone. June 1.)—Charles Chaplin, Mabel Normand and Mack Swain, the three famous comedians, appear in this comedy. The rivals unite against a third, and a large amount of the usual comical slapstick stuff follows.

Closed Gates.
(Reevey. June 7.)—A highly amusing drama, in which the old-fashioned father is in a quandary. His granddaughter free of blame and from the setting of their home is left penniless. She returns home to find that her interest was placed in a safe and the money gone away. All this brings about her death.

Bringing in the Law.
(Colorado Motion Picture Corporation. Three reels.)—This picture surpasses all Westerns of all kinds in shooting and villainy, there is really so much of it that one scarcely knows what it's all about. Plenty of fast and sensational riding appears.

The picture, because of its rapid action, is most interesting. "I'm going out West to avenge his brother's death. He not only does this, but aids materially in the election of the President. There are big scenes in abundance, but no one is better than another.

DO EXHIBITORS WANT CENSORSHIP?

Consider the National Board of Censorship adequate to cope with the situation."

Sam Pylet, owner and manager of the Murray Theatre, Milwaukee, stated that he was against state censorship because the picture was already censored by the National Board. He prefers local to state censorship but thinks that there is no need of either.

Mr. Wollberg, head of the Milwaukee branch of the General Film Exchange, stated that he was not in favor of state censorship, because it was too apt to be a political issue. He said that he preferred local to state censorship, but did not think either was necessary.

Manager Quinn, of the Lyric, Beloit, Wis.: "It seems to me that state censorship may work out all right, although it has failed to do so thus far. But local censorship, I fear, can never succeed and I am strongly opposed to it."

"I think that the present National Board of Censorship is very efficient."

Manager Olson, of the Star, Beloit, Wis.: "I am opposed to local censorship. It is expensive and it cannot prove efficient."

"The National Board of Censorship is, I think, doing its work well. I believe that the films which pass through it are fairly censored."

W. J. Flynn, manager, the Associated Theatres (Park Broadway, St. Charles, Junita, Arco, Union and Airdome), St. Louis: "I am not in favor of censorship of any kind. Let the people, the public at large, censor their own pictures."

"If there had to be a choice, I would prefer state to local censorship. I think the National Board of Censorship is able to handle the censorship problem."

E. W. Dustin, manager, Eclectic Film Exchange, 3210 Locust street, St. Louis: "I am not in favor of a state censor. I think the exhibitors are the best censors we can have. They will not run pictures that will cause them to lose money, and there is no doubt that if a manager uses questionable films he will lose money, because the public want good, clean entertainment. I regard the National Board of Censorship as a body well qualified to handle the censorship problem."

Edward Stevison, manager of Old Grand Central Theatre, Sixth and Market streets: "I am not in favor of state censorship. I do not think it is necessary. If I had to have any I would prefer state censorship. I have no fault to find with the National Board of Censorship, and consider their work well done."

John W. Cornelius, the Lyric, on Sixth street, St. Louis: "I am not in favor of state censorship. I do not believe that there could be a censor appointed who could do any more than the exhibitors themselves are doing."

Meyer & Prack, managers of the Knickerbocker Theatre, at Park and Compton avenues: "We do not want state censorship. We do not see that it would improve the situation any; there is no fault to find with the present system of censoring pictures. We would prefer state to local. We think the National Board of Censorship is doing good work."

George Horning, manager, the Americus Theatre, Northside, Cincinnati, O.: "I have been opposed to state censorship from the beginning. At the last state convention in Columbus, I told the exhibitors who favored it then that they were making a big mistake. State censorship is unnecessary because the National Board of Censorship is adequate for our protection."

WHAT LEAGUE HEADS THINK

"The National Board is my idea of ideal censorship. THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS is doing an excellent work in fighting such unreasonable censorship, and I am with you."—Frank Harris, President, the Nebraska State Branch No. 22, M. P. E. L. of A.

"I am opposed to state censorship. We are able to take care of our business and keep it clean without any censorship. There is no demand for state censorship in Michigan."—Peter Jeup, President, the Michigan State Branch and of the Detroit Exhibitors' League.

Frank Ramsdell, Manager Mutual Exchange, Omaha: "I was in Kansas when that farce of a censorship law was passed there. It was as objectionable as the Ohio law. It still stands on the books, but it is not enforced.

"I am in favor of a national board, and decidedly opposed to either state or local censorship. The MOTION PICTURE NEWS is helping us with a fight that fits in exactly with my opinions."

E. R. Pearson, Manager General Film Exchange, Omaha: "A national board of censors with authority is my choice. It would be more economical and more effective."

C. M. Orth, Secretary of the Detroit league and the Michigan league: "I am opposed to all censorship. We don't need it. But I have no complaint to make of the National Board."

J. C. Ritter, Boulevard Theatre, Detroit, Mich.: "I oppose state or local censorship boards. Persons are likely to be appointed who know nothing of motion pictures and whose criticism will be trivial rather than helpful. I approve of the National Board and the way it does its work."

A. M. Blankmeyer, Grand Circus Theatre: "There is no necessity for any form of censorship. Motion picture exhibitors have too much invested in their business to run anything objectionable. The public will not stand for it and the exhibitors will not risk their displeasure."

Ruby Fischer, Warfield Theatre: "I am opposed to state or local censorship. It isn't needed. The work of the National Board of Censors is all right. There is no public demand for state or local censorship."

A. M. Renne, Ypsilanti Opera House, Ypsilanti, Mich.: "There would be an advantage to me in a state censorship."

Douglas Dickerson, Detroit Manager World Special Films Corporation: "I am opposed to state censorship. It would create confusion throughout the country. Manufacturers would have to eliminate one thing for one state, something else for another. Local censorship is worse."

Manager Ward, Mutual Exchange, Detroit: "There is no demand for state censorship and no necessity for it. Local censorship is expensive and unsatisfactory. It puts the expense of eliminations on the exchanges where the manufacturers ought to stand it. It is not fair. The action of the National Board should be sufficient and final."

Manager Hogan, of the Rex Theatre, Beloit, Wis.: "I want no censorship of any kind. But if we must have censorship, let it be by the National Board. Only if we had a national board, let it be a real board. We have no real national board at present."

Manager Goldstein, of the Gem, has much the same idea as has Mr. Hogan, of the Rex. Both theatres are controlled by the same Chicago management. Mr. Goldstein believes that local and state censorship is wrong. He believes that the National Board of Censorship is doing its work better than any censorship board in the United States. "The Motion Picture News is to be congratulated upon its good work," he said.

C. E. Jacobs, associated with H. Levy in the management and operation of the Liberty and the Columbia Theatres, Cincinnati:

"The more censorship we have the worse our pictures are going to be. I think state censorship is unnecessary because the National Board is sufficient."

I. Libson, manager of the Family Theatre, the Bijou, the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati:

"The motion-picture business, from the exhibitors' standpoint, is clean enough without censorship. Progressive managers will not exhibit films that are objectionable to their patrons. I believe the National Board of Censors has been fair to all and sufficient to protect the exhibitor."

Charles Weigel, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, Cincinnati:

"Censorship, I think, is a reflection on the exhibitor. The modern manager's aim is to give his patrons only the best. The present National Board of Censors, I believe, is ample protection for the exhibitor. If politics is not behind this censorship law now, it ultimately will be. The exhibitor's only chance to solve this momentous question is to fight it."

Edward T. Lux, manager of the Cincinnati, Buckeye and the Universal Film Exchange, Cincinnati:

"Am I in favor of state censorship? No! It means that the cost of film production will be increased and the exhibitor as a consequence will have to pay more for his film service. A local censorship board is as unnecessary as a state board and would ruin the film business. I think the National Board is doing all that is necessary in the censorship line."

Joseph Hennegan, manager Lubin Theatre, Cincinnati:

"I am not in favor of either a state or local board of censors, because such censorship, after the films have been approved by the present National Board, is unnecessary and a reflection on the management of our best theatres. I would rather see a National Board with legal powers."

Thomas Corby, manager of the Gayety, the Star, and the Lyceum, motion picture theatres, Cincinnati:

"Exhibitors of Ohio are facing a serious problem and the sooner they get busy in the annihilation of this censorship law the better it will be for them. I am opposed to censorship, because it is unnecessary."

John Huss, associated with E. P. Bernardi in the management of the Colonial and Sun Theatres, Cincinnati:

"If we must have censorship at all, let us have a legalized National Board."

George W. Weeks, Manager Detroit Universal Exchange:

"I do not favor state or local censorship if we can have a legal and compulsory national censorship."

Frank McCarthy, of the Dixie Theatre:

"I am strongly opposed to either local or state censorship. Of the two I should prefer state censorship. Local censorship would work a great hardship among the exhibitors."

"I believe that the National Board of Censorship is adequate to cope with the situation. I think that they are as near the ideal as we can get it. I am in favor of the National Board alone, with no state or local censorship."

"LUCILLE LOVE—THE GIRL OF MYSTERY"

(Gold Seal—Two Reels)

Review by A. Danson Mitchell

The eighth of the series, to be released June 2. Poor Lucille! She has more troubles in five minutes than the average person has in a lifetime. This chapter, though containing probably less actual action than some of its predecessors, is one of the best.

Grace Cunard is required to do some very difficult dramatic work, acting that would tax the strength of any actress on the stage or screen. With her usual love of detail, she gets around every situation in a very comprehensible manner. Francis Ford has a somewhat easy time compared with his other adventures. Most of his work is pure posing for the camera. The interior scenes are of unusual excellence, especially the view of the hold of the ship with Miss Cunard in hiding there. The cases and other cargo are stored away in a seaworthy manner. In the last part the scenes, taken in the interior of a moving automobile, are somewhat different from other pictures.

Overhearing Loubeque's conversation on the dock, Lucille becomes a stowaway on the ship. Loubeque, however, has seen her enter the boat and watches her make her hiding-place. He sends a sailor down, supposedly to look for his "lost" watch, and so the girl is found and put to work as a cabin-boy.

Loubeque, knowing she is watching him from the porthole, secretly within her range of vision what looks like the paper she is after. However, when he has left the room and Lucille has entered and found the paper, it is discovered that she has been cheated with a blank piece. So she returns the compliment with the paper which he is looking for.

The harbor of San Francisco, California, is shown distinctly as the ship enters. Loubeque, in order to get the girl in his power, declares her insane and by a clever move carries her away in an automobile. And there we leave her.

"METAMORPHOSIS"
(American)
REVIEWED BY C. J. VERHALEN

While the theme of this production is improbable, it breaks away to some extent from the stereotyped. The triangle is evident, but the workings of the plot bring about the desired effect in a much different way. The cast includes the best of the Flying A Company, headed by Sydney Ayres and Vivian Rich. The inner points of photography and situations are well worked out and clothe the production in a sort of mystery. The higher thought, as it might be termed, serves as the basis of the story. The scenic effects, both interior and exterior, form delightful backgrounds.

The story, in brief, is about an old eccentric professor who believes that the soul of man is tied to his body by fear alone, and that if absolute courage is found, the spirit will be able to free itself. Gray, a young society man, simulates belief and sympathy for the old man, in order to gain his assistance in winning the love of Rose, his daughter; but Rose, unknown to either, has fallen in love with a young gangster.

Arthur and his gang are caught looting and Rose discovers them, but she is rescued by Arthur from his pals. Burr and his daughter go to a South Sea island, where Rose prunes for Arthur in prison. The father, by fasting, liberates his spirit from his body and returns to liberate Arthur and influences him to embark upon the ship that carries Gray in his search for the professor. The professor dies but Arthur finds Rose on the island. They return to civilization to be married.

"ATLANTIS"
(Great Northern—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSION MICHELL

A Screen adaptation of Gerhart Hauptmann’s famous novel. The film was produced principally in Copenhagen at the studios of the Great Northern, though many exteriors were made on the ocean and several in New York City. The latter are merely used to give atmosphere. The picture has already been shown throughout Europe and is said to have caused considerable talk over there. It seems certain to accomplish that in this country for the picture undoubtedly is a masterpiece. It possesses all the traits necessary for a successful production. The atmosphere is excellent throughout. The boat scenes are especially cleverly played. The entire picture shows the work of a master director, down to the smallest details.

There is but one really large scene. There are a number of "punches," but the sinking of the ship stands predominant over all else, and will be remembered the longest. Approximately a thousand supers take part in this set. Their training and rehearsing must have been most complete, to judge from the final effect. The rush of all for the life boats, the fighting of the men, and the hysteria of the women is all vividly portrayed. One can almost hear the screams of those lost.

Unlike many other adaptations from well-known books, the story is followed even to the smallest details. Characters are promiscuously introduced in the picture, which have no actual bearing on the story. Even Ingegerd’s monkey and parrot play their little roles. The armless man who is so completely described by Hauptmann is brought in and plays a small part which really has nothing whatever to do with the man theme. C. Unthan, a well-known "vaudevilian," plays the part, and gives exhibitions of writing, eating; pulling corks from bottles, dealing cards, etc., with his toes. The very smallest descriptions are followed. Even the card players on the ship are shown and introduced. It is attention to these small details that makes a picture.

The principal characters are played by Olaf Fons, Ida Orloff, Carl Schroeder, Ebba Thompson and Carl Lauritzen. Miss Orloff, who plays the actress Ingegerd, dances her "Spider Dance" before the camera. The names of the characters are retained. Though these are very long in several cases it gives the picture a certain realism.

Dr. von Kammacher, a young bacteriologist, becomes despondent over the failure of his work. His worry is increased by his wife’s going insane. He plans to go away on a trip. He meets the actress Ingegerd, but soon becomes disgusted with her. He engages passage on the "Roland," the actress and her father being his fellow passengers. In a dense fog the ship hits a derelict and sinks. The young doctor saves the actress at great peril to himself. They arrive in America and the doctor goes to a mountain bungalow to seek rest. He becomes very ill while there and is nursed back to life by a girl artist he had met. Hearing of his unfortunate wife’s death he proposes to and marries his nurse.

"THE OUTCAST RETURNS"
(Great Northern—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSION MICHELL

The man who plays the leading part in this feature of the Great Northern Company deserves to be ranked among the greatest actors of the screen. His name is unfortunately unobtainable from the offices of the company and so personal credit cannot be given.

It seems peculiar that such a good story as this should not have been used before. There are any number of variations of it, any of which would be interesting, yet with one exception the writer has never seen anything like it. A number of very good double exposures are registered.

Having been released after thirty years imprisonment, the convict returns to his home. He finds this has been converted into a bar-room. He locates his mother’s grave and finally finds his sister, now married. She, however, will not receive him and there is nothing left for the man but return to the prison. He is even refused admittance here. Going out into the woods he peacefully dies. The plot is beautifully unfolded.

"THE GREYHOUND"

Reviewed by William Reissman Andrews

It is not usual for a motion picture company to gain the sympathy of the spectators for the disagreeable characters in a "crook" play. This difficult achievement has been attained by the principals in the cast of "The Greyhound." The respectable people in the play fail to excite more than a passive interest, while, on the other hand, the bad ones retain a tenacious grip upon the observer throughout the five reels of splendid acting. The comic relief flashed at short intervals between the scenes situations demonstrated the stage director's appreciation of contrast value and its effect on the emotions. The spirit of genuine comedy pervaded the contrasting scenes, such for instance, as the meeting of the card sharpeners before going aboard ship. Arrayed in flamboyant garments they go through mirth-provoking antics which come with delightful unexpect- edness.

In the big scenes, like Claire Fellman's contemplated suicide, and the interview with her former sweetheart, who tries to persuade her to leave Fellman, emotional acting of a high order makes a strong appeal; while other parts were moving in their unaccountables. This was particularly evident when the brutal husband imagines he sees his supposedly dead wife's ghost, which appears unexpectedly with accusing eyes and threatening finger. A welcome relief from the highly wrought incidents comes in the realistic glimpses of amusements and the daily life on board big liners.

They are actual scenes taken on the "Olympic" as that huge leviathan slips from her moorings and steams gracefully down the Hudson River. The vivid picture of the crowds on the pier, waving bon voyage to their friends, shows excellent film exposure.

Elita Proctor Otis as "Deep Sea Kathy," the adventuress, played a difficult part with sadness and adroitness. William Tockner, as Louis Fellman, "The Greyhound," portrayed with force a character which, if assigned to a less finished actor, would not be convincing. Catharine Carter's work in the trying part of an unlived wife merits special comment. The plot is too well known to mention here, as the play, by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner, had a successful run on Broadway a couple of years ago, and toured the country later.

"THE HAND OF DESTINY"

Reviewed by Peter Milne

In the minds of most people it is still a debatable question whether they have a preference for colored pictures as compared with those merely black and white, as long as the acting is of the best. But if all the natural-color pictures were all as good as this there would no longer be any doubt in regard to this question. Artistically the picture is a revelation. The interiors are not of marked excellence, but the exteriors could not be better. For this reason some of the outdoor scenes have been lengthened to afford the spectator a chance to take in some of their beauty. The picture was taken "abroad" and the wonderful scenery makes an exquisite background for the story.

The story itself is slow getting started; practically the whole first reel is employed as introduction, but after this, when the plot begins to form, the picture develops into a fine drama. It is not new by any means, but most attractive.

The acting is of the French variety, the story is truly American and the combination of the two is pleasing.

"ACROSS THE ATLANTIC"

Reviewed by A. Danson Michel

Made by Herbert Brenon and King Baggott during their sojourn in England and the Continent about a year ago when they also produced "Ivanhoe" and "Absinthe." This picture is essentially English in every detail. The cast, aside from the two principals mentioned, are played by English actors.

Aside from the fact that the picture is interesting for its plot alone, it contains so many features that its success is indispensible. The picture, which has just been run, is probably England's greatest sporting event. It is pictured at great length, being used as a background solely for the action of the drama. Most of the exteriors taken during this event show great crowds of people, and the principals move through these with the camera upon them in a manner which lends itself well to realism. The atmosphere naturally is perfect. In all likelihood the camera was concealed, for there is none of that aping and staring by the crowds which is so hurtful to realism. Aeroplanes also play quite a large part in the picture. In fact, the story is woven around the inventor of a flying ship. Aivitors Claude Graham-White and Gustave Hamel have parts of consequence. The latter is believed at the present time to be lost in the English channel over which he attempted to fly.

Willis, an inventor of an airship, sells his plans to the English government. They are stolen from him before delivery by some Japanese envoys. In a rage Wilbur sets out after them. His fervor for revenge is so great exalted by drink, that he believes he has murdered his best friend who seeks to prevent him from telling the Japanese. In reality, it is the latter who had stabbed the man.

Flying to Europe he becomes a newsboy for lack of better employment. His wife follows in an attempt to find him. She hears through a tramp, who saw the stabbing, who the real murderer is. Wilbur joins a Punch-and-Judy showman and goes to the Derby race. Here he meets the Japanese again, and in a fight on the roof of a house the latter is killed by falling to the street. He meets his wife and daughter again by recognizing them in the crowd watching the antics of his show.

"THE LILY OF THE VALLEY"
(Selig—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This, one of the General Film Photoplay masterpieces, combines the elements of a big feature with the simple charm of the one-reel picture, with the result that an attractive and pathetic story has been produced in "The Lily of the Valley."
The picture argues well for those who are opposed to strikes. The sad results that follow on the heels of industrial strike are vividly portrayed here, although somewhat magnified to add to the significance of the story. But the mob scenes are in no way magnified. Five hundred people must have partaken in these scenes; they storm the factory that has closed its doors against them and, unable to gain admittance, they take to throwing stones. Many windows are broken and the lives of all are endangered until the militia arrives. The encounters between the militia and the strikers are a sight to see.

ANNA SWEARS TO Avenge HER FATHER AND BROTHER

The maddened strikers stone everybody ruthlessly, even to killing the sister of one of the guard. Crazed, he turns the machine gun on them, taking the lives of the foreman and his two sons. Later, he, Philip, marries the foreman's daughter and tries to keep his terrible deed from her, but she learns of it. She determines to kill him, but relents when she sees his sister's picture. But another strike occurs and he is shot by a frenzied enemy.

ONLY FIREPROOF OPERATING ROOM IN MISSISSIPPI
Special to The Motion Picture News.
Jackson, Miss., June 1.

Announcement has been made that the Istrione Theatre will be ready for business about June 15. This modern playhouse, owned jointly by J. C. Landen and H. A. Carleton, is the first of several that are to be constructed at various points in the state in their Istrione Theatre Circuit. The management of the houses will be in the hands of Mr. Carleton.
The local Istrione will seat about 750 people, and include a smokers' balcony and a mezzanine balcony. The theatre is of fireproof construction throughout. The operating room, enclosed in nine-inch brick walls with a six-inch concrete roof, is placed on the main floor between the foyer and the auditorium.

Two motor-driven Simplex machines are to be used to project the pictures. This is said to be the first absolutely fireproof operating room ever built in a motion picture house in Mississippi. One of the features of the house will be the ventilation, air being forced through the floor through mushroom ventilators by a mammoth blow fan, making an entire change of air every minute. Music will be furnished by a five-string orchestra.

"THE MAGIC NOTE"
(Ambrosio-American—Four Parts)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

Sensationalism plays a large part in this picture, although the plot is not in any way subsidized by the melodramatic character of the film. The story is powerful, yet simple in its entirety, and is executed in a manner that carries satisfaction with it. A logical ending makes it one of the best films the Ambrosio has produced.

"Anita, who has musical talents, is devoted to her invalid mother, and Robert, her lover, who is a bank clerk. The latter, after some work, secures for her a tryout with a prominent director, who so likes her voice that he gives her the chance she wishes and takes her to the chief director. This man accepts her and stars her in the opera "Mignon."

In appreciation of his help Anita presents him with a silver cigarette case on which the words "Do You Know the Land?" from the opera, is engraved. Morton, his brother bank clerk, is really a crook. When Robert is sent to the clearing house to get a large sum of money, Morton attacks him and robs him of his wallet containing the bank notes.

He is thrust into a sewer from which he is unable to escape for many days. When at last he reaches the open air he has lost his mind. The police, finding him wandering around, have him arrested, and seeing he is insane have him placed in an institution. Everyone believes he is an embezzler, his absence being so considered.

Many months pass by and Anita has become a well-known prima donna. She has not forgotten Robert, but has, like all the others, been unable to locate him. Among her suitors, Morton is the most ardent. He is living under an assumed name. While at a tea party she discovers he has the cigarette case with the inscription and suspicions enter her mind.

Later, at the asylum, she gives a public performance. The song which she sings has been Robert's favorite. The magic note which she strikes brings back his mind to him. There is a reconciliation and Morton's crime is brought home to him through the silver cigarette case.

"HOUSE OF BONDAGE" HALTED IN ELIZABETH, N. J.

On the grounds that the picture was immoral, Mayor Percy H. Stewart, of Plainfield, last Wednesday put a stop to "The House of Bondage," which was being shown in the Lyric Theatre, that city. The plea of the theatre management that the production had not been interferred with when it was shown in Elizabeth earlier in the week had no effect on the Mayor. He threatened to take further action against the theatre owners for allowing children under 16 to enter the amusement house unaccompanied.

What an Industrial Picture Factory Is Like

The Industrial Moving Picture Company's Plant in Chicago Is One of the Largest in the World—Some of Its Facilities Described

The Industrial Moving Picture Company have completed and in full operation at Chicago one of the largest factories in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture of commercial motion pictures. This new plant is located at 223-233 West Erie street, thirteen minutes walking distance of Chicago's business center.

It occupies 7,000 square feet of floor space and is laid out strictly along efficiency lines so that not a single foot of space is lost. All departments adjoin and follow in logical sequence. The walls and partitions are of steel and cement plaster. The ceilings are protected by an automatic sprinkler system, twenty-four Pyrene tubes are in convenient places for emergency use and the entire establishment is fire-proof throughout.

The "safety first" idea is paramount. The air is sterilized and changed every ten minutes by means of the most modern ventilating system. Thirty-five ample windows give splendid, natural light to the offices and assembling department.

The perforating-room is equipped with Bell & Howell machines, having mechanical perfection and enormous capacity. The air in this room is governed by a hygrometer and always kept at a temperature and humidity necessary to perfect perforating. The printing-room occupies considerable space, having ample room for the operation of twelve of the most modern perforating machines.

The developing-room is one of the largest in this country. The floor is water-proof cement laid on zinc with a wooden flooring of cypress raised so as to be above the flowing water. This developing-room is equipped with Corcoran tanks, sufficient to develop miles of film every day. Careful provisions are here made for intensifying and reducing scenes on which the camera operators fail to secure an absolutely correct exposure.

The wash-room is supplied with filtered and distilled water which is piped in a continuous-flowing system directly from the big battery of filters which stand nearby, and which also serves the developing-room.

The timing and toning room has tanks sufficient to give twenty different tints and tones.

The drying-room has a capacity for 100,000 feet of film at one time. The drying is hastened by a special warm air appliance invented by Mr. M. E. Hair.

The assembling and inspection departments have light and airy locations and are complete in every detail. Each group of assemblers and inspectors is directed by a capable and watchful forelady, who in turn is checked by the factory superintendent.

Adjoining the assembling and inspection departments is the camera department where the various camera crews are when not in the field. With present facilities the Industrial Moving Picture Company can put a battery of seven cameras in the field at one time.

One person of the camera department is in charge of an expert electrician, who devotes his entire time to the upkeep of the several portable, artificial lighting equipments used for interior work.

A most important place in the factory is the chemical-room, presided over by an expert chemist who does nothing but mix the various solutions used in developing, intensifying, reducing, tinting, toning, etc.

After the film has been developed, printed, dried, assembled and inspected, it is taken to the projecting-room where it is given a general inspection on the screen. This projecting-room is a miniature theatre with a thirty-five-foot throw, equipped with a fire-proof booth, projecting machine, seats and special lights so that the inspectors can conveniently make their notes without interfering with the lighting on the picture being used.

The Industrial Moving Picture Company was launched four years ago by Carl Laemmle, R. H. Cochran and Watterson R. Rothacker. Six months ago Mr. Laemmle, being called away to fill the duties as president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company required his entire attention, disposed of his stockholdings to Mr. Rothacker, who then succeeded Mr. Laemmle as president of the Industrial Moving Picture Company.

Examine Sixty-Five Rochester Operators
(Rochester, N. Y., June 4.)

The examination of motion picture operators, under the recently adopted provisions of the state law which requires that all be licensed, has been started in this city. One examination has already been held, and two more are to take place within the next ten days.

The state law, while requiring that all operators be licensed, left the matter of prescribing the requirements up to the local administration in each case. The requirements in Rochester, adopted recently by Mayor Edgerton and his cabinet, are strict, and are so devised as to ensure the officials that a man who passes the examination really knows his business.

Sixty-five candidates appeared for the first examination. First the candidates were taken to the top floor of the Municipal Building, which contains the laboratories of the city engineer's department, where Fire Marshal Edward Wheeler, presiding at a table on a platform, handed out a list of questions to which written answers were required.

Candidates were then taken, one at a time, into a room equipped as a motion picture machine booth. In this room Roy J. Fisher, Harmon Smith, City Electrician Joseph E. Putnam and Emil Schmidt, superintendent of the police and fire telegraph bureaus, were in charge. The two first named members of the board are the past masters of the motion picture operators of the city. Candidates were taken in hand by them and required to demonstrate, at the machine, their knowledge of the construction and operation of the machine.

Another day was required to complete the practical test and the succeeding day those who had not been examined as to their practical knowledge were put through their paces. A report of those who were successful in passing the examination will be filed with the mayor shortly and the licenses issued. The men are all at work now, but later those who failed will be required to desist from operating machines, or else qualify to earn a license.

On June 10, it is announced, there will be an examination at the fire marshal's office for Italian operators, and on the following morning at 9 o'clock there will be another test for those who did not take the examination at first, or those who took it and failed to pass it. For a second examination no application need be filed by candidates who failed on the first test, aside from the original application.

National Board Tightens Rules
(Will Ban Vice and Drug Traffic Pictures—Race Prejudice Scenes Condemned—Acid Test or Underworld Films)

NEW and restricted standards have been formulated by the Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures, which will probably result in sweeping changes in the character of the films shown in every motion picture house in the United States.

The new rules, announced by Dr. Ortin G. Cocks, advisory secretary of the board, are intended to answer the criticisms that have been lodged against films dealing with vice and crime.

It declares itself against films which feature sectional, national or race prejudices. It will not pass pictures glorifying or excusing the evildoer or otherwise affecting public opinion on a matter before the courts. The portrayal of insanity will not be tolerated where it appears purely to "the morbid, harrowing or gruesome."

Drug traffic films will be confined to those scenes which are "dramatically necessary to point the moral." The board will "critically scan any suggestions of easy methods of obtaining drugs."

Scenes which "tend to weaken the religious spirit or to profane sacred things" will be condemned, and bars, bars, drinking and drunkenness will be discouraged.

Scantily dressed persons are under the ban, as are "pictures of women almost wholly dressed but yet displaying a lavish amount of lingerie." Women's smoking is to be discouraged. Opium joints, gambling scenes, dance halls, vulgar flirtations and other underworld scenes, if produced merely for entertainment, will be condemned.

"Unwritten law" themes and "frontier nonsense" will be frowned on. Crimes that will be barred are train-wrecking and arson on account of the principle of suggestion involved. Suicide also is under the ban.

A PROGRESSIVE FILM EXCHANGE

The Laemmle Film Exchange, of Omaha, Neb., is One of the Best Illustrations of this Type that Can Be Offered—Under its Manager, Frank Van Husan, it Makes 130 Shipments a Day

A SIGNIFICANT commentary on the rapid strides of the motion picture industry in the Middle West is exemplified in the extension of the business of the Laemmle Film Exchange, in Omaha, Nebraska.

In the course of five years, the Omaha concern has grown from an establishment requiring only 300 square feet, where seven employees looked after the wants of forty customers, to a place containing 10,000 feet floor space, where twenty-nine employees make one hundred and thirty shipments every twenty-four hours.

For the last eighteen months a day and night shift have been necessary to handle the business.

The exchange is completely equipped. It has its own poster department, where the paper, some of the most attractive offered to exhibitors, is prepared for distribution. The film cleaning machine is one of the latest manufacture. The facilities of the delivery department insure prompt service to all the customers.

AFTER a varied career, the present manager, Frank A. Van Husan, Jr., became associated with the Laemmle company, while Maurice Fleckles was the general manager.

FRANK A. VAN HUSAN

months. Being suddenly called to Chicago by wire, he was sent to Omaha, where he arrived the 15th of March, five years ago.

When Mr. Van Husan went to conditions affecting the trade are different, and the Omaha branch confines itself to allotted territory.

Four exchanges have withdrawn from the local field after a futile effort to meet the progressive methods of the new firm, and the Laemmle people feel able to cope with any rush of business that might come its way.

"It seems as though everybody is rushing to this field," said Mr. Van Husan in a recent interview, "and it keeps us on the jump. However, our system is just as perfect as anywhere else, and we are capable of handling the situation.

"The business has certainly shown a wonderful growth since I first got into it," he added, "and some of my experiences in the early days make me smile. For instance, after I left the medical college, having decided not to practice, I joined forces with my father, who had been attracted to the possibilities of the motion picture business.

"We purchased a Lubin Passion Play and a Lubin machine. It was our intention to travel from town to town, making different churches.

"Well, while the scheme seemed all right, we found that there was not the money in it we had supposed. After trying it out unsuccessfully we went back home to Detroit. This experience, however, did not discourage us.

"We thought we saw great possibilities in the coming industry. In looking around for some kind of an opening in the business which promised better results, we found a five-cent electric theatre profitably operating.

"We opened a second theatre, renting service from Geo. Kleine, of Chicago. Opposition sprung up. We sold and I left for Chicago, where I secured a position with Jack Hardin, formerly with the Edison Company.

"From there I went to Fred C. Aiken, of the Theatre Film Service, by whom I was sent to Evansville, Ind., where I was employed for about a year by J. R. Branan, of the Colonial Theatre."

NEW THEATRE IN CHICAGO

The Crawford Theatre, representing an investment of $150,000 and with a seating capacity of 700, has been opened in Chicago by the West End Amusement Company and Merle Heaney, the managers and owners. The house meets all the requirements of the law and is located at Crawford and Madison streets, the West Side.

PRESENT HOME OF THE UNIVERSAL IN OMAHA, NEB.

At one time Mr. Van Husan was employed as operator at Carl Laemmle's Vaudeville House, from where he was taken to the exchange as booker. At the expiration of a few months he became manager, which position he occupied one year and six years in charge. Since that time, he has been with the firm for nearly four years.

Omaha from the Chicago office, the business was very much scattered, and in order to maintain an average rental, the concern was forced to supply theatres in several other states, Kansas, Colorado, Montana, South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska. Now
A New Type of Amateur Projector

The Victor Animatograph Combines Professional Features with Portability—New and Desirable Features of the Machine.

Motion picture exhibitors are no longer confined to the theatre. With the improvement of projection apparatus there has come the portable machine specially designed for use in the home, schools, small halls, churches and other places where elaborate outfits are out of the question for the display of educational films. People in the trade have noticed this tendency in the field, a tendency, however, which will in no way interfere with the attendance at places of public amusement.

To supply this new demand, manufacturers have begun to make projectors which are truly portable, which can, at the same time, take full standard reels.

The machine manufactured by the Victor Animatograph Company, of Davenport, Iowa, meets all the requirements expected of an apparatus of this character. It gives the professional illumination while retaining the portable feature. It is ready for instantaneous service, and can be set up in three minutes anywhere.

The company is directing attention especially to its one great feature of illumination. This has always been a weak point in many instruments intended for general use, outside of motion picture theatres. By means of a new optical system originated by the Victor company, an instrument was produced that gives the "motion picture show" image—a ten to twelve foot image of all the required brilliancy, clearness and steadiness, by use of an arc lamp that attaches direct to an incandescent socket.

Besides illumination, the Animatograph offers several new and desirable features. One of the more important being the permanently set lamp-house for either the motion picture or stereopticon side of the machine. This means no adjustment of the lamp, the manufacturers declare, except occasional feeding of the carbons as they burn apart.

By one move, the lamp is shifted from one side to the other without disturbing the position of the arc, or clearness of the field. Carbons may also be changed without losing the arc adjustment.

The outfit is complete with every required accessory except the screen. Two small cases hold the entire outfit, and the weight being about thirty-five pounds, it can be readily seen that it is light enough for one person to handle with ease.

"THE WORLD, THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL"
(The James McNerny Syndicate—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

In England, where "The World, the Flesh and the Devil" was produced and first shown, it was an immense success, it was hailed as possessing an entertaining capacity greater than any picture of the season. This is a broad statement to make, but after witnessing it, one can affirm that it is on a par with the best pictures produced, in regard to the entertainment furnished, besides all other details; this likewise is a broad statement, but a true one. It combines the melodrama and tragedy with a strong moral lesson, a lesson that isterrible, striking and convincing.

Nicholas Brophy (Frank Esmond) the poor wretch who has sold himself to the devil, is a modern Richard III in every action. Nothing can stop him from compassing his end; he is willing to sacrifice his honor, the lives of any who step in his way, and where he does not take their lives, he ruins them. Richard III did exactly the same thing. Their careers only differ in their terminations—Richard was killed, Brophy took his own life. Both discovered that happiness and riches fail to come with the sacrifice of the lives of others.

If the picture is taken apart and each separate scene discoursed on, a book might be employed in their description. A few of the many that stand out more than the others are the fight in the mill, which is vividly realistic, and the subsequent escape of Robert and Beatrice by means of the mill wheel. The court scene in which Gertrude denounces Brophy, is significant and impressive. The scene in which Dyke finds his daughter and realizes that Brophy killed his wife, is filled with wonderful acting on the part of Charles Carte, who takes the part of Dyke. A number of others follow close after these, and no scene is at all dry or uninteresting.

The main plot is old in one way, but almost entirely new in another. As soon as the story gets under way, one becomes so engrossed in it that at the end one needs a reminder to cause him to realize that it's over. The picture as a whole is one of those that make a lasting impression on the mind, and one that will bear seeing more than once.

Others important in the cast, besides the two mentioned, are Frances Midgley, Warwick Wellington, Rupert Harvey, Nell Carter, Stella St. Andre and M. Ayer Lyons, who is the devil. He appears before Brophy seventy times to encourage him in his misdeeds.

The first reel is rightfully a prologue, in which Sir James Hall thinks that his two sons, one his rightful heir and the other illegitimate, have been exchanged, but in reality they were not. At the beginning of the third reel many years have passed, and the illegitimate son pretends he is the other, until finally he is found out.

The picture was produced by the Kineto, Limited, and written by Laurence Cowen.

FILMS FOR TOURISTS ON TRAINS
Special to The Motion Picture News

OMAHA, NEB., May 26.

It has been the sorrow of many tourists through the West to discover that they are frequently scheduled to pass some particularly picturesque locality during the night. Their grief has been turned to joy by motion pictures.

The Union Pacific Railroad, with headquarters here, recognized the loss of the tourists over its lines, and has provided a remedy in the form of motion pictures showing the scenery. The traveler can lounge in his comfortable seat and see, in color, what would otherwise be missing on account of the darkness. The pictures are thrown on a screen at the end of the car. To furnish variety, the company will make use of light comedies, news films and educational pictures. The use of the pictures will be started on the road's leading trains within a month, according to the general passenger agent.

Special photographers will be put to work soon, getting the films ready. The reels will also be used as advertisements in various theatres about the country.

The Exhibitor with a 300 seat theatre cannot afford to purchase the high priced equipment that comes within the means of the man who owns a thousand seat house.

There is a vast difference in the various theatre equipments. Some concerns make accessories for large houses. Others cater to the smaller theatres.

The greatest trouble in buying is to select equipment that will not add too great a burden to your overhead expense, and to obtain quality despite this difficulty.

The Buyers' Service Department of The Motion Picture News was designed to serve in an advisory capacity to exhibitors. The News staff includes experts in every branch of the business. Whether you want an admission sign, or the entire equipment for a theatre, we will give you every possible bit of information obtainable on prices, durability of the commodities, and their worth to your theatre.

When buying, use this free service and aid.

All that is necessary is to fill in the form below.

"THE FLOODING AND OPENING OF THE PANAMA CANAL"
(Eclectic—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

As an "educational" this film is far in advance of anything of its kind yet produced. It is a complete record of the building of the great trans-continental waterway that connects the Atlantic with the Pacific. Several pictures on this subject have been made, most of them of short length, which have been used in the various weeklies. But this picture, because of its length, is able to deal with the subject in a most thorough manner.

E. H. Hagy, the owner and photographer of the pictures, was formerly an exhibitor, and during the course of his travels landed in Panama with a traveling outfit. He commenced work taking pictures around the cities of the isthmus, and finally decided that the building of the Panama Canal was an event of such international prominence as to be worthy of at least 4,000 feet. To that end he commenced on his picture.

The first reel contains many interesting scenes around the streets. The police force of the capital are shown drilling under the guidance of their chief. These men act as soldiers in time of war and police at other times. Saluting the new flag with great ceremony was interesting and impressive. Scenes taken during a giant lottery, the custom being now abolished, gives an insight into the habits and customs of the people.

The other three reels are given over exclusively to the canal proper. Men at all their various work are shown. The giant engines, track shifters, dredges, etc., that make their work possible are all given space. Illuminating subtitles throughout explain the action of the film.

"THE PERILS OF PAULINE"
(Eclectic—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

The sixth episode of the adventures of this charming heroine, released June 2. The majority part of the two reels are taken up with scenes either in the air, or to do with airships. The audience will find it startling and interesting in the extreme. Some wonderful rope climbing and dare-devil work along this line is staged. In these scenes Pauline and Harry take their life in their hands.

Having failed in his other attempts to get Pauline's fortune by getting rid of her, Owen concocts a diabolical scheme this time, that it does not seem possible could fail.

The opening scene shows pretty Pearl White in her conservatory picking flowers. The contrast of the red roses with her white dress is particularly alluring. Meeting her there Owen suggests a trip to the aviation grounds at Fort Lee, N. J. Pauline, her love for adventure aroused, soon consents, and off they start. Harry joins them. Pauline is introduced to the villainous aeronaut who has been hired previously by Owen and Hicks, and consents to climb in the basket on the balloon. A galloping horse charges through the mob holding the ropes, and the balloon soars in the air, carrying the unfortunate girl with it.

Letting out the anchor she lands at the foot of a cliff after a thrilling ride. Harry meets her, having followed the course of the balloon with his car. Getting a long rope he slides down to meet her. The villains cut this and Harry is precipitated to the bottom. Undaunted by this, however, he starts the long climb to the balloon. This is a most daring feat. Arriving there he pulls the gas plug and on the balloon arriving at the ground takes the rope from its anchor.

On making the long climb from the cliff they are assaulted by Owen's gang, and Harry is knocked insensible, while Pauline is carried away to a lonely hut. She is at last in the hands of her captives.
An Open Letter from The Vice-Chairman of International Exposition

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 27th, 1914

Mr. Hugo Reisinger,
11 Broadway, New York City

Dear Sir:

Kindly send me as soon as possible one thousand $\frac{3}{4} \times 12$ carbons, and if my ten years experience as an exhibitor can be considered for a recommendation you can put me down as saying, that of all carbons that I have ever used the best results came from the famous “PINK LABEL”. I may also add that your Company is deserving of a great deal of credit for the stand taken in reducing the tariff on carbons, and I am sure the Exhibitors throughout the country appreciate it.

Thanking you for past favors and expecting an early delivery of the above order, I remain,

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM HILKEMEIER

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

Manager Gibson, of the Majestic, has the honor of installing the first automatic ticket selling machine in Elmira, N. Y.

The Family Theatre, Elmira, N. Y., has just closed owing to lack of patronage.

Mr. Walters, manager of the Amosus Theatre, Elmira, N. Y., which has been playing all of the General Film Company's exclusive features in addition to others, announced that the policy of outdoor from now on will be a straight-four-reel show.

The price of admission will be reduced to five cents and only first-run pictures of the license service will be shown.

Benjamin W. Tint and Isaac Bernstein, both of Brooklyn, N. Y., have leased the Alhambra Theatre in Waterbury, Conn., from the owner, Benjamin Hausdorf. Mr. Tint was formerly manager of the Broadway Theatre here. They will run the theatre along metropolitan lines.

George F. Rubbott of Waterbury, Conn., has entered the motion picture game. Mr. Rubbott has purchased the A lexuar Theatre in Naugatuck, five miles from Waterbury.

Several new motion picture theatres have just opened in Baltimore. On Monday "The Good Time," Milton avenue, near Fayette street, began business under the management of the Good Time Amusement Company, controlled by the firm of Stumpe, Bowers & Gerhardt.

It is running General Film Company service.

"The Pilimlico," on Park Heights avenue, a Baltimore suburban theatre, together with the Oceans, also in the suburbs, are among the new picture theatres close to the city.

The Princess Theatre at Mount Mis-不, the handsomest moving picture showcase in this section of the country, has been sold for the sum of $55,000 to J. V. Umer. The sale was made at public auction, the property having heretofore belonged to S. H. Floyd, Sr. The property was sold to satisfy claims aggregating $10,000. Fifteen thousand dollars cash was also added as a minimum. It did not bring quite as much as was expected. It is considered good property and leased as a moving picture house for ten years.

The Poughat'tu Theatre and Airline in Maplewood, Mo., has undergone extensive and expensive alterations in preparation for the summer season. The theatre has been transformed from pit to dome, redecorated and two new machines have been installed by the Lears Theatre Supply Company of St. Louis.

The long run of the photodrama, "Creation," which has been given to the public free at the Victoria Theatre, Los Angeles, by the International Bible Students Society, has closed. The fourth and last program was given Sunday, May 5.

The Best Theatre at Cherokee and Jefferson avenues, St. Louis, held the Lucille Love series.

Mary Pickford, King Baggot and Alice Joyce are holding down the three top runs of the St. Louis Times' favorite players this week.

The Hamilton Skydome, 5900 Eastavenue, St. Louis, is open for the summer season with a program of vaudeville and photoplays.

Building Commissioner McKeelven announces that he will not grant licences to any theatre in St. Louis unless the buildings are altered to comply with the building regulation of such structures.

Manager Davidson has closed the Lyric theatre, Hingham, Mass., and no announcement is forthcoming as to the future of the house. It is rumored, however, that Mr. Davi-不son has not retired from the picture game and that Binghamtonians have a surprise in store for them shortly.

A. W. Newman's beautiful new Family Theatre in Binghamton, N. Y., is fast nearing completion. Announcement of the opening of new ideas involved in construction, will appear shortly.

The Symphony and the Star theatres controlled by Messrs. Kohls and Korbitz now control the General Film program in Binghamton, N. Y., both houses having eliminated the ten cent admission on week days, but charging $1.00 on Sundays when they offer a special program.

Manager Van Wagner of the New Areadia Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., is working on a novel weekly program which he intends distributing throughout the neighborhood during the first part of every week and possibly on the Saturday preceding.

An entertaining printing establishment is selecting ads for the program with the result that the house-man will cost the theatre practically nothing.

Manager Bert Gilbous of the Rex theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., booked "Samson" for an entire week at his theatre, and prevailing prices were 15c and 25c.

The Blee Theatre on Gifford street, Syracuse, N. Y., has closed and the place has been remodeled for mercantile purposes.

The Pully Street Playhouse in Syracuse has also hung out the closed sign with no announcement of the reason.

Robert Simpson, a college man, is erecting an 800-room hotel across the road from his restaurant on University Hill, and expects to open about the same time as the New Regent down the street.

The Dixie Theatre, Rossville, Ky., which is soon to open with a seating capacity of 306. Six reels will be shown daily. The General program will be varied.

The Powell Lumber Company, Lewistown, Ky., has started a moving picture theatre. It is operating three nights a week. Universal service is being used.

A theatre for colored patrons only is to be opened at Bardstown, Ky., by the Rev. A. Madison. He has purchased a used motion-picture machine. Another house for negroes is to be conducted by E. Smith, Paris, Ky.

The Preston Amusement Company, Louisville, is about ready to start its air-dome for the season. Manager Groves has a 6-A Powers machine installed. The weather seems to have settled down, and the air-dome has a good opportunity to show off advantage.

Carpenter & Johnson, Louisville, Ky., cameramen, have ordered a new Motionograph machine and portable in-ground booth. They will handle news features and make a specialty of work for commercial organizations.

Harry Ellis, Eminence, Ky., has arranged to conduct a picture show in the opera house.

When it was moved abroad in this city, recently, that the play "Quincy Adams Sawyer" was to be used for the "movies" at Sound Beach, Conn., a short distance from New Haven, about five thousand school children journeyed thither from New Haven, Bridgeport and other neighboring cities to witness the "fun." A squad of policemen was required to prevent the enthusiastic youngsters from crowding "into the picture." The film was exhibited at the "Bijou" Theatre in New Haven not long afterward, and attracted record-breaking crowds.

Ventilation  Cooling  Heating

"TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM" has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don't waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue N tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There’s one film that’s recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for “Eastman” on the perforated margin.

Novelty Slide Buys out Wheeler Latter Retires After Twelve Years—Entire Equipment Taken Over, Including Ten Thousand Valuable Negatives.

One of the interesting events of the week is the purchase of the Hudson Transparency Corporation by the Novelty Slide Company of this city, and retirement from the slide business of Mr. DeWitt C. Wheeler, who for the past twelve years has been producing high class song slides.

The entire business, including Mr. Wheeler's famous darkroom equipment, cameras and lenses, and over ten thousand valuable negatives has been taken over by the Novelty Slide Company, of 67 West Twenty-third street, New York, who will conduct the business from now on. The same high quality work which has made the Wheeler name famous will be maintained.

Joseph F. Coufal, general manager of the Novelty Slide Company, said: "For the past year, the Novelty Slide Company has been doing a remarkable business; in fact, I may say we have been doing the largest slide business in the country. An opportunity was offered us by Mr. Wheeler to take over his long established business and I felt that the addition of this excellent equipment and the exceptional value of Mr. Wheeler's negatives would place the Novelty Slide Company in a position to execute orders for song and lecture slides, as well as for the regular commercial slides that we have been producing. This gives us the best photographic installation and largest capacity of any slide company in the world."

BIG WILKES-BARRE THEATRE SOLD
Special to The Motion Picture News
Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 4.
One of the largest motion picture houses in this section of Pennsylvania was sold when the Alhambra Theatre, on the public square, this city, changed hands. It was sold by the Posten Brothers to Charles Bar- tholomew, who is new to the business, having acted for several years as head clerk at the Redington Hotel.

The new owner immediately made extensive changes, and reports that business has taken a decided jump.

J. C. Rohn, who managed the Alhambra for the Postens, has been transferred as manager for the same firm at the Sun Theatre. Clayton Heebner, who was in charge of the Sun, resigned and sold his interest in the house. He will enter the motion picture field in the Middle West.

Ralph S. Sturgeon, director of the Vitagraph's Western Company at Santa Monies, Cal., has returned to the coast after a month's vacation.

Under the direction of manager Julius Stern, the Vitagraph in San Francisco, is soon to be enlarged. With this enlargement, according to Mr. Stern, will go decided improvements in the way of new lighting systems, more and enlarged fromeetage walls, with improvements made in the old ones, a quantity of fresh scenery and new executive offices. Mr. Stern states that the improvements and improvements will be made with an eye of facilitating the production of plays rather than increasing the present lamp output.

The happy family at the Edison studio is reunited. The forces that have been performing in Edison films for the past seven months at Jacksonville, Fla., under the direction of C. Jay Williams and Richard Ridgley are now back in business at the Bronx studio.

"The Skull," a sensational two-reel melodrama, has been completed at the Imp studio, New York, under the direction of Frank Craven, Alexander Gaden, Dorothy Phyllis, Ruth Donnelly and William Welsh play the important roles.

The members of a family in Washington, D. C., have been so greatly impressed with Olive Oatman's performance in an Edison film "The Powers of the Air" that they have sent her a 1909 mail book on the B. & O., and promised a grand celebration when she pays them a visit in the capital city.

The Lutoski Features of Los Angeles will manufacture two features per month of four reels or more in length. Constance Crabtree and Arthur Maulde will star in one series, while modern pictures manufactured on the burning questions of the day will be utilized for the second output. A large investment has been made in studio and equipment. Joseph Shapian has quite an interest in the company, acting in capacity of general manager.

A Hawaiian centipede, eight inches in length, from William Clifford, leading man of the Universal "161 Bison," company, on the sick list for eight days. The centipede attached itself to Clifford's leg while he was enacting a scene in "Tribal War in the South Seas," near Honolulu. Rather than spell the scene, Clifford withstood the insect's stings until the camera had stopped.

Neva Gerber has been engaged by the Meiers. Hochheimer's play "The Love of Edith" is taken in the productions of the Biopho Feature Films.

On the completion of the one reeler, "An Old Rag Doll," Herbert Bixenman will commence a two-reel melodrama, "When the World Was Silent." It is from the pen of Harvey Gates.

Francis Ford is working on Number 11 of the "Lulu Lee" series. The Mexican Rebel gets into the present two-reeler.

A three reel production entitled "The Cruise of the Hell Ship" will shortly be released by the Biopho Feature Films through their American and English agents.

Harold Lockwood is taking the part of Tillford Wheeler in "The County Chairman" at the Eastern Studio of the Famous Players. Macklyn Arbuckle is the star and Allan Dwan is producing. Russell Basset is the county storekeeper and Willis Sweetman has his first bit part.

Work on rating the present buildings and constructing the new theatre began the first of June. The house will carry an elaborate front and will seat 900 people.

Manager W. Schwartzmeyer, of the Owl Theatre, on Byram street at the corner of Jefferson, Buffalo, N. Y., is one of the city's "live-wire" managers. A line is seen in front of this theatre every evening. The Owl is located in Buffalo's great East side business district.

The Stat Theatre, at State and Broad streets, Trenton, N. J., one of the largest of the second-class motion picture houses of the city, feeling the necessity of competing with the larger houses of amusement, has added four and five reel feature pictures.

MOTION pictures are now being shown in a large open-air pavilion at the White City Park, Trenton, N. J., a large pleasure resort just outside the city limits. Three reel features are being specialized.

Six-reel sensations are now being shown at the Royal Theatre, South Broad street, Trenton, N. J., the Park, Pennington avenue near Warren, the Bijou, South Clinton and Chestnut avenues and at the Majestic, South Broad street. Lubin films are being used.

TO THE TRADE—

The dispute between the Lewis Pennant Features and Mesier, Klaw & Erlanger with reference to the right to the use of the title WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN in connection with the Lewis Pennant Features play produced known as WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN or RESCUED IN THE CLOUDS has been mutually settled in the satisfaction of both contending parties.

It is agreed that the Lewis Pennant Feature be known under its present companion title of RESCUED IN THE CLOUDS so as not to confuse it with that of the Klaw & Erlanger release known as WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN.

The Klaw & Erlanger release known as WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN will, however, be sold under its present title of Rescued in the Clouds, but the exceptions above noted, will continue to be used. Both Klaw & Erlanger and the Lewis Pennant Features are extremely pleased with the mutual satisfactory settlement of these differences.

Radium Gold Fibre Screen

Why? Because the Radium Gold Fibre Screen (guaranteed for 5 years) gives the most perfect picture in the world, due to the blending of the lights harmoniously. Instead of the light from a moving picture machine being white—as is commonly supposed—by the time it reaches the projection surface it is golden. A white screen gives a glare. The Radium Gold Fibre Screen blends a golden screen with a golden light. Results: No glare; no flicker; front seats filled; satisfied customers; saving to you in current from one-third to one-half.

Good—All Through

No finer feature films have ever found their way into the hands of the exhibitors than those released by WARNER’S FEATURES, Inc.

Three Reasons Why

1st.—We buy Open Market films exclusively, rejecting the unfit and accepting only those that measure up to our standards of “the best in motion pictures.”

2nd.—We pay producers of note more for their negatives than any other independent organization can afford to pay, thus encouraging the manufacture of more and better feature films.

3rd.—It is our good fortune to deal with producers having in their employ recognized stars of the screen, capably supported by artists of ability.

Net Result:—Lavish photoplays; well acted; brimming over with action, and possessing that requisite of all good pictures—perfect photography.

Write for interesting booklet describing our de luxe feature service.

LAUNCH NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE CAMPAIGN AT CONVENTION

Project for Trade Organization Embracing All Departments of the Business Set Forth at Thursday's Session at Grand Central Palace—National Board of Censorship Endorsed

Delegates Protest Against Multiple Reels from Regular Program Producers

Preliminaries to the equal adjustment of conditions under which exhibitors labor mark the activities of delegates present this week at the convention in New York City of the International Motion Picture Association.

A uniform schedule of rental prices, a resolution calling upon American exhibitors to support the National Board of Censorship in its campaign against state regulation of films, tentative opposition to manufacturers who have entered the exhibiting field, and general tirades against the faults of exchanges, constituted the important matters brought before the convention the first three days of the week.

More vital to exhibitors even than any of the topics of the convention is a fact of international importance brought clearly into view with the business of the New York assemblage less than one-half completed.

A way has been opened, and a path made clear for a National Board of Trade. Whether the New York convention will be able to accomplish it remains to be seen. But the topics under discussion on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, demonstrate the urgent need for an organization of sufficient scope and jurisdiction to act as arbitrators in the settlement of the many unsatisfactory relations now existing between exhibitors, exchangers and manufacturers.

And this National Board of Trade will, first of all, benefit the exhibitor. This convention is doing its mightiest to accomplish a worthy purpose. But its delegates are men with businesses, beset with personal interests too great to permit a division of their time. A need for trade organization specialists has been manifested, men of experience in trade cooperation. Whether this need will materialize remains for the convention to decide.

Despite the efforts made to maintain a smooth-running, business-discussing convention, there were many loopholes. There were times during the several sessions when the convention was in disorder. Parliamentary proceedings were lacking in many respects. Urgent need of a constitution and by-laws under which to conduct the various discussions and arguments was apparent on several occasions. These faults, while they did not detract to a great extent from the accomplishments of the sessions, would, if eliminated, have resulted in a greater degree of harmonious action.

But to the men who fostered and promoted the convention, is due a measure of credit they will probably never receive. Nerve, sheer and forceful, initiative pioneer in character, and a faith in their beliefs steadfast in the face of ridicule and scorn, combined to produce an exhibitors' convention—the forerunner of that which promises to elevate the motion-picture business to a plane of solid commercialism, free from the hazardous methods, questionable actions, lax systems and deleterious internal strife that have characterized the first few years of its existence.

They plunged, boldly and determinedly, into a thing unattempted and beyond the mental grasp of others with greater power and experience. And when they emerged, with the closing of the convention on Saturday, the business associations of the men who manufacture, rent and market motion pictures will bear a new and more intimate and lasting relation with the other.

Whether the convention accomplishes all of the minor ambitions placed before it, to it, and the men who organized it, will belong the privilege of having demonstrated, by their own handicaps, the great financial, commercial and constructive value of a National Board of Trade embracing representatives of every branch of the industry.

They have shown, with results thus far accomplished despite a lack of breadth of vision in trade organization, and a deep and intimate knowledge of the technique of commercial cooperation, the great and wonderful opportunities presented to a National Board of Trade, conducted by men of determined integrity, ability, originality and possessed of a thorough understanding of trade arbitration.

And out of this convention, unique in its discrepancies when viewed in the light of the future, will be born a National Board of Trade, to which every exhibitor, exchange man and allied individual may turn for the prompt, impartial and just disposition of questions involving and affecting their interests, to the satisfaction and contentment of all concerned.

And when this achievement is made, and then only, will the motion-picture industry be ranked as a business of solidity, safety and universal prosperity.

The Thursday afternoon session of the convention was given over to the discussion of this all-important question—the formation of a national trade organization.
THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

The keynote, from which the convention took its cue for the action that followed, was pronounced by Jacob William Binder; his name has been prominent for years with movements for the organization of various trades and industries, and his qualifications to speak on this topic with authority gave him the unqualified attention of the exhibitors gathered before him.

The full text of Mr. Binder's speech follows:

MR. PRESIDENT and Gentlemen of the Convention:

The subject of the organization of your tremendous industry—said to rank fourth in the country to-day—from the standpoint of wealth, and, what is important, with three hands confronted me. I shall write them on this blackboard. They were:

1. The magnitude of the business.
2. Its latest possibilities.
3. Its disorganization.

Today, as I stand here face to face with you, the men who have made this business and who are carrying it forward; as I look at your great picture, in the light of the knowledge that has come from a close study, this same trilogy of facts still confronts me. Its magnitude has been multiplied many times over; its undeveloped possibilities are still there in a great measure, and, as for its disorganization, I regret to say, it too, has grown with the years.

But I say this in no spirit of hostile criticism, for I have the vision of the great future of your art, and many of my very best friends are among you. I say it, but I say it with a purpose: with three hands confronting me.

There are men—keen, trained business men—coming to the front as producers; there are men, artists, who, not having had time to correctly diagnose the disease which threatens your industry and art, but who, at the same time, know what is necessary to save it and render it normal to-day, and who have the courage and the determination to do that TOTALLY.

I TAKE it, Mr. President, and gentlemen, that you want me to speak to you of the possibility of a better trade association. I want to approach this from the three great divisions of the industry:

1. The PRODUCER, THE EXCHANGE MAN AND THE EXHIBITOR.

This is a broad and strong statement. I do not propose to solve all of the problems peculiar to you as exhibitors, the scope of censorship, which is already a very real peril; the price you pay for your product. I address myself especially to the last item—number three—the palpable disorganization of your industry as it exists today and what shall be done to help you to meet these problems.

In doing this I shall, following my youthful training as a newspaper man, "stand my story on its head" and tell the big fact first. Here it is:

ALL THE PROBLEMS WHICH CONCERN THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE, CAN BE SOLVED BY NATIONAL TRADE ORGANIZATION MADE UP OF REPRESENTATIVES FROM THE THREE GREAT DIVISIONS OF THE INDUSTRY.

No, I do not mean the organizations, the trade guilds, the trade associations, the trade societies. I do not mean any of these things. I do not mean the organizations of a few hundred men. The Producer, the Exchange Man and the Exhibitor.

I am going to name these industries and businesses and pick out a few at random to show just what such an organization as I propose has done for the business as a whole and for each individual concern in it from a dollar-and-cents standpoint, as well as from the standpoint of the public. I shall emphasize the importance of the posters and other advertising matter you shall use; legal legislation concerning Sunday closing; oppressive building regulations; unfair competition and all the rest of a few of the problems which face you, as exhibitors, are painfully familiar.

large laboratories in Washington. Its object is to definitely standardize all canned foods so that the consumer may know exactly what he is buying when he buys a can.

The association also maintains a test laboratory in Washington owned by itself, where the newly canned food products are submitted for testing and monthly reports of new and improved products are issued accordingly. Nothing is left to chance. It is the honest belief of the association—"can have the benefit of any work done by the association. He doesn't have to ask for it; we work for it. He sends his representatives to the meetings and tells them about this. We simply CANNOT AFFORD TO HAVE A POOR SLOVENLY OR INCOMPETENT CANNER IN THE BUSINESS. ONLY THE BEST IS GOOD ENOUGH. DISCOUNT AIDS FOR INNOVATED CANNED FOODS THAT IS FELT THROUGH THE WHOLE IN-DUSTRIAL SYSTEM THAT THIS COUNTRY IS SO PROUD OF.

This association has spent as much as $8,000 in investigating a single case of alleged poisoning from canned goods. We aim to investigate every such case that is reported in the press. It is true that in most instances unfortunately, the product is not one which we manufacture —but that does not matter. The association is out to locate every can-manufacturer and clean up his act on the market, whether he is a member of the association or not.

And we shall not be contented until this line of product is the best standardized and the most carefully and inventively manufactured line offered to the consumer. This work could never be done without a vigorous trade association."

M. R. PRESIDENT, I have said previously that the problems solved by these national trade associations, while differing in name, are all those which make the motion picture industry a success. To prove how true this is, I will just repeat what I have said regarding the picture that is due in the future. Substituting for the name "canner" the words MOTION PICTURE. (Does it?)

Are not the cases exactly parallel? Has not the motion picture been too much made a problem of the press and public?

Still another invaluable field of trade-building is suggested by the system of wholesalers, like Board of Credit in the city of the retailer—especially the country merchant—in better business methods. This association is constructive, shopping the retailer—especially in the country—in the right way of figuring costs and profits; in the necessity of charging interest on overdue accounts; in a more simple, consistent and informative system of more careful attention to discount terms and opportunities, and in the advantages of more businesslike accounting with his customers and his creditors.

Something of the same work is also done by the National Association of Independent Film Dealers, whose effort is especially directed to educating the smaller wholesalers and jobbers in a more accurate system of cost-keeping. As an independent organization, the only competition to be ferred as a menace to the industry as a whole, that of the jobber who does not know his costs and whose business is run on a guesswork.

One of the biggest jobs of the up-to-date business association is that of reducing such black markets, while preserving the vital history of its kind of motionfacturing—gathering, digesting and recording every kind of information of practical value to every man in that line of production, so that it may be instantly available and understandable to all.

Only an association can do this peculiar and invaluable work in a comprehensive way. The individual manufacturer cannot collect the statistics of his competitor's plant, and the outsider is barred for the same reason. It is obvious that the posters and the express, the servants serving the good of all, is recognized as the proper agent for this work, and the association can do it with the minimum cost to the individual manufacturer.

M. R. PRESIDENT, these instances are only a very few out of the hundreds of instances I might quote covering the operations of successful trade associations on a national or cooperative scale. In the cases I have cited the associations have been organized for the purpose of maintaining the costs their members' charged, annually from $425,000 to $525,000.

This is a result of the aid of the up-to-date business association, one of them the astounding fact that the dollars and cents value of a single discovery made through its Washington bureau working in conjunction with the Department of Agriculture, had more than paid all the expenses of its activities for the seven years of its organized life. Not, mind you, in higher standards of goods, although those had been set; not in better trade ethics although those, too, had been established, but in cold hard dollars.

I am convinced, Mr. President and gentlemen, that what has been done in other lines of trade can be done equally well, if not better, by those engaged in the motion picture industry. I am unwilling to admit for a moment that an art which has advanced as rapidly and as wonderfully on its technical and artistic sides as has yours, cannot, at the same time, reach a similar degree of helpful, efficient, cooperative endeavor on its business side.

From the first crude short-length reel of motion pictures to the magnificent lengths of the feature picture, but the advance has been so rapid that the end is not yet. From the first crude haphazard ingenues of your art to the great machine for producing, distributing and exhibiting the most important pictures which the world has ever seen, today, an even further cry, and, here, too, THE END IS NOT YET.

By reason of the fact that everybody in the business has been so closely connected with the film and for the most part that they have had no time for study along cooperative lines, it may be that this branch of the motion picture industry is, as yet, not carry forward its work shall be, technically speaking, outsiders. This brings us to the case, not alone in the history of the the other trade organizations which can be mentioned, but in the motion picture history is full of instances of a similar character.

Matthew Arnold, the English writer, gave us the cable: Bell, who gave us the telephone, were all outsiders. Although he was an electrician nor had either any apprenticeship or training in any electrical profession, a painter of portraits; Field was a merchant and Bell was a professor of elocution.

Carnegie was not a steel maker when he began; he was a railroad official, and originally a telegrapher; Judge Gary, who is to-day the head of the Steel Trust, was a lawyer. E. H. Harriman, the greatest railway operator of modern times, was a Wall Street broker; East- man, the creator of Kodaks was a bank clerk; while Goodwin, who builds the huge power plants and% made a photographic negative, and to whose genius is due your great industry, was an Episcopal preacher. Mr. President, that it is entirely possible—nay, more than that—it is almost a certainty that the men who shall bring to the movie three branches of the great industries, will learn their planning and organization accordingly. Nothing is left to chance. It is the honest belief of the association—"can have the benefit of any work done by the association. He doesn't have to ask for it; we work for it. He sends his representatives to the meetings and tells them about this. We simply CANNOT AFFORD TO HAVE A POOR SLOVENLY OR INCOMPETENT CANNER IN THE BUSINESS.

The resolution was drawn up Tuesday morning by Sam

Bullock, of the Resolution Committee, and although read to the assembled delegates, was not passed upon then. Discussion of this subject was held over until Wednesday morning and speeches by exhibitors and others were limited to three minutes each.

The Wednesday morning session of the convention commenced at 11.15 A.M., with the officials in their places. There was an attendance of 115 delegates present. The most important item taken up in the morning session was the solution of the censorship problem. An amendment was added by Sam Bullock as follows:

"Be it further resolved that we urge all exhibitors to apply for associate membership in the National Board of Censorship in order that they may be entitled to receive the weekly bulletin and all the information regarding the work and deliberations of the Board." After considerable talk, the entire resolution, together with the resolution above mentioned, was passed by a unanimous vote. Lester C. Smith, of the National Board, suggested that the amendment be made to read, "That all manufacturers be asked to submit all their films to the National Board for inspection." Orrin G. Cooks, one of the secretaries of the National Board, stated that, on consultation with other officials of the National Board, they had decided that it would be possible to give exhibitors each week all of their literature with the exception of their bulletins for $8 a year, and that all literature and bulletins could be had for $8.

Delegate Denton, of New Jersey, suggested that the exhibitors should have a representative upon the Board.

Sam Bullock, of Ohio, by a unanimous vote, was requested to speak on what he had accomplished in that state against censorship. Mr. Bullock, one of the hardest workers against legalized censorship in the country, read the bulletins sent out by the Cleveland Photoplay Board of Trade. This was followed by letters until the interest of all the Ohio exhibitors had been aroused.

The results showed that out of 846 exhibitors asked regarding their views on Censorship, only two were for legalized censorship in any form.

The 844 were for the repeal of the Ohio state censorship law and, concluding his remarks, Mr. Bullock stated just what the intentions of himself and his associates were.

"We will put in a repeal bill and will work our screens until next winter, at which time there won't be a single censor left. The exhibitor can and must become his own censor by getting bulletins of the National Board."

This was followed by an address by W. Stephen Bush. Mr. Bush took the floor for probably twenty minutes and was given an ovation for his speech, "The Moving Picture and the Press."

Tuesday's session began at approximately 11 o'clock, with seventy-eight delegates present.

Frederick P. Howe, Director of the People's Institute and head of the National Board of Censorship, was introduced by Mr. Phillips, the National Director, to speak on "Censorship." His introduction consisted of a short review of the original plans of the Censorship Board. "I am in absolute sympathy with those who believe in the freedom of the films," said he, "but at the present time it is an impossibility. We will say that there are twenty manufacturers. Nineteen of them are absolutely straight, and are working for the uplift of the business and are doing everything in their power to make it desirable."

"The twentieth man, however, is the one that causes the need for censorship. The motion-picture industry is cleaner by far than thousands of other trades, but the power which it has over its tremendous following is another justification for censorship."

Mr. Howe followed this by some illuminating remarks regarding the system used by the National Board of Censorship. "If the exhibitors of the country would co-operate with the National Board, the question of censorship would immediately become something tangible," he went on. "You who are gathered here to-day are indeed a representative of the other men in this great industry. If a picture reaches you in which the eliminations have not been made, which you feel necessary, why not write the National Board regarding that picture? It very often happens that we order pictures cut and which the exchange, for some reason or other, does not alter; it is then up to you."

"In conclusion," he said, "I want the motion pictures to be free. I want the Federal Board out of it because with the Government interfering in something which they know nothing about, the freedom of the picture is sacrificed." [A prolonged clapping followed the talk.]

Orrin G. Cooks was also called on to speak. Following Mr. Howe's thought, he brought strongly to bear on the necessity of strong co-operation between the board and the exhibitor. Considering the fact that they were passing on 185 pictures a week, this co-operation was imperative. The merits of several plans was discussed by him, principally the method now being worked in Detroit.

"In Detroit a number of exhibitors got together and resolved to do away with the official censor. To this end a committee composed of their own members passed on all the films and in this manner controlled the situation. You must get hold of wild-cat manufacturers and force them to do the right thing and then get them out of business. Why will you allow one man to show poor pictures made by these so-called 'wild-cat' manufacturers, and in this manner make the whole of you look like horse thieves?"

The afternoon session was a little late in getting under way. Practically the entire session was taken up in debating the various clauses in the report of the board. The chairman of the Grievance Committee, J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, was not present. Edward M. Saunders, manager of the Universal Film Exchange, was on hand and spoke for fifteen minutes, following which a general debate was had.

It was at first intended that a discussion of the report be held between the manufacturers, exchange men and the exhibitors. However as so few of the former were present, the discussion took place between the assembled members. A committee consisting of the Grievance Committee was appointed to see the manufacturers and show them the report and return their findings to the convention by Friday morning.

It was the opinion of a number that the manufacturers had always been willing to meet any exhibitors more than half way in the explaining of difficulties. Mr. Rosengarten, of the Cosmos Feature Film Company, was among those present representing the manufacturers and stated his willingness to meet any of the exhibitors half way and straighten out their hardships.

The report was then taken up by sections and discussed by various members.

The exposition and convention was opened exactly on scheduled time by President Woodrow Wilson on Monday, June 8. The opening ceremonies consisted of the undraping of the President's picture at the north side of the huge hall when a button, connected electrically with the White House, was pressed by Mr. Wilson. At the same time the New York Catholic Protective Board rendered "The Star Spangled Banner" and the representative throng loudly applauded. The tableau was a most impressive one.

Unfortunately, Mayor John Purroy Mitchel, of New York, was unable to be present, but a welcome was extended to the gathered exhibitors by the City of New York through the Borough President, Marcus Marks. In a few strong words, Mr. Marks bid the visiting delegates feel at home and assured them that figuratively the keys of the world's second city was at their disposal.

"On behalf of the city administration," said Mr. Marks, "I welcome the motion-picture exhibitors of the United States and Canada. We offer them not merely the welcome of the city's streets, buildings, hotels, theatres! we offer them the welcome of the heart of the world."

The Reverend W. Miller Reid, of Lincolnshire, England, also addressed a few remarks from the platform.

Madame Alma Gluck, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera House, and undoubtedly one of the world's greatest

Pennsylvania Censors Face Three Suits

Universal and Mutual File First; Second Entered by Mutual Company of New York—Third Is Filed by Exhibitors of Quaker City—Assail Constitutionality of Law and Seek Injunction—Arrests Will Come June 15 if Restraining Order Is Not Granted

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Philadelphia, June 12, 1914.

The first guns of the battle against censorship in Pennsylvania were fired on June 2, when three suits in equity were filed against J. Lewis Breitinger and Mrs. E. C. Nixon, comprising the Pennsylvania state board of censors of motion pictures.

The suit of the most vital importance is the one entered into jointly by the Mutual Film Corporation, of Philadelphia, and the Interstate Films Company, the representatives of the Universal company in eastern Pennsylvania. The bill in equity was signed by James H. Butner for Mutual, Vernon R. Carrick for Interstate. The second suit names as plaintiffs the Mutual Film Corporation, of New York, with offices at Buffalo, and is signed by Arthur Lucas, who is the eastern district manager for Mutual.

The third suit names Albert E. Brown, William Schenckmayer and Vernon R. Carrick, trading as the Overbrook Theatre.

The complainants in this case are exhibitors and claim that to enforce the law at this time would be denying the exhibitors the right to test its legality.

The complaining companies seek to have the act establishing the censor board declared unconstitutional on the ground that it imposes upon them, "in a manner wholly beyond the police powers possessed by the general assembly of the commonwealth, the legal duty, as a condition precedent to the rights of your patrons to rent films, reels and stereopticon views, of first obtaining the approval of the defendants to the films, which approval, under the terms of the act, may be withheld by the defendants if, in their unlimited judgment and discretion, formed without any hearing whatever, and without the right of any appeal thereto, said films are sacrilegious, obscene, indecent, immoral or such as tend to corrupt morals."

The complainants aver that the recent decision, on April 25 last, of the pamphlet containing the rules and regulations of the censorship board, did not give them time to comply with its provisions. The censors entered office on January 20, but did not begin their duties until April 4.

The imposition of a tax of $2.50 upon each original film and its copies, approved by the board, is arbitrary and contrary to the constitution of the commonwealth, the complainants aver. These fees, it is complained, are exorbitant.

At the present time 15,000 films are being exhibited throughout the state, it is set forth, and at least 700 films, many of which are duplicates, are ready for release each week, all of which are to be inspected by the censors.

Aside from asking that the act be declared unconstitutional, the complainant companies seek an injunction restraining the censors from enforcing its provisions, and also to restrain them from investigating films which, it is claimed, could not possibly fall under the act.

"One of the most important elements in determining the rental charge of a film is the novelty thereof and the proximity of the date of the production of it to the release date," relates the bill in equity. "Were the complainants obliged to await the approval of the board of censors on all their films, it is contended the delay which would necessarily follow under present conditions would mean a tremendous financial loss."

The act creating the board of censors, the companies charge by its provisions, places an embargo on all engaged in the motion picture business, and prohibits them from carrying on a lawful business, pending an arbitrary ruling of the censors.

The producers further protest vigorously against being compelled to provide waiting rooms, paraphernalia, etc., at their own expense for the display of the reel and films while being inspected by the censors.

To the provision of the act imposing a penalty of $50 for the first offense and a fine of $100 for each subsequent act of exhibiting pictures unapproved by the board of censors, the bill of complaint declaresthat thousands of dollars would be collected daily for disregard of this requirement.

The penalties, it is affirmed, are extreme and excessive, and intended to limit or prevent a test of the validity of the act, and to so burden any challenge of its legality that the complainant and others in a similar business would be necessarily constrained to submit and comply with its requirements, in the fear that their property rights would be destroyed by criminal proceedings.

The burden of paying the fine is placed upon the exhibitors, it is pointed out, and is for the purpose of deterring them from renting the films pending a decision on the legality of the act. This condition, it is alleged, is hampering the exchanges from carrying on their business, and is an infringement on their property rights.

The act is at variance with the constitution of this state, it is contended, as it confers on the censors legislative powers in determining the standard of the films which are invested only in the general assembly. In violation of the Pennsylvania and United States constitutions, it is contended, the act abridges the rights of the complainants and others to freely exhibit films to the public. The subjects which the films will present, it is declared, are dramatizations, current events of historical and news interest which have appeared in hundreds of magazines, newspapers and periodicals throughout the country, and which are not violative of the laws.

J. M. Solomon, Jr.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 11.

There is practically a condition of armed truce existing between the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors and the film manufacturers who have organized and brought a suit in Philadelphia to test the constitutionality of the censorship law which went into effect in this state on June 1.

Under this tacit agreement, the board is not yet making arrests of exhibitors who display films without the stamp of the board's approval. It is understood, however, that unless there is a restraining order. issued by the court by June 15, the board will be in a position to begin enforcing the law on that date.

Inquiry at the censors’ headquarters here to-day brought the information that producers are beginning to submit films for examination of the censors. The board has passed on several hundred films and is disposing of them at the rate of fifteen or twenty a day at the temporary projecting rooms established in Philadelphia. In about two weeks the board expects to have permanent projecting rooms established.

The board has issued a formal statement in which it is said, after repeating its attitude as explained in previous issues of The Motion Picture News, that the fact that some of the manufacturers have united to test the law in the courts “will not prevent the board from passing on other films which may be submitted, and that unless the restraining order is issued by June 15, “any person violating the act will be arrested and fined.”

The theatre is equipped with a full orchestra and also a Wurlitzer Unit Orchestra. The house is beautifully decorated and all the latest devices to insure the comfort of the patrons are installed. The admission price is adults, ten cents; children, five cents.

The entrance to the theatre is through the Pictorium, and is located two blocks west of the Bronx Park Subway station.

SUNDAY QUESTION ARISES IN MISSISSIPPI

Special to The Motion Picture News. Natchez, Miss., June 10.

Because Sunday baseball has been started here and permission has been asked to operate motion picture theatres, members of the Protestant Ministers’ Association have appealed to District Attorney Marion Reilly. A great majority of the people of this city, especially the working class, favor Sunday amusements such as prayer in nearly every other church of this state, and it is understood that if the preachers insist that all the laws be enforced to the letter the district attorney will close all of the cigar, news and confectionery stands and put the “blue laws” into active operation.

581,000 Feet Condemned by Quebec Censors

Annual Report Just Issued—Condemned Pictures Confiscated—Loss of $75,000 to Producers—11,241,000 Feet of Film Examined.

Special to The Motion Picture News. Montreal, P. Q., June 11.

THE Quebec board of censors have issued their report for the year, and in it they give the following figures:

FILMS EXAMINED.
Subjects 9,553
No. of reels (1,000 ft.) 11,241, or 11,241,000 ft.

PASSED WITHOUT MODIFICATION.
Subjects 1,181
No. of reels (1,000 ft.) 9,396, or 9,396,000 ft.

PASSED WITH MODIFICATION.
Subjects 66
No. of reels (1,000 ft.) 1,360

PROHIBITED AS A WHOLE.
Subjects 506
Reels 361
Length 1,056, or 3,168 ft.

The most frequent causes of prohibition, or of the cutting of films, were immorality, parodies of ministers and of the mysteries of religion, vulgarity, anti-patriotic scenes, representations of contemporary crime, suggestive stories, white slave films, and the representation of the passion and of Biblical events for commercial purposes.

“We are glad to be able to announce,” says the report, “that as a result of the firm stand taken by the board in regard to suggestive, immoral, and other objectionable films, the film manufacturers and the artists in their employ have come to realize that it is useless to spend money upon the production of such films either for the province of Quebec or for Canada as a whole. Thus the general standard of films submitted is of a much higher character than formerly, and is improving all the time.

“It was, perhaps, but to be expected that censorship work should arouse a certain amount of criticism. It is easy to understand this, when the cost of films is taken into consideration. Each film condemned means a direct loss to the parties submitting it. The films cost an average of 10 cents a foot or no less than $100 per film of 1,000 feet. During the year 581 films of 1,000 feet have been rejected in their entirety, and in addition 33,526 feet have been eliminated from authorized subjects.

“These condemned films and scenes are not returned, but are kept in the archives of the bureau, thus being confiscated. It is calculated that the cost of films which have thus been condemned amounts to no less than $75,000. It will be seen, therefore, that the confiscation of films is a serious matter for the companies presenting them, but the board of censure has not allowed this consideration to weigh with it for one moment in its task of safeguarding the public morality.”

It Makes Comic Opera and the “Legitimate” Take Back Seats—Motion Picture Houses Full All the Time

Special to The Motion Picture News. New Orleans, June 10.

THE final opposition, if such it might be called, to motion pictures has disappeared with the failure of the New Orleans Comic Opera Company. After several weeks of intellectual efforts to combat the lure of film drama the company has disbanded and the members have returned to New York City. With the exception of vaudeville interspersed with films there is no theatre now running in the city.

Backed by New Orleans capital a high-grade company was engaged in New York to produce standard comic opera at popular prices during the summer months. The Crescent, one of the two Klau & Erlanger houses here, was leased and great preparations were made for a big season. The first week the house was practically “papered” and thereafter the management had trouble in getting rid of the passes. After several weeks of expense and high house rent the local “angels” decided that they had had enough.

Backers of the company then hit upon what they believed a solution of the problem. Permission was obtained from the park commissioners to use a building at City Park, the largest of the municipal pleasure grounds, the only return being that the company should give a short concert nightly before the regular performance. This concession was not enough, however, and the company sought the street railways donation of free transportation and a contribution toward the band. This was refused and the company disbanded.

Every motion picture house in the city, however, is in full operation. Though there is a large exodus from the city beginning the middle of May and lasting during the summer the film houses declare that they have not felt the difference. On the other hand, more extra-admission performances are being put on each week.

R. E. PITCHARD,
"TRAFFIC IN SOULS" CASE COLLAPSES

Prosecutor's Admission He "Didn't Know Why Sheehan Had Been Arrested." Ends Farce in Waterbury Court—Regarded as Blow to Local Censorship—Two Exhibitors Fined for Violation of Minors' Law; Both Appeal

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Waterbury, Conn., June 11.

Local censorship was virtually given a "black eye" here Tuesday, June 2, when the case of the State against James R. Sheehan, charged with exhibiting an allegedly obscene and immoral motion picture, "Traffic in Souls," at the Jacques Theatre a short time ago, was nulled in the district court.

Attorney E. F. Cole, a former judge, defended Mr. Sheehan and he made a great argument for his client, which eventually led to a discharge. Attorney Cole said the picture which caused his arrest was one which showed the inside workings of the white slave traffic and was based on actual reports of the Rockefeller commission especially raised to look into this matter.

"The newspapers and clergy have been decrying white slave conditions," said the lawyer "and this picture was evidently made to aid them in their desire to stamp out this nefarious trade. It was evidently manufactured to give the public a fair idea of the evil and also to satisfy glamour and romance. The same picture was exhibited in Bridgeport and New Haven without protest.

"Mr. Lynch, our prosecuting attorney and Mr. Beach, our superintendent of police, went up to the theatre on the first day the picture was exhibited, saw it shown, and apparently found nothing wrong with it. Two days later Mr. Lynch issued a warrant. I suppose there is a wide range as to what ought and what ought not to be shown."

[Note—The picture was shown for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The warrant was issued on the last day, Saturday.]

Continuing. Attorney Cole said the picture told a very pretty love story. "The hero was a policeman," the lawyer went on. "He saved two girls who had just arrived in New York. He was a clean-cut officer of the law to whom the girls told their story after certain agents had endeavored to take charge of them. There was not a thing objectionable to it.

"One woman said she wished every girl could see the picture. It was educational. If it was not educational and was against the law, the officers who visited the theatre should have said so and the management would have removed it.

"Judge Francis T. Reeves was on the bench.

JUDGE REEVES was mayor of Waterbury until January 1, this year. The prosecutor was Attorney E. E. Reiley, Jr. After Attorney Cole had argued his case and moved for a nolle, Prosecutor Reiley said he "couldn't understand why Mr. Sheehan had been arrested."

This knocked the bottom out of the case completely, and after the prosecutor said he was heartily in favor of a nolle the court so ordered.

READERS of The Motion Picture News will remember that Mr. Sheehan when tried before the city court was fined $100 and costs. The warrant charging him with two counts against the morals of the community was issued, as stated hereinbefore, by Attorney James Lynch, prosecutor in the city court, and the case was tried before Judge William E. Thomas, Democratic mayor of this city for two terms.

It attracted considerable attention among local exhibitors, and when Sheehan appealed from the verdict of the city court, the final decision was awaited anxiously by those who have the interests of the photoplay at heart.

Mr. Sheehan, who had been out of town for several weeks, returned Monday, June 1, and when interviewed by a representative of The Motion Picture News said he was confident that he would be acquitted and that Censor Lynch would find nothing in the" picture that he had bitten off a larger piece than he could masticate, had started something that he couldn't finish.

The prediction bore luscious fruit and fellow exhibitors of Mr. Sheehan are on easy street once more. They met the enemy and he was theirs.

It was victory number one.

It has developed that Manager Carroll, of the Carroll motion picture theatre, who was fined $50 and costs a week or more ago, did not pay his fine as he said he would. Instead, he has taken an appeal and his case will be heard in due season.

Manager Carroll claims that the youngsters who were in the theatre at the time the warrant was made out secured older people to get their tickets and then entered the theatre with them. When the older ones left the children stayed behind.

He does not see how he can be convicted on such facts as these and promises to put up a stiff fight. The other motion picture manager fined with Carroll settled.

ROBERT MOLZON, proprietor of the Lyric motion picture theatre, on South Main street, was fined $50 and costs Friday, June 5, in the city court by Judge William E. Thomps, on a charge of permitting children under fourteen years of age to visit his theatre without being accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Molzon, through his attorney, Robert A. Lowe, pleaded guilty to the charge, but stated that children were permitted to enter the theatre under some circumstances.

Mr. Molzon said that on June 2 he was operating the motion picture machine and was unable to stand at his accustomed place near the door. He said he did not know that children had been admitted.

But to this Judge Thomps said that the proprietor was responsible, just as the owner of a saloon is responsible when minor youths are permitted to enter his place of business. Patroolman MacMullen, who preferred the charges against Molzon, testified that there were almost a score of children present when he entered the theatre on the night in question, and that when the children were questioned they said they were not present with a parent or guardian. Two children who were in the theatre when MacMullen entered said that they had bought the tickets themselves. The boys who testified were Julius Grossman, of 42 Kingsbury street and Jacob Aprian, of 14 Newell Place.

After hearing all the testimony, a fine of $50 and costs was imposed. Molzon took an appeal, however, and Attorney Joseph A. Bergin furnished a bond of $150.

Waterbury appears to be the only city in the state that is conducting such a campaign against motion picture theatre managers.

LEASE ELIZABETH HOUSE

Elizabeth, N. J., June 11.

BUILDING WAVE HITS CLEVELAND
Nine Theatres Are Under Way in the First Era of Theatrical Construction in That City Since 1911—
Standard Opens at Once as All-Day House with Features—Other Photoplay Houses in Various Districts

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Cleveland, O., June 11.

CLEVELAND is having a wave boom in motion picture theatre building. There are now under way nine houses all of modern construction and large capacity. The activities in this line have had a full for three years, following the erection of about twenty houses in 1911.

Those engaged in the business say there is no room for more houses and consider the business already overdone, while investors in this class of building are well satisfied with what is already begun.

The most important of the new theatres is the Standard, which is now nearly completed. It is located in the Standard Drug Company’s Prospect Avenue Building and has been leased for a term of years to Joseph Grossman, formerly owner of the Delmar, Central avenue. Mr. Grossman expects to open the Standard on June 12.

The house is reached through a spacious foyer opening on Prospect avenue, at the corner of East Eighth street. The theatre seats 750 persons. It will show photoplays exclusively with first-class music. It is the first exclusive motion picture theatre built in the downtown section of the city.

Although Cleveland has a number of important downtown picture houses, all have been remodeled from store spaces or are theatres showing vaudeville in connection with films.

The Standard is believed by Manager Grossman, will fill a want that has been felt here for some time, and provides a place where the films of highest grade may be shown at a profit. He has contracted to use Mutual service, including the Continental features. He will also book outside features. It is to be an all-day house. In its construction every comfort of the patron has been considered.

In the same section there is being built the Palace, occupying the McMillan Building on East Ninth street, near Prospect. The Hauseer Construction Company are the owners of this house, and it is being constructed at a cost of about $25,000. It will have 400 seats and its entertainment will consist of photoplays exclusively.

The Doan Square Realty Company, the directors of which are practically the same as those in the Gordon Square Theatre, are erecting a $75,000 theatre and commercial building at Superior avenue and East 103rd street.

This house will have a capacity of 1,600, on two floors. While equipped for any kind of a theatrical performance, it will be opened with pictures and vaudeville.

Another downtown house is being erected by the Fireproof Theatre Company, on Prospect avenue, just east of East Ninth street. This is to be an exclusive theatre building with an auditorium seating about 750 persons.

EDWARD KOHL, the builder of several of the larger suburban theatres in the city, is erecting a large house on East 105th street, between St. Clair avenue and Superior.

It has been leased for a term of years to S. E. Morris and L. H. Wilk, both of whom own theatres in that section.

The Home Theatre, conducted by Mr. Morris, is soon to be discontinued to make room for a large commercial building, it is stated, and Mr. Morris will give his personal attention to the new house. It will be ready for use in about two months.

Other houses are being erected on St. Clair avenue at East 105th street and two on Detroit avenue, in Lakewood, one of the city’s important suburbs.

First Montana Convention in July
Scheduled for the 7th and 8th in Butte—The Ball Started by Philip Levy, of the Ansonia—League Only Formed Last Year.

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Butte, Mont.; June 2.

MONTANA exhibitors are watching with unusual interest the approach of the first annual convention of the Montana Theatrical and Exhibitors League, which will convene in the city of Butte for two days, July 7 and 8. The league was formed last year and it was then decided that the first annual convention would be called in Butte. The place of the second convention will be fixed at the coming meeting. The growth of the motion picture business in Montana, a virgin state practically as far as this industry is concerned, will invest the approaching gathering of the managers with a public interest which the formation meeting did not obtain. However, the good work started on that occasion has taken root, and when the managers from all parts of Montana gather in Butte two days of real business and the right sort of fun will be had by the visitors.

The story of the Montana league, as has been said, is a comparatively recent one. In September of last year Philip Levy, manager of the Ansonia Theatre, sent circulars to all the managers of theatres in the state explaining his plan of forming an exhibitors league for the purpose of, as set forth in the adopted constitution, “protecting the interests and welfare of all owners or persons engaged in the management of opera or combination houses, vaudeville, stock, burlesque, or motion picture theatres or other places of theatrical amusement in the State of Montana.”

There were other objects and they are set forth at large in the articles of the constitution. For the present, it is only necessary to know that the meeting was a great success. All the managers were enthusiastic. They had a fine time at the meeting and the gathering proved distinctly profitable to everyone concerned. They discussed the business in all its branches and elected the following set of officers to serve for the first term: President, Philip Levy, Ansonia Theatre, Butte; vice-president, A. Heinecke, Bijou Theatre, Lewistown; secretary-treasurer, William Cutts, Montana Amusement Company, Butte; directors-at-large, Frank N. Jones, Star Theatre, Billings; E. P. White, Alcazar Theatre, Livingston; H. E. Richfield, Miles Theatre, Miles City; H. O. Clark, Alcazar Theatre, Great Falls.

The charter members with the theatres which they represent are as follows: A. Mandoli, Reel Theatre, Anaconda; Frank N. Jones, Star Theatre, Billings; F. A. Boedecker, Levy’s Theatre, Bozeman; William Cutts, Montana Amusement Company, Butte; C. W. Eckhardt, Lyrice Theatre, Butte; Philip Levy, Ansonia Theatre, Butte; George Boedecker, Orpheum Theatre, Deer Lodge; H. E. Ashlock, Pastime Theatre, Dillon; H. O. Clark, Alcazar Theatre, Great Falls; Lewis E. Freeman, Ora Theatre, Great Falls; G. H. Reeves, Gem Theatre, Havre; W. H. Hartwig, Art Theatre, Helena; Alcazar Theatre, Lewistown; A. Heinecke, Bijou Theatre, Livingston; H. O. Clark, Alcazar Theatre, Miles City; Fred C. Quintinye, Empress Theatre, Missoula; J. D. Prior, Ruby Theatre, Ruby; E. W. Waddell, Three Forks, and L. J. Sissel, Orpheum Theatre, Whitehall.

JAMES CUMMINS.
PLAN SEVEN-STATE CONVENTION IN OMAHA

January Will See Exhibitors Gather from Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, South Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming and Missouri for Exposition and Trade Meeting—Neff Dominates Small Grand Island Gathering and Swings Delegates to Dayton for Himself

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Grand Island, Neb., June 10.

While probably not as noteworthy in attendance as many other conventions of exhibitors, the second annual convention of Nebraska Branch No. 22 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, held June 2 and 3, made up in interest and enthusiasm "for the cause" what it may have been minus in numbers. The skies were glowering and a steady drizzle of rain welcomed the visitors, but this was soon forgotten, and the sun on Tuesday afternoon, June 2, shone brilliantly to make up for any deficit in the warmth of the greeting.

Due to the weather conditions, the officers scheduled to speak during the forenoon session of June 2 did not arrive in time for the event and two programs in one were crowded into the afternoon meeting. Mayor Ryan welcomed the motion picture men most heartily to the city, and assured them that the key was theirs as long as they honored Grand Island with their presence, and an able response was made by President Frank Harris of the Nebraska league.

President Neff, of the national organization, then made an address in which he called attention to the wonderful work being accomplished by the motion picture industry throughout the world. The motion pictures, according to President Neff, rank higher than any other educational force to-day, and that being the case each motion picture man should bear in mind the plan to elevate the morals of the boys and girls which comes under the influence of his special productions.

Due to the non-arrival of certain of the exhibitors who were scheduled to be on hand with their machines, certain film exhibits which were to have been shown at the Liederkranz Theatre, through the kindness of Manager Hayman, of the Lydia Theatre, were exhibited at the latter show house, to which the public was given a cordial invitation. The program lasted from seven until twelve o'clock without a change of play, and the echoes of the satisfaction were heard throughout the house. These courtesies were extended by the Kansas City Feature Film Company, and the Mutual Film Corporation, and were thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated by Grand Island's show-going public.

Wednesday afternoon was devoted to an executive and business session of the league, where, as might be supposed, the ever-present question of censorship was the chief subject. Following the executive session, election of officers for the ensuing year was held, the result being as follows: E. C. Preston, Superior, Neb., president; R. M. Shafer, Plattsmouth, first vice-president; G. J. Warren, Red Cloud, second vice-president; G. S. Weaver, Omaha, secretary; S. A. Hayman, Grand Island, treasurer; S. Harding, Omaha, national vice-president.

Delegates to the national convention at Dayton, O., July 6 to 11, were elected as follows: Frank Harris, A. R. Pramer, G. S. Weaver, all of Omaha; A. P. Ake, Wynmore; G. J. Warren, Red Cloud, and S. A. Hayman, Grand Island. Alternates as follows: Charles Schartow, Omaha; I. P. Hoffmaster, Elmcreek; A. Gerke, Ravenna; Arthur Johnson, Stromberg; S. F. Rolph, Fullerton, and W. H. McQuinn, David City.

Nebraska was chosen as the next place of meeting, to take place at the time of the Mid-West convention in that city, at which time motion picture men will gather in January from Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, South Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming and Missouri, and participate in one of the most inclusive exhibitions of the motion picture profession ever shown west of the Mississippi.

At this time it is planned to have many of the notable actors and actresses of the motion picture screen on the ground, "on the hoof," as it is termed in the West, and give a genuine demonstration to the public as to the how, why, and wherefore of the building of a motion picture play.

The Wednesday afternoon session was cut somewhat short, owing to the necessity of several of the visiting delegates catching an early train. However, time was taken to pass resolutions extending thanks to the city for the cordial welcome, and instructions were passed binding the delegates to the national convention to vote for M. A. Neff for re-election to the national presidency of the league.

A "get-together" meeting which had been planned by the Commercial Club, of this city, was not held, owing to the inability of the chief officers of the organization to be present, but the city, which now supports five of the finest play houses in the state, has a warm spot in her heart for the exhibitors and will be always glad to have them within her gates.

Despite the bad weather and the rather discouraging attendance, it remained for a woman, Miss Etta Arthur, of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, to outdo her male compatriots and "hang" one of the best booths and displays ever witnessed in the city.

She was the life of the convention, and in the closing hours of the afternoon session, made an address to the gathering, in which she read a telegram inviting every exhibitor present to drop into the Kansas City office when in that metropolis.

Suffragettes are frowned upon, but while Miss Arthur does not claim to have even sympathy with "our English sisters," she accomplishes more through pleasant approach and kindly speech than do they with banners and their arson brigade.

A tip from a "lay brother" to the motion picture men is that no better asset can be found for increasing sales than a pleasant-faced and polite cashier, censorship, electric juice, and all other posters to the contrary notwithstanding.

And so the meeting closed, and all are making preparations for the big event in Dayton next month. That Nebraska will be there "with bells on," goes without question.

AMERICAN FILMS FAVORITES IN PANAMA

Special to The Motion Picture News.

New Orleans, June 10.

Motion pictures are attracting great attention in Panama, to judge by copies of the Panama "Morning Journal" received here.

Advertisements of the three theatres in that city occupy almost a solid page. Films portraying war, western and South American scenes appear to be the favorites. Productions of Spanish and Italian companies are used where possible, but the American films with a great amount of action, appear to be equally as popular.

On account of the large non-English speaking element, films which require little explanation are desired, unless such explanations are given in Spanish.

The theatres to be disposed of are located at Salem, French Lick, Madison, Centerville, and Martinsville, Ind., and Madisonville, Ky. It is the intention of the Switow company to center its attention on a few of its large houses located in this city, Jeffersonville and New Albany, Ind.

Nashville Censors Favor Sunday Opening

But Ministers Alliance Makes Severe Protest, and Conflict Is Certain at Next Board Meeting—Decide Question at That Time

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Nashville, Tenn., June 11.

To have or not to have motion picture shows on Sunday is the burning question in Nashville just now. At a meeting of the board of censors with the motion picture show operators here last week, one of the recommendations was that Nashville allow the picture shows to operate on Sunday. Along comes the Ministers Alliance, condemning the board of censors and protesting against the opening of the shows on the Sabbath.

The outcome of the battle is uncertain, since no definite move is expected to be taken until the next meeting of the censors a week hence. Charles W. Lin, chairman of the board of censors, declared that he was heartily in favor of the motion picture houses being open on Sunday, and other members of the board agreed with him in this view. It was pointed out that motion pictures in the city are making money under present conditions, and that from a financial standpoint they do not need to run on Sunday, but it was also shown that such an innovation would afford many whose only time off was on Sunday the opportunity to enjoy some inexpensive and clean amusement.

It was argued that this rule prevailed in many of the large cities of the South and that the laboring people took advantage of it in every case. One of the principal examples given was that of Memphis, where the shows are allowed to run from 2:30 p.m. until 11 o'clock. All of the pictures shown must be submitted to the board of censors.

Mayor Howse agreed with the board that their powers shall be so extended that they will have authority over all forms of amusement in the city.

Among the Buffalo Exhibitors

Panic in Cazenovia Theatre When Trolley Wire Blows Out Fuse in Film Box—Shrine Night at Majestic—Other Items

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 11.

A score of more women narrowly escaped being trampled to death shortly before 9 o'clock last Thursday evening in the Cazenovia Theatre, Seneca street near Kamper street, when a fuse blew out and the interior of the theatre was thrown into darkness. Someone in the rear of the theatre yelled "fire" and there was a mad rush for the front door. Nearly 250 persons were in the theatre and when attendants held the crowd back, women screamed and dropped on the floor fainting. The panic continued for more than ten minutes until the gas was lighted and the audience was assured that there was no danger and allowed to depart quietly.

A trolley wire in Seneca street broke and in falling struck a wire leading into the theatre. The fuse in the film box blew out and a flame caught fire. Although there was a crowd of nearly a thousand persons about the theatre after the panic, there was no police lines drawn and the next morning the police of the Babcock street station were not aware that there had been a panic.

Police Superintendent Michael Regan wants to know why, and has ordered that the police of that station make a special report on the matter.

A private exhibition was given on Friday evening, June 6, at the Elmwood Theatre, of the beautiful and at the same time sensational photodrama "Loyalty," just released by the Pathé company. A large audience of local exhibitors were in attendance. The production will be shown at the Elmwood for two days during the week of June 15. The film is exquisitely hand-colored.

Wednesday evening, June 10, was Shrine night at the Majestic Theatre. Ismailia Temple has closed contracts with the entire capacity of the theatre on that evening. In addition to the showing of the Kleine photo-postcard "Spartacus," the films of Ismailia Patrol, band and party, covering the entire trip to the recent Atlanta, Ga., convention and all the parades in that city will be shown on the screen for the entertainment of the local nobles and their ladies. The local temple took a cameraman along with them on the pilgrimage to Atlanta.

Parade of the Elmwood Theatre were given a treat when Manager George W. Erdmann showed them a film which he made himself of the monument unveiling ceremonies at Pine Hill cemetery on Sunday, May 31, by the Knights of St. John. Manager Erdmann is always on the lookout for good local features to show his patrons. It was he who filmed the Beardsley bandit feature for local audiences. A large audience witnessed the completed reel of the monument unveiling.
Do Exhibitors Want Censorship?

Omaha Exhibitors with Motion Picture News in Fight Against State Censorship—Harrisburg, Pa.
Men Divided: One Favors It, but Opposes Keystone Law: Others Deny Value of State Supervision—Chattanooga Against State Censorship

J. M. Lenney, owner and manager, Lenney's Photoplay Theatre, 5 and 7 North Thirteenth street, Harrisburg, Pa.

"I am opposed to the general idea of state censorship of motion pictures because national censorship, as now in operation, is adequate in most respects. All the big associations of manufacturers are parties to the national censorship plan and they recognize that it is essential to the life of the motion-picture business that improper pictures be barred. The reputable exhibitors, I believe, take the same view of the situation as the manufacturers, and will ban in their theatres any pictures that are not proper, that may get past the national censors. The exhibitors themselves are coming to know that the few theatre managers who do put on improper films are a menace to the whole business and the decent managers are showing a disposition to unite to wield their influence to suppress improper pictures in the few houses that insist on showing them. The only advantage that I can see in the plan of state censorship is that state boards can suppress indecent pictures that sometimes are put on the road by individuals not allied with the big associations of manufacturers and that consequently are not subject to national censorship as it now exists."

Peter Magaro, manager of the Magaro Amusement Company, operating the Star Theatre, 410 Market street, Harrisburg, Pa., and the Orpheum Theatre, Carlisle, Pa.

"Without special reference to the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, which is an untried proposition, as it does not begin its work until June 1, I am opposed to the general idea of state censorship, because in most cases state censors are not experienced motion-picture men, as in the case of the present national censors, but women and others who, though well-intentioned and prompted often by the best of motives based on their ideas of protecting the young from hurtful influences, cannot get the viewpoint that does justice to the manufacturers and exhibitors. These amateur censors are apt to take a narrow view based on prejudices and inexperience, and bar pictures that would not be barred by censors more familiar with the kinds of pictures that are actually harmful."

C. Floyd Hopkins, local manager for Wilmer, Vincent & Appel, who control the three largest theatres in Harrisburg, Pa.

"I believe state censorship is desirable from the exhibitors' viewpoint, as it eliminates all controversy as to the propriety of displaying pictures once they have been approved by the state board. This will prevent a great deal of annoyance for theatre managers who, as things are now, are constantly becoming involved in disputes with the clergy, the police and various other unofficial censors. I think, however, that the censorship law in Pennsylvania places very much of a burden on the film manufacturers, as it requires the payment of a fee of $25 for every film censored and also requires the manufacturer to provide the facilities for examination of the films."

In a series of interviews sent to The Motion Picture News from Omaha exhibitors, the sentiment has run strongly toward the advocations of the Bills. Here are some others:

G. S. Weaver, of the Star Theatre, Twenty-fourth and Franklin streets, Omaha, and secretary of the local M. P. E. L. A. branch in Omaha:

"Chattanooga is a community theatre. My patrons believe in me. I want to give them something that has been authoritatively censored. The National Board is doing very well. Like everybody else, though, I believe it should have more authority. I do not place much stock in the fear of graft in a national board. Graft, it seems to me, would be easier in state or local boards. I believe you'll learn something when you hear what action our state branch takes."

M. M. Aronson, manager of the Cameraphone Theatre, 1406 Douglas street, Omaha:

"I have studied the situation, sure, and have some ideas on censorship. The National Board seems to be doing good enough work. I refuse to worry, though, because I will show what the exchanges sell me and they will be responsible if my films are censored until I am damaged. I am confident the manufacturers and exchanges will not distribute films broadcast unless the films can stand the test."

Carmelo Mangiameli, proprietor of the Elite No. 1 Theatre, 1313 Douglas street, Omaha:

"The National Board is satisfactory. I am not familiar enough with the subject to say much. I would be better satisfied a board was organized to send us business."

J. H. Marcus, the Majestic Theatre, Broadway and Sixth street, Council Bluffs, Ia., across the river from Omaha:

"I am proud of the class of pictures I show. I believe in censorship to regulate those who do not take the proper pride. Of course the National Board as advocated by The Motion Picture News is the best thing. I don't see much ground for a scrap there."

Mrs. A. White, Sixth street and Broadway, Council Bluffs, proprietor of the American Theatre:

"I don't believe in running censorship into the ground. I do believe that public-minded men should see the films first, before they are given the people. The manufacturers are good judges, but they are apt to become too enthused. A national board with authority, it seems to me, would be what is needed."

Lewis A. Hoberdier, feature exchange man, Canton (Eagle Block):

"Censorship of motion pictures is not needed so much as censorship of vaudeville. Judging from the development of the censorship idea in Ohio I should say it is a mere scheme for the creation of political jobs. Here one of the three members of the censor board usually censors the pictures. Some things that ought to be cut out are left in and some things that ought to be left in are cut out. The system is foolish. In my opinion there is no need for any sort of censorship of the pictures made by the leading producing houses. Millions of dollars are invested in those houses and they can not afford to injure their reputation for turning out good, clean pictures. There are a few wild-cat producers, however, who need watching. For those, I suppose, a national board of censors is necessary, but surely not a local board in every state."

"One way to prevent the issuance of unclean or unreasonably specious pictures would be to have every manufacturer stamp his films with his firm name. The wildcatters dodge responsibility by declining to stamp their films."

M. J. Bobo, Bonita Amusement Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I am of the opinion that the government censorship is all right and proper. My idea is that a competent board of censors, appointed by the government, should be sufficient for the entire country. I cannot see any sense in every state, county and town censoring every film, giving not only the film exchanges endless annoyance, but the exhibitors as well.

There should be an act of Congress setting forth what should or should not be admissible in filmdom. We must all admit the great possibilities of this industry for good or bad on the minds of children as well as adults. Therefore it is essential that the industry should be censored by a competent, broad-minded board."
G. & G. FEATURE COMPANY BUYS "LITTLEST REBEL"

The G. & G. Feature Film Company, of Chicago, which is operated by the Gollos Brothers, have purchased the first print of "The Littlest Rebel," sold by the Photoplay Productions Company, of New York City. This five-reel production will be booked by the G. & G. exchange throughout Illinois and Wisconsin. "The Littlest Rebel" is considered one of the best of the recent feature releases. This is but one of the big subjects that the G. & G. has purchased. Mr. Gollos, who has been in New York a week, has contracted with some of the big producing companies for their entire output for the coming year.

World Film in $3,000,000 Combine

Joins Shuberts in a Huge Deal for Handling Their Numerous Broadway Sucesses—Scores of Productions Affected

One of the largest combinations put through in the motion picture industry for some time was consummated on June 11, when the World Film Corporation joined the Shubert forces in a $3,000,000 deal. The new company will be known as the Shubert Feature Film Corporation.

The scores of dramas, farces, comedies and other attractions controlled by the Shuberts will be released to the trade through the fifty-five distribution branches of the World Film Corporation, in the United States and Canada.

The combination has been effected for the purpose of manufacturing into motion pictures all of the plays of the Shuberts and others to be acquired by them from various sources in Europe and in the United States. The Shubert Feature Film Corporation is to make all the picturizations, and the World Film Corporation is to exploit them through its various branches. The number of the exchanges will now be doubled owing to the larger output secured.

Under the terms of the contract between the Shubert Theatrical Company and the World Film Corporation, the latter acquires a large interest in the Shubert Feature Film Corporation, and the Shubert Feature Film Corporation received a generous share of the capital stock of the World Film Corporation. Among the directors of this latest big combinations are Lee Shubert, George B. Cox, Frederick Edey, Herbert H. Dean of E. B. Smith & Company, George A. Huhn of Philadelphia, Joseph L. Rhinock, Van Horn Ely, of National Properties Company, of Pittsburgh, and W. A. Pratt, of E. B. Smith and Company. The election of active officers will take place in a few days, and their names will then be announced. There will also be an interchange of directors between the two corporations. A number of important banking interests are associated in the new venture, all of the stock in the new corporation having been underwritten and bought by the firms of Edward B. Smith & Company, of New York and Philadelphia, Huhn, Edey & Company, of New York, and George A. Huhn & Sons, of Philadelphia.

FIRST AID TO AN "EXPIRING" THEATRE

By Albert C. Sproul

When Miller Took "The Ideal," It Looked as if His Incumbency Was Going to Be a Wake Over a Corpse—Then He Began to Get Acquainted—A Few of His Own Peculiar Advertising Schemes Did the Rest

[Editor's Note—This is the first chapter of "The Story of Miller,"* Miller is a real exhibitor. He is also a type—a typical showman confronted by circumstances that are typical in the motion-picture industry. Exhibitors in every state will recognize the problems he met as on their own, if not indeed problems that still confront them. There is "meat" in each of these chapters for every exhibitor, no matter how successful he may be. The second chapter, "CREATING THE 'COME-AGAIN SPIRIT' will be published in an early issue of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.]

When an exhibitor gets control of a poor theatre in a seemingly hopeless locality, and feels that everything is going to the demotion bowows, let him do as Miller did.

Miller had about as hard a proposition to buck as any one and, although he had had some experience in the business, it availed him little in building up the patronage of "The Ideal."

Miller wasn't a "mixer." He had a streak of innate dignity that kept him from giving the glad hand to every one he met; and as for accosting a patron in the lobby, that was beyond him. It may be good business in some places, but it wasn't his style.

There was nothing phony about Miller, however; I can vouch for that. He'd use you just the same if he knew you didn't have a dime to pay your way in. He rang true every time.

But, of course, he couldn't wear a placard on his person explaining what a fine fellow he was and how well he intended to treat his patrons. So he was obliged to resort to an original scheme to get things started.

When Miller took charge of "The Ideal" it was like flirting with a corpse. The only mourners were a few strangers who looked as though they entered by mistake.

The sight of the empty seats, with the fringe of humanity bordering the aisles, was enough to discourage any man. Miller went home after the first evening performance "down in the dumps."

But a good night's rest stiffened his backbone. If there was any possibility of resurrecting the corpse, he was determined to do it. And right there came his lunch.

He had faith in the business; he had faith in himself to win out with half a chance.

What he had to do was to get acquainted.

Falling back upon his past experience, Miller divided his prospective clientele into three classes according to age: The elderly and middle-aged comprised class one; the young men and women, class two; class three consisted of the children. It was with classes one and two that he first concerned himself.

The bait that Miller used was a free performance. He built up as varied a program as possible—three vaudeville acts and four reels—and selected Thursday evening of the next week as the crucial time. By choosing the evening, he eliminated, for the time being, the children, and was able, on that account, to concentrate his attention on classes one and two.

By means of fliers which he distributed liberally throughout the neighborhood and a large announcement placed on the front of his theatre, he informed the public of the free performance, stating, however, that children under fourteen years of age were not to be admitted. Human nature is the same everywhere. Anything that is free is bound to attract the people.

On the eventful Thursday evening, the doorkeeper, assisted by one of the ushers, handed each patron an envelope. To the young men and women they gave a red envelope; to the middle-aged and elderly, a blue one. Across the envelopes were the words "A Complimentary Ticket. Look Inside."

There was a slip of cardboard of the same color as the envelope, within, which read:

"This slip, if properly filled out by the person to whom it was presented, will entitle him to a complimentary ticket for any performance at 'The Ideal,' if exchanged at the box-office before the curtain rises." The date was one week later. Miller wanted immediate returns.

The questions asked were few and simple:

Name .................................................................
Address ..............................................................
What part of the performance did you particularly like?
What part didn't you like, and why? ................................
Keeping in mind the limitations of our theatre, what would you prefer to see? ........................................

The fact that all slips had to be presented the following week at the box-office prevented a patron from postponing filling in his slip and thereby allowing his impressions of the performance to wear away. When the people came to exchange their slips, the cashier could tell, by the color, whether or not a person of the proper age answered the questions. The exact name did not matter. One patron was as good as another.

In this way Miller acquired a valuable mailing list. He sorted the red slips from the blue and examined each pile separately, noting carefully the consensus of opinion. Then he built up two special programs, one modeled from the suggestions contained on the red slips, the other from the suggestions on the blue.

Every typewriter in the neighborhood, from a Model 3 Remington up to the latest Oliver, was requisitioned for the next part of the campaign. Every friend that Miller had round about was pressed into service to typewrite letters, of which the following is a sample:

Mrs. A. L. Stevens,
335 River Street;
Dear Madam: We take pleasure in inviting you to a complimentary performance to be given May 30, 19—.

The program has been especially arranged in accordance with the wishes of our patrons. The suggestion on your slip that we eliminate the —— (Here the typist, with the program of the proper performance written out in detail and Mrs. Stevens' slip with her suggestions, lying side by side, carefully examined the two and noted all points of similarity, commenting upon them tersely in the letter. This made the communication so direct that Mrs. Stevens realized that it was personal and her interest grew accordingly.)

You will find enclosed two tickets. If you will kindly give one to a friend—no children will be admitted to this

Ramo Will Screen
Paul Potter's Plays

PAUL M. POTTER, famous over the world for his dramatization of "Triiby," has made a contract with twenty-four biggest and best plays to be pictured as Ramo Features. Mr. Potter was for many years the London and Paris correspondent of the New York "Herald." His first play to be produced in New York City was "The Chouans," which ran at the old Union Square Theatre and was produced by the late Madame Modjeska. This was followed by "The City Directory," which had a run of five years, and in which David Warfield made his first appearance.

Other of his plays that have been accepted by well-known managers and starred in by the leading stars, are "The Conquerors," "The American Minister," "The Pacific," "Our Country Cousins," "Under Two Flags," "The Red Kloff," "The School Girl" and "Nancy Stair" complete the list of his former successes. "The Conquerors" and "The Victoria Cross" will be the first produced by the Ramo Company. His recent successes are well known, "The Girl From Rectors" and "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" are the most widely noted.

Many of these will be adapted for the pictures and with such an experienced man as Mr. Potter behind the pictures something better than the ordinary is to be looked for.

Theatre Couldn't Weather the Weather
Impossible to Keep Warm in Winter or Cool in Summer, so Fitzhugh Hall Theatre in Rochester Had to Close

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Rochester, N. Y., June 11.

THE Fitzhugh Hall Amusement Company, of this city, is bankrupt, and its place of amusement, the motion picture theatre on South Fitzhugh street, but a stone's throw from Main street, has been closed. It was not many months ago that this theatre was rebuilt from the ground up and completely equipped with the latest improvements. B. N. Sherwood was manager of this theatre. Asked why the concern could not make a go of its business, he replied: "Our heating plant could not heat us properly in winter, and our place was too hot in summer, owing to the metal roof we had with no ceiling beneath. The heat radiated from that roof in the summer in such a fashion that we could not keep the place cool. We needed a second ceiling.

We were also handicapped by finding it impossible to get a regular film service that suited our patrons. We did some good business there with big features, which we advertised heavily." Referee Sanford has ordered a sale of the assets of the concern, which will be conducted by Paul Sheehan, of Buffalo, the trustee.

The assets to be disposed of include chairs, an organ and the piano, motion picture machine, and such right and title as the bankrupt concern has in a new lease, to begin on September 10, and to continue for five years, on the building.

J. Forbes Potter, of New York, is the lessor of the building, and while the bankruptcy proceedings were in progress he started a municipal court action to oust the company from the premises for non-payment of rent. The municipal court judge issued a warrant dispossessing the company, and Manager Sherwood gave up the key, but has not removed the company's property.

It has not been decided what will become of the property. If the new lease, to begin in September, is found to be worth something, and to be valid, it is possible that motion picture men may purchase the property and lease and continue the business. As present the doors are closed. The sale is to take place in ten days.

AL. LICHTMAN LEAVES FAMOUS PLAYERS

Al. Lichtman, who has been sales manager of the Famous Players Film Company since its organization, will leave that concern Saturday, June 21, for the purpose of inaugurating a film brokerage office through which he will offer a personal sales service to film buyers, renters and producers.

Mr. Lichtman's plan is a novel one. From a long and thorough study of trade conditions, he has concluded that the necessity and desirability of such a connecting link among the three factors of the industry is so obvious that he is confident that his enterprise will fill a long-felt want.

In leaving the Famous Players, Mr. Lichtman stated that he did so with a great deal of sincere regret, as his connection with Mr. Zukor and his associates in the company has always been the most pleasant and harmonious, but gave as his reason for the change the ambition to do bigger things and create and nurture an enterprise of his own. He leaves with the good wishes and friendship of all.

AN ARTICLE FROM A. J. LANG

Through an oversight on the part of the printer, the name of A. J. Lang, of the Nicholas Power Company, was missing from the article, "The Making of a Projector," published in the convention number of The Motion Picture News. Doubtless the hand of Mr. Lang was discerned in the article by those familiar with his work, even in the anonymous condition of the story, but in justice to him, his authorship should be and hereby is acknowledged.
THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

FILM NEWS FROM FOREIGN PARTS

The Motion Picture in Greece—"L'Aiglon," Rostand Drama, Filmed in Paris; Others of Great Dramatist's Works to Follow—"Lid" on Sunday Opening in Scotland—Kings Pose for Camera—London News

The motion picture has not prospered in Greece as markedly as in some of the other countries of Eastern Europe and the Levant, notably Turkey and Egypt. The reason appears to have been, observes "Le Cinema" of Paris, which publishes a highly interesting and informative article on the subject, the wretched beginnings of the cinematograph in Hellas.

Six years ago there was not a theatre especially adapted to the motion picture. Open air places were used exclusively, and these were rudely roofed over and walled in during the winter. Quantities of old "commercials" were mixed in with new films, and the result was not the lifting of the industry in the public esteem. Of late, however, the large European producers have established agencies in Greece, and limited their output to new pictures to the increased popularity of the cinema among the Hellenes.

The importation of films amount to nearly 1,000,000 feet a year. Sales are practically nil. Everything is on a rental basis. French pictures are said to be preferred beyond all others, though American pictures have a substantial popularity, too. The public taste runs to tragic, sombre dramas, plays of ambiguous meaning, and pictures featuring banditti, highwaymen, and others of the criminal brotherhood.

A peculiar feature of the Grecian situation is that the business is almost entirely limited to the large cities of the peninsula. In addition to the customs duties, which are high, an internal revenue tax is laid on films by every municipality. The result has been that little or no business is transacted between the interior and the seaport cities.

There is one manufacturing concern of note in Greece at the present time—Fabrique Pankellenique de Films S. Leonce, at Athens. The firm has produced nothing but news films and pictures of current local events, but it is said they are preparing a series of dramatic productions. The fine atmosphere and scenery of Greece should make these pictures distinguished for both these qualities, if they are properly produced.

Rostand Dramas Reach Screen

"L'Aiglon," the famous drama of Edmond Rostand, was presented as a photodrama in Paris, May 23, at Montparnasse. The cast was made up of noted actors and actresses from the leading theatres of the capital, and "mise en scène" was the work of M. Chautard. A series of Rostand's dramas on the screen is announced by Henry Hertz, concessionaire of the dramatist's works, among which will be Cyrano de Bergerac," "The Samaritan Woman," "The Distant Princess," "The Romancers," and others.

South African Taxes

Further news of the new tariff law in force against motion picture films and supplies in South Africa discloses a fifteen per cent tax on all machines, in addition to the tax of five shillings per hundred feet imposed on imported films. This information is imparted by Joseph Fisher, of Fisher's Elite Bioscope, Ltd., of Cape Town. The African Film Trust, which practically controls the situation in South Africa, is, in Mr. Fisher's opinion, impeded to the "Bioscope" of London before his departure for America, the best thing that could have happened for the business in that quarter of the world. Mr. Fisher left for the United States on the "Olympic," May 20, and is expected to attend the exposition in New York at the Grand Central Palace during the week of June 8.

"Bioscope's" Educational Pages

The educational supplement of the "Bioscope," of London, which has been waited on the other side with great eagerness, has at last appeared. It is a four-page affair, opening with an interview on "The Place of the Cinematographe in Education," with Sir James Yoxall, M.P., secretary of the National Union of Teachers and editor of "The Schoolmaster." Notes and news on educational films make up the rest. Pathé educational and scientific films are well in the foreground.

Two new theatres, the La Scala and the Paragon, will shortly open in Manchester, England, and three others are expected to be ready for business before the summer is over.

Sunday Shows Barred in Scotland

"The lid" has been severely put on the motion picture theatres of Scotland. Only one town in the whole country enjoys Sunday openings now. Many Sunday privilege are recently rescinded by the county and town councils of Scotland, and this in the face of petitions from the citizens of many localities. It is now hinted that Fife-shire people are so indignant that the question will be made a political issue at the next town and county council elections.

An attempt to make six-thirty in the evening instead of nine the hour at which children must thereupon appear accompanied by parents in Kirkcaldy, Scotland, was frustrated not long ago by the chief constable and the magistrates.

Recent American films to receive a cordial reception at the hands of the British trade critics are "Guilty or Not Guilty" (Thanhouser), "The Price of His Honor" (Essanay), "The Independence of Susan" (American) and "The Redemption of David Corson" (Famous Players).

A. E. Huesch & Company Ltd., of London, have been granted the agency for the productions of the Australian Company (Furh) for all English-speaking countries.

Interesting Views from Porter

The arrival of E. S. Porter and Hugh Ford, the Famous Players directors and their company, in London and Paris successively, was the signal for all the interviewers of the trade journals of both capitals to "get busy." The "Courier Cinematographique" of Paris published an extended interview with Mr. Porter, as did the "Bioscope" of London. The "Courrier" besides, seized the opportunity to interview James K. Hackett, who is at present under contract to play in "Monseur Beaucarne" for the Famous Players this summer.

Predictions for the Future

The perfection of color photography and stereoscopic projection are the biggest steps to be taken in the immediate future. Mr. Porter declared in London, taking pictures he demagnified as "outside the art of the picture play, which is essentially a silent medium."

"Among the most necessary developments is the author's side of the picture play," he went on. "Producers will soon be compelled to rely a great deal more than they do at present, on individual work, of which you know there is still a great deal."

"I believe that before long the big writers will come into this field quite as readily as the big actors and managers have. The time is coming when important film plays will tour the plays, and then authors will get their theatres after the manner of stage royalties on the box-office receipts just as the ordinary dramatists do at present."
At the next meeting of the Institution of Automobile Engineers, in London, a lecture will be given, illustrated with cinematographic views, on automobile design and construction.

Bocaccio in Films

Bocaccio is the latest of the world’s immortals to join the ranks of the “cinematographed.” The eighth novel of the second day of the famous “Decameron” has been filmed by a British company under the title of “Count Anguera.” English critics note with approval that none of the spice associated with the great book has been permitted to flavor the photodrama.

The exhibitors of Cardiff, Wales, have taken up the question of Sunday opening and have signed a petition to the municipal authorities asking them for the privilege. Certain houses in that city are now permitted to run until eight o’clock in the evening on that day.

Forty Theatres Fail in Berlin

Forty motion picture theatres have gone out of business in Berlin alone since the beginning of the year. That is but one indication of the situation confronting the German exhibitors at the present time. In the two cities of Wurzburg and Warzburg, exhibitors have formed an association for limiting the number of motion picture theatres.

A refreshing exception to the generally merciless attitude of the German authorities toward the motion picture exhibitors is the action of the municipality of Potsdam, where the “tax de luxe” has been materially reduced during the summer months to enable the managers to weather this critical period.

Three “Othello” on Market

Three Italian productions of “Othello” are now on the market. One is the Ambrosio picture, the first out. One has just been issued by Photo-Dramm, and a third is to come from Morgana.

A motion picture theatre that will seat three thousand persons is to be erected at Naples, and adjoining it will be an elaborate cafe-garden, where refreshments will be dispensed during performances.

It is rumored in Italy that the Italian Company and Gabriele d’Annunzio have both been so highly gratified by the reception of “Cabiria” in Italy and elsewhere, that the famous poet has engaged to write a second scenario for the firm. The subject has not been disclosed.

Royalty on the Screen

King Christian of Denmark and Nicholas of Montenegro are the most recent among the sovereigns of Europe to have their royal action recorded on the cinematographic film.

The Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria has granted a permit to a motion picture concern of Vienna to film the royal parks and castle of Schönbrunn.

Modify German Booth Laws

Since the introduction of non-film films in Germany, the German police have modified the rigor of the regulations concerning operators’ booths, on the ground that there is now less danger of fire, and the need for the former precautions has decreased.

A new producing company has been formed in Russia.

The exhibitors in the north of Austria have united to form a film exchange controlled by themselves, at Reichenberg.

Suit Over “Bismarck” Scenario

“Bismarck,” the big feature of the Eiko-Film, Berlin, is responsible for a lawsuit for damages, brought against that firm by Herr Wolfstieg, head of the Library of the Imperial Reichstag.

It seems that Eiko-Film commissioned Wolfstieg to write the scenario for the production and, with his opportunities for obtaining all the information possible on the life of the “iron chancellor” through the archives of the Reichstag, he produced a script that was authoritative, and incidentally necessitated an unusual outlay of money for its staging.

Eiko-Film submitted the scenario to the police before going ahead with it, and the authorities informed the company that the picture could not receive official sanction in this form.

Another script was prepared, therefore, and the production made, but in the meantime Herr Wolfstieg had gotten wind of the fate of his scenario and demanded payment for his work. The suit resulted. A commission of experts has been appointed to adjudge the amount of damages, if any, due the writer. Such is life under the rule of the German police.

Film Tax in South Africa

The South African government, according to reports among the English trade, has laid a tax of five shillings per one hundred feet on all finished film brought into that country.

The African Film Trust is the principal sufferer under the new duty.

Educational matinees are being given by a theatre manager of Balham, England, to the pupils in the boys’ and girls’ private schools there. Pathé educational pictures are used, preceded by lectures from the teachers in the classrooms, and followed by essays from the scholars. These matinees occur every two weeks.

War Hurts Business in El Paso

Between War Extras and Regiment Bands, Exhibitors Are Hard Put to It—Rich Mexican Will Build $48,000 Theatre There

_Special to The Motion Picture News._

_El Paso, Tex., June 10._

_The war situation has had a decisive effect on the motion picture show business in this city and the exhibitors are trying to figure whether it has bettered or hurt them. There are several thousand refugees of all nationalities in the city, and many of them are picture show patrons, but, on the other hand, the continual bobbing up of the intermission talk has an extremely bad effect.

On the nights that there is anything out of the ordinary, the papers get out extras and it is impossible to coax anyone into the theatres. Everyone is out on the streets reading extras, and they come out in droves. It has been no unusual thing for from twelve to nineteen to come out in a day.

Another bad effect of the war excitement is the sending of troops here. The men and officers naturally increase business, but each of the seven regiments, or parts of regiments, have a band. Two free band concerts are given at a downtown plaza each week. What the exhibitors think of them cannot be told in paragraphs.

There are also band concerts at the fort nearly every night and the civilians go out to them. Taken all in all, the local exhibitors would be just as well satisfied if the late Francisco Madero had not started his little revolution in 1910.

A new $45,000 theatre for pictures, and perhaps vaudeville, is being erected here by Señor Cruz, a rich Mexican refugee from Chihuahua. He is a member of the Terrazas family, which is often called “the Rockefellers of Mexico.”

He paid $97,000 for the ground which is in the center of the motion picture district. An unique feature of the new theatre will be the introduction of an ice-cream parlor on the balcony floor. This is a Mexican custom. The building will be of reinforced concrete, the former connected with the Bijou, will manage the new place.

FORMER ARSENAL A THEATRE

Albany, N. Y., June 11.

Union Hall, one of Albany’s oldest buildings, is now a motion picture house, H. R. Jacobs, the well-known showman and former manager of Harmonius Bleeker Hall, having leased the building. Union Hall was formerly an arsenal, and few believed it would ever be turned into a motion picture theatre.
EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "The Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line.

Address: Editor, "The Motion Picture News," 320 West Forty-second Street, New York City.

LEADING THE PUBLIC TO WATER

A GOOD drink of clear, cold lake water as a business getter for a photo-play house is the last thing one would expect to find in the famous beer city, Milwaukee.

But nevertheless, that is the method that Otto Meister, manager of the Vaudette Theatre, 185 Third street, uses to attract patronage to his house and he has found it very successful.

Situated on the curbing, directly in front of the theatre, Mr. Meister has installed an attractive three-bubble bubbler, from which the thirsty may quench their thirst. Just how it brings business to the theatre is best told by Mr. Meister himself.

"I have found," said Mr. Meister, "that the bubbler attracts people from across the streets, where I have two houses in opposition to me, and after they have taken a drink they nine times out of ten do not re-cross the street, but come into my house. Then too, people are attracted from Grand avenue, our main thoroughfare, by the bubbler and I depend upon my lobby display to do the rest."

The bubbler has been in use a little more than a year now and Mr. Meister says that it has paid for itself many times over.

"A LITTLE DANCING NOW AND THEN"

A LWAYS venturesome and aiming to do "something different," Manager Tom Moore inaugurated exclusive "dansants" on the stage of the Orpheum, Washington, D. C., where a beautiful maple floor was laid for this purpose. An orchestra of seven furnished delightful music. These have been suspended for the present while the doors of the Orpheum are closed necessary for the making of the new Ninth street entrance of this theatre.

The Orpheum was formerly a popular drama house, and has been the scene of some fine plays, and some years ago of opera, but most recently it was the home of melodramas. It ranks as the largest motion picture house in Washington.

PLAYING DOWN THE YELLOW

A LONG an advertising line, W. F. Bozner, of Boise, Idaho, first favors the newspapers and believes the best results are secured through the columns of the press. He is opposed to scare heads, and also the advertising portraying the horrors of any picture, but believes that pictures of a historic nature, showing the destruction of cities, great disasters, etc., should be advertised according to their historic value rather than pictured as a horror, which, he believes, has a tendency to prejudice the public against the picture.

Much of the advertising matter gotten out in the form of posters is detrimental to securing business, rather than productive, in the opinion of Mr. Bozner, who does not believe the flaring posters showing horrible tragedies or the ones enlarging on a picture are of value, and further finds that they do not appeal to the public who are looking for attractions.

Mr. Bozner's picture theatre is never pasted with posters. Small pictures, set in neat frames, give the attractions. Special sign cards for the show are used with good effect, while Mr. Bozner does a large amount of newspaper advertising and also billboard advertising when he gets the right kind of posters, but on several occasions he has received posters which he has not put out, because he believed they would be detrimental to the business and an injury to the picture.

HE ORDERED ORDER—AND HE GOT IT

I T remained for the proprietors of the motion picture theatre at Irvine, Ky., to put over the most unique stunt ever tried in this region. Irvine usually has a police "force" consisting of two constables. Recently, in the heat of the moment, and in the excitement of a stirring encounter, they killed an obstreperous prisoner.

This man was of sufficient importance to his relatives to start considerable of a stir concerning it, so the two officers were suspended. At once, according to the motion picture man, his troubles began.

He declared people of the town would gather in his place and turn it into a rough house. He appealed to the town councilmen, but the trouble kept up. Then he announced he would close his place until the officers were reinstated, that he could not keep order while the town was without police protection, and that the suspended officials, friends of his, were the best peace-keepers the municipality had ever had anyway.

This strong plea had its effect—the two officials were reinstated, the motion picture show reopened and all is now serene.

$1,000 A MONTH FOR "ADS" IN THE NEWSPAPERS

"ADVERTISEMENT and then deliver the goods" is the slogan of Lou G. Bissenger, manager of the Queen Theatre, Dallas, Texas. Judging from his monthly expenditure for advertising, one would readily decide that he practices what he preaches.

Bissenger believes that the daily newspaper is the best medium. During April he expended exactly $1,000 for such space.

The itemized list of Bissenger's advertising expenses follows:

BOOKS ALL WEEKLIES

LOUIS H. BECHT, owner of the Mall, one of the oldest and most successful of downtown theatres in Cleveland, Ohio, has booked all the current topic films coming into Cleveland for stated days each week.

His noon-time business is largely from the business men in the downtown section and he says they ask for Pathé's Weekly, Mutual Weekly and Animer Week, so he has hooked all three of these features.

His is the first theatre in the city to show more than one of these "newspaper" films.
Buffalo Theatre Changes Hands

The Elmwood Amusement Company Buys the Allendale for $90,000—The Purchase a Surprise Among Local Exhibitors.

Special to The Motion Picture News

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 11.

ONE of the biggest transactions of the year in the local motion picture world was made last Wednesday evening at the Elmwood Theatre when a meeting of the directors of the Elmwood Amusement Company, Inc., owners of the Elmwood Theatre, and L. Michaels, owner of the Allendale Theatre, the latter theatre was bought by the Elmwood company at a cost in the neighborhood of $90,000. The announcement was a surprise to all local exhibitors as the Allendale Theatre was thought to be the last theatre in Buffalo that would go on the market.

The reason for selling, however, is that Mr. Michaels has other large interests on the East Side, which require all his attention, he being owner of the Plaza Theatre and a large retail tailoring establishment, both on William street.

The directors of the Elmwood company are: J. A. Schuchert, general manager; Fred Ullman, Louis Weill and Allen E. Klopp. The Allendale will continue under the same policy for the next two or three weeks, until such time that definite arrangements may be made by the new owners. The present manager is William G. Kaliska.

The two theatres will be under the general management of J. A. Schuchert. George W. Erdman is manager of the Elmwood Theatre.

New Pennsylvania Theatre Planned

Hazleton Will Have $25,000 Picture Playhouse on August 1, with Seating Capacity of 1,000—New State Law Will Govern Building

Special to The Motion Picture News

HAZLETON is to have a new motion picture house that will be one of the best equipped in this section of Pennsylvania. Hugh Campbell, one of the largest property-owners in this city, is the builder.

Hazleton’s new theatre will cost more than $25,000 and will have a seating capacity of 1,000. It is to be erected on Broad street, the busiest thoroughfare in the Mountain City. The size of the building is to be 30x150. It is to have its own heating and lighting plant. A cold blast air system will be installed for the summer months. On the floor will be placed suction fans to draw the foul air from the building. Dense green lights will be used to make the theatre very light, but will not affect the pictures. The building will be fire-proof.

There will be a revolving curtain on which advertisements will be placed.

It is expected the new theatre will be opened August 1. It is the first house in this vicinity to be erected under the new state laws and regulations for motion picture theatres.

The architect for the new structure is George F. Schroeder, of Wilkes-Barre. He has drawn plans for several of the finest motion picture houses in this section.

Cry of “Bicyclers” Heard in Elizabeth

New Jersey Exhibitors Complain to General Film Against Certain Downtown Managers—Investigation Began—Boys Used in Scheme

Special to The Motion Picture News

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 11.

Complaint has been registered with the General Film Company by managers of some of the local “movie” houses regarding the business methods resorted to by proprietors of certain theatres in the downtown section of the city. It is claimed that films are “bicycled” to such an extent that honest competition is impossible.

One manager who operates two houses has films carried back and forth between his theatres, and as a result is able to provide twelve-reel shows without any extra expense.

The films are transported by small boys, many of them under thirteen years of age, and the youngsters take very little care of their burdens. One manager, who is trying to keep within legitimate lines of competition, says that he has seen boys passing his theatre at least as late as 10:30 o’clock at night carrying reels unboxed, and very often fifteen or twenty feet of film are dragging on the ground.

It is said that an agent of the General Film Company was in town a few days ago investigating reports.

DANCE AT HOLLYWOOD

The Universal Film Company gave an informal dance to the west coast employees June 6, in appreciation of the splendid work of every man and woman connected with the organization in making up for recent fire loss in New York.

The dance was held at the Hollywood studios on the great 400-foot stage, which was enclosed with canvas and gaily decorated for the occasion. Refreshments were also served.
IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

Project to Provide Education by Means of "Action Pictures" Launched in Montreal Schools—Surgical Pictures' Value Discussed—Agricultural Films for Kentucky—Other Items

THE project to provide education in the various schools of the Dominion of Canada by means of motion pictures or, as it has been called by the promoters, "action pictures," so as to distinguish the work from that of the theatrical world, has been successfully launched in Montreal. The idea has been worked out under the patronage of the school commissioners of Westmount.

Kindergarten classes are to be taken first, and then more advanced subjects such as geography, national history, and so on. The film exchange will be opened in Montreal, and already a large quantity of films and slides have been secured. The machines will be purchased by the schools, but the films will remain the property of the Exchange and will be circulated throughout the country.

The promoters intend to be worldwide in their pictures, and it is anticipated that many films will be purchased in the States, where this idea of using educational films in the schools has made great headway. It is also thought that an exchange could be made between the school authorities in the States and the authorities in Canada by which method the British Empire subjects can be shown in the States and vice versa.

In the Orpheum Theatre, Montreal, a vaudeville house which has closed for the season, the International Bible Students' Association, are giving a free presentation of a dozen motion picture reels and 50 stereopticon slides telling the story of the Bible. The house will be used for this purpose for one month.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of the Penn public school, Montreal, have decided to buy a stereopticon picture machine for use next year in furthering the objects of the organization which aims to create a better understanding between parents and teachers regarding the treatment of children out of school.

A "Clean Up" Week in Montreal

The educational value of motion pictures is being more strongly recognized every day in Canada, and especially so in the large cities like Montreal and Toronto. In Montreal the idea is to be tried out in schools, and all their organizations, and the public as well, have determined to clean up the city and make it look pretty, and, better still, more healthy.

To create greater interest in the movement the aid of the motion pictures has been requested, and the various managers of the picture halls have agreed to use especially prepared films which will show methods of fire prevention, the difference between clean and dirty lanes, and other hygienic features.

The pictures will be accompanied by five-minute addresses from members of the clean-up committee.

Discuss Surgical Pictures' Value

There has recently been an interesting discussion going around in prominent Canadian medical circles as to the feasibility of introducing the aid of the motion picture in disseminating information by exhibiting films of interesting operations that are performed from time to time in the various hospitals. This subject was created by an operation which was performed by the surgeons at one of the prominent Montreal hospitals, when an operation was performed, which, so it is said, has only one precedent in the history of surgery.

A suffocating sensation about the heart told a young man of the pressure that soon would stop its beating. He knew what was wrong. He knew the pericardium, or sack in which the heart is enclosed, had become inflamed and the inflammation resulted in the secretion of foreign fluid between the pericardium and the heart. As the secretion increased, the pericardium was distended and pressure on the heart itself began.

The surgeons knew desperate remedies only could save him. He was taken to the operating table with his pulse scarcely perceptible. It was impossible to administer a general anaesthetic, so the region upon which the operation was to take place was deadened, and with the patient fully conscious, the operation was concluded. The ribs were exposed. An incision was then made in the pericardium and the fluid was drained off.

Five minutes later the lad was feeling much better. The heart action was returning to normal.

Now, the point is that only those at the operating table could gain any idea as to how this operation was done, while on the other hand probably every medical man in the country is interested in the operation, and would give a great deal to gain some idea as to how it was done, with other general details so important to the medical profession.

It is suggested, therefore, that the operating room of every hospital should be so adapted that a motion picture machine can be installed and pictures taken whenever possible of interesting operations.

The pictures could then be sent round to the various students' colleges, exhibited and carefully studied.

Of course there are many apparent obstacles to this scheme, but it is thought by those who have looked into the question that they can be overcome.

Agricultural Films

The State Agricultural Department at Frankfort, Ky., is considering the use of motion pictures for educational work in connection with the department's efforts to improve methods of farming in this state. The motion pictures may be used to show proper and improper methods of tilling the soil, as well as methods of exterminating the tobacco worm, which is a great enemy of the big "money crop" of Kentucky. The department officials are reluctant to make any definite plans on the subject, as they have merely been investigating.

Plan Free Shows in Detroit

The Political and Civic League of Detroit, composed of club women, is proposing free educational motion picture shows for the 60,000 public school children of Detroit. It is planned to put the plan in operation in September and it will have the cooperation of the exchange managers and exhibitors, it is said. School Inspector George Condon has expressed himself as favorable to the project if the pictures are strictly educational and closely censored.

Motion pictures of strawberry growing in Warren County, Kentucky's chief berry-growing county, are to be taken by the Farmers' Cooperative Bureau of Agriculture, who have sent Roger E. Tree and Clyde L. Davis to Bowling Green for that purpose. The co-operation feature in growing and selling among the farmers deserves advertisement, in the opinion of the government.

Films to Aid Pennsylvania Farmers

In order to aid in the development of the farm lands of Luzerne county Congressmen John J. Casey, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has arranged with the Department of Agriculture at Washington to give motion picture exhibits of agriculture work in Wilkes-Barre, Pittston and Hazleton just as soon as necessary arrangements can be made.

This material concession was obtained by Congressman Casey after conferring with Secretary Houston, of the Department of Agriculture, J. S. Clinton, chief of the Bureau of Farm Management, and J. S. Cates, farm expert.

The motion picture exhibitions will show the various developments of farm life under the direction of the bureau of farms, and other scenes of importance, not only to the farmer, but to all others interested in the raising of vegetables, either for private or marketable use.

The exhibitions will have a two fold purpose. They will be the means of getting the farmers and others interested in the development and improvement of farm lands and the results that can be obtained by farmers working under one organized head.

Congressman Casey, when interviewed by a representative of The Motion Picture News, said Mr. Clifton will come to this vicinity and lecture at the meetings, and as each scene is thrown on the screen he will explain to those in attendance every detail in connection with the picture.

The meetings will be held under the direction of the boards of trade in the cities mentioned.

It is quite likely, Mr. Casey said, that the motion picture exhibits will be given in other cities throughout the state.

Predictions from Edison

“Five-cent opers and visualized geography, botany and scientific lessons and lectures are only a short time away,” predicted Mrs. Isa Maud Lilen, the only woman representative of Thomas A. Edison, who lectured in Detroit, Mich., recently.

“The school of the future—Mr. Edison’s model school—will be a per-ennial motion picture show, with the kinescope as the teacher’s assistant. School will be too fascinating to allow thoughts of truancy.

“How do I know? Well, Mr. Edison says so, and everything he promises, he does.”

FEATURE HOUSE DE LUXE

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Atlanta, June 11.

Harry B. Hearn and Hugh Cardoza, representing Jake Wells, have completely transformed the Grand Theatre into a motion picture house de luxe, and are presenting there first-run, three and four reel films.

The Grand is one of America’s largest theatres. The first thing Messrs. Cardoza and Hearn did after taking over the theatre was to make an attractive foyer out of the lobby. Handsome rugs were spread; palms and other potted plants put in and big armchairs and other public conveniences installed.

The projection screen has been placed at the back of the stage amid a setting of ferns and palms that surround a sparkling fountain, and seated on the stage is a ten-piece orchestra.

"Ex-Church" Toledo’s Largest Theatre

First a Congregational Church, the Temple Was Once a Dance Hall, Too—Seats 1,800—Its Manager’s Views

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Toledo, O., June 11.

Built at first as a Congregational church, then rebuilt for a dance hall, and now turned into the largest motion picture theatre in Toledo, O., is the home of Toledo’s newest, largest and highest priced motion picture theatre, the Temple, recently opened under the ownership and management of W. C. Bettis, one of Toledo’s best-known exhibitors.

The Temple is on one of the main streets of the downtown section, and next door to the Boody House, the second best hotel in the city, and opposite the County-building. It has two balconies, with a seating capacity of 1,800.

Admission is ten cents some weeks and twenty-five cents others. Prices are fixed according to the films shown. “Quo Vadis” and “The Wolf” brought twenty-five cents. Ten cents was charged to see “Dope.” All films are shown a full week, and the theatre is crowded at every performance. The show is continuous from 2 to 11 p.m.

Mr. Bettis first started in the motion picture business when the industry was in its infancy. He covered all of Ohio and parts of Michigan with his films and introduced lectures and motion pictures to outlying Ohio districts. He built the Colonial Theatre and showed there for some time.

Selling the house later on to A. O. Brailey, a stockholder in the Toledo ball club, Bettis built his second theatre, the Alhambra, which was the largest house in the city until he opened the Temple for his son, Leslie Bettis. When asked by the Toledo correspondent what he thought of the motion picture business and its future, Mr. Bettis answered:

“I believe that the five-cent theatre has answered its purpose in educating the people to motion pictures, and that it will have to give way to the large, commodious, ventilated, and handsomely equipped theatre built expressly for exhibition purposes.

“Outside of the automobile business, I don’t think that any line has gone ahead with such leaps and bounds as motion pictures.

“In my judgment, the swiftest thing in the amusement world to-day is the photoplay. Men who two short years ago made fun of it are to-day scrambling for a foothold in the film business. I regret very much that the public cares so little for educational and travel films, but I can see that people’s taste is gradually changing in that regard. I look forward to the time when we can present such films with the entire approval of the entire audience. This is the day of the big feature production. I would not be surprised if within another year the ordinary cheap release service would be a thing of the past.

“In the old days, we were able to please an audience with one reel and an illustrated song. The patrons hardly got the chairs warm when the show was over and they hurried away to another theatre. But that day has passed, never to return. Today a manager must present a long, diversified program, in a beautifully appointed place, of large seating capacity, if he hopes to make a dollar or ever get his investment back again. Indeed, to-day it is a case of the survival of the fittest.”

SCRAMBLE FOR DRUG FILMS IN TOLEDO

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Toledo, O., June 11.

“The Drug Terror,” the five-reel Lubin drama of dope fiend life and its reformers was passed by the Ohio board of censors and immediately booked by the Valentine Theatre.

Both “The Drug Terror” and “Dope,” a six-reel photoplay on the same subject, were brought to this city on the same day. W. C. Bettis, of the Temple Theatre, and Walter H. Moore, manager of the Valentine, had their pick of the films. Bettis took “Dope” and Moore “The Drug Terror.” Both reels were showing in Toledo the same week, and every night people were turned away from both houses. Physicians, druggists and nurses were given free tickets, on request, to the Temple by Mr. Bettis, who was interested personally in the picture and thought that everyone should see it. The Toledo “Morning Times” gave away coupons for the Valentine. Anyone holding a coupon could get in for fifteen cents instead of the regular twenty-five cents admission.

The Princess recently closed a contract with the Pathé Frères Company to show Pathé’s Weekly every Thursday (one day old). The Weeklies are booked direct by the Pathé Company instead of through a film exchange, and are shown in Cleveland on Wednesday, the release day, and are then sent to Toledo on Thursday. Booked in this manner the Princess management is able to give the public current event news pictures one day after release. The Princess is handling the General Film output.

TRADE NOTES

Parisian Theatres

According to statistics emanating from the "Assistance Publique," the Parisian exhibitors are said to have sold tickets amounting to about $1,132,000 during 1913 alone. It must not be forgotten that as a rule French theatres only open in the evening.

Non-Flam

A new film has been announced which is said to be made of hardened gelatine and which costs a little more than a cent a foot. No doubt all raw film manufacturers will become clients of the new firm.

Nikisch and Weingartner Experiment with Invention

In our issue of June 6 we mentioned the British Patent 1728, by O. J. Rausch, for photographing the movements of conductors of orchestras. We now read that the Russian composer, Nikisch, and the German meister, Weingartner, both posed before them, so that they may be able to send a positive when they do not feel like going out.

No More Danger

The Raw Film Supply Company, representing the two famous foreign factories, Agfa and Gevaert, has recently introduced several new types of positive and negative films. We shall not insist on the technical peculiarities of each new film, but it must be said that the Agfa non-flam is certainly the best and most reliable safe film ever placed on the market.

It is generally ignored what a good raw film has to be in order to give satisfaction, the photographic part is a mere trifle if compared with the trouble experienced by raw stock manufacturers, but what does that amount to when compared to the numerous insurmountable difficulties encountered by those who try to make non-flam film? The result obtained by Agfa should therefore be considered as a revolution in the art.

The consequences of the discovery will certainly be in favor of the whole motion picture industry. There are still a great number of people who never saw cinematographic pictures for fear of explosion or other accidents coming from the celluloid film. Now they will all come.

Condensers

We are glad to recommend the Golden Radium condensers, which we tried and found to lessen the eyestrain when black and white films are projected.

A particularly critical profession that would be justified is upon the name of the condensers. Why not call them simply the "Solar condensers"? The idea they suggest is more of sunshine than gold.

Quarter Theatre for Rochester

George E. Simpson May Decide to Charge Twenty-five Cents Admission When His Place Opens in the Fall.

Rochester, N. Y., June 11.

ROCHESTER may soon have a motion picture house charging 25 cents for admission to the best seats. Indications now point to such a policy on the part of the owners of the new theatre which is being built at East avenue and Chestnut street.

No public announcement of the policy of the house has been made as yet. In fact, the owners, when last quoted, were still deliberating whether to put vaudeville or pictures into the new house, but the writer has been reliably informed that it has been definitely decided to put pictures in the new house, which will be ready for occupancy in the fall.

When discussing his policy some time ago, George E. Simpson, one of the owners of the theatre, said: "If we put pictures into our new house it will be on a scale never before seen in Rochester. We will have everything of the best. Our house will be the best and largest in the city, and the best equipped in every way to care for the comfort of our patrons. We will also have the best that is to be had in the picture line."

From this talk it would seem that the new house may have a slight advance in prices over the others. At present the Gordon Theatre, on Clinton avenue, north, managed by T. S. Powers, is getting the highest price for pictures, 15 cents at night, with 10 cents in the afternoon for men, and 5 cents for women and children.

When the Gordon announced those prices at the time it opened, about eighteen months ago, local picture men stood by in amazement and wondered whether folks would pay that much to see motion pictures. The great success of the Gordon has proved they will.

That was a big step forward in the picture business in Rochester, and it remains to be seen whether the new house, which will probably be called the Hippodrome, will go a step further than the management of the Gordon. The tendency in the picture field to-day is toward higher prices and better shows, and it may be that the managers of the Hippodrome will think the time is ripe for a step in advance in Rochester.

Mr. Simpson, who made a great success of the present Hippodrome, which is located on Main street, East, at Elm street, and which will be closed up when the new Hippodrome is opened, is a firm believer in giving the public a first-class show.

"Have the best pictures, the best music, the best seating, the best heating, the best ventilation and show the public the courtesy, and people will come to see your show," he says.

"Do you intend to compete with the Gordon?" Mr. Simpson was asked, as a sort of feeler to get his ideas on prices.

"No, the Gordon will have to compete with us," was his reply.

Good progress is being made on the new building. The walls are well advanced, and it will not be long before the roof is in place and the finishing begins.

Lubin's "Drug Terror," Opening Attraction at the West Allegheny Theatre, Draws Big Crowd—Up-to-date Appointments

Special to The Motion Picture News

PHILADELPHIANS in the north-eastern part of the city witnessed the opening of the West Allegheny Theatre, on Friday evening, May 22. The crowd in attendance was very large, the overflow waiting in the street even as late as 9:30 p. m. for the last show.

The attraction was Lubin's "Drug Terror." The selection of this subject for the opening was a particularly happy one, as many of the scenes in this drama were taken in the immediate neighborhood of the Lubin studio being but a few blocks away.

The theatre itself is built of concrete and brick, with a concrete roof making the structure completely fire-proof. The exterior is of pressed gray brick, and is well lighted by flaming arcs on three sides of the building. The interior is finished in buff and rose, with mural decorations in panel around the walls.

The seating capacity is nearly 1,000 and the exits are numerous, there being fifteen in all. The building faces the street on three sides and on the fourth has a wide court.

The booth is very large and roomy, well ventilated and well lighted. The projection equipment consists of two Power 6-A machines and Westinghouse 3r Ampere light. The throw is about 125 feet to a plain white wall with a picture 12x16 feet.

Toilets are provided for ladies and gentlemen.

The Pennsylvania Censorship Suits

UNDETERRED by the adverse decision of the Federal Judges of Northwestern Ohio in a similar suit, the Mutual Film Corporation, and with it the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, have promptly set about to make the Pennsylvania State censors of films prove their right to a legal existence.

Not at all dismayed by the manner in which those judges snubbed their demand for a decision on constitutional grounds, the Mutual has raised that issue again in the Pennsylvania suits.

THIS is decidedly as it should be. It is exhilarating to find the spirit that does not consider defeat save as a postponement of victory residing in at least one group of manufacturers in this industry.

And it is still more encouraging to observe the entrance of the Universal into this fight, at a time when the outcome of the Ohio suit might offer a plausible excuse to a less discerning concern for holding aloof.

Most significant of all is the action of a group of exhibitors in entering a suit, on behalf of the exhibitors and from the standpoint of the exhibitors, against the Pennsylvania law.

Here at last we have the long-desired spectacle of exhibitors and manufacturers, fighting shoulder to shoulder, for the common good of everyone connected with the motion picture.

If this can be accomplished in the courts, why can it not be realized outside the courts? Why cannot the exhibitor and the manufacturer work together every day, in all things, in one organization which shall strengthen and protect every member?

Such an organization will come, must come in time.

WHY NOT NOW?

EXHIBITORS’ TIMES, June 20, 1914

THE burden of provisions, in ridiculous regulations, the Pennsylvania law and its operators, the new censors, have succeeded in surpassing the Ohio statute and its luxury-loving guardians, if such a thing is possible.

The fee charged for censorship is heavier than the Ohio rate.

Their attempts to make their attitude clear on debatable features and scenes in photoplays only result in making the censors clearly ridiculous.

"Prolonged, passionate love-scenes . . . must not be cheapened to the extent of losing their significance," is one brilliant example of their obscure explanations.

"The board will require that violence be not degraded, but rather of educational and social value," is another, which for sound signifying nothing has not had its equal in many a day.

"Farce, burlesque or drama which is actuated by levity or any other than serious purposes will be discouraged by the board."

IF the audacity of the censors thus arbitrarily to prohibit a whole genre of photoplay—to banish comedy, which has claimed some of the greatest names in the literature of all ages,—to say that only "serious purposes" shall actuate the photoplays they pass, is not challenged and overthrown, it will be because "judgment has fled to brutish beasts and men have lost their reason."

THE thanks of The Motion Picture News and of the exhibitors of the country go forth to the Universal and the Mutual for their heroic and far-sighted attitude toward this question.

They are benefactors of the entire industry, the more so as the fruits of victory will be to everyone alike and in equal measure.

The support of the entire industry is due them in this crucial struggle.

A Symptom of Weakness

JUST a word of advice to a Cincinnati amusement weekly, which is devoting each week a large amount of space to ridiculous attacks upon The Motion Picture News.

Your general skill in skirting narrowly the libel laws and almost breaking the United States’ postal rules does full credit to your experience in your species of fulsome journalism.

But is it possible you do not know that old maxim, so widely applicable, so deeply true, so unanswerable: "The surest sign of weakness and decay is to knock the successful?"

Well, Mr. Neff, Why?

Northwestern Representative of The Motion Picture News, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir:—The writer would like to be informed as to why Mr. Neff, the national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, changed the meeting place of the State Convention which was to be held at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, on Thursday, June 4 and 5, to Albert Lea, Minn., without notifying all the exhibitors throughout the state of the change.

We received the information second handed that this convention was going to be held at Albert Lea after our local making all arrangements to take care of all out-of-town exhibitors who were in our city on June 4 and 5.

Mr. Neff did not notify any of the members of Local No. 2 that the change had taken place; why it did take place or where the meeting was going to be held.

As stated before, we received the information from an outside source and on Thursday, June 4, I received a telephone call from H. H. Green, our treasurer, telling me that Mr. Neff was in the city and wished to see me immediately at the West Hotel.

I went down to see Mr. Neff, talked to him for quite a while and asked Mr. Neff why the convention was changed, why the exhibitors were not notified, and he stated that he was afraid that if the convention was held in Minneapolis that the bolters of the last National Convention would bother him and the members he had already secured and not allow him to hold the convention peaceably in Minneapolis; therefore, changed the convention to Albert Lea.

Now, Mr. Neff made several indirect promises to me and also to several other members of our local stating that if we would affiliate with his local that he saw no reason why the state president should not be in Minneapolis and intimated that I was the man. He immediately left me and made the same proposition to at least four or five members of our local.

I invited Mr. Neff to attend our regular weekly meeting on Thursday afternoon, to come in and explain his side of the situation to our members, which Mr. Neff accepted.

Mr. Neff talked about an hour or an hour and a half, telling about the time he was a cowboy, compared himself with old Abe Lincoln and of course talked at last on his hobby, national censorship.

In fact, he talked so long that every member got disgusted and asked Mr. Neff to leave the room as they did not care to waste their valuable time listening to such rot.

Local No. 2, of Minneapolis, then decided that as Mr. Neff stated that he had several exhibitors throughout the state who had joined the National League of Minnesota that it would be a good idea for the local to send a representation down, consisting of members of Local No. 2, to see what tactics Mr. Neff used in Albert Lea. The following delegates went to Albert Lea: Mr. D. G. Rogers, Mr. H. H. Green, Mr. D. W. Chamberlain and the writer attended this convention.

At Albert Lea we found that Mr. Neff, instead of having 40 members or exhibitors as he said he would have, six exhibitors were present at the convention. After talking with these exhibitors we found that Mr. Neff promised each and every one of the six either the presidency, the national vice-presidency or a free trip to Dayton, Ohio, as a delegate of Minnesota.

Mr. Neff called this convention to order at 10:30 and about 12:30 p.m. upon the motion of one of Mr. Neff's members, the Minneapolis delegates were invited to come into the meeting.

After Mr. Chamberlain, a delegate of the last National Convention and Mr. D. G. Rogers and the writer got through talking, Mr. Neff stated that there were several members that had to leave town to catch an early train for their home city and that the convention would be called to order again at 2:00 p.m. Every member that Mr. Neff had, as well as the delegates that were sent up there, went out of the meeting and never returned. Therefore, we would like to know if Mr. Neff organized, if he had a quorum, and who are the others?

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM A. STEFTE, Secretary Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, Local No. 2.

P. S.—Knowing that The Motion Picture News is impartial and always fair to both the National League and the Independent Exhibitors of America, we would very much like to have you insert the foregoing article in full or in part in as early an issue as possible.

MAINE EXHIBITORS RESIGN FROM LEAGUE

The Maine state branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America held a meeting Tuesday, June 9, in Portland, Maine, and withdrew from membership in the league. Application was immediately made and accepted for membership in the International Motion Picture Association. Thirty delegates left at once for the convention in New York and arrived on Wednesday.

TRENTON THEATRE CLOSED

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Trenton, N. J., June 11.

The Little Hippodrome, a fine, airy motion picture house, opened less than a year ago on North Warren street, opposite West Hanover street, is closed. Several persons have taken hold of the place, but all have failed as did the Brown Brothers who had the house erected and opened it. Being at the terminus of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Traction Company's suburban lines, it was believed that the house would pay. However, several people have tried, but failed.
The Mutual Film Corporation has increased its authorized preferred stock by $1,000,000, of which $909,000 has been sold. This makes about $1,500,000 preferred outstanding and about $300,000 held in the company’s treasury. The Mutual recently bought some 10 or 11 film exchanges owned by outside parties for which it paid approximately $800,000. These film exchanges are usually large earners.

The Mutual’s net profits available for dividends for the 12 weeks ended March 28 before this purchase amounted to $114,000. The corporation has been paying at the rate of 7 per cent. annually on its preferred shares and 1 per cent. a month on the common stock.

Ernest Shipman, who has been in charge of the general office management of the Pan-American Film Company, of 110 West Forty-third street, New York City, will hereafter be active in the interests of the following companies, including the Pan-American:

The Capital Film Company, the Colorado Motion Picture Company, the Rocky Mountain Picture Company, Arthur J. Aylesworth Pictures, Ltd., the Great West Motion Picture Company, the Occidental Motion Picture Company.

In addition to these large interests, Mr. Shipman is associated with Stanley H. Twist in the management of the Inter-Ocean Sales Company.

In assuming these added responsibilities, Mr. Shipman carries with him the best wishes of all who know him.

David Kirkland, a well-known actor, and formerly director with Essanay, will be in the future co-director with Ford Sterling in Sterling’s own company. Mr. Kirkland was born in San Francisco and educated at the University of California. His stage career embraces seasons with Maude Adams and Robert Edeson.

Lilllian Gish is undoubtedly one of the very youngest leading women in the theatrical business. She is only 17 and yet is taking all the leading parts in the Majestic and Reliance productions under the direction of D. W. Griffith. Miss Gish was formerly with Sarah Bernhardt, when but eight years old, as a dancer. At that time she formed the acquaintance of Mary Pickford, who was later instrumental in getting her with Mr. Griffith at the Biograph. When that able director left to take charge of the Mutual interests, Miss Gish accompanied him.

Horace D. Ashton, who is connected with the Vanoscope Company in the capacity of publicity manager, has had an interesting career. He is a Virginian and for some time acted as a war correspondent. In this capacity he served through the Russo-Japanese war and in Hayti and Nicaragua for “Collier’s Weekly.” He was also photographer to Theodore Rose-

"THE STAIN"
(Eclectic—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS dramatic adaptation from the novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert Davis is one of the first pictures outside of "The Perils of Pauline" that have been produced by the Eclectic Company in America. And if this one may be taken as a criterion, its fellows to follow in the future will be worthy of the company that produce them. The picture has the "punch" that only a truly American picture can have. Mr. Powell must have worked exceptionally hard in producing this feature. There is not a scene that is not realistic nor a scene that lets the observer's attention lag for a moment.

There is no plot that contains more human appeal than this one, of the unscrupulous husband who deserts his wife and child, becomes great, and only to be denounced by his wife at the zenith of his power as a criminal and a common thief. Such a story, although it has appeared on the screen more than once, has never been produced with such strength as here.

It would be almost impossible to sit quiet through six reels of nothing but drama of this intense sort, and for this reason plenty of comical scenes have been introduced at opportune moments. The humor is of a kind that would draw a smile from the severest cynic. These humorous scenes come as a welcome relief after the tense and dramatic situations of the picture.

Sam Ryan, who, it will be remembered, played the part of Pauline's grandfather in the first installment of that series, impersonates the political boss. His characterization of this leader is excellent. The contrast between the magnificence of his home and his crude and babyish manners will create a roar of laughter. Edward Jose, as Mr. Stephens and later as Judge Harding, is a character for whom the audience has absolutely no sympathy, even when in the finale he is denounced by his wife. Mrs. Stephens is impersonated by Eleanor Woodruff. Unlike her husband, she gains the sympathy from the start and holds it until the end. Virginia Pearson, as her daughter, and Thurlow Bergen, as Norris, the young lawyer, who is fighting against the corrupt forces of the state, complete the cast of principals.

The scene from "The Stain" this is reproduced here is the one in which Mr. Powell engaged a group of Bowery characters in order to obtain realism, and from the appearance of the picture one can see that he accomplished his purpose. But this is only one of the many that deserve to be noticed.

The court scenes are all intense and inspiring, especially the last one, in which the villainous Judge collapses, after his past has been laid bare by his wife. The outdoor scenes among the lives of the submerged will touch the heart.

That the picture will be a success is a foregone conclusion.

THE POLICE RAID THE HAUNT OF THE GANG

"THE ESCAPE"
(D. W. Griffith—Seven Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHEN "The Escape" appeared last winter in New York, it was generally classed with the many white slave plays, which for a time overran the Broadway theatres. To class this picture with the common run of white slave plays would be a sad mistake, because, although retaining the same story and many of the same scenes, the minor plot of the play has been converted to the major plot of the picture, and vice versa, which makes the picture of one that furthers the cause of the eugenic marriage.

The prologue shows various forms of the lowest particles of life: the amoeba, vorticella, and paramecium and their development into larger particles until at last the human body is attained. The prologue goes further and tells us that horses, dogs, pigs and other animals are mated with the greatest care, and that humans, the most advanced beings on the earth, utterly neglect to assure themselves of the health of their mates. The prologue, about one reel in length, was furnished by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman.

The picture itself is the gripping story of one unfortunate tenement family. The elder daughter chooses the easy way, but later reforms; the younger is married to a brute who treats her worse than he would a dog, and is the cause of her death. Such a story, replete with the most dramatic and intense situations, is of a variety that will touch the hearts of any audience on the globe. It holds one spellbound from beginning to end.

D. W. Griffith produced the picture, which is released by the Mutual Film Corporation, and it is another added to his long list of successes, and fully deserves to bear his name. He has procured realism and induced pathos varied with a very little humor in all the scenes.

Of course, Mr. Griffith is responsible for the picture, but he could have done little without the accomplished cast that appears. Donald Crisp portrays the character of "Pill" McGee, the gang leader and husband of Jeanne. Perhaps he gained a little sympathy, despite his brutal actions toward his wife, but none remained when he turned away from his wife's deathbed with a laugh.

Nor will any condemn Larry Joyce, Jeanne's brother, for shooting McGee after this act. Robert Harron plays this part to perfection. Owen Moore as the doctor, and F. A. Turner as Jim Joyce, the father, complete the male portion of the cast. Blanche Sweet and Mae Marsh are the two sisters; both play their parts so well that there is no room left for criticism.

Of the individual scenes, perhaps the most thrilling is the one in which the police raid the red light dive, although it would hardly do the rest of the picture justice to call it the best. None of the scenes are at all dry or unentertaining; each one is a marvel in itself. Fine photography predominates in most of the scenes.

As a drama the picture is quite unsurpassable, as an education it is worthy of the best classification, and as a work of the producer's art it has few equals.

BUSINESS BOOMS IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, June 10.

By actual count there were on view at New Orleans moving-picture houses on one day last week no less than forty-seven different films drawn either from standard novels or plays. A great many of these were current releases, while the smaller theatres in the more remote residential districts were employing those a week or more old.

Theatres on Canal, the main street, are finding no trouble in packing the houses at twenty and twenty-five cents.

The first part of the week's entertainment tendered to the exhibitors by the Entertainment Committee of the International Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, was held Tuesday night, June 9, when a party of twelve hundred exhibitors and their friends repaired to the Brighton Beach Hotel, where a sumptuous dinner was tendered them. Judging by the first night, the entertainment for the rest of the week should prove something of unusual excellence for the exhibitors. A dance followed the clambake.

Sharp at seven o'clock three special trains left Brooklyn Bridge, New York, and proceeded down the Brooklyn Rapid Transit tracks to the Brighton Beach tracks, where the throngs alighted. Although the weather was unfavorable to such an event, this did not deter the visiting delegates, their wives and friends from going in a body. By eight o'clock the hotel was crowded to the doors. The tables were apportioned to the various groups in order that friends might keep together. The fair sex was very much in evidence and naturally added to the jollification. A number of actors and actresses were notable among the crowd. One company was particularly well represented. At 11:30 the dinner was completed and all repaired to the large ballroom for dancing.

Anita Stewart, leading woman of the Vitagraph Company, and Helen Marten of the Eclair Company, were the winners of the first two prizes and a Mrs. Clarence Snyder, a resident of Brighton Beach, won the elimination cup. The judges of the event were Joe Farnum, Sam Trigger, Billy Hinkel, Jack Koerpel, Chas. M. Phillips, Harry Morey and W. J. Sweeney.
"MICHAEL STROGOFF"
(Popular Plays and Players, Inc.—Five Parts)
REVIEWED BY LESLEY MASON

I N one way, this picture is an agreeable surprise. In another, it is an equally agreeable demonstration of what was from the beginning a foregone conclusion.
Viewed solely as the initial release of a new feature company, it is surprising to find it of so high an order. Considered in the light of the announcement that it was to be produced under Lubin auspices and with Lubin players in the cast—the great Adler alone excepted—it was practically certain that every circumstance was shaped for the production of a noteworthy picture.

Three features of the photoplay leave a particularly vivid impression on the mind of the spectator—the personality of Adler, the masterly handling of the battle scenes, the burning of the oil-laden river and of the city, and the exceptionally convincing staging of the interiors.

Adler dominates the screen in most of the scenes, though not nearly as much as he might have been expected to do so. The photoplay is frankly less dramatic than it is melodramatic; the spectacular and scenic phases are accentuated, and the human and dramatic elements are more or less permitted to take care of themselves. This makes the picture more of a narrative than a drama, and it is really Adler's superlative powers of impersonation that keep the story on the dramatic level. But though only secondary in a drama, "Michael Strogoff" is a picture of prime interest, and has as powerful a hold upon the emotions of an audience as any drama of the year.

The applause of the hundreds who saw it at the Strand Theatre, on Monday of convention week, is satisfactory testimony of that.

"Michael Strogoff" will make a varied appeal. Those who have read Jules Verne's novel will not miss it. Those who have seen Jacob Adler before and those who have never had an opportunity to see him until now will avail themselves of this opportunity to renew or make his acquaintance. It is an excellent "dish" to set before those who have an appetite for historical and military tales and a picture designed to satisfy the photoplay fan's idea of artistic and illuminating photography. Though in five parts, the production cannot be far over four thousand feet in length, for it requires scarcely more than an hour.

Moreover, the film was made with an eye to the feelings of senselessly sensitive censors. The blinding of Strogoff is detailed with vividness, yet kept free from repulsive realism. And Strogoff's vengeance upon the traitor Ivan is shown with all necessary detail—though the duel is startlingly deliberate—and still, we believe, sufficiently toned down to escape the censor's knife. Perhaps not, for "who can tell what a baby thinks"—or a censor?

Some clever exhibitions of Russian dances enhance the Governor-General's ball in the first reel. Few persons appear in the battle scenes, but the directing of these scenes is so adroit, and the vigor and enthusiasm of the "soldiery" is so unusual, that the atmosphere of war is more powerfully established than a raw director could do it with five thousand indifferent supers in brand new equipment.

The burning of the river and the subsequent conflagration is the work of a master in cinematographic wisdom.
The effect of the burning city is given by suggestion, by strategically arranged glimpses of what appears to be a city on fire from a distance and at night, and done with such art that the illusion is overpowering.

This is production of the first water. Anyone can set a town on fire and photograph it—if he has the town.
But few know how to create the illusion with the raw materials of their art. That is dramatic magic.

Next to Adler, as Strogoff, Daniel Makarenko's impres-sionation of Ivan Ogareff, the Benedek Arnold of the drama, was the most impressive. The acting of Ormi Hawley as Nadia, Peter Lang as Moscow's Governor, Rosetta Brice as Sangaree, the gypsy, Eleanor Barry as Michael's mother, and George Trimble as the Emir, is too well known to need any other comment than commendation. Carleton's directing displayed finish and dramatic sensibility, despite the repetition of some scenes that might have been dispensed with.

"THE HAND OF HORROR"
(Edison—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

O
RIGINALITY of conception is indicated in this photoplay. The plot is rather hackneyed, but two scenes will stand out in the minds of all those who are fortunate enough to see it. The first of these is the fire scene, which is a real fire at the close, for the fire at the Edison studio was used to good advantage, though hardly enough time is allowed to elapse between the start and the finish of the fire.

The second scene, which appears in the last reel, occupies a large number of feet. A man is astride the hands of the Metropolitan Tower clock, New York City. The heavy has closed the door—opening out onto the clock, and Frank is unable to get back. He is seen shifting his position on the hands as they move around, until just when they are at half-past four, after which he will eventually fall off, he is rescued by his sweetheart.

It is obvious that Edward Earle would not really sit on the Metropolitan clock for his picture, and a clever double exposure is the cause of the deception. Bessie Learn and C. J. Brownell are the other leads.
“KRONSTADT”
(Gaumont—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

After seeing this feature, the main thing that stands out in the minds of all is the beauty and artistry of every scene. Kronstadt, the old fortress on the Baltic Sea, around which the story is woven, makes an ideal situation for the locale of the picture. The old castle rises straight up from the sea, and when one is looking at it from the water, it seems most impressive and grand. The artistry of the scenes would count for little if the pictures were badly photographed, but the lighting is perfect and the photography is good in most places. The film itself is streaked in some parts, but perhaps this fault lies only in the copy seen.

The story is the ever-interesting one of a girl sent to a foreign fort to spy on the enemy’s movements, and falling in love with a leader of the opposing side. In this case the two lovers escape after he has learned that she is a spy, not because she wants to be but because she has to be.

The cast consists of Miss Montavon, Mr. Rawlins, Mr. Danburgh, and Mr. Carey, all of whom act their parts in a manner deserving of much praise. The picture is an adaptation from Max Pemberton’s novel of the same name. The author adapted it for the screen and he has made a success of it, as will all agree when they have seen it.

The scenes and sets are all beautiful. There is a gorgeous ball staged in the Russian palace, a stirring sight with the officers of the Russian army present in their uniforms. The picture winds up with a chase through the streets of Paris. The hero is caught and is for a time in the hands of the Russian Ambassador, but through the efforts of his sweetheart, aided by a detective, he is freed.

“LUCILLE LOVE: THE GIRL OF MYSTERY”
(Gold Seal—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

The ninth chapter of the fifteenth installment serial, released June 9. This is by far the most exciting number yet issued and contains action—fast, clean action—from the first sub-title to the last trailer, “Passed by the National Board of Censorship.”

The addition of a number of trick stairways, doors, rooms and the like, give this installment a fascination that has not been equalled in its predecessors. The audience is kept on the edge of the seats awaiting the next move of the fantastic villain, Hugo.

Having seen some of his wiles in previous chapters, we are willing to admit that there is nothing too horrible for him to attempt, and so we watch his every action. Yet withal no one hates him. The writer would not be at all surprised to see Lucille and Hugo marry in the end. At any rate no serious rival has as yet sprung up to battle for her hand. He is a peculiar combination of villain and hero.

The couple in their fight with one another have turned to this country, where for the space of 2,000 feet they continue to “scrap.” If we may believe the last sub-title, Mexico will be the scene of their next engagement. At any rate we left Lucille in the hands of Hugo, who was dragging her off with the threat of taking her to his ranch in Mexico, where she would not cause him so much trouble but to return to this chapter.

The fights on the roofs of several buildings are very well staged. The clash is between Hugo’s gang and a number of detectives engaged by Captain Clarkson, who discovered her presence in Hugo’s house. A “Maxim silencer” on the revolver used by Lucille brings the story very much up to date.

In the last chapter Lucille was hurried into a carriage by Hugo’s gang and hurried away. In the beginning of this installment she finds herself in his house a prisoner. She appeals to Hugo to let her go, but he merely laughs. Attempting to run away up the stairs, she is thrown into a room full of masked men by the moving back of the steps.

Captain Clarkson, her friend, has succeeded in locating her and arrives at the house with several detectives, who commence their search at the attic. Arriving at the room in which Lucille, Hugo merely lowers the floor to the basement so that the auxiliary floor is vacant. The search of the cellar proves the same, for the floor is moved back. The Captain, unsatisfied, goes away and watches the house from a distance. Hugo is caught in his own trap later by the floor being lowered on him. He escapes by coming into Lucille’s room. He is insensible and the girl steals his papers.

The Captain and his friends attack the house and after a terrific fight capture all except Hugo, who gets away, but not before he has captured Lucille and forced her to accompany him.

“THE GAP OF DEATH”
(Leading Players—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

Made by the German Eclair Company and released June 15. The story is essentially a love tale and features a thrilling leap something similar to the “Leap the Gap” that has been featured in some of our large American circuses. This feat consists of riding a motorcycle, or a bicycle, down a steep incline and leaping from it to another incline. The jealousy of another man for the acrobat’s wife causes him to loosen a bolt and so precipitate the rider to his death.

These are several love scenes, one of them remarkable for the amount of attention displayed. There is just sufficient passion shown to take the scene away from the usual “mushy” spectacles.

Paul, a young soldier and the scion of a noble family, rescues an actress from a runaway horse. His ardent attentions to her cause his father to disown him. He then becomes a circus performer. His daring and death are described above.

START FIRE INJUNCTION SUIT IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, June 11.

A suit has been started requesting an injunction against Director of Public Safety Porter, Chief Fire Marshal Malloy and Chief Building Inspector Clark to restrain them from enforcing an order to close the following theatres: Princess, South street; Victoria, Ninth and Market streets; Palace, 1214 Market street, and the Great Northern, Broad street and Erie avenue.

The mixup in this case is an order restraining these houses from presenting vaudeville in connection with pictures unless the theatres are made to comply with the law governing theatres. This in each case would mean the entire rebuilding of the existing structure. The plaintiffs claim that under the law of 1913 they are exempted from the provisions of the prior law.
The Perils of Pauline

There is not one exhibitor in any part of the country who is not a booster for the "Perils of Pauline." It has paid for itself in many instances on the showing of the first episode, leaving the returns from all the others as clear profit. What would you not pay for a series that forces you to turn people away from your door every time you show it. What would you not give to be able to show one that is so popular your patrons call up and ask that you issue reserved seat tickets for the evenings it is to be shown as they wanted to buy for the full series in advance. Yet this has happened in several instances. Some of the exhibitors have advertised that on the days the "Perils of Pauline" are to be shown the prices will be advanced. They had to do this to protect themselves. Do you need any better evidence of the immense pulling power of this picture?

Leaves of Memory
(4 Parts)

This is a strong, real drama showing that there is a just Providence following the destiny of a helpless human being to clear him in the end of a false charge. It is exceptionally strong.

The Lion's Bride
(3 Parts)

Featuring Mme. Emmy Destinn, the great Prima Donna, singing a part of Mignon in a cage containing fourteen lions, one of which was within two or three feet of the singer all the time. The nerve she shows is almost hair raising.

Giants White-Sox World Tour
(6 Parts)
Everyone Wants to See It.

An exceptionally interesting pictorial trip around the world for anyone old or young. The baseball has been lessened to make way for the interesting scenic and historical episodes and places visited. The comedy is of the side-splitting variety. You never saw anything so funny as the expression on the faces of the foreign audiences when the "BUG" is rooting in true style. There are many more amusing incidents that will hold the audience from start to finish.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

"The Cream of American and European Studios"
"THE WRATH OF THE GODS"
(New York Motion Picture Corp.—Six Parts)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM B. ANDREWS

It deals only with big themes, and the producers have put on this drama with due regard to the importance of their subject. The irreconcilable attitude of Orient and Occident; love in its conflict with race prejudice; the polar antithesis of two great religions; and the warring elements before which man and his works must always shrink into pitiful insignificance—these are the basis of this wonderful production.

With lesser stagecraft, an attempt to picturize these mightiest forces of life and nature would have failed pitifully. But here is a case of conceiving a play on a large scale and making it effective by the use of the best mechanical appliances in capable hands. The production is in every respect an artistic triumph, and the New York Motion Picture Company deserves to see "The Wrath of the Gods" have a long run throughout the country. Furthermore, it is entitled to unusual commendation, inasmuch as the play is its first feature planned and executed on a scale that makes all other big productions, save only a scant half dozen, perhaps, seem poor by contrast.

With such artistry shown in this film, no one can predict the extent of the company's future achievements. The best plays—those which become masterpieces and make a permanent impression on the public mind—generally are seen only at long intervals. It may be that some of the New York Motion Picture Corporation's future features will match the present one, but none will surpass it.

As splendid and impressive as the production is, the advertising keeps pace with it. In the entrance of the Strand Theatre, New York City, where the drama was given its New York premiere, the lobby display not only rivalled the efforts of the best legitimate houses, but in many respects surpassed them.

Fourteen magnificent framed oil paintings, colored drawings and photographs were on exhibition. The frames, six feet high by four feet wide, were decorated in the subdued shades of old gold. The most graphic scenes of the drama were shown in a blend of harmonious color; the clear perspective and the expression on the features of the characters indicated the work of an artist and showed that as much thought had been employed on this detail as on the pictorial details of the play.

The most unobserving pedestrian, once his eyes were turned toward the theatre front, could not but help note the striking lobby display. Even a languid interest was immediately stimulated, and many succumbed to the lure of the pictures by reason of their sheer artistry.

Harmony was not only carefully observed in the advertising, but was also apparent to the spectator the moment he took his seat and the film was flashed on the screen, for he at once became aware of a harmonious sequence deliberately preserved in the music. And here again, as in the production itself, was something different from the general run.

The score was written to carry out the theme of the play, and the orchestra, comprising twenty-five trained musicians, interpreted with symphonic skill the subtle changes of feeling in the various scenes. The moods of the characters are brought out in strong relief and communicated to the listener in a wave of thrilling emotion.

S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Strand, was responsible for this harmonizing of music, picture and feeling. The score was written under his supervision by men of technical ability, who incorporated measures in the piece suggested by himself.

In brief, the plot of "The Wrath of the Gods" is as follows: Toya San, daughter of Baron Yamaki, the last male descendant of a prominent family of the ancient Japanese nobility, is shunned by everybody on account of a crime committed by her father. Yamaki had pursued an enemy to the temple of Buddha and had slain the man at the foot of the sacred altar. For this he and his family were forever cursed of the gods.

In order to prevent the young girl marrying, Takeo, an old prophet, explains on all possible occasions to the young men of the village that the moment she becomes the wife of anyone, the volcano, Sakurajima, will pour forth hot ashes and streaming lava.

An American vessel is wrecked on the coast and a young sailor, Tom Wilson, is rescued by Lord Yamaki, who has become a hermit fisherman. The young people fall in love and go to the nearest mission to marry. The prophet, on learning this, stirs up the villagers to a frenzy of indignation. The throne rushes off to the mission but are unable to reach it in time to prevent the marriage.

The volcano becomes active and the country is shaken by a terrible earthquake. The countryside is destroyed, and the father is killed, but the young couple manage to make their escape to a ship in the harbor.

But what matters the plot of this moving drama, so sure is it of sweeping the spectator away in a surge of tumultuous sensations? The mere details are nothing. The Oriental fatalism, casting its spell on the observer, makes him forget the story, and he gives himself up to the glamour of romance, staged amid a setting of terrible grandeur.
The "National" Ticket-Issuing Register

A new cash register for ticket-selling booths

This register is especially designed for use wherever tickets are sold. It is operated by electricity. Press the keys and instantly the register prints and issues any number of tickets, from one to five. The ticket may be of five different values, depending upon the key board in use.

Cashier does not handle ticket.

When installed, the top of the register is flush with the cashier's booth. The register is so placed that the glass partition in front of the booth will come across the top of the machine, between the keys and the ticket-issuing chute.

With this arrangement, the cashier does not handle the ticket. She simply receives the money, presses the keys and gives change.

Saves time and money.

The patron takes the ticket from the chute and passes into the theater. There is no unnecessary delay or tedious waiting. Crowds are handled with the same ease as single purchasers. The tickets are printed as issued. Blank rolls cost less than half as much as the ordinary printed roll. There is no loss in destroyed or unused rolls.

Tickets printed and recorded at one operation.

All tickets issued are automatically counted and the money received for them added into one total.

At any time, by glancing at these counters, he may know exactly the number of tickets issued and the amount of money that should be on hand. A ticket cannot be printed and issued without leaving a record inside the register, and the cash must agree with the register record. performance—and attend yourself, we should greatly appreciate the courtesy.

Very truly yours,

THE IDEAL THEATRE,

H. J. Miller, Manager.

Then Miller stamped on two ordinary theatre tickets, with one of the two special stamps which he had purchased for the occasion, the following:

"This ticket good only for the evening performance of MAY 30."

These two tickets, together with the letter, were inserted in a carefully addressed envelope. Charles and Henry, the two ushers of the theatre, on whose honesty Miller could rely, were given a lesson in deportment and, dressed in their full regalia, were sent out to deliver the letters.

The attendance at the two performances—that for the young people and that for the middle-aged and elderly—exceeded Miller’s most sanguine expectations. On each occasion, he made a speech from the stage which he had carefully prepared beforehand, clearly manifesting his intention to give his patrons exactly what they wanted and pointing out succinctly the manner in which the program had been built up from the suggestions on the slips.

The uniqueness of the idea caught the audience’s fancy, as well as the friendliness of the intent. Miller was applauded to the echo. There was no question about his having been acquainted.

After the second successful performance, Miller, tired but happy, sat in his box-office and took stock. His printing consisted of the following:

2,000 Fliers ........................................ $4.00
1,000 Envelopes, Printed ......................... 3.00
1,000 Slips, Two Colors ......................... 3.50
1,000 Stamps ........................................ 1.75
Sign for Theatre .................................. 4.00
500 Envelopes with Envelope Corner ........... 1.50
2 Rubber Stamps for Complimentary Tickets .... 60

Total ........................................... $18.93

He had given three complimentary performances at which, however, there were many paid admissions from those who had not received free tickets. He had given as many admissions to other performances as there were slips exchanged.

On the other hand, he had acquired the good-will of over five hundred persons who lived in the vicinity and had previously been antagonistic or indifferent to "The Ideal."

Each one was now an enthusiastic booster and did better advertising than all the paid mediums at hand. He had had an opportunity, moreover, to explain in a most unique way his desire to serve the public.

In other words, he had secured, with comparatively little expense, an opportunity to "get acquainted."

THREE TRENTON HOUSES SIGN WITH OPERATORS

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Trenton, N. J., June 11.

The operators’ strike is still on here, although the men are working this week, under protest, in the smaller houses, State street, Broad street and Taylor’s. These three largest houses of the city—all regular theatres turned into motion picture houses—have signed up $18 a week. Various committees are still at work endeavoring to secure agreements with the managers of the smaller houses. The Broad Street Theatre, at South Broad and Livingston streets, has made great inroads into the business of the smaller houses by introducing six-reel productions.

ONE OF OUR GIRLS

(Famous Players—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY A. DANSO MICHEL

BEYOND doubt this is one of the finest films ever produced by the Famous Players. It has every essential necessary for a successful production—photography, cast, detail, plot, action—everything to hold the interest.

Hazel Dawn, recent star of "The Pink Lady," plays the title role. Too much cannot be said in her favor. Her charm and grace get the scene "across." She is not "camera shy." She is to be seen in several other productions by this company.

As usual, the star is supported by a capable and clever cast. Lionel Adams plays the male lead, the lover of Kate. His clever work would be a feature were it not for Miss Dawn’s personality, which permits no rivalry. The "heavy" part is as usual played by Hal Clarendon. His work is too well known to need special mention. Fania Marinoff, Mme. Dalberg, Charles Krauss, David Powell, George Backus, Clarence Handyside and Rolinda Bainbridge complete the important characters in the cast.

The action is laid in New York and France, principally the latter. In this respect the atmosphere is superb. The action throughout does not lag for a moment. Bronson Howard, the author, is noted for this. There is a slight touch of melodrama, which gives an added zest.

Kate Shipley, an American heiress, goes to France to attend the wedding of her cousin Julie, who really loves Henri, but weds Comte de Credillon for convenience. Kate meets the Comte, and he violently flirts with her. John Gregory, a British army captain, meets Kate and a mutual love springs up. The Comte and Julie are married, although the former is already wedded to a girl, whom he later accidentally kills. Dr. Girodet suspects the nobleman and sets to work to confirm his suspicions.

Julie, sickened at the Comte’s cruelty, runs away to Henri’s room. Her husband knows she is there, but, warned by Kate, she hides. Henri and the infuriated Comte fight, the former being wounded by a cowardly stroke. Captain Gregory turns up at the conclusion of the duel. He finds Kate there, she stating to the Comte that it was she who secretly met Henri. The captain challenges the Comte and wounds him in a duel next day. By a trick the wounded man confesses to his wife’s death and is arrested immediately. A very pretty reconciliation, as may be seen by the illustration, follows between Kate and her brave lover.

singers, although scheduled to sail that afternoon for Europe, delayed her trip sufficiently long to sing “The Star Spangled Banner.” She was given a rousing reception by an appreciative audience and to which she sang an encore, immediately leaving, just having time enough to catch her boat.

Immediately following this a flashlight photograph was taken facing the platform on which sat the officials. On account of the large throng, an adjournment to the Convention Hall was suggested by Sam Trigger, Chairman of the Exposition Committee, where the remainder of the speeches and a little business was transacted. The meeting held was decidedly an open one. The Convention Hall was well crowded with exhibitors and their friends and a number of laymen. The number of ladies present was very noticeable. Charles M. Phillips, of Milwaukee, the National President, was introduced and addressed a few words. His remarks were mostly in the form of an introduction of Dr. Albert Shiels, of the New York Department of Education, who was scheduled to speak on “Plays and Photoplays.” In his introduction he strongly brought out the fact that educational pictures were in great demand. He said:

“A T the present time in the City of New York of which, of course, I know most about, there are elementary schools using motion pictures as an adjunct to the regular prescribed curriculum. Undoubtedly a number of exhibitors have thought that the increasing number of schools using motion pictures would act as a detriment to their business. Have you ever thought of adopting the following plans for eliminating the apparent dislike for exhibitors.

“This applies to the owners of theatres in small towns. If the exhibitor would go to the principal of the school nearest him and tell him about his show, tell him that his aisles are unusually wide and if they are not broad to widen them out; show him the large, sure fire-escapes he has; tell him the clean class of pictures he is showing, then get him to help you with your patronage. No principal is so narrow-minded as to refuse to help a person who won’t do any harm. My only experience as a member of the National Board of Censorship is laudatory to the exhibitors. With one exception, I know of no theatre that has not accomplished good in its own territory.” [Applause.]

MR. SHIELS was immediately followed by the Rev. William Carter, of New York City, who spoke in a humorous yet forcible vein. His speech was received with a large round of applause. In his introduction he traced the business from the earliest days of its infancy and likened it unto a baby. “At first this baby was named the Kinetoscope, which was in 1894. For ten years it meant merely a scientific idea of the laboratory, but in 1904 there was opened the first nickelodeon or modern moving-picture theatre . . . it was first called the Kinetograph, but that name was not familiar enough to the people whose end it was to serve. Then it was called the Cinematograph, but that was French and still too hard for the people. Then it was finally called moving pictures, which is plain United States and the name appreciated most by the millions who see them daily.

“The religious and social work of the country form undoubtedly one of the largest fields for work in the world.” went on Mr. Carter.

“It’s a large clientele, remember, and you cannot ignore it. There are no less than 173 denominations of all sects in the United States, with 174,731 ministers, 221,024 churches, and 36,699,271 members, while the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. have combined 2,573 organizations and a total membership of 921,457, with thousands upon thousands of social settlements, welfare associations and moral reform movements all growing out of or allied with the church.

“This is a tremendous field, and one that must be cultivated in the further work of the present moving-picture exhibitors or it will go into other hands.

“In a Questionnaire sent out by the National Board of Censors March 17th of this year to the Religious, Charitable, Social Settlements and Civic and Educational Institutions of this city it was found in the answers received that more religious institutions than any of the others were using, either regularly or occasionally, moving pictures as part of their work.”

Daniel Frohman, president of The Famous Players Film Corporation was introduced by President Phillips, and after addressing a few remarks regarding the industry, presented the officers of the National Organization with their badges.

This is the first time that any great theatrical producer has spoken for a gathering of moving-picture men. The badges presented were to Charles Phillips, President; A. P. Tugwell, Vice-President; Wm. J. Sweeney, Treasurer: Harold W. Rosenthal, Secretary, and Fred J. Harrington, Robert Whitten, Silliman, Prentice and Priviter. Before adjourning the convention, a grievance committee was appointed—H. A. Victor of Pittsburgh, Chairman; W. H. Linton of New York, Henry Trinz of Wisconsin, Sam Katz of Illinois, W. D. Denton of New Jersey, and Messrs. Miller of Minnesota and Shimm of Ohio. The following were also appointed as members of the Resolution Committee: Sam Bullock of Cleveland, Robert Levy of Ohio, L. Germaine of New York, Joseph Stern of New Jersey, George Fisher of Wisconsin, and Messrs. Green of Minnesota, and Schafer of Pennsylvania.

“THE KANGAROO”
(World Film Corporation—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

It may safely be said that hardly one out of a hundred persons has any definite idea of what the “Kangaroo,” the subject and title of this picture, is, even after hearing the rest of the title “The Terrors of Old New Orleans.” But when one has witnessed these five reels no doubt remains in his mind as to what the “Kangaroo” is—or was. To be brief, it was an old band of criminals who operated in and about New Orleans to the terror of all law-abiding citizens.

The picture tells how one man who has suffered from their outrages entered the band with the intention of finding out their leaders and arresting them. This is accomplished, but by the infuriated townspeople, not by him.

The picture is full of action, at times almost too full, and events do not always follow one another in their natural and expected sequence. The photography is good and of a pleasing nature in most parts, but at times is a little too bright. These spots, however, occur only in the first reel.

The story was written by Judge Harris Dickson, and he and the producer have made the members of the Kangaroo as villainous as possible. Their methods of living are shown to resemble those of our modern high-class crooks. When the militia break into their house a lively battle takes place.

The picture was taken in and about New Orleans, right where the original Kangaroos were supposed to have worked.

The scenes in the forest where the soldiers are pursuing the members of the unlawful band are the most beautiful in the picture.

All the members of the Kangaroo are captured in the end and Adrien De Valence, who entered the band to spy on them, is restored to his sweetheart.

“CABIRIA” SHOWN IN NEW YORK

The new lamp which will be called the "Atsco Nitrogen Lamp," is guaranteed for one thousand hours, with no cost of maintenance; costs less than half what the flaring arc does and has proven itself a very efficient article for motion pictures.

ISMAN RENTS PARIS THEATRE FOR PHOTOLAYS

The production of motion pictures and grand opera in Paris has been undertaken by Felix Isman, real estate operator and theatrical promoter. With Henry Russell, of the Boston Opera Company and Harry Higgins, of Covent Garden, London, Mr. Isman has leased for twenty years the Theatre des Champs Elysees at a figure said to be $3,000,000.

During nine months of the year, beginning July 20, they will give motion pictures and grand opera, which will be augmented by a large orchestra and chorus. They will try to arrange with big film companies here for the French rights to their pictures. The other three months will be given up to grand opera.

Dues Question Comes Up Before Assembly on Eve of National Convention—Trigger, Douque and Davis Re-elected as Officers—

SpeECHES ON CENSORSHIP

AFTER some slight delays the convention of the New York State branch of the International Motion Picture Association was held partly in the Imperial and Marboro-Blenheim hotels, New York, June 6, partly in the Convention Hall at the Central Palace, New York, June 8.

The meeting was called to order on Saturday, June 6, at 11 a.m., as per schedule. As a number of the state delegates had not as yet arrived it was decided to postpone the most important part of the business until the following Monday, when all should meet after the convention of the national organization had completed its work for the day.

An election took place at the session in the Hotel Marboro-Blenheim, at which the following were unanimously elected: President, Samuel H. Trigger; vice-president, William A. Bean, of Buffalo; second vice-president, S. Sukno, of Albany; third vice-president, William H. Hollander, of Brooklyn; treasurer, J. C. Davis, of Saugerties; secretary, W. A. Douque, of New York; international committee man, Lester C. Smith, of Schenectady.

The question of dues was the hardest fought argument during the sessions. The question before the convention had to do with the payment of dues by members to the state organization, and whether these should be paid direct or through the local to which the exhibitor belonged. Lester C. Smith, W. A. Douque and President Trigger spoke at some length on the matter. On the suggestion of John Miller, of Buffalo, who took a prominent part in the proceedings throughout, the matter was held over and referred back to the committee for a report at the next quarterly meeting.

At the first session several speeches were made. Judge A. P. Tugwell, national vice-president, in a direct, clever manner, spoke of censorship and the crying need to fight it from beginning to end. He was greeted with a round of applause. It was moved and carried unanimously that the name of a certain Ohio exhibitor, prominent in politics, never be mentioned at a meeting of the convention. Delightful repasts were served at the Marboro-Blenheim hotels to the guests and exhibitors.

The following exhibitors were present at the convention:

Philip Gootenberg, Todero Theatre, Brooklyn; Jacob Weissman, Tuxedo Theatre, Troy; Delbert E. Seymour, The Peerless Theatre, Schaghticoke; Ed. Valensi, Windsor Theatre, New York; S. Sukno, Willyeae Theatre, New York; Max Tischler, El Morocco Casino, New York; Frank Seiden, Wilcott Street Theatre, New York; A. L. Lewis, Alhambro Theatre, Utica; A. C. NEW "FINDER" FOR THE CAMERA

Special to The Motion Picture News

Cincinnati, O., June 10.

A new invention by the Cincinnati end of the motion picture business has been perfected by G. C. Lathrop, camera operator for Clarence Runey, head of the Cincinnati Motion Picture Company, manufacturers of "Cincinnati in Motion" films.

Lathrop has invented a "finder" which locates the subject to be photographed, when looked at from any angle behind the camera. The new finder is similar to the one now in use on all motion picture cameras and is located at the same position. Its difference from the old method lies in the fact that Lathrop has built around it a sort of extended telescope affair, which does not make it imperative that the opera- tor look into the finder at the same angle in order not to lose the subject. Lathrop declares his invention reduces the danger of mistakes in photographing a motion picture to the minimum.
GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

Jack's Inheritance. (Melles. Split reel. May 28.)—On the same reel with "Jack's Inheritance." Trick photography and lightning action all around draw many laughs for this comedy.

Hunger Knows No Law. (Vitagraph. May 28.)—A romance and a pathetic story interwoven. Ruth ends happily. Alfred D. Vosburgh, George Stanley and June Novak play the leads. His family starving, Jim breaks his game laws. He is protected by a sympathetic girl who succeeds in winning the owner of the game over to her cause.

Sophie Starts Something. (Essanay. May 28.)—Margaret Joslin and Victor Potter in another laughable comedy. Sophie starts to reform the town but the liquor gets into the well and the whole town gets drunk.

Terrible Alternative. (Melles. Two reels. Split reel. May 28.)—A two reel comedy produced by Melies and a worthy one, although the plot is somewhat obscure. The photography is good and the settings convincing, and well with the characters and the theme. The special effects are usually realistic. A young girl, who is a reporter, has the choice of becoming a movie star or to marry the man she loves to prison, but as it turns out her enemies prove kind-hearted and both are saved.

Pete Loves Work. (Melles. Split reel. June 2.)—On the same reel with "An Undesirable Idea." The excellent trick photography bears in this comedy makes it unusually humorous. Peter's bed is made, his shoes put on, his tie tied, and other little things are done for him by an unseen hand.

An Unfortunate Idea. (Melles. Split reel. June 2.)—On the same reel with "Peter Loves Work." A comedy given by the secretaries in which Tim is asked to display his art of writing. He draws only one picture, a picture of the family secrets. The results are most comical.

The Last Will. (Vitagraph. Two reels. June 2.)—The setting and the situations are the strong points of this one. The comic situations and scenes are wonderfully well done, but the action of the story is slow to the point of tedium. Although John Paul, Anse Shafer and Alfred D. Vosburgh are the principals, Sir William Foxwood is the most notable performer. The jokes are not often heard, and as the outcome is known from almost the start, it lacks in interest. Great fun for the girl's and everybody's departments.

An Angel Unaware. (Essanay. June 2.)—Hard Times, Gerda Holmes and Ruth Stonehouse play the leads. The husband and wife separate over a matter that would hardly warrant such a thing. They are reunited through a clever device and the outcome is of an average nature and slow in pace.

A Brewtown Romance. (Lubin. Split reel. June 2.)—On the same reel with "Summer Love." This comedy would signify that the stop is a pretty girl and the old couple both fight over nothing and the men much over everything. The comedy is of an average nature and slow in pace.

Summer Love. (Lubin. Split reel. June 2.)—On the same reel with "A Brewtown Romance." This comedy is all but complete and the old couple both fight over nothing and the men much over everything. Both the comedy is of an average nature and slow in pace.

The Sheep Runners. (Selig. June 2.)—Many sheep of sheep appear in this story, and lend the correct atmosphere. The plot is not quite clear, but the action is of a true western variety and the drama will entertain all who like that type of film.

The Adventure of the Missing Legacy. (Edison. June 2.)—One of the best in the "Ocasey, Amateur Detective," series, and rather poor in spots. The gardener's legacy is missing. Octavius finds it tied on one end of a clothes line. Edward O'Conner, as the gardener, is comical.

A Modern Samson. (Edison. Split reel. June 17.)—On the same reel with "The Sheep Runners." Edward Boulden will lose his girl unless he becomes an athlete. His training is humorous.

On the Steps. (Edison. Split reel. June 17.)—On the same reel with "A Modern Samson." Husband and wife each go out unknown to the other. Their meeting on the steps in the colony is a surprise.

The Pie Eaters. (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., June 9.)—On the same reel with "He Wore a Wig." Wore a wig by the police force are the principals in this half reel. It is hardly worthy of the name of comedy.

He Wore a Wig. (Lubin. Split reel. Tues., June 9.)—On the same reel with "The Pie Eaters." He wore a wig by the police force are the principals in this half reel. It is hardly worthy of the name of comedy.

Midday or Midnight. (Melles. Split reel. Tues., June 9.)—On the same reel with "The Pie Eaters." This half reel is obscure but the happenings are comical. A suitor who has entered by stealth, secretes himself from the innmates and keeps holding up in unexpected places, to the great guff of all.

By Taxi to Fortune. (Melles. Split reel. Tues., June 9.)—On the same reel with "Midday or Midnight." The penultimate Count gets a wife by becoming a taxi driver. The comedy is vapid and dry.

Pathé Daily, Twenty-third Week. (Pathé. June 5.)—There is an excellent view of the scene, "Warmer," which sank off Hamburg, Germany. A huge fire at Od City, Pa., uses up the rest of the hundred feet.

A Girl from Sweden. (Vitagraph. June 5.)—A jolly comedy that will amuse all. The characters are somewhat hard to follow. The best bit of the film is a mix-up of their employers, and to end up, the cook marries the husband, and the chauffeur the daughter of the house.

Botted Out. (Lubin. June 5.)—The plot is old but the locale, Mexico, is new. The comedy is comical. Not much individual acting appears. The story of a Mexican girl who sells the plans of the camp to the Revolutionists and then being found out, acquires his captain. Through the efforts of the wife the truth is learned.

The Ethics of the Profession. (Biograph. Monday, June 8.)—A well-knit story of heart interest. There is a thrilling scene of an automobile dashing over a high cliff near the end. The story is that of a doctor who was perfectly happy, until one day college girls induced him to invest. He loses all his money and, to cap the climax, his wife runs away with the other man's son. The son meets his death in the automobile, but the woman is unfaithful.

Eve's Daughter. (Vitagraph. Monday, June 8.)—Earl Williams and Lillian Walker play the leads. The lighting of the picture is poor, but the sets are good, and the story is one that will entertain young and old. The original model, on her return with a millionaire, is married and later story happened is that she returns to the scene that she was a model, but everything turns out in a pleasing way.

A Captain Kidd The Bold. (Biograph. Split reel. June 8.)—On the same reel with "In the Nick of Time." This trick photography is really redemptive a comedy. Captain Kidd and the chief of police fight for an old maid. The chief wins her.

"Too Many Husbands." (Vitagraph. Two reels. A farcical comedy in which a man is caught in love with "Captain Kidd the Bold." A foolish half-reel even with a lot of romance. Two farcical bank robbers attempt to rob a country bank, but fail.

"The Female Cop." (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., June 6.)—On the same reel with "The Female Cop." A sidelong comedy depicting the experiences of two liars. One of them stutters and gets into a lot of trouble.

"Bartlett and His Wife." (American. Two reels. A comedy in which a man marries a woman who is a notorious dragoon, but none begin to do as well as he does. The parts in which he is on the screen are by far the best. Arthur Crane producers have married his uncle. This uncle comes to visit him and gets into his life in a dispiriting Arthur burrows his host's wife and the results that follow. Mainly straightened out and the story ends happily for all concerned.

"Fires! Fires!" (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., June 6.)—On the same reel with "The Female Cop." A "Fire! Fire!" The police force that supports them, but later she is dishonestly dismissed.

"Rose o' My Heart." (Selig. Sat., June 6.)—The plot of this drama is old and conventional, but the story of a police station is appealing in it always will be. Marston is wrongly accused of robbing his bank. He serves twenty years at hard labor. The guilty man confesses with his wife. Marston's name is cleared.

"Broncho Billy's Duty." (Selig. Sat., June 6.)—C. M. Anderson, Carl Stooballe and Marguerite Clayton play the important parts of the story. Broncho Billy is a minister inspects of a bandit as in his last appearance, and the change is quite refreshing. His act and the whole drama will appeal more to the older part of the audience.

"Brought to Justice." (Kalem. Sat., June 6.)—There are only a few of the Westerns of which the best part is the wonderful riding. As a story the drama possesses little unity. Hoffman, a rancher, discovers that Tom, whom he discharges because he made love to his daughter, is a hero and allows him to marry her. Charles Bartlett plays the lead.

"Home Run Baker's Double." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., June 17.)—Without a doubt this picture will appeal to all baseball fans, as Mr. Baker himself is featured in a dual role. Various views of the Athletes' training camp are shown which lends to the picture a true baseball spirit. The story is that of Baker's double (not a hit but a hit), who informs his son, so much money out of it. Baker finally puts up his actions and is greatly helped. Marguerite Court- tople plays against him.

"Willie's Haircut." (Selig. Split reel. June 5.)—On the same reel with "His First Stake." A comedy. The ending is abrupt and out of place.

"Universal Program." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., June 17.)—Without a doubt this picture will appeal to all baseball fans, as Mr. Baker himself is featured in a dual role. Various views of the Athletes' training camp are shown which lends to the picture a true baseball spirit. The story is that of Baker's double (not a hit but a hit), who informs his son, so much money out of it. Baker finally puts up his actions and is greatly helped. Marguerite Court- tople plays against him.

"Hearts!" (Selig. Split reel. June 5.)—A comedy in which a man marries a woman who is a notorious dragoon, but none begin to do as well as he does. The parts in which he is on the screen are by far the best. Arthur Crane producers have married his uncle. This uncle comes to visit him and gets into his life in a dispiriting Arthur burrows his host's wife and the results that follow. Mainly straightened out and the story ends happily for all concerned.

"Drama Program." (Selig. Sat., June 6.)—A drama in which a man marries a woman who is a notorious dragoon, but none begin to do as well as he does. The parts in which he is on the screen are by far the best. Arthur Crane producers have married his uncle. This uncle comes to visit him and gets into his life in a dispiriting Arthur burrows his host's wife and the results that follow. Mainly straightened out and the story ends happily for all concerned.

"Mutual Program." (Selig. Sat., June 6.)—A drama in which a man marries a woman who is a notorious dragoon, but none begin to do as well as he does. The parts in which he is on the screen are by far the best. Arthur Crane producers have married his uncle. This uncle comes to visit him and gets into his life in a dispiriting Arthur burrows his host's wife and the results that follow. Mainly straightened out and the story ends happily for all concerned.

"Warner's Features." (Selig. Sat., June 6.)—A drama in which a man marries a woman who is a notorious dragoon, but none begin to do as well as he does. The parts in which he is on the screen are by far the best. Arthur Crane producers have married his uncle. Eclair Educational for Open Market
Strand, New York, Will Make Them Part of Program—Six Hundred Now Ready—Including Scenes—Patin Put New Method Across

THE Eclair Company recently arranged with the Strand Theatre, New York City, for the exhibition of scenic and educational features. The first two were shown on Sunday, June 7. The reels deserve particular mention on account of the fine photographic work and projection maintained throughout the series.
The scientific subjects, known as Scientia, which will reach the six hundred mark before long, have been prepared in some of the finest equipped laboratories of Europe, under the direction of the foremost university professors—men like Messrs. Chaintreau, E. Chatelain, G. Alphandry, and Elle Mossé.
The subjects cover a wide range of biology and natural history, birds, insects, and even many of the large mammals. The insects invisible to the naked eye have been reproduced through the means of the ultramicroscope. Animalcules, the presence of which the average person does not suspect in water and other liquids, are projected on the screen with a fidelity to nature that excites amazement. The members of this curious world, whose very existence was unsuspected by the older scientists, appear as large as the smaller fur animals.
The first film of the educational releases, which the company expects to bring to the attention of schools and colleges throughout the country, deals with lepidoptera. It shows the growth of the butterfly from the cocoon stage to the winged state of the insect. The enlargements enable the spectators to see every movement which ordinarily is invisible to the naked eye. The photographic work was done with the Eclair camera. Gillon patent.
Claude Patin, the secretary-general manager of the Eclair Company, who was with the Gaumont people in Paris for four years before coming to the Eclair firm, saw unlimited possibilities in the educational film, and has induced the company to introduce them to the public directly through the open market instead of selling only to the exchanges.
Five a week are being put out. This includes the scenic films, which have already gained a reputation for fine photography and clear projection. The first of these seen at the Strand last Sunday and scheduled to run the rest of the week at that house, is a graphic picture of Niagara Falls.
During the coming season the Strand will show a new Eclair educational and one Scientia every week.

Eventually, as the films become generally known through universal exhibition at the best motion picture houses of the country, they will be marketed for use with the Kineclair portable projectoscope. Dupuis patent, at private exhibits in parlors, lobbies, schools, etc.

This machine was shown at the trade convention in New York.
The scenes, the majority of which will be in colors, include panoramas of American scenery as well as noted foreign views. Mr. Patin now has two expert photographers out along the Hudson River, filming representative spots of that historic waterway.
All the educational films have been taken with the Eclair camera and projected by the Kineclair machine. The company has a staff of fifty camera men in its various studios in America and Europe.
The exhibition at the Strand was made specially with Manager S. L. Rothapel, who has expressed unbounded enthusiasm for the quality of the Eclair films.

"THOU SHALT NOT STEAL"
(University—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

By excellent arrangement of incidents in the story the producers have succeeded in presenting a delightful photoplay. It is a pleasing and convincing sermon on the good influence of a strong religious character on a weak nature. This does not mean that the film is at all "preachy." The plot is developed with swiftness.

The photography is luminous in practically every part, enabling the spectator to catch the play of facial expression on all occasions.

Quaint comedy is effectively obtained in the final scene where a number of gray-haired village wiseacres, overpowered with curiosity, peer in the pastor's window as the lovers plight their troth.

THE REV. RUPERT STRATHMORE AND MARCIA

The Reverend Rupert Strathmore, rector in a Scotch village, discovers a shortage in the accounts of the treasurer, Silvan, who has been caught once before appropriating church funds. The offender is not prosecuted.

Seeking revenge for his fancied wrong, he plots to have an incriminating letter secreted in the minister's house by the aid of a girl thief, Marcia. Strathmore discovers the girl in the act, and exhorts her to give up her evil ways. His arguments are so strong that the girl, feeling the force of his dominant personality, agrees to reform.

Delighted with his success, the young minister endeavors to help the convert as much as possible. He obtains employment for her in one of the village homes.

The whereabouts of Marcia are discovered by the plotter. She is kidnapped and taken to a smuggler's rendezvous in the mountains. Here the girl, who has been left bound hand and foot nearby, overhears several men discuss a new plot of Silvan's against the minister.

She manages to escape and get back to the village in time to disclose everything.

Excellent double negative work is shown in several scenes, especially when Strathmore appears in a vision to the converted woman, who, giving way to a momentary impulse, is tempted to steal a pocketbook from an overcoat in the house of the people befriending her.

OPERATORS LIKELY TO WIN IN TRENTON
Special to The Motion Picture News
Trenton, N. J., June 11.

The owners and managers have agreed to confer with the operators, who have demanded a substantial increase in salary. The conference will be held within a few days and while the men are making quite extensive demands, it is believed in many quarters that the desired increases will be granted. The men have a union, and of course the backing of the Central Labor Union of this city. The men desire $18 a week.

This, of course, hits the smaller theatres pretty hard, but it is practically necessary to come to an agreement with the men. Trenton being one of the strongest union cities in the East.

WEATHER HITS MILWAUKEE THEATRES
Special to The Motion Picture News
Milwaukee, Wis., June 19.

The extremely warm weather of the past week and a half, together with heavy rains almost every evening, have conspired to make business at the local photoplay houses very poor. The downtown houses have been the hardest hit, the heat cutting in heavily on the matinees and the rains keeping the people home at night.

"THE GOOD-FOR-NOTHING"
(Eszanay—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EVERY audience in the country is familiar with G. M. Anderson as the popular Broncho Billy, in which series he has been appearing for a long time. It is quite a change and quite a surprise to see him carrying such a part as Gilbert Sterling, "The Good-for-Nothing," arrayed part of the time in a dress suit and civilized clothes. He and the rest of his associates are usually bedecked in the rough and ready clothes of the West, but they all show that they can be city men as well as Westerners and carry off their parts in a way which deserves much praise.

The picture is rightfully a drama, but during the first part of the four reels it takes the form of a comedy, especially when Gilbert, the wayward son, is shown, first sleeping late, then having a gay time through the day, disregarding his business and finally coming home at 3 A. M. much the worse for wear. His father grows tired of trying to make him lead a straight life and at length disowns him. He goes West, becomes rich and returns home in time to save his father and mother from a life in the poorhouse.

Unlike other "Good-for-Nothing," he does not brace up of his own accord, but really has his wealth thrust upon him by an Indian whom he befriends. His actions in the West afford much amusement for all.

The photography is of a high degree throughout the entire picture and the settings and scenes are appropriate. The picture is noticeable for its few subtitles. Those that do appear convey the meaning of the story perfectly. Mr. Anderson in the interiors has a little too much make-up on, owing no doubt, to the fact that he is used to appearing in outdoor scenes, but this excess of make-up is only apparent in the close-ups.

Lee Willard, Elsa Lorimer, Carl Stockdale, Evelyn Selbie and Victor Potel complete the cast.

The dramatic parts of the picture are just as good as the comic parts. The wayward son, no matter how bad he is, will appeal to all classes, and with his reformation in the end comes the discovery that the other son, who gave promise of being the hero of the story, is in reality the villain. When he refuses to help his father and mother, one has no sympathy for him at all. In the last scene the whole family is reunited.

HIGHER PRICES WAVE SWEEPS DENVER

Denver, June 10.

The tendency of Denver's motion picture interests is toward the higher grade of attractions played at an advanced admission scale. Last week the Princess presented Jack London's "The Sea Wolf" to five days of capacity business, on the last day turning away more than two thousand at a ten and twenty cent scale, where heretofore without exception the biggest productions have been presented at the five-cent admission.

The very daring of the management, supported by Harry C. Drum representing the features and the photo-play department of the "Rocky Mountain News," with its support of the advanced prices, seems to have turned the tide and other theatres are preparing to follow suit.

"THE COUNTERFEIT"
(University—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"THE COUNTERFEIT" has nothing to do with false coinng. The story deals with the sudden demonic change in a man of normal instincts who stops at nothing in trying to get possession of a fortune by palming himself off as the man he attempts to kill and supposes dead.

Robert Morton, while on a prospecting trip with his partner, Wilson in the western gold fields, receives a letter from a firm of New York lawyers who inform him that his uncle, Col. Morton, to whom the young man is practically a stranger, wishes to see him and become better acquainted with his prospective heir.

Wilson, tired of the uncertainties of mining, and feeling that he could easily impersonate his partner, plans to make way with Morton by the aid of a dissolute Indian whom he tries to bribe with the prospect of unlimited intoxicants. But the redskin refuses, and Wilson, wild with rage, kills him.

Morton, not satisfied with the excuse Wilson gives for shooting down their red servitor in cold blood, takes his partner to task. Wilson then pretends to leave, but instead he lies in wait to murder Morton himself. He pushes a boulder over a cliff, and Morton is dashed to the ground. Supposing that the victim is dead, Wilson de-

After this great discovery Archimedes devoted all of his thoughts to his theory of water displacement. He was taking a bath when the solution of the problem suddenly flashed upon his mind. Forgetting everything else he jumped from the tub and rushed through the streets crying "Eureka! Eureka!" (I have found it! I have found it!)

The Famous Players Company booth at the Grand Central Palace, New York, has been freely declared to be the most artistic and attractive exhibit of the Motion Picture Exposition.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

Arrangements are being made toward installing a new motion picture theatre at Olive Hill, Ky., which will be the second "movie" house in that town.

The Lewisburg Motion Picture Show Company, Lewisburg, Ky., is now exhibiting "From the Log Cabin to the Clarence" with remarkable success. The attraction has been heavily advertised and unusually large crowds are being attracted.

Plaks & Hostetter, of Louisville, have begun the operation of a "movie" theatre at Eminence, Ky. Good crowds have been attracted from the surrounding country.

There are two other motion picture houses in the town.

The Gem Theatre, at Somerset, Ky., has been purchased by C. C. Mclure of Clearfield, Ky., an employee of the Morehead & North Fork Railroad Company.

The "Vegetarian Garden," the first of the open-air movies, will be established in Trenton, N. J., has just been opened at Washington and Anderson streets, by Henry D. Keel, a prominent druggist, and Pearson H. Hume. The admission will be five cents.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There’s one film that’s recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for “Eastman” on the perforated margin.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

Harold Lockwood of the Famous Players, met with a slight accident in a scene when he received a sword cut in the eye, which fortunately did not penetrate the eye.

Francis Ford has returned from San Francisco where he, Grace Tunard and company went for some shipping and ocean pictures. In some interesting scenes their vessel is shown passing the Golden Gate.

Luke Warrenton, who is in Honolulu, has been joined by his son Gilberi, who is an expert camera man. Gilbert is taking some views in the interior which have never been photographed before.

The Piel Miller Brewing Company is erecting a photoplay theatre on Fifth Street and Grand Avenue, Milwaukee. It is not known who will lease the house.

A new open air picture theatre is being conducted at 209-211 Third street, Elizabeth, N. J., during the summer. A permit for the operation of the air-dome was granted by Mayor Mervlag to a firm composed of James K. Keating, James F. Brown and James Emmett Tobbe. The air-dome opened for business on the evening of Memorial Day.

POSTERS

A LOT OF EXHIBITORS THINK THAT THEY ARE PAST THE STAGE OF NEEDING POSTERS TO DRAW THE CROWDS TO THEIR DOORS—A LOT OF THEM THINK THAT THEY ARE TOO CLASSY—

BUT THEY ARE WRONG

A POSTER THAT IS WELL DESIGNED—THAT INCORPORATES BRAINS, MONEY AND MECHANICAL GENIUS—THAT BEARS THIS TRADE MARK

UNIVERSAL

IS AS NECESSARY TO THE CLASSY EXHIBITOR AS THE FILM THAT HE RUNS EVERY DAY.

EVERY PATRON IS ATTRACTION BY THE CLASSY FRONT THAT GREETED HIM—HE IS ATTRACTION BY A BEAUTIFUL POSTER AS A FLY IS ATTRACTED TO A LUMP OF SUGAR—AND UNIVERSAL POSTERS ARE LIKE SUGAR TO THE PATRONS—THEY DRAW THEM IN.

DON'T THINK THAT YOU CAN GET ALONG WITHOUT POSTERS—THAT YOU ARE TOO CLASSY—THAT YOU DO NOT NEED THEM BECAUSE THEY ARE THE BEST ADVERTISING THAT YOU CAN DO.

WE WANT TO SEE POSTERS IN FRONT OF EVERY UNIVERSAL THEATRE; WE WANT YOU TO BILL, AND BILL BIG BECAUSE WE KNOW IT IS THE WAY TO GET THE MONEY.

AND WE ARE GIVING YOU THE BEST POSTERS IN THE WORLD.

G. M. ANDERSON

IN

"The Good-For-Nothing"

(IN FOUR ACTS)

This is positively the most elaborate comedy-drama ever produced by our western company. The story pictures the life of a good-for-nothing son who made a failure of everything he tackled in the east. He finally settles in the west, and through a kind act, inherits a wealthy estate. It shows G. M. Anderson, both as a man of a large eastern metropolis, and as a man of the far and unsettled west.

Released only on June 8th and already dozens of letters have been received from exhibitors congratulating us upon this successful feature.

Advertising the Picture

The importance of the following contribution leads us to give it foremost position in this issue. We believe that the most vital business problem confronting the exhibitors of this country today is how to advertise to the public; and that upon the successful solution of this problem depends very largely the prosperity of the manufacturer and middleman.

This belief, moreover, has been made secure by the receipt of several thousand post-cards from our subscribers. We sent these cards out asking subscribers to check off the departments of this publication which were of most value to them. One department received a 100 per cent check and that was "How to Advertise the Picture."

Editor The Motion Picture News,

Dear Sir:

In compliance with your recent request, it gives me pleasure to present to your publication the following facts and observations concerning motion-picture advertising in the Seattle "Daily" and "Sunday Times." It is not out of place to remark at the outset that two years ago, while on a trip East, the writer interviewed the advertising managers of a score or more of America's great daily newspapers on the possibilities of this field of advertising. Without exception, they all expressed the conviction that it could never be developed to a source of profit or prestige to the modern metropolitan daily newspaper.

But here are the facts: The Seattle "Daily" and "Sunday Times" carried more than $25,000 worth of motion-picture display advertising during the past year, and it was the first in the United States to realize the possibilities of this new field of advertising. It was likewise the first to establish a daily dramatic review department devoted to motion-picture productions. It was wholly on the initiative of the advertising department that this feature was added to our regular dramatic review columns, in February, 1913.

Prior to that time the motion-picture houses in Seattle had used display space irregularly and indifferently, rarely getting out of the one-inch-a-day run, and making no effort to stir up public interest in their offerings, even when theatrical stars of the first magnitude were featured in the films.

At the time this daily feature was inaugurated only one motion-picture house in Seattle was using space regularly. This was the Alhambra, located four blocks outside the general retail latitude of the city, and had been a money loser from the time it was built for the Shubert attractions.

In a desperate attempt to attract business away from other houses more advantageously located, the managers took on the "Battle of Gettysburg" show. This film cost heavily, and it was a case of make or break. They were up against the stern necessity of packing their house every hour during the run of this film. Their regular, small display space would not do this; neither would the billboards; nor a stick-full of comment in the dramatic review columns.

A FULL-page display advertisement was placed in the "Times," reproducing some of the most stirring phases of the panorama. The advertisement itself created a sensation. The fact that a ten-cent motion-picture theatre had run as large an advertisement in the "Times" that day as was used by the largest department store west of Chicago, was talked about all over the city from the moment the paper appeared on the street and in the homes.

By the time that particular film had made its second run in the evening of the first day of its appearance at the Alhambra, the house was "on velvet," and this at five and ten cents per head. A couple of half-page advertisements followed during the week, and the results would have justified double the expenditure for display space.

During a single week $500 was appropriated for display space in the "Times" by the Clemmer motion-picture theatre, featuring "The Life of Christ." A packed house was maintained during the entire run of this film, and the sidewalk in front of the Clemmer was blocked to the curb line during every business hour of the day, and until the final run at night. The advertisement on this show was a full-page, largely illustrations, followed by half- and quarter-page advertisements during the week.

Helen Gardner's "Cleopatra" ran seventeen days at the Melbourne Theatre, and upwards of $900 was expended for space in the "Times" during that time. When the "Third Degree" was shown here very recently at the Alhambra, a half-page advertisement was used in the "Times" on Monday and another on Tuesday. The total outlay for space in the "Times" on this show was slightly above $300; a total of 16,320 people saw this production in two days. "Fantomas III" ran four days at the Class A Theatre, during which time $250 was appropriated for display space in the "Times," bringing capacity results to every exhibition. The following week the Class A put on "The Great Leap," using $250 worth of space in the "Times" and "packed 'em in to the limit," during the entire run. "The Lion and the Mouse" had a record-breaking week's run at the Colonial Theatre on an expenditure of $225 for space in the "Times."

During the year the "Times" has carried ten full-page motion-picture advertisements, and between thirty-five and forty half-pages. One of the full-page advertisements run by the Clemmer Theatre carried three colors, and was pronounced a veritable work of art. The Alhambra motion-picture theatre is the largest user of daily newspaper motion-picture display advertising space in the United States to-day, and has found it so profitable that they are building, and have about ready for opening, a new and larger theatre several blocks away, the Liberty, with a seating capacity of 2,200. The principal motion-picture theatres of Seattle, and their respective seating
THE Motion Picture NEWS

The "Times" is now running ninety per cent. of all the motion-picture theatre display advertising in Seattle. We have never cut rates nor traded space in our news columns to compete with this space. No advertiser is given any preference over another in our motion-picture advertising or review departments.

The theatres themselves are rarely named in advance notices concerning productions appearing in our motion-picture dramatic review columns. These advance notices are confined strictly to pure news matter concerning the characters starring in the productions and are written by one of the leading dramatic critics in the West.

Such news, being perfectly legitimate and authoritative, at once elevated the motion-picture play, in Seattle at least, to the plane of those stage productions which these same stars had made famous, and have dispelled to a large extent the prejudice that existed in the minds of followers of stage productions against the cheaper but none the less dignified form of entertainment and amusement found in motion-picture shows. In a word it revealed the real merit of motion-picture productions and eliminated all false grounds for apology for being seen in the boxes or any other seat in a first-class motion-picture theatre.

No methods, schemes or devices are used by motion-picture advertisers here other than are employed by other lines of legitimate, vigorous advertising. That this advertising appeals to everybody, rich and poor, high and low, native citizen and foreigner alike, is proven by the results. Should our advance notices in the dramatic columns go into detail as to when and where and at what prices these films were to appear, or deal exhaustively upon the merits of the productions themselves, outside of that guaranteed by the personality of the artists, they would fall flat and the public generally would consistently conclude that these notices were nothing more nor less than paid advertisements.

Under our method of handling this business the public first reads from the pen of a recognized authority on who and what's what in the theatrical and motion-picture world, that on such and such a date such and such a film will be released for exhibition in Seattle, starring such and such a celebrity. Usually these advance notices appear a few days before the show is put on. In the meantime, the theatre uses display space in which the public knows is bought and paid for in the legitimate purpose of giving "further particulars." From thence come results.

The "Times" does not promise any pro rata of space in the dramatic review columns in proportion to the amount used in advertising by the exhibitors, but does treat in a purely newsworthy manner, on a basis of real merit, the offerings of our motion-picture advertisers. This paper has never printed an adverse criticism concerning motion-picture houses that do not advertise in its columns, neither do we concern ourselves about advance notices of productions put on by non-advertising theatres.

Shortly thereafter the morning paper in the local field endeavored to convince the motion-picture theatre managers that it could fill their houses at the matinee hour by the use of display space, but a thorough and somewhat expensive trial proved differently. The "Times" is an afternoon paper and carries the bulk of department store advertising in Seattle. Department stores play "matinees only," consequently their most effective medium is the one for motion-picture theatres to use.

Quite recently other daily newspapers in Seattle, whose efforts to obtain motion-picture advertising space on an equal pro rata with the "Times" were unsuccessful, have adopted the policy of running a complete story of a motion-picture show daily. These stories carry the impressions gained by writers of marked ability from advance exhibitions of the films, and according to a box heading are published for the benefit of their thousands of readers who patronize motion-picture theatres. These stories run all the way from two to three ordinary newspaper columns in length, carry an illustration or two from the show, deal with the intensely human interest phases of the production, and give the name of the theatre and the date the show is to appear.

While these stories are very entertaining, and appear under the signatures of writers and dramatic critics of recognized standing who have never before appeared in the role of advertisement copy writers, yet the idea back of them is to eliminate the necessity of using display space in the local columns.

Their effect upon the volume of this business carried by the "Times" has so far been negligible, and after a slight falling off during the first month these "novelties" appeared, we are back to full ninety per cent. of the motion-picture display advertising display space in Seattle.

This volume of business has reached such proportions with the "Times" that it engages the entire time and attention of the most capable motion-picture advertising man we know of, anywhere.

The adoption of newspaper display space by the motion-picture theatres has compelled the regular stage production houses to adopt the same method of publicity, which is proving a great saving in expenses over the old billboard method, getting for them likewise a bigger volume of business, and getting it quicker at a less financial outlay, than any other known method of publicity. Our volume of business from the motion-picture theatres is running ahead of that of last year, and the advertising theatres are prosperous because they all have the confidence of the public.

It is my firm conviction that the policy adopted by the "Times" in handling business from this new and highly profitable field—profitable to advertisers and publisher alike—will, if adopted by daily newspapers throughout the country, speedily build up a profitable source of clean, legitimate business, and at the same time elevate the motion-picture show to that plane which it deserves in the realm of popular and proper entertainment.

Advertising Manager, The "Times."

MONTREAL HOUSE TO SEAT 4,000

Montreal, P. Q., June 17.

A new picture theatre providing scatting accommodations for over 4,000 is to be erected in Montreal. The land was purchased at an average price of eleven cents per square foot. In construction and finish the new theatre will follow the advanced lines of theatre building. It will be fire-proof throughout, with numerous exits, and will have a modern ventilating system, and the latest safety methods of operating the machines.

The single gallery will be built on the cantilever principle, which dispenses with supporting pillars, thus offering an unobstructed view of the stage from all parts of the house.

Of necessity the offerings of those theatres which do advertise must be good; otherwise the limelight of publicity would kill their business. Through the "Times" the local public learns in advance when good productions are due to appear. Formerly when an exhibitor secured an exceptionally good show and did any extensive advertising at all the billboard man got the money, and along about the last day of the show, or more generally a day or two after the run was over, people began coming to the box office to inquire about it.

Along in January or February, 1913, one or two of these were talked into using the "Times" to the exclusion of all other forms of advertising. The experiment proved an immediate and tremendous success and brought more cash to the box office till at a less expense than any other form of publicity.
Michigan Exhibitors Standardize Prices

Detroit Convention Binds Members Not to Show More Than Five Reels for Ten Cents—Goes on Record as Against All Forms of Censorship, Federal, State and Local—Fines for Members Who Take Away Employees from Other Houses

SECRETARY WILEY, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, was present throughout the convention and gave several inspirational talks along the lines of co-operation and keeping hands clean and attractive in their surroundings.

A committee on constitution, composed of H. F. Fowser, August Kliest, C. M. Orth and J. J. Rieder, presented amendments to the constitution, which provided for a salary of $25 per annum for the secretary and $5 for the treasurer, and the bonding of each officer in the sum of $1,000, the premium to be paid by the league. The amendments provided for installation of a voucher system, and the limitation of all expenditures in any six months to an order on the treasurer for $100.

They also made the board of directors a sovereign body during the time the league is not in convention, with power to remove from office any official who is derelict in his duty. They made it the duty of the president to notify the members of any patents or inventions or anything else of value to the motion picture exhibitors. Members of the league agree not to exceed three reels for five cents or five reels for ten cents. A clause provides for a fine of $10 for any member of the league taking away an employe of another member underhandedly, and expulsion from the league for the second offense. They agree to hire no employe who has not a recommendation.

It was voted to hold the next meeting of the association in Lansing. A resolution was adopted declaring that all entertainment features should be eliminated, that the next meeting held not longer than two days, and less if possible, so that the members need not be kept longer from their business.

President PETER JEUP, in his annual report at the opening of the convention on Tuesday, declared the Michigan branch to be on a stable financial basis. A dozen or more new members had been taken in since the last meeting. He had made a number of trips throughout the state and secured a number of new members.

He spoke of the effectiveness of the "get together" meeting with Flint exhibitors, reported in THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS a few weeks ago. Whereas the exhibitors in that city were practically at loggerheads, they now are holding little meetings of their own, and, instead of being enemies, are now trying to assist one another.

"The time is at hand when we all realize that close organization is necessary," Mr. Jeup continued. "We will have a fight on our hands with the coming legislature. We have put this association at the head of the motion picture business of this country. We have accomplished more than any other organization in the country. We have three and five reels where Ohio has seven and eight for five cents. While we haven't issued a bulletin or told the newspapers every time we have made an exhibitor come to time, we have brought some of them to time. We have prevented hostile legislation and hostile ordinances.

"The salvation of the picture business depends on your association. If you let that go by default, God help the motion picture exhibitor."

Secretary Wylie, of the national league, addressing the opening session, threw a bouquet at the Michigan league for the efficiency with which its affairs are conducted. He said he considered the Michigan branch a considerate body. If the members knew the difficulty he had in getting a letter from some of the other branches they would understand what he meant. Discussing the coming convention he said:

"We want the votes at Dayton. We want every delegate there. Matters vital to the old parent organization will come up. And we want the exhibitors there whether they are delegates or not.

"I have conducted from Dayton for two and a half months an aggressive campaign to induce exhibitors to come to the greatest diversified exhibition of motion picture products that has ever been held. I predict for the coming attendance of bona fide exhibitors that a convention of its kind has ever seen. I shall be disappointed if there are not 2,000 or 3,500 exhibitors present.

"I am almost disgusted to see that, out of 18,000 men who are exhibiting motion pictures throughout the country, we get only a corporal's guard to attend these state meetings. Too many of them seem to think their interest lies no farther than their little one sheet and the ticket-office. Who has less than fifty at her state convention, Missouri scarcely ten.

"Unless the picture men try to form a concrete body to protect themselves I wouldn't give fifty cents on the dollar for my investments. Get together, and send the tried and true to the Dayton convention."

In another talk later Mr. Wylie predicted the coming of the ten-cent admission generally, and urged the small houses to keep their places up to the latest sanitary standards, to make them as attractive as possible and to use the best pictures available.

“Give them class and ten cents will prevail,” he declared. “When you demand the poorest stuff at the cheapest prices, what can you expect? Give the public good pictures and you will take into the fold the long-haired element that is knocking us now. We are getting away from the Wild West pictures and others of that kind. Five years ago we were all considered highbinders. We are now recognized as conducting a legitimate business.”

W. A. Roscoe, of Saginaw, reported Governor Ferris, of Michigan, as having said that all children attending motion picture shows should be accompanied by parent or guardian to prevent clandestine meetings. The governor declared that there should be a law requiring such chaperonage. He had also said that he had never seen but one motion picture and he didn’t like that. Mr. Roscoe thought the members should know the attitude of the governor toward city authority.

Other members of the organization spoke briefly, and the convention closed with a banquet Thursday evening, at which there was a general interchange of shop talk and good-fellowship.

HART JOINS INCE AT SANTA MONICA

W. S. Hart, the well-known director of Western types, has joined the Santa Monica, California, colony of the New York Motion Picture Corporation actors. During the summer months Mr. Hart will be featured in a series of Western stories from the pen of Director General Thomas H. Ince, of the Kay-Bee, Domino and Broncho companies.

Mr. Hart is a character actor of repertory. His stage experience covers a period of twenty-one years, and during this time his work for the greater part has had to do with impersonations of Westerners. Hart, himself, is of the West.

The theatre-goes of the country recall Mr. Hart’s strong acting in the original productions of “The Squaw Man” and “The Virginian.” Mr. Hart later starred in the Owen Wister play.

Clay report a very rushing business. Souvenirs, showing pictures of the interior and exterior of the house, were given away to patrons on the opening night.

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Butte Faces Parental Censorship

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Butte, Mont., June 16.

A MOVEMENT has been started among the members of the Butte ministerial association to advocate a more rigid observance of the Sabbath day. During the next three months a survey committee, composed of local ministers, will examine the amusement question from every angle. This follows a paper read by Rev. C. A. Rexroad two weeks ago at the regular weekly meeting of the evangelical ministers of this city.

In his paper the Rev. Mr. Rexroad admitted that picture theatres take the people away from certain evils of which he complained Butte is the hunting ground. While not directly holding a brief for the picture houses—in fact, being opposed to them as a breach, however slight, of the holiness of the Sabbath day—he said that they were doing a splendid work.

He would be in favor, however, of the fathers and the mothers constituting themselves a board of censorship, thereby raising the moral tone of the pictures.

But as coming from the camp of the enemy—although Mr. Rexroad is not by any means an enemy of the picture house, but rather of everything that tends to draw people away from Sunday services—this admission that the picture houses are really doing good work, speaks volumes for the Montana exhibitor. Mr. Rexroad is acquainted with them all and knows them to be a high-minded, public-spirited body.

There may, however, be some action in the fall tending towards the abolition of the Sunday theatre in Butte. How such a movement will be accepted here is problematical. It is not at all likely that public sentiment will close the theatres on Sundays. Very unlikely, in fact. The projected campaign will cover all amusements and in addition will be a moral sweeping of the country of Silver Bow in general. The idea is to establish a standard by which the association will be in a position to handle eventualities as they occur.

The trouble started when a circus parade took place in Butte on a Sunday morning several weeks ago. The ministerial association protested against the granting of a license by the city authorities. The city made a compromise and directed the circus people to hold the parade at 9 o’clock in the morning.

The clergymen were not satisfied and made strong protests against it in a meeting and from the pulpit. The discussion opened up the amusement question and a paper was requested from Rev. Rexroad. The association has disbanded for the summer months, but in the meantime, the survey board will be active. In the fall will come a statement from the association to be used as a platform on which to stand on all amusement theatres, dances, etc.

Elect State Association Committees

L. C. Smith, Edward Linton and Adolph Bauerfriend to Serve on Finance Committee—Other Appointments at Extra Session.

ON Friday afternoon, following the adjournment of the national convention the delegates to the New York state convention finished their session which opened Saturday, June 6, at the Imperial and Marlborough-Blenheim hotels, New York City. Friday’s meeting was held to hear the reports of the new constitution committee, formed at the previous week’s session.

A number of changes were made in the rough draft, previously presented for consideration. L. C. Smith, a delegate, moved that copies of the newly accepted constitution and by-laws be made and sent to each exhibitor. This was carried.

A finance committee, consisting of three men, was elected and appointed, as is now provided for. L. C. Smith was appointed by the chair to serve as chairman, and Edward Linton and Adolph Bauerfriend were elected to assist him.

According to the new constitution the board of directors of the state association is to be made up of the president of each local branch having less than fifteen members and the president and secretary of such locals having more than fifteen.

A grievance committee, consisting of three members, was also appointed. The members are Philip Rosen- sen, chairman, L. Germain and H. F. Rosenthal.

The new constitution also calls for a new method of the state association to be held twice a year. The date and place for the first meeting, six months hence, was left to the board to decide. The convention adjourned immediately following this motion.

PARAMOUNT among the problems that will confront the delegates are: Censorship, Better Standards of Pictures, Standardization of Admission, Equalization of Rental Fees, Multiple Reels, Advertising, Manufacturers in the Exhibiting Branch, and Saloons.

The latter topic is one that is not so familiar among debates at trade gatherings. There has been prepared by the men engaged in the business of manufacture and sale of liquor, an appeal against the promiscuous use of the saloon as a contributing cause to a vast percentage of crime and suffering depicted in the picture dramas.

The liquor men complain that they are grossly maligned and slandered by the tough barroom scenes that seem to form a nucleus of most of the sordid plots produced. They point to the fact that when a young man goes wrong in the bank, or in his home, or goes out with bad company, he invariably is shown to meet his wayward associates in a saloon.

Girls who become delinquent are shown to start the downward path in a café. Men who loaf and refuse to work, wife-beaters, and general all-round good-for-nothings are nearly always shown to be habitués of places where liquor is sold.

These features of drama showing the seamy side of life, the liquor men declare, is a most unjust reflection on their business. They argue that, while it is an open fact that deplorable conditions exist in some hotels, it is no fairer to judge the entire business by the few exceptions than to call all the motion picture trade vicious because there are undesirables engaged in the latter calling.

The action on this matter by the delegates is problematical. It is a new feature that has not been previously met and while the motion picture exhibitors are naturally fair, it is difficult to obtain a general expression as to their ultimate action, or the particular kind of request the liquor men will bring before the convention.

The advertising question and the poster exaggeration are other significant matters to come before the delegates for official disposition.

The lithograph display, it is claimed, has been running to extremes in the matter of fake and undue hyperbole.

The exhibitors complain of the circus type of poster. It has been a source of constant annoyance to listen to the plaints of the patrons objecting to flamboyant billing, the originals of which are not to be found in the pictures.

GILBERT C. MILLER
Chairman, State Convention Committee

TRADE organization and co-operative activities in the motion picture industry will be given a significant and substantial impetus at the coming third annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of Pennsylvania in Wilkes-Barre, June 23 and 24.

The questions bearing most vitally on the trade will be thoroughly discussed and vigorous remedial measures applied.

The Wilkes-Barre committee on arrangements has completed the preliminary plans after an exhaustive campaign. Every exhibitor of the state has been notified of the conference and in an advance brochure that manifests extreme originality, the business of the convention has been outlined. This insures a most comprehensive preparation for the mechanical comforts of the delegates, and also lays the foundation for study and thought, the judgment of which will be voiced in the discussions that will be thrown open to the exhibitors each day of the convention.

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 18.

THE ACTION on this matter by the delegates is problematical. It is a new feature that has not been previously met and while the motion picture exhibitors are naturally fair, it is difficult to obtain a general expression as to their ultimate action, or the particular kind of request the liquor men will bring before the convention.

The advertising question and the poster exaggeration are other significant matters to come before the delegates for official disposition.

The lithograph display, it is claimed, has been running to extremes in the matter of fake and undue hyperbole.

The exhibitors complain of the circus type of poster. It has been a source of constant annoyance to listen to the plaints of the patrons objecting to flamboyant billing, the originals of which are not to be found in the pictures.
THE intrusion of manufacturers and film exchange managers into the exhibiting branch of the trade is apt to be productive of specific charges in the Pennsylvania convention.

It has been repeatedly charged that men controlling the distribution and rental of films have discriminated against certain exhibitors in towns.

The committee of arrangements has completed what promises to be a delightful program. The meetings will open with invocation pronounced by a prominent Wilkes-Barre clergyman. The introductory remarks will be by Fred W. Herrmann, Mayor John V. Kosek, of Wilkes-Barre, will make the address of the name and will give the delegates the "key to the city." The response will be by F. J. Helreigel, of Scranton. Gilbert C. Miller will follow with the chairman's address.

One of the features of the opening session will be an address by Daniel L. Hart, city treasurer of Wilkes-Barre, playwright, humorist and owner of stock in a film manufacturing company. Mr. Hart is the author of "The Parish Priest," "Rocky Road to Dublin," etc. He is scheduled to talk on "A Playwright's Impressions of the Movies."

Following Mr. Hart, M. A. Neff, national president of the league, will address the delegates.

The convention will close with a dance at the Hampton Hall, Wilkes-Barre. It is expected that several motion picture actors and actresses will be present.

The election of officers is one of the important items of business. Ben Zerr, of Reading; Gilbert C. Miller, of Plymouth, and G. W. Weller, of Philadelphia, have been prominently mentioned for the office of state president. Mr. Miller has declined to run, and Mr. Weller has expressed himself in favor of the candidate from Reading. Therefore it appears that the next president of the Pennsylvania league will be Mr. Zerr.

Milwaukee "Legit" Theatres Quit Pictures

The Davidson Theatre, Right in the Heart of the Downtown Section, Finds Competition of Regula

milwaukee "Legit" Theatres Quit Pictures

Milwaukee, Wis., June 17.

Milwaukee's downtown motion picture situation has taken a peculiar turn during the past week. It has come to look as though the established photoplay houses in that section have things pretty well under control, and that it will be impossible for the legitimate and vaudeville managers to cut into the business by playing pictures at their houses during the summer months.

The Davidson Theatre, the Klav & Erlanger house which expected to do big things with pictures, deserts them at the end of next week, when the Davidson Stock Company moves from the Shubert Theatre into the Davidson. It had been the original intention to play pictures at the Davidson all summer, but the first week of warm weather changed things materially.

The Majestic, the Orpheum circuit house, has been playing pictures but a week, and though ideally located in the heart of the city, is already offering free tickets through the local papers, despite the fact that the butterfly, the established picture house, directly across the street, is having little trouble to hold business.

The Shubert Theatre will go into pictures with the removal of the stock company from that house. The playing of pictures here is more or less of an experiment and is being watched with a good deal of interest by exhibitors. The business portion of the city has moved away from this section of town and only stock has been successful in the house during the last five or six years.

USE FILMS IN UNIVERSITY SUMMER SCHOOL

Special to The Motion Picture News.
New Orleans, June 17.

Teachers through the South are watching with interest the first experiment with motion pictures in the classroom. These are to be used in the Tulane University Summer School when Miss Ellen Yale Stevens, of Brooklyn, begins her series of lectures on the Montessori system of child training.

Eighteen hundred feet of film especially made in Rome is to be used for this purpose.

Prof. James Adair Lyon, of Newcomb College, the Tulane woman's college, has installed the apparatus, and it will probably be used all of the next term in connection with motion pictures to be given at the college to illustrate various studies. The university has been considering the adoption of the films for several months and the system is to be given a careful trial at the summer school and a decision based on the results secured there.

TWO FOX THEATRES CLOSE FOR A WEEK

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Waterbury, Conn., June 17.

Fox's motion picture and vaudeville theatre closed its doors Monday, June 8, for a period of one week. John Zanft, of New York, general manager of the Fox theatres, when interviewed stated that the reason for closing the theatre was because of lack of patronage. "We have also closed the Fox Theatre in New Haven for a period of one week," Mr. Zanft said, "and for the same reasons."

The general manager believes that the warm weather was responsible in the main for the closing. He holds the belief that the theatres will open again with a new arrangement and program for the summer.

Feature pictures have been shown every three days for the past several months. The theatre was opened the latter part of August, 1913.

OPERATOR PREVENTS PANIC

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Crystal Lake, Ill., June 16.

Walter Marshall, machine operator in the R. W. Gracy Theatre here, is being hailed as a hero as a result of his quick action when a film caught fire the other day. The accident occurred just after the show opened and only a small crowd was in the theatre.

When a blaze shot from the small window of the steel operating-room, Marshall at once called to the audience that there was no danger and told all to keep their seats. He then seized the burning film and rushed to the street. No damage was done to the machine or the building, but Marshall's hands were badly burned.
$500,000 FIRE WRECKS LUBIN PLANT

Explosion Follows Burning of Negative and Stock Storage Vaults at Twentieth Street and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, and Spreads Flames Through Building—"Pop" Lubin a Real Hero—Deliveries Will Not Be Delayed a Day," Says Firm

A fire that did at least $500,000 damage before it was checked, broke out on Saturday morning, June 13, without any warning, in the negative and stock storage vaults of the Lubin Manufacturing Company's plant at Twentieth Street and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia.

Several minutes later, and before a stream of water could be brought into play, an explosion occurred due to the gases generated by the burning film.

The explosion ripped out the street side of the vault and shattered the roof, scattering blazing reels of film in all directions, and also set fire to the film in the adjacent vaults.

The film and negative storage vaults of the Lubin Company occupied a one-story brick and concrete building at the extreme southeastern corner of the Twentieth and Indiana Avenue plant.

This building which was about 20 feet wide and 100 feet long was divided into five separate rooms. The outside walls were 12 inches thick and the division walls 9 inches thick, of red brick with an 8-inch reinforced concrete roof.

Each room or compartment was entirely separate and could only be reached through a fireproofed door from the outer air. Ventilation was provided through four grated windows near the roof and two near the floor on the factory side of the vault.

There was absolutely no wiring of any sort in any of the vaults and daylight was obtained through two small deadlights in the roof. When necessary to have a better light, a hand flashlight was used. Thus ever precaution for safety was apparently taken care of.

The newspapers all reported the cause as spontaneous combustion, but the theory of the writer, who has installed many thousands of square feet of vaultlights similar to those used in the roof to admit daylight, is that the sun, streaming through one of the prisms of glass, produced the same effect as if a reading lens be held in the sun and the beam of light, being concentrated, set fire to some of the film.

The result was a quick fire which communicated itself to other film in close proximity. All of the prints and negatives were stored in airlight cans and as celluloid is highly explosive when confined, an explosion resulted which spread the fire and wrecked the vault.

Of the five compartments four were used for storing negatives, positives and raw stock. The fifth was used only for the storage of empty cans, etc., and had been provided against such time as the increase of stock of negatives, etc., on hand would require its use. It is the only part of the structure left standing.

At this writing the loss to the Lubin Company can only be roughly estimated, but it will apparently go well over half a million dollars.

Every negative ever produced by the company since its start in business was destroyed with the exception of some process of printing at the factory or at the Betzwood plant. Many negatives which can never be replaced, such as the "Ohio Floods" and the "Frisco Quake" and inauguration at Washington, are gone forever. Also some of the old-timers, which were only of value for sentimental reasons.

Some of the big features which were to be released shortly and on which enormous amounts and much time were spent for production, will have to be retaken. This means that the studios will be working 24 hours a day for the next few months.

The Lubin Company's official statement, issued a day or two after the fire, is reassuring and a testimonial to the firm's resources:

"Through our good fortune in having such great facilities as we have, we will not have a single day's interruption in our deliveries. We have increased our number of companies and with the well-known fighting spirit of Lubin behind us, it will not be many days before we are back on top again, with films that will be better than ever."

(Signed) Lubin Mfg. Company.

The foresight of "Pop" Lubin is shown in having established a complete and entirely separate plant at Betzwood, about thirty miles from the city, as there will be no interruption to the Lubin release schedule. All of the releases for June and July are completed and are safe.

Most of the June releases were in the packing-room being prepared for shipment and the July releases were in process of printing at Betzwood. The negatives of these latter were taken out there last week owing to a water shortage at the Philadelphia plant due to the breaking of one of the city's big supply mains.

Outside of the destruction of the storage vaults, very little damage was done to any of the other buildings of the plant.

The east wall of the factory building which was across the passage from the vaults was not damaged, the upper window frames only being burned. These were the windows of the printing-room. Immediately below is the perforating-room and the heavy double fireproof wall at this point saved this from damage.

The employees of the factory and studio showed marked courage during the progress of the fire. Within a few minutes from the start of the fire the factory was emptied of employees, mainly girls, and the men were rushing back to save the printing and perforating machines which were in immediate danger.

Meanwhile others had the fire-fighting apparatus in action and five streams of water were playing on the blaze within as many minutes and long before the city fire department arrived.

But for this prompt work the entire factory would have doubtless have been consumed.

Two streams were directed from the roof of the garage, adjoining the vaults and three from the factory building roof across the passageway. Fortunately the wind was blowing away from the direction of the company's buildings or the entire plant might have been destroyed.

As it was the fronts of a row of small houses across the street were badly burned. Seven were scared from cellar to roof and three were somewhat scorched. The awnings of the office building were destroyed and the window frames caught fire, but this was easily put out with hand extinguishers directed by the office force.

Eye-witnesses say that it was the most spectacular fire they have ever seen, the flames shooting into the air for over a hundred feet. This was a double fireproof building which stands well above the roof of the four-story office structure was at one time enclosed in the flames, but no serious damage was done except to the paint.

TOLEDO OPEN-AIR THEATRES POPULAR

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Toledo, O., June 18.

A year ago a modest open-air theatre was opened in the residence part of Toledo, O., with a small stage and a few chairs. The venture proved such a success that it was opened again this year. Two reels more were added to the program, and the attendance has grown considerably. Since the old theatre opened this year, two more open-air places have started up. All three are turning people away at every show.

Managers of "inside" houses say that the open-air theatres are hurting their business. Men are allowed to smoke, no matter where they may be sitting, and there is little or no complaint from the women, following slides thrown on the curtain reading: "Men, Please Smoke and Drive Away the Mosquitoes." Popcorn, candy and soft drinks are sold on the grounds. The prices charged are ten cents for adults and five cents for children.

$165,000 THEATRE FOR OGDEN, UTAH

Ogden, Utah, June 17.

Ground has been broken for the new $165,000 Alhambra motion picture theatre to be erected by the Alhambra Theatrical Company on Hudson avenue. The contractor will undertake to complete the excavation in another week or so, and, with favorable weather, he contends that everything will be ready for the foundations by that time. The excavation will cover the entire site of the theatre, which is 88 x 180 feet.

The firm of Shreve & Madsen, which secured the contract for the plans of the new show house, has an extra force of assistants at work on the final plans with the intention of having them ready for the bidders before excavating is completed. Work on the theatre will be rushed in order to have it ready for opening by November 1.

TOO MANY THEATRES IN LOS ANGELES

Judge A. P. Tagwell, of Los Angeles, California, the national vice-president of the International Motion Picture Association, while in New York attending the convention and exposition, stated that there were far too many theatres in Los Angeles for the population and on account of this, many were hardly making expenses. "In Los Angeles there are 104 theatres paying licenses, yet in the larger city of San Francisco there are only 53," said he. Judge Tagwell is also the member of the City Censorship Committee in Los Angeles and is also president of the California Motion Picture Men's Association.

Elizabeth Fire Laws Harass Exhibitors

Individual Members of the Board Issue Conflicting Instructions, Later Received by the Committee as a Whole.

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 20.

The lives of motion picture house managers in this city are being made miserable by the uncertain activities of an erratic Board of Fire Commissioners. It is a case of too many bosses, and the results are anything but favorable to motion picture men.

Each member of the board has his own ideas on the subject of fire protection. Instead of incorporating their ideas into a comprehensive fire code, the members of the commissioner hustle around, each inspecting things for himself and issuing orders as his fancy moves him. The exhibitors never know where they stand, or at what moment they are going to be called before the board or receive mandatory instructions to make alterations or close up.

All of the local exhibitors are anxious to make their houses absolutely safe and comply in every way with the letter and spirit of the fire code as it stands. But there are lots of things which the code does not cover, and in regard to these things, the commissioners visit the same theatre at different times. If their views coincide, the exhibitor receives an order he is generally able to carry out, but if the inspectors differ, as they very frequently do, the poor exhibitor is apt to get contrary instructions. While he is debating which to regard, he is likely to get an entirely different notice from the fire board as a body, telling him to either make the changes desired or close up. If the exhibitors knew whose orders were to be followed, they would probably be far happier than they are now and that is not saying much.

Colonel Robert L. Patterson has probably been more active than any other of the local members of the fire board in getting after the motion picture men. The colonel is in the insurance business. At the May meeting of the fire board, the members asked Fire Chief Gerstung to inspect certain places, among which was the new Garden Theatre, at 51-53 Broad street. He was asked to make known as soon as possible the results of his investigation. The chief recommended that certain changes be made in the theatre, and the owners were notified to make the alterations.

At the June meeting of the board Chief Gerstung announced that all of the required changes had been made, with one exception, it is alleged. That was the placing of a heavy wired glass window in the booth holding the projectors. On this score, and on this alone, Colonel Patterson raised strenuous objections, it is alleged, declaring that the house had treated the board unfairly. It is stated that he urged the sending of a request to Mayor Mravlag to have the license of the theatre rescinded.

The Globe Theatre, a smaller house, at 111 First street, has been practically forced out of business by the fire board. The commissioner, after the theatre had been running four years, found fault with the exits, and it is stated that the changes which they demanded would have cost nearly as much as the theatre was worth. It is to be remodeled for store purposes.

First Hearing in Keystone Censor Suits

Set for Common Pleas Court, Philadelphia, After Postponement on Account of Attorney-General Bell's Inability to Be Present

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1914.

The suit in equity of the Mutual Film Corporation and the Interstate Films Company against J. Louis Breitenger and Mrs. E. C. Niver, constituting the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors of Motion Pictures, has been assigned for hearing in Common Pleas Court No. 5 to-day.

This was to have come up on June 15, but was postponed in order that the attorney-general, John C. Bell, could be present.

The Philadelphia newspapers have seen fit to give this suit several notices but have not yet indicated where they stand, with one exception.

"The Evening Bulletin" has on several occasions had editorials on "Fair Play for the Movies" directed against this bill and the senseless rulings of the censors.

SAWYER, INC., TAKES UP LOCAL TOPICALS

In addition to marketing films, Sawyer, Inc., have started a new branch which might be classified as a commercial line. They have arranged with owners of leading theatres in ten different cities to make motion pictures of prominent scenes and people in each of the cities in which these theatres are located, the theatre contracting for the pictures showing them the following week they are taken.
CONVENTION DECLARES FOR UNION; WILL SEND ENVOYS TO DAYTON

Delegates Have Been Given Free Hand to Use Best Methods for Bringing About Consolidation of the Two Organizations—Board of Trade Movement Will Be Given Further Impetus at Ohio Meeting—Officers Re-elected at New York Meeting

ALTHOUGH considerable business was transacted at the convention of the International Motion Picture Association during the beginning of the week in New York City, the most important things were accomplished at practically the end of the session. On Friday a resolution was passed, calling for the establishment of a Board of Trade, comprising film manufacturers, exchange men and exhibitors, designed for the purpose of protecting the industry as a whole. A matter of equal importance was the passing of a resolution calling for a committee of seven delegates, empowered to act with an unrestricted hand at the Dayton convention, in an effort to consolidate the M. P. E. League of America with the I. M. P. Association.

Other matters occupying the attention of the members were: Legalized censorship, which was condemned emphatically; the adoption of important amendments to the constitution; the condemnation of multiple reels made by program manufacturers; the entering of manufacturers in competition with exhibitors; the ownership of theatres by exchanges; and the misinformation concerning photoplay scenes in posters.

The Board of Trade resolution was presented by D. H. Sachtler and amended by National Secretary H. F. Rosenthal. The Dayton Convention resolution was introduced by Sam Trigger. Both resolutions were carried without opposition.

The Wednesday afternoon session started a little late. President Phillips opened the meeting, but immediately thereafter excused himself, resigning the gavel to Judge Tugwell, the Vice-President.

The following resolution was passed:

RESOLVED, That it is the sense of this convention that the manufacturers furnishing regular single- and two-reel service to exhibitors be requested to confine their energies and resources to such regular service at regular prices and refrain from inflicting upon their customers large multiple reels at extra cost and that a copy of this resolution be sent to manufacturers.

The poster question, Section 9 of the report of the Grievance Committee, was talked over in great detail, and Joe Brandt, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, spoke on the subject. The result was its adoption by unanimous vote. There were no changes made in the wording of the above resolution.

Referring to the effect of multiple-reel subjects upon the market, the sense of the majority of the exhibitors was against the program manufacturers making subjects over two reels in length. The exhibitors seemed to feel that program makers manufacturing films of greater lengths were not confining their energies to the shorter, more popular pictures.

Throughout the discussion there was a great feeling shown against feature films released to exhibitors at an extra price.

The argument of the exhibitors against this is that if manufacturers insist on making longer pictures, they should rent these at the same price charged for single reels. There was no feeling against feature makers—companies that manufacture merely features only—the entire feeling was against the three-program makers.

IN speaking of the poster question, Delegate Katz suggested that the solution of the proposition consisted in the entire elimination of posters, but as this was impossible, manufacturers and exchanges should exercise economy and use the same care in picking their posters as they do in choosing subjects for films. He was particularly bitter against the employees of various exchanges. He was desirous of manufacturers being instructed to make posters as far as possible to tell the story of the picture they represent.

Joe Brandt was introduced immediately following Delegate Katz’s protest, and part of his speech was as follows:

"There are so many different angles to the poster situation that I have decided to base my talk this afternoon on two particular points that I consider most essential. One is a clean front and the other poster-progressiveness!"

"What is the use of having cracking good films and a hundred per cent. program if you are going to show massed-up posters? "You can’t understand what an exhibitor should be careful about the front of his theatre. He ought to make it as attractive as he knows how. No matter what run film he is using, he ought to insist on clean, fresh posters."

"After you’ve got the clean poster idea in your mind open up the business hustles. If you have been using one or two sheets, try an experiment. Try twice the amount. If you have been buying ten or twelve, and doing a little billing in your town, take a couple of more stands. Put up a few stands in some new location you have not touched before. You will be surprised at the extra patronage you will get with the small amount expended."

Representatives Holland, of Brooklyn, and Ballock, of Cleveland, stated that they thought exhibitors should be restricted in the number of posters they were allowed to place on the front of their house. Mr. Holland, in particular, was very bitter against this and in a strong speech railed against the poster departments of the various exchanges. His remarks can be summed up in one sentence: “If first-run exhibitors get good paper at fifteen cents, so should exhibitors of ten, twenty, fifty and sixty-day runs.” Representative Ansbach, of Newark, stated that he used very few posters himself, utilizing mostly the pages of house organs. These he put up in his lobby in neat frames.

D. R. White, representing Pennsylvania, in answer to Mr. Holland, said that until all the exhibitors are in the same association, it will be impossible to regulate the number of posters they shall use. Mr. Katz again took the floor and told of the plan that is being worked by the consolidated exchanges.

“All mounted posters have been discontinued so that the formerly ten-cent mounted poster is now actually sold to the exhibitor for five cents. These posters were not to be returned, but destroyed when used. If this plan is successful, all the other exchanges will undoubtedly be forced to follow their example,” he said. “All were very bitter against overcrowded fronts which, to use the words of one delegate, ‘Make a theatre look more like a circus or a menagerie than a motion-picture house.’"

Examples of the amount of money lost on various features of the program makers was quoted. “Judith of Bethlehem,” a Biograph feature, cost Mr. Victor, of Pittsburgh, a $75 loss. With one or two exceptions the entire body voted for more one and two-reel pictures and a greater variety of subjects. The question of educational pictures was not touched upon at this meeting. President Phillips said, “The exhibitors were far better off before the invasion of the feature.” Of course, the majority of those present were the owners of five and ten-cent houses.

THURSDAYS session was rather late in starting.

F. J. Rembusch, of Minneapolis, spoke upon screens. The keynote of his speech was “Make your pictures visible.” He talked on the white-wall screen, the illuminated curtain screen and the so-called mirror screen. He also described the two kinds of reflection. Frank W. Richardson, editor of the projection department of a trade journal, also spoke.

The resolution introduced by Charles F. Hatfield, Field Secretary of Bureaus of Conventions and Societies, connected with the coming exposition at San Francisco in 1915, requesting that the exhibitors hold their next year's convention there, was interrupted by Judge Tugwell, of Los Angeles, who said, in a heated speech, that he wanted a chance to talk to the delegates regarding Los Angeles and that he did not consider it fair for Mr. Hatfield to try to get in a word before him.

The attention of exhibitors was called to the coming Toronto convention, June 20 to 27. At this point a resolution was introduced by D. M. Sachtler, of Pennsylvania, calling for the formation of a Board of Trade. The original proposition was tendered by H. F. Rosenthal, National Secretary, the amendment being made by Mr. Sachtler, was as follows:

WHEREAS adverse State and National legislation is continually being introduced, legislation that has a tendency to hamper the development of the trade, and

WHEREAS such attempted legislation can best be defeated by united and concerted action on the part of all branches of the industry, and

WHEREAS the Motion Picture Industry has now reached a stage where it is essential for harmonious and united action of all the branches of the industry, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the International Moving Picture Association recommend the establishment of a Trade Board where film manufacturers, exchange men, exhibitors and all the allied branches of the trade can be represented for the purpose of protecting the industry as a whole, and be it further

RESOLVED, That the incoming Executive Officers here hereby instructed to enlist the different elements for the establishment of such Trade Board.

Delegate Harrington, of Pennsylvania, in referring to the clause in the resolution regarding the admittance of manufacturers and exchange men into the newly formed organization, told of the former film service in Pittsburgh. He mentioned the sufferings of the exhibitors on account of that association, which owned many of the theaters. This film-service association was disrupted, according to Mr. Harrington, by the advent of the manufacturers into the ranks of the exhibitors.

"This would be the same position with us. If we admit the manufacturers, the accessory men, the exchange men, we would have additional trouble. We are able to handle any situation that presents itself without their aid. In case of adverse legislation, or some common evil, we can enlist their assistance, if necessary, without any trouble. When that time comes, then let the manufacturer, the exhibitor, the exchange man and their identical interests stand together shoulder to shoulder and fight the common evil."

His speech was greeted with much applause as he took his seat.

The following resolution was introduced by F. J. Rembusch and unanimously carried:

WHEREAS the present unit of production in reels of 1,000 feet, and upwards of thousand units, makes it imperative that every film story is either added to with superlative matter, or on the other hand important matter is cut out, thereby greatly depreciating the quality and artistic value of all films, and furthermore

WHEREAS the motion picture industry is now recognized as an art of the highest order, and as no art or literature is ever measured by the foot or by the mile, it being absurd and ridiculous to supply productions and films by linear measure.

Therefore be it resolved, the Motion Picture Exhibitors in Convention express their disapproval of this manner of producing films, and that hereafter manufacturers shall endeavor to make the length of film only consistent with what it takes to produce artistic and complete film stories, and not by linear measure; and be it further

RESOLVED, That if it is too inconvenient for commercial purposes to produce films of these various lengths at the present time, the manufacturers shall at least as a beginning reduce the unit to 500 feet, so that we may receive films in units of 500 feet, 1,000, 1,500, etc., and over, and in this way improve the artistic quality to a great advantage for the exhibitor and the industry as a whole, and by this step greatly increase the interest and enjoyment to the public of the motion picture exhibition by making the film story complete with the addition of no superfluous matter, and by retaining on the other hand such matter as it is necessary to fully complete the film story.

H. F. ROSENTHAL, national secretary, in speaking of the multiple-reel subject, said that he had had a talk with Mr. Aitken, of the Mutual Company, who said that he was urging his associates to confine themselves exclusively to the manufacture of one and two-reel films.

The question of how to organize and finance a national organization was then taken up. Sam Trigger said the association has offered $500 for any method by which the two organizations could be brought together under one head, and had only received three answers. All of these, he said, simply consisted of "Eliminating Neff."

Secretary Rosenthal was very enthusiastic about the coming league convention at Dayton. "I feel that we will receive good news from Dayton, and following the convention in that city we will have one organization; this is the wish of both bodies. Neff's strength lies in the instructed delegates. That's what we want and that's what we'll have at the Ohio convention."

A motion by Mr. Harrington, which was immediately carried, was to the effect that invitations should be sent to all the states to join the association.

Bidding for the Limousine Trade

By Emmet Crozier

How "Joe" Gilday, of Kansas City, by Courtesy. Common Sense and a Study of His Public Combined, Was Able to Grasp Opportunity by the Forelock and Bid It Bring the Shekels to His Box Office—Novel Offering of Free Vacation Trips

Joseph H. Gilday made $4,800 in three months from his open-air motion picture theatre in Kansas City last summer. The theatre represented an investment of $2,500, and the weekly expenses were $240.

One would suppose that $4,800 was a pretty fair remuneration for a short summer's work. One might even think that Mr. Gilday would be satisfied.

But he wasn't. "I wanted to make $5,000," Gilday said disappointedly. "If it hadn't been for that cool spell the second week in September—"

Twenty years ago "Joe" Gilday started to work for Uncle Sam in the Kansas City post-office. He carried special delivery letters into the residence districts. Six years ago, when the South Side began to turn from a suburb into a city, Joe had the beginning of an idea. He believed a motion picture theatre near Thirty-third street and Troost avenue would be a success. Thirty-third street was two blocks from a transfer point, and between Armour and Linwood boulevards. In fact, it was quite a way from anywhere at that time.

Without leaving Uncle Sam's employ, Gilday planned a little theatre. When finished it contained seats for one hundred and seventy-seven persons, a tiny orchestra pit, a timer operator's box, and a bed-sheet curtain. Two reels of films were arranged for at the film exchange, and the program was changed twice a week.

Before long Joe had 'em standing on the sidewalk, waiting for some of the one hundred and seventy-seven to come out. It was a good location and business prospered. But financial interests decreed that Joe had to "move on." The property was sold and the new owners desired the site for other purposes.

"If they had let me alone there," Gilday meditates, "I'd be a capitalist now. It was like building a mint over a gold mine."

Later developments proved it wasn't so much the location as the good management of his picture shows, that made "Joe" Gilday a success. He continued to prosper, in a small way, with other playhouses in the residence districts, and kept on delivering registered and special delivery letters in the daytime.

Four years ago, in 1909, the idea of an open-air theatre occurred to Gilday. He found a site that suited him at Thirty-first street and Troost avenue, in the center of a rapidly growing retail store and residence district. Here he installed an outdoor equipment.

It was Kansas City's first open-air theatre, and many patrons were attracted through curiosity. Warm summer nights swelled the crowds, and soon they were standing up again, although the seating capacity was several times one hundred and seventy-seven. Favorable weather sided the project and the business grew so rapidly that Joe was forced to ask the government for a leave of absence.

When the summer season closed Joe stored his out-door equipment, leased some of the neighborhood for indoor exhibitions, and resumed his old job of carrying the mail. Another successful winter season passed, and the following summer Joe secured another leave of absence and reopened his open-air theatre.

Warm nights and patrons arrived simultaneously; the latter in large numbers. Frequently they arrived in motor cars, and at times the curb in front of the open-air theatre was lined with coupes and limousines.

RIGHT here, says Gilday, was the turning point in his career. The better class of patrons was coming his way in bunches, and if he made good, the possibilities of development were almost unlimited. So he began to study how to keep the better class of theatre-goers coming to his show.

He went down town to Petticoat lane, where exclusive shops abound. He consulted the proprietors and clerks, and found that one of the requisites of a successful dealing with the upper strata of society was courtesy. He learned that most of the shops catering to the exclusive South Side society employed a doorman to open the doors of motor cars and help patrons across the sidewalk.

So Joe went back to his open-air theatre with his borrowed ideas. He drilled his employees in courtesy, and hired a doorman. A man in livery met every motor car that drove up to the theatre that summer. The girl who sold tickets and the boy ushers all said "Yes, sir," and "No, ma'am." A uniformed maid passed ice water between reels.

Gilday believes the liveried footman and the courtesy his employees used were largely responsible for his success. But when success came he didn't sit back and enjoy it. He started out to make it more complete.

A OTHER idea occurred to him. He decided to inaugurate a contest for a series of vacation trips to the mountains in Colorado and the lakes in Michigan.

He made this offer:

Whoever estimated the nearest to the total bank clearings in Kansas City each week would be given a two weeks' vacation to the mountains or lakes, free.

Slips upon which the estimates were made were given with each admission.

The proposition was not qualified by any of the conditions, which usually surround such "free" offerings. Kansas City always has been proud of its bank clearings—it ranks sixth in the United States—and there always has been more or less interest in the figures published each Saturday.

The estimating contest closed each Friday night, and the slips were taken to the president of the clearing house association, who made the award, and the results were announced Saturday night. The winner started on his or her vacation the following Monday.

On its face, it would seem to have been an expensive proposition. But "Joe" Gilday had figured it out, so that its cost was minimized. He leased space on his screen to the railroad companies for transportation, and he obtained the two weeks' vacations for a very nominal cost.

The results were enormous. The line of motor cars increased in front of his theatre and his footman wore out several pairs of shoes running up and down the sidewalk to greet the new arrivals.

That's how "Joe" Gilday made $4,800 last summer. This summer he hopes to make considerably more.

NEW ICE-MAKING PLANT FOR UNIVERSAL

A modern ten-ton ice machine has been installed at the Universal Film Company's western plant under the direction of John M. Nickolau, head of the laboratory department.

When the entire plant is removed to the Universal's splendid new ranch, the Los Angeles river will furnish water at proper temperature. Then the big machine will make ice for the department, including laboratory, drinking fountains and café.
HERRINGTON HEADS SMOKY CITY EXHIBITORS

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 17.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, of Pennsylvania, held their annual election meeting at the local headquarters, 213 Fourth avenue. Fred J. Herrington was elected president, succeeding H. C. Kleihum; Wm. Fritz, as vice-president; A. Baltimore, as New Castle, second vice-president; A. G. Thomas, John Haitner, W. H. Ketchum, trustees, and James Delves was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Delves was appointed by the body to represent the association in Harrisburg on the new building code. Delves, on his return, reports that many changes that will benefit the exhibitors was made in the code, though he fears that many of the old houses will be forced to close, but the work done by the exhibitors and exchange men of Pittsburgh in altering the code deserves much praise, and the way they are going after censorship is bound to make a big impression.

Fred Herrington reported to the exhibitors of his visit to New Castle last Sunday after attending the motion picture meeting, paid a visit to the public park where the mayor of New Castle was addressing a mass meeting of the citizens of the said city. Being a personal friend of the mayor, Mr. Herrington was asked to speak. Fred gave a talk on censorship which made such a hit that a committee asked Mr. Herrington to set a date for a return engagement, which he readily accepted.

CENSORS PASS FILM, THEN PUT LID ON

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Montreal, P. Q., June 18.

Once more the Quebec Board of Censors have passed a film, and after it has been exhibited to thousands of people in Montreal, have withdrawn their approval and stopped the exhibition. The film in question was “Dope,” a six-reel production, which shows the evil effects of the drug on both men and women.

It was being displayed in a picture house on Lawrence boulevard, Montreal, with the certificate of the board, but in consequence of a complaint the censors once more had the film shown in their little theatre, and stopped its further appearance.

CELEBRITIES GRACE CONVENTION BANQUET

Noted Members of Both Theatrical and Motion Picture Fields at Biltmore Hotel Tables—Augustus Thomas, Toastmaster—Wright, Blackton, Rothafel and Others Speak.

NEVER before in the history of the industry has a similar affair reached the proportions of the dinner tended to the visiting delegates by the entertainment committee of the International Motion Picture Association, held at the Biltmore Hotel, New York, on Friday night. It was the climax of a wonderful week’s work.

There were approximately eight hundred people present. The entertainment consisted of select music, and speeches that were par excellence. The dinner was the finest that the Biltmore Hotel furnishes.

At the conclusion of the dinner Augustus Thomas was introduced by the president of the International Exposition Company and officiated as toastmaster. At the conclusion of the speeches he was given an unanimous vote of thanks.

Mr. Thomas in his introductory speech praised the industry to the greatest extent. At the conclusion of his talk he introduced Daniel Frohman.

Mr. Frohman complained of having a severe cold, which acted as an excuse for his brevity. He was very concise in his explanations of the lucidity of the screen.

Mr. Thomas introduced J. C. Graham, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who spoke in a very forceful manner. His words may be summed up by the sentiment “because there are twenty reels a day manufactured is no sign that you should use that number. Five reels a day are enough for any man.”

Jessie L. Lasky was the next to be introduced. He said that the manufacturer is always doing the best he can to meet the requirements of all branches of the business. “In the present indications I can see a very prosperous year before us.”

William Wright, vice-president of the Kalem Company, was introduced by Mr. Thomas, after the removal of a candelabra that stood in front of the not-overlarge Mr. Wright. Mr. Wright was very complimentary to American pictures in general.

Upton Sinclair, the noted socialist, and author of “The Jungle” was called on to speak, and as usual mixed the subject of which he is so fond with his talk.

S. L. Rothafel, general director of the million-dollar Strand Theatre, on Broadway, New York, was introduced after a humorous speech by Mr. Thomas, and spoke on pictures in general, telling several humorous anecdotes.

J. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph company, was introduced by Mr. Thomas after Mr. Rothafel had finished.

In speaking of the next speaker, John Bunny, Mr. Blackton told the story of the woman who wrote to Mr. Bunny asking him if that was his natural face or a joke. Mr. Blackton said that Jack assured her that it was his natural face, and it certainly was not a joke. Mr. Bunny enjoyed the sally as much as any one present. Mr. Bunny was the last speaker of the evening.

There were a large number of actors and actresses present, and those who were not dressed in evening clothes were very much in the minority.

On Thursday night about 2,000 guests of the association were treated to a lengthy trip up the Hudson River. The large steamer “Adirondack” was especially chartered for the occasion. The start was made at 8 p. m., and returned about 1:30 a. m. A searchlight played on either bank all the trip, and the hundreds of couples enjoyed the moonlight.

KNOCK DOWN THEATRE FOR $870

Hattiesburg, Miss., June 17.

At a bankruptcy sale of the Lomo Theatre, Hattiesburg, Miss., held by J. C. Magrudr, trustee, the theatre was sold to E. T. Batten for $870. This was far below its real value, the fixtures alone being valued at $1,000. This property went into bankruptcy some weeks ago and has been lying idle since then.

A $40,000 THEATRE IN REGINA

Regina, Sask., June 17.

Announcement has been made by D. M. Hackney, of this city, that he will construct a motion picture theatre to cost $40,000 in this place during the summer.

Thomas Barnard has already received the contract for the construction of the theatre, and it is expected everything will be in readiness for its opening in October.

PRODUCERS MAKE BIG EXPOSITION SHOWING

Well Represented by Splendid Exhibits—Elaborate Booths Attract Thousands of People—Public Flocks to See Motion Pictures in the Making and Fill Seats of Four Miniature Theatres—Pretty Actresses Receive Lay Visitors

IT is a fact worthy of note, that during the whole week when the second International Exposition of Motion Picturc Art was under way, prominent theatrical men were seen mingling among the scores of manufacturers, hundreds of actors and thousands of "fans." If it shows nothing else except the interest of the former despisers of the animated picture, it has accomplished much.

The tremendous crowds which daily surged through the entrance gates were at least pleasing from the box-office and lemonade sellers' point of view. Although the various exhibits were essentially for the trade, there was much to interest the layman, always curious where the inside of the business is concerned. Autograph gatherings were tremendous in evidence, bothering the life out of everyone that looked like an actor, and those that did not. So unbearable became this nuisance that a club was organized, composed solely of those who had not hunted signatures, nor tried to shake hands with genial John Bunny, as a protest against the annoyance. Some two hundred charter members enrolled.

Just which company had the most attractive exhibit was a question of moment. It was a close race among the Mutual, Vitagraph, Universal, Colonial, Jesse Lasky, Edison and the Famous Players.

The four model theaters, located on the mezzanine floor, undoubtedly attracted the most attention from the lay visitors. Each of these was of about 200 seating capacity and was filled to capacity at all performances. A Radium Gold Fibre Screen was used in two of them, and a Day and Night Screen and a Mirror-oid in the others. Power's projecting cameras were installed in all. In Theatre No. 1 the Box Office Attractions were mainly shown; Theatre No. 2 was devoted to the output of the General Film Company. In Theatre No. 3 were shown Jesse Lasky, Universal, Mutual, and World Film releases, and Theatre No. 4 consisted of a program from the Famous Players, Warner's Features, and All Star Feature output. Edison Talking and Renfax Singing pictures were also shown.

STANDING room around the model studio on the ground floor was very much at a premium during the evening when various companies were taking pictures for the edification of the public. The Edison Company sent Mary Fuller and her company, The Kalem had Alice Joyce and Tom Moore, and other companies their leading men and women.

Warner's Features built a tiny studio, in which Kleigel lights were installed, and pictures of exhibitors and their friends in characteristic poses were taken.

The Famous Players' booth on the western end of the exposition floor were daintily decorated in artificial flowers. Imitation oil paintings were hung profusely around the room, a life-size portrait of Mary Pickford occupying a place of honor.

The Edison booth, under the capable care of Frank A. Bunnin, attracted immediate interest.

The Universal had six spaces at the southwest corner in which everyone was invited to dance with their favorite player. A three-piece orchestra attended to the music. Under the care of Joe Brandt and Paul Gulich a daily paper was printed.

Francis X. Bushman, winner of the "Ladies' World" prize, and Beverly Bayne, the Essanay players, were much in evidence and excited considerable comment.

Every one admired the drop of the Vitagraph theatre which was hung in the booth occupied by that company.

THE Lubin Bell announcing that their pictures "were as clear as a bell" (not the cracked one shown), together with the news of the disastrous fire which was made public on Saturday, gave the booth plenty of publicity.

Warner's Features created a sensation by showing several Indians from the Miller Brothers' ranch. Their exhibit was enhanced by the presence of Gene Gauntier, Jack Clark, Marion Leonard and other players. The booths of the All Star and Jesse Lasky were in the form of reception rooms and made a dignified showing. This was also true of the Mutual Company.

Musical instrument manufacturers were present in great quantity. There was a constant attendance at the booths of the Bartola, The Fotoplayer, Seeburg, Lapin and Wurlitzer, where the instruments were constantly playing.

The magazines devoted to motion-picturc work were also present. The "Motion Picture Magazine" gave away 30,000 sample copies during the course of the "Sons of the World" and the "Dramatic Mirror" also distributed their respective publications profusely. "Leslie's Page," "Photograph," the "Moving Picture World" and THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS represented the trade journals.

NICHOLAS POWER was undoubtedly the largest exhibitor of projectors. From a technical standpoint his booth was very attractive. The Vitograph, The Eclair, Genert and Ernemann also had projectors on exhibit.

One of the booths which attracted even the layman was that arranged by the Novelty Slide Company under the supervision of G. Wiley and D. H. Harris, his assistant.

The Automatic Vending and Supply Company demonstrated their midget "rent earner." H. O. Bodine represented the Raw Film Supply Company and the Business Efficiency sold a number of their new advertising devices. L. C. Smith also had a number of accessories on show.

A large space, Inc., had a large booth. The Radium Gold Fibre Screen, which they manufacture, was well advertised. Other materials of which they are the agents were demonstrated.

Some of the souvenirs given away were: Noise buttons by Nicholas Power Co.; fans by Ethel Grandin; imitation gold picture boxes by Asco, Inc.; magnets and other paraphernalia by the Vitagraph; portraits of actors by almost every company; cigarettes by Len Spencer; a six-inch film showing President Wilson in a characteristic pose, by the Colonial; the song "My Virginian," by Lasky, and good will by all.

The official hostesses of the exposition were as follows: Gail Kane, Miss Leslie, Ormi Hawley, Florence Hackett, Rosemary Thyby, Lottie Biscoe, Ethel Clayton, Alice Joyce, Irene Boye, Anna Nielsen, Leah Baird, Ethel Grandin, Adrienne Kroell, Flo Labadie, Margaret Anderson, Lila Chester, Marguerite Snow, Mariel Osborn, Norma Phillips, Mayme Kelso, Mrs. F. Screen Club Night Winds Up Week

Exposition Concludes with Parade and Lively Ball—Visitors Dance with Favorite Players—Aftermath at Clubhouse

The entertainment and ball given by the members of the Screen Club on Saturday night, at the exposition hall, marked the close of a very eventful week for the visiting exhibitors and their friends. The event had been heralded far and wide, and a large gathering of visitors were on hand "to dance with their favorite photoplayer." At 8:30 p.m. the actors marched up to the building from the Screen Club, and the crowds surged to the main entrance, to watch the men as they entered.

King Baggot, president of the club and leading man of the Imp Company, led the way. He was followed by a large band and the other players in couples. The voices of the watching throng announced in excited tones that the people had found John Bunny, Crane Wilbur, or some other favorite.

The publicity men were much in evidence in the line, Harry and Bert E. Ennis, Harry Reichenbach, Alec Loring and dozens of others. After several trips around the large hall, with banners waving and the band booming; the line of march broke up to reassemble later. The majority of the members stayed downstairs for the time being, while a few went to the dance hall to meet their friends. There was no place the poor actors could go to conceal themselves from the crowd of admirers who thronged around them.

When the lights commenced to go out at 11:30 all were invited to the Screen Club. Arriving there the members and their friends paired off, some playing billiards and pool, some dancing, but most, however, adjourning to the "garden," where, seated at tiny tables, they kept the waiters busy. Needless to say, the merry-makers enjoyed themselves in a lively manner. Just what time the last member left Sunday morning was not made public, but all were uniform in their praise of the hospitality of the Screen Club, which incidentally is always open to visiting film men whether members or not.

Gordon McGarry, the manager of the exposition, is one.

Exhibitors were pleased to learn of the elaborate plans which had been under way for several months to make the occasion notable.

Exposition Program:

Commissioner Jackson, of Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, Denies Any Attempt to Force Drastic Measure on Motion Picture Managers—Only Wants Theatres "Reasonably Safe," He Declares

"In practical use building existing theatres, the owners insist upon making their present theatres what I regard as 'reasonably safe.' I mean by that to require sufficient exits and inclined planes instead of stairways, to reduce the danger to a minimum. The great bulk of existing theatres, whether of the second-story or other antiquated styles of construction, can be made reasonably safe without inflicting great hardship on the owners and, in fact, most of them are now safe.

"It is very gratifying to the department to have observed that in only about one case out of twenty is there any difficulty in inducing the owners of the existing motion-picture houses to make the changes that are necessary for safety. Most of them are eager to co-operate with us.

"In a sense, the inspectors' instructions are in the nature of recommendations rather than orders, but the recommendations are based largely on the department's ideas of what should be incorporated in future legislation. The compliance with the recommendations may avert trouble in the future, for the department will not hesitate to go into court to compel the enforcement of future laws in the few cases in which it may be necessary."

"While Mr. Jackson believes that, in fairness to the owners of the present picture houses, they should be required to make only such changes in construction as will insure reasonable safety, he has very definite ideas with regard to greater safeguards in the construction of new houses.

"I figure that the new theatres now going up will be in use for at least twenty-five years," said the Commissioner, "and you can readily understand why I favor the strictest safety regulations for them. I do not want to spend the rest of my days anxiously scanning the newspapers each morning for news of some motion-picture theatre disaster, due to the failure of my department not having faithfully insisted on safety.

"I do not feel that a theatre should be built on an unsafe or an unsanitary lot. By such I mean long, narrow ones; or those situated next to inflammable buildings. Future buildings should not be erected on hills with parts of the structure underground. We are not absolutely insisting on there being no second floors above the auditoriums of the theatres, but we are strongly opposed to living apartments or any kind of quarters in which there is great risk of fire being built above the picture theatres. For instance, we would oppose the opening of a paint shop or a powder factory in a floor above a picture theatre.

"We do not regard galleries as permissible in new motion-picture houses unless they are absolutely fireproof, with wide corridors, sufficient exits and safe stairways or inclined planes such as are found in the larger theatres."

The State Industrial Board, of which Mr. Jackson is chairman, is a commission consisting of high-class representatives of various industrial interests, which formulate rules for the enforcement of existing laws concerning manner and framing of new public buildings for submission to the legislature when the Commission thinks it necessary. Its recommendations carry great weight with the legislature. This board is now holding a series of hearings on the subject of the construction of motion-picture houses.

In addition to Mr. Jackson, the board consists of George S. Comstock, of Mechanicsburg, a mining engineer; James C. Cramm, of Philadelphia, representing labor interests in general; Major John P. Wood, of Philadelphia, a large textile employer, and Mrs. Samuel Semple, of Pittsburgh, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs. It is generally regarded as a commission beyond the reach of political influence. During the last four or five months this commission has been conducting hearings and getting the ideas of the members of a voluntary committee representing motion-picture manufacturers and exhibitors, building contractors and allied interests—experienced men familiar with conditions in the big cities—with a view to the preparation of a new code to govern motion-picture theatre construction.

"The Industrial Board's findings, as a result of the hearings," said Mr. Jackson, "will be published and full public discussion of them will be invited. In this way, it will be possible to obtain the consensus of opinion of all interests concerned. We believe that by this plan it will be possible to adopt a code that not only will protect the public absolutely from danger of fire in motion-picture shows, but meet with the full approval of the men engaged in the business.

"The data is being gathered and compiled in a scientific way, and we are going to present it to the people, who will be most concerned by the legislature to get their views, rather than to attempt to foist upon them something in the form of which they have had no voice."

CENSORSHIP MENACES MINNEAPOLIS

An Official Alderman, While Admitting that Film Shows Are Unobjectionable, Wants to Establish Censorship—Tour of Theatres by Women's Clubs and Aldermen Revealed No Harmful Pictures, But Still the Agitation Goes On

I HAVE been making the theatres for a year and a half," said John Fay, the inspector, "and I have yet to find a film that a man with a clean mind can object to. Some men could see something objectionable in a portrayal of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and you will find that most of the objections to films now shown are imaginary.

"If a board reviewed all the films shown in Minneapolis or in Minnesota, the work would have to be slighted, and the picture men would be greatly inconvenienced in many cases, for most of them are very careful of the shows they give."

Mr. Chase has introduced the ordinance at the request of organizations who favor a censorship. He says he is conscientious in his efforts, and while admitting that picture shows are clean, he believes the city should have the controlling hand.

SOME of the other aldermen do not agree with him, and it is doubtful if the ordinance will pass. When an aldermanic committee several months ago visited every motion picture in the city without previous warning, to inspect safety conditions, they stopped long enough to view at least one film in each theatre.

In no theatre did they find a film to which there could be the slightest objection.

This has been cited by opponents of the censorship as an argument in favor of permitting the theatre men and the film companies to look after the films.

The patrons will complain if the films are not right, they say, and they favor letting the business work out its own salvation, inasmuch as it has made such good progress thus far.

Savage Sues Ohio Exhibitors

The Alleged Offenders Were Showing "Madame X" Regardless of Legal Injunction, He Says—Criminal As Well As Civil Action Contemplated.

HENRY W. SAVAGE, through his attorney, A. C. Thomas, has started proceedings against several motion picture exhibitors in Ohio who were said to be showing a film of "Madame X," notwithstanding prohibitory court decisions. This latest move on the part of Mr. Savage is of especial interest, inasmuch as it carries an attempt to punish the exhibitors by jail sentences as well as by fines.

Mr. Savage produced "Madame X" in America and controls the rights to it, not only in theatrical production but also for use as a motion picture, and he determined to prosecute any manufacturer who offers for sale or any exhibitor who countenances in any way, any one of the several films which the courts have decided in favor of Mr. Savage's rights.

Many exhibitors not conversant with Mr. Savage's rights have been misled into exhibiting these pictures, and the courts in every case have decided that such ignorance is not an excuse for a violation of the injunctions prohibiting the use of these films. The courts have also decided that a manufacturer of the films is punishable under the penal code as well as actionable for heavy damages.

The chief distributor, and the first against whom Mr. Savage's attorney proceeded, was William Karrar, of the Wilkar Film Company. An injunction was granted against him several weeks ago, and he was ordered to surrender his copy of the film, which he had been exhibiting under the title of "Magda, A Modern Madame X." In Chicago, Clinger & Feldman, proprietors of the Curtain System, in Philadelphia, Finger & Fine, proprietors of the Attractive Feature Film Company, and the Progressive Feature Film Company, of Newark, have also been enjoined, and suits for damages are now pending.

Last Monday Harry E. Feldman, a brother of the Feldman in Chicago who has been ordered by the court to discontinue the use of the film, was arrested for showing one of them in Long Island City and this case comes up in this city soon.

NEW HOUSE IN ATLANTA

Special to The Motion Picture News

P. Mion, head of the Mion Amusement Company, has well under process of constructing a new motion picture theatre. It is planned to open the new house at 56 Peachtree street in about two months.

Mr. Mion's new theatre, the Strand, will be 150 feet in length, 40 feet wide and 34 feet high. It will extend through an entire block, having entrances on two streets. The seating capacity will be over 900.

MOTION picture men of the state have declared, however, that the reputable film manufacturers themselves are doing more to drive objectionable films out of the theatres than all the officials could ever hope to do.

The proposal for a censorship in Minneapolis is really the outgrowth of the agitation on the part of women's clubs and reform organizations for a state censor bureau.

Several months ago when the women's clubs campaigned for a censorship they were told to go out and find objectionable pictures if they could. Many of them went and were compelled to report that they had found no objectionable pictures, though they thought they might be a few in some places.

Minneapolis picture men have found long since that clean, snappy pictures are the ones that pay best, and while the city has a paid inspector with instructions to prohibit any objectionable film, he has yet to find a film that can be legitimately ordered out of a theatre.
Sixty More Exhibitors Make Strong Protests Against Offensive "Paternal" Government—Patrons of Censorship Releases—

William Georgion, the Lyric Theatre, Lima, O: "I am not in favor of the Ohio censorship law because I feel that three or four people are to be appointed to censor photoplays who will never know as much as forty who might be appointed by the National Board of Censorship of New York."

Stearn Brothers, Queen Theatre, Painesville, O: "We are getting a good clean program from the General Film Company now, and I see no reason why there is any use of state censoring of films after they have once been approved."

W. B. Roderick, Dreamland Theatre, West Union, O: "I am opposed to the present building code, as well as censorship. In a few months small-town theatres will be a thing of the past, as a small town cannot support a house with the equipment and the building necessary under the present law. Something should be done for the relief of the men in the small towns in this matter. If not, the large cities will have a monopoly. Get rid of Neff and his fads and fancies. He possibly is all right in cities, but is a killer for the country."

C. Welmeier, the Coliseum, Bellevue, O: "I don't think that the State of Ohio needs a censor board, if the films are endorsed when released; that should be satisfactory."

Curtis V. Smith, Grand Opera House, Bellefontaine, O: "We already have too many laws for the good of the country."

C. F. Carroll & Company, Columbia Theatre, Uhrichsville, O: "We don't need any Ohio censors, as the National is good enough."

W. B. Gandy, Dreamland Theatre, Lima, O: "I have been an exhibitor at the present location continuously for between seven and eight years, having the first picture theatre in Lima. I am one of the organizers of the old Ohio Exhibitors Protection Association, having been the treasurer of the same, until the present M. P. E. L. was organized, of which I was one of the organizers, turning over funds and members. I am now president of Lima Lodge No. 9, and a delegate to the National Convention at Dayton in June."

The one dissenting note comes from H. Graubner, the Thetiorium, Salineville, O, who says: "I answer 'yes' emphatically, because I claim nothing but clean, moral, religious and instructive subjects should be used in any picture house."
When Is a Manager Not a Manager?

When the Stockholders of His Company Harass and Handicap Him, as in the Case of the Manager Cited Here, and Others.

The theatre first mentioned the manager is one of the members of the former class. No matter what step he takes, he is not permitted for the stockholders; if their action is favorable, all well and good, but, if unfavorable, he becomes disgusted at not being able to put through what he believed a good thing for the theatre.

The theatre that has an executive who is a manager in every sense of the word, shows it. But where he is nothing more than the tool of many stockholders, you can notice it also.
Such a manager is always more or less servile when a stockholder apppears on the horizon, the man with a free hand, as a rule, never notices him, because he is too busy going ahead with his work.

The manager remarked to me very recently, "Here I have wasted a whole day going around to the offices of the stockholders, and I have accomplished nothing. And I have a hundred things that require my immediate attention."

It would be well for many theatres, not only in Buffalo but throughout the country, if the stockholders would give the manager absolute power to act.
It would also promote better feeling between stockholder and manager. The writer could name two theatres in Buffalo where the mangers cannot take one step without the consent of the men who own the theatre.

"Legit" House Fails With Features

Rochester, N. Y., June 18.

One trial of the big feature films, given at that stated performances, has been made in Rochester, by the manage of the Shubert Theatre, a first-class house. Following an unsuccessful venture in vaudeville, the house put in three weeks trying the new plan which has proved so successful in first-class houses in New York and Chicago.

Little business was done, partly because the venture was tried in Lent, and partly because the theatre had tried so many new policies of late that the public didn't understand the new one.

It wasn't sufficiently advertised, and the trial didn't last long enough.
The location of the theatre, too, is believed to work against its success, though a straight-out picture house.
The Grand, located less than one block away, is proving a big success.

The Shubert is now standing idle, waiting for some one to take up the scheme again.
$1,000,000 IN AN "AD"

"BREWER'S MILLIONS" came to the Strand Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., for four days, recently. Manager Harold Edel has planned a unique lobby display for this attraction. He borrowed about a hundred money bags with the inscription $1,000 on the outside, from the local National Marine Bank. These he had stuffed with paper, piled them up in front of the ticket box and placed two men near them to guard them with the sign in front, "One Million Dollars in These Bags Loaned by Marine Bank."

He also had a most attractive set of oil paintings made for the attraction.

SELLING TICKETS EN BLOC

FOLKS in Dallas, Texas, are accustomed to buying street-car tickets in book lots, but they never bought theatre tickets in the same manner until Lou G. Bissenger, manager of the Queen Theatre, offered them.

The Queen tickets were bound in lots of 50 to the book and sold for 80. The idea is entirely new in Dallas, and the customers of the Queen have been adopting it steadily.

"That's just another way to stir up business," Bissenger said. "You know the people are coming to your show when they have a book of tickets to the place. These tickets are good for any day, including those when feature films are shown at advanced prices."

COOLING BY SUGGESTION

COOLING audiences by suggestion, as well as by a cool-air plant is becoming very popular in Milwaukee. Following close upon the heels of George Fischer, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, and his cool and inviting canvas-covered seats, comes Harry Graham, manager of the Butterfly Theatre, with a huge block of ice on each corner of his stage, upon which an electric fan plays.

Though the temperature of the Butterfly Theatre is kept at between 60 and 70 degrees at all times by a very elaborate air-cooling system, Manager Graham has discovered that his patrons must be given some suggestion that the air is really being artificially cooled, and the ice cakes on the stage have been found to be the most effective method. Despite the fact that they cool but little more than the two front rows, the audience imagines that they are being effectively cooled by the blocks of ice and the two fans.

Mr. Graham satisfied himself about this one warm day by having the ice removed from the stage. Though the cold air plant was working all the time and the temperature never for a moment went above seventy degrees, a steady stream of people kept coming to his office complaining about the warm theatre and wanting to know when the cooling system, meaning the ice blocks on the stage, would be reinstalled.

HOW IT WORKED OUT

THE value of suggestions made in The Motion Picture News is amply illustrated by the recent innovation by Manager Helmer Jernberg, of the Province Theatre, Winnipeg, Man., who now issues to all his patrons a card which bears the following tale:

"No doubt you have special favorites who appear in the photoplays shown at the Province and it will be a great pleasure for us to notify you in advance when they appear, if you so desire. Therefore, if you will fill out the blank on the opposite side and write the names of your favorites we will either phone or write to you when they can be seen and the title of the pictures in which they play."

The opposite side of the card bears spaces for name, address and telephone number. The card is handed to an usher and the record is thus secured. The manager then keeps the patron posted by mailing a postcard or telephoning the information.
Buffalo "Legit" Theatres Fail with Pictures

Majestic and Garden Cannot Induce Public to Pay Twenty-five and Fifty Cents for Features—Teck Equally Unfortunate.

The effort of the local legitimate houses to show pictures during the summer has been an absolute failure. The Majestic, which had planned to show the Kleine attractions all season, closed last Thursday evening, and the Garden on Monday evening.

The Garden opened with big features, but only lasted a week. "Spartacus" was shown about ten days at the Majestic, where it was shown at twenty-five and fifty cents admission. The Teck opened with an engagement of the Lyman Howe pictures, but business was so bad that the receipts fell way below expectation. "Creation," a free motion picture, will be shown at the Teck for the next four weeks, admission being with "Courier" coupons.

It looks as though patrons will not pay more than 10 cents, no matter what the attraction. Another fact that has come out is that patrons will not go downtown when they can go to the outlying theatres and see excellent feature films at the above mentioned price.

With the completion of the New Victoria, a Mark-Brock house, at the corner of Grant and Ferry streets, and the Ellen Terry, also on Grant—both large houses—and also the Regent, at Main and Utica, motion pictures will have taken on a domestic aspect for at least 75 per cent of Buffalo's patrons.

Films Star in Minnesota Politics

Attorney-General Decides They Can Be Used Even on Election Day, Since They Are Not Campaign Literature—All Happy.

It is unusual for a legal decision to tell what something is not. It is usually supposed to tell what something is. Attorney-General Lyndon A. Smith, of Minnesota, however, has just given a decision telling what motion pictures are not.

A motion picture is not literature. Thereby hangs a tale.

The decision sent joy to the hearts of candidates for state, county and city offices. Campaign literature must go through many formalities before it can be given out and literature cannot be distributed the night before an election or on election day.

Governor A. O. Eberhart and many other candidates had planned a gigantic motion picture campaign. Some said the pictures would have to be named the owners and that the price would have to be shown. And they said many other things.

The attorney-general declared that the pictures could be shown at any time, at any place, even on election day. As a result there have been many orders for motion pictures of the candidates in some of the scenes that will show they are real busy men. The decision has also brought cheer to the picture theatre men who are doing a rushing campaign business between the regular films.

First Airdome for Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., June 18.

It is understood that an Atlanta capitalist is back of a movement to establish an open-air motion picture theatre here. This will be Atlanta's first "airdome" picture theatre.

A patent has recently been filed in Germany by Kucharski for taking pictures of reduced size with ordinary cameras.

Boris Boubnoff, working on color cinematography, has also filed a patent in Germany.

Bettini, inventor of phonographs and cinematographic devices, has recently applied for a patent in Germany, for a system of motion pictures obtained by means of an ordinary photographic plate. It must be said that the novelty does not lie within the idea of motion pictures on a single photographic plate which is known to be old.

The New York "Times" announced that on June 12 Casimir de Proszynski gave the first demonstration of his new cinematograph camera at the meeting of the Royal Photographic Society.

Proszynski used a broad sheet of film instead of a narrow strip as usual, and explained that he would thus reduce the cost of film to a minimum. The explanations given seemed to convince the financiers who know nothing about the trade. Unfortunately, there are two reasons which will make the introduction of Proszynski's system a difficult task; the first reason is that the system is not new. It has been tried long before Mr. de Proszynski ever thought of going into the motion picture game. The other reason is that the only film having a chance of success is one of standard size and standard perforation.

The Second Exposition

Very few new things were to be seen at the Grand Central Palace this year. To those who understand the technical part of the trade, it looked as if the main factories and makers were indifferent to the entire show.

Besides the musical instruments, which were well represented in quality and number, the machinery and devices shown represented only a small part of what is produced and intended for use with cinematographic films here and elsewhere.

Only one fire extinguisher, cut of hundreds in existence, was shown, and yet the model which was shown is intended for fire in its incipient state, while there are numerous devices for avoiding fire and extinguishing it by automatic means. Since January last, five leading film factories have been destroyed by fire and no efforts are made to use any of the devices proposed by various inventors in order to spare human life and the result of years of work and trouble. The first to take fire was the house of Pathé Frères in London; next came Eclair, Edison, Universal and finally Lubin, most of them first class factories established in recently constructed buildings.

We must not be too pessimistic about certain things but there is no doubt that those unfortunate accidents have done the cinematographic trade more harm than all its detractors and foes united.

Out of the great number of projecting screens which are offered on the market, very few only were exhibited to the exposition visitors and no film menders at all. Only one film cleaner was shown.
Why were there no small-size developing apparatus and similar material to suggest taking of local pictures, which will be an important asset in the future, as it would interest the public a little more than the very common, untrue and inelegant posters?

At the only stand where projectors were ready to be demonstrated a film could hardly be shown, as those stands were just in front of white walls reflecting the most bright daylight upon the screen.

Several interesting cameras and home projectors found their way to the Palace, but the greater number remained outside.

Take it easy! we have a year before us. Let us not pay any attention to the interested flattering compliments; the next exposition will have to be greatly improved or it will lack any interest at all.

FIREPROOF NEGATIVE VAULT IN LASKY STUDIOS

In connection with the new studios the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company contemplates erecting shortly in the East, there will be built a fireproof, explosion-proof negative vault.

The vault structure will be composed of small separate vaults, each negative being in a distinct enclosure, which will have an outlet to the open air. A cooling plant will keep the air at fifty degrees Fahrenheit.

The individual vaults will be so constructed that if one catches fire, the damage will be confined to that room. This is made possible by the means of outlets to carry off gases and combustible air. The plans for the negative vault, worked out by Charles De Sota and Oscar Apiel, when submitted by M. F. Morgan, the prominent insurance man, were accepted as a practically perfect receptacle for combustibles.

"THE MAGIC NOTE" TAKES WELL

"The Magic Note," released by the Ambrosio American Company recently, has proved a drawing card, and its attractiveness and photography characterizes it as one of the best features marketed by that concern within the past four months. Some good territory is still open. The quality of Ambrosio films is well exemplified in "The Magic Note."

“Blind” Censor Law in Louisiana Legislature

No Specific Mention of Censorship in It and Picture Men Are Mystified—Kill Oppressive License Measure in House.

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Baton Rouge, La., June 17.

In the flood of bills that come with every session of the legislature there are two measures which affect the motion picture business in this state.

When the Friedrichs license bill was referred to the house, it was found that it carried a "joker" imposing a great increase in the license tax of motion picture houses. Its author had stated that the bill was framed only to bar itinerant peddlers, etc., and when the "joker" was called to the attention of the house the bill was promptly referred back to the committee with instruction to strike out all reference to picture houses and redraft the measure.

Senator Albin Provosty, representing Pointe Coupee, one of the country parishes, has a bill giving cities and towns authority to censor motion picture shows. This bill carries no board of censorship, leaving the control entirely in the hands of the municipalities.

Inasmuch as the general laws of the state give the cities and parishes full authority to regulate all things affecting public morals, it is difficult to see what is the object of this measure.

Motion picture men object only to certain statements made by Senator Provosty in the senate to the effect that he saw shameful pictures exhibited in New Orleans and other cities. So far as the record shows, there has not been a complaint made against any picture exhibited in the state by a regularly established motion picture house.

Competition Waxes Hot in Trenton

Leading Theatres of New Jersey Capital Engaged in Fierce Feature War—Report Philadelphia Exchange Has Lease on One House.

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Trenton, N. J., June 18, 1914.

The theatrical war here has developed into a motion picture fight. Taylor Opera House, one of the largest theatres in the city, situated on South Broad street, near State, has this week featured pictures, placing vaudeville second in its publicity. Two and three reel features are boosted.

Broad Street Theatre, also on South Broad street, has decided to continue throughout the summer. Harry Haven, owner of the house, has instructed John Mennix, the manager, to continue with pictures, and it is rumored that a Philadelphia film exchange has secured the option of a five year lease on the house.

The plan to put the house on a three-day picture and three-day burlesque basis has been abandoned.

Notwithstanding the heated season and that many managers are complaining of small houses, the State Street Theatre, on East State street, opposite the postoffice, continues to crowd them in. Manager Herman Wahn appears to be endowed with the ability of securing just what the people want in films.

Try Big Films in Illinois Capital

Full Houses at the Majestic—Manager Reardon Getting Business With Big Advertising Campaign.

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Springfield, Ill., June 17.

Big feature films, the seven, eight and nine reel kind, are being given their first try-out before Springfield motion picture devotees and they are winning out. Probably no city in Illinois outside of Chicago has a larger motion picture following than Springfield, for more than a dozen houses, running three, four and five reel shows, are all doing good business.

When the vaudeville season at the Majestic Theatre closed a few weeks ago, Manager George Reardon concluded to try-out feature films. He opened the first week with "The Drug Terror," the next with "The Spoilers," following with "The Christian" and Annette Kellermann in "Neptune's Daughter."

He went after the business with big newspaper advertising, supplying news cuts and plenty of reading notices. It got him the business. Despite the intense heat the city has suffered from during the past few weeks, he has been playing to paying houses.

Reardon is charging twenty-five cents for adults. The Majestic will go back to vaudeville in the fall, and whether some other live manager will go in for the big feature film business after that is a matter of speculation.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

Motion Pictures Will Supplement Courses in New Orleans Public Schools—Asylum Superintendent Confident He Can Restore Sanity By Use of Motion Pictures—First Experiments Encouraging—Special Series of Films for Minneapolis Children

THE New Orleans public schools expect to employ motion pictures especially in the higher branches, as a regular part of the course of study next year, if the necessary appropriations are forthcoming. Already some experiments have been made and these are said to have proven so satisfactory that it is desired to illustrate various industrial, natural history and other subjects with actual views such as can be secured only through the films.

Joseph M. Gwynn, superintendent of schools, is in favor of the course and he is said to have the unanimous support of the board.

So far has this general policy been anticipated that the latest of the new buildings, the Warren Easton High School, which cost $300,000, has been equipped with a motion picture room opening into the assembly hall which guarantees against fire from any possible explosion of the films. This same idea in architecture will be followed in all of the new buildings to be erected.

Fertile Field for Educations

This section of the country is particularly adapted to the use of films in educational study on account of peculiar geographical and climatic conditions. For instance, it is almost impossible for a child that has been raised in this section to imagine what a mountain is, having been reared where there is seldom a slope of more than a few feet in a mile, and such a thing as snow is almost beyond the imagination.

It is proposed to conduct auxiliary courses in geography, natural history, physics and various mechanical branches and to bring the wonders of geology, animal life and the industrial world directly before the pupils.

Special Series for Children

Realizing the possibilities of motion pictures for educational and moral uplift which has rightly conducted, members of the Parents and Teachers Association of the Fulton and Lake Harriet schools, Minneapolis, Minn., have arranged a series of special picture shows at the Lake Harriet theatre. The management of the theatre co-operates with the association.

The pictures are especially selected to interest the children. The old time fairy stories and legends have been portrayed in beautiful style by the film companies and the women have found that there is no shortage in the supply of good films for the little tots.

Popular prices are charged and the picture theatre has been filled at each of the performances. The women are allowed to arrange the program and they urge the parents of the district to allow their children to attend. There are two performances each Wednesday afternoon. The innovation is to be tried by other theatres.

Educationalists in Canada

The remarkable strides being made in western Canada by motion pictures as educational medium is shown by the recent leasing of the Winnipeg Theatre for one month by the Bible Society, who have paid $2,000 for the lease, in order that the series of pictures showing the "Creation" may be presented. No admission fee is charged and no collection will be taken up. The entire performance will be absolutely free.

Surely this is a great admission of the value of motion pictures as an educationalistic medium. The pictures will be shown in two or three weeks and all the expenses will be borne by the Bible Society.

Another example of the value of motion pictures and the manner in which their value is appreciated is shown also in the recent purchase of 1,000 seats in Winnipeg's leading theatre, the Walker, by the Manitoba "Free Press," the largest paper in Western Canada, solely in order that the Boy Scouts, the Highland Cadets, Strathcona Cadets and school cadets might learn the lessons of Commander Scott's great sacrifice for his country and for science.

The lads were all given the tickets of admission free and the full number took advantage of the opportunity of learning the lesson of loyalty and courage. With two such sponsors, surely the motion picture film of this type is coming into its own.

Restore Sanity by Pictures

Motion pictures are being utilized at the state hospital for the insane at Massillon, O., as an aid in the restoration of lost human minds. The idea for such utilization was conceived by Dr. H. C. Eyman, superintendent of the hospital, and was recently put in operation.

Several motion picture machines were purchased and to begin with, exhibitions were given to the least afflicted patients. A lively interest in the pictures was aroused among most of these patients. This was taken as a good sign.

According to Dr. Eyman, the commonest form of insanity is where a mind becomes fixed on some one subject or hallucination and refuses to take interest in any other thing. If a mind can be aroused from its fixity the afflicted one is on the road to recovery.

Some of the simplest comedy pictures were chosen for the first experiments. Later, Dr. Eyman showed several educational and travel pictures. In course of time some of the patients began to ask questions about the pictures.

Physician is Convinced

"The few experiments I have made have convinced me," said Dr. Eyman, "that motion pictures are going to prove a great aid in the restoration of lost human minds. With pictures I have broken through the crusts of some minds here under my care which heretofore have been impregnable.

With a diseased mind once opened it is possible to advance, by gradual process, certain bits of information which will eventually set the mind in operation and restore its functions."

Dr. Eyman is now working on the preparation of a series of films that will be calculated to gradually break into a closed mind and set into activity the deadened brain cells. When the scenarios are completed the pictures will be taken in and about this city. Some few will be taken about Minneapolis and others at Massillon. Dr. Eyman's experiments are being followed with interest by alienists all over the country.

Study Animal Life in Films

Wild animal life of the northern Minnesota woods is to be brought to the students of the University of Minnesota and the motion picture machine is to be the medium. Charles L. Johnson, instructor in comparative anatomy of the vertebrates, will go to the north woods during the coming summer vacation season and will take along a motion picture machine.

Mr. Johnson plans to go into the heart of the animal jungles and there take motion pictures of the moose, deer, bear, wolf, fox and smaller wild animals that abound there. The pictures when developed will be used for instruction in classes.

Mr. Johnson has already tried out the machine and says he has found it entirely practicable.
BOOM MONTANA BY FILMS
Special to The Motion Picture News.
Helena, Mont., June 17.
To advertise the resources of this state in other sections of the country, Frank Hazelbaker, secretary of the Montana Exposition Commission announces that thousands of feet of motion pictures will be taken throughout Montana during the summer. The pictures will not only be shown at all the motion picture houses in Montana, but will be sent to San Francisco, Mr. Hazelbaker said, to form the main exhibit of Montana at the 1915 exposition.
The plan is to have motion pictures taken of the industries, the cities, the educational institutions, the man, streets of the cities and places of scenic beauty within the state. A competent instructor will accompany the pictures from place to place. Following the exhibition of the films at the San Francisco exposition the pictures will be shown in the larger cities of the country. It is expected to have 15,000 feet of film taken.

ANDREW MACK IN MOTION PICTURES
Andrew Mack, the leading interpreter of Irish roles on the speaking stage, will soon be seen in motion pictures through the medium of his famous success, "The Ragged Earl," which is now being produced as a feature by Popular Plays and Players, Inc., of 1600 Broadway, New York City.

Edison All-Star Skit at Exposition

TRUE to their promise, the Edison players put across a comedy play on the studio stage at the Exposition on Friday night, June 12. The picture is chiefly notable because of the amount of talent used.

Although other companies made use of the studio during the course of the week, none had as many well-known performers on the stage at the same time as the company from the Brons.
The leads of the various series now being made by this company were utilized in the costume of the characters they impersonate in the regular releases.

Thus Mary Fuller appeared as Dolly of the Dailies; Little Andy Clark, naturally; Marc McDermott as The Man Who Disappeared; William Wadsworth as Wood B. Wedd; Barry O'Moore as Octavius, etc.

As each scene was photographed it was rushed to a near-by plant, where it was developed, then shown in a completed condition in one of the theatres on floor of the Grand Central Palace, New York City.

Westerns Find Frost in Montana
No More "Wild and Woolly" Scenes for the Heart of Frontier Tradition—Spectacular Masterpieces in Greater Demand Than Indian and Cowboy Films.

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Butte, Mont., June 17.
If Montana is changing with the rapid incursion of settlers and the development of its vast resources, the change in popular taste for motion pictures has been no less great. The cowboy and the Wild West stories have lost their punch. The Indian howls no more in the blood and thunder film; war drama has lost charm.

Silly sentimentality and melodrama have been given a back seat, and Montana wants and Montana will have nothing but the very best in great, spectacular drama, masterpieces of recognized merit and sterling, classic, clean-cut shows.

He who provides must know, and J. S. Woody, branch manager of the General Film Company, of this city, is authority for the statement that Montana has changed mightily and rapidly in its picture taste.

"If you want to know what takes best in Montana to-day," said Mr. Woody, in his office in the new Montana Electric Building, "I will tell you. Good two and three reel comedies are the rage. They are making the hits here and the demand is greater than the supply. But they must be clean cut. There is no room for the offensive film.

"And get this. The theatre manager who knows how to place an attractive lobby display draws the crowds. But woe to the man who does not come through with the goods after an elaborate display, for Montana audiences are critical."

"Montana will advertise its picture houses more extensively in the future.

Uplifting a Park with Photoplays

BY F. D. VANOVER

When Oldham Took Hold of Woodland Park, Louisville, It Was a Dismal Proposition, with a Bad Reputation and a "Past"—Now It Is a Flourishing and Popular Center of Neighborhood Life, and an Amusement Center with a Future

A L F R E D V. O L D H A M, politician, race horse expert and, last but not least, park commissionaire and theatre owner, deserves a great deal of credit for putting new life into a rundown amusement park by the aid of motion pictures.

Lyon Garden, a little heard of, tiny park occupying one block of ground comparatively close to the heart of the city, had been for forty years or more the mecca of summer picnic parties in and around Louisville, Ky.

The park was in a sad state of dilapidation, until Mr. Oldham saw the place for an air-dome for motion pictures.

"I decided to start last February," he said recently, "and make improvements so that motion pictures might be shown there during the summer. At the first hasty calculation I figured that $1,500 to $1,800 would put the grounds in first-class shape."

"And right there was where I got my first jolt. Before the gates were ready to open I had tapped my bankroll for $7,000, and was beginning to have serious misgivings as to the wisdom of the undertaking.

"As the time approached for the opening another problem confronted me. The place had sunk deeply in public estimation and with all that had been spent to improve the grounds the venture might be a failure. Yielding to the advice of some of the wiser heads in the amusement game I immediately renamed the spot Woodland Park."

"When the gates were finally thrown open, about the middle of June, new and attractive entrances, a large stage and air-dome, and a first-class dancing pavilion and other buildings had been constructed. Granitoid walks were laid throughout the grounds and a handsome new fence surrounded the entire park."

"I WILL never forget that opening day. To the last moment I feared that the odium left upon the place by previous owners would stick, and that, despite all efforts to make the park a really desirable place, the people would not come without long and persistent urging."

"Here was the redeeming feature: The park is situated in a thickly populated neighborhood which has grown up within the last few years. The deep shade cast by the stately maples covering the grounds was too alluring to be resisted, and they came."

"Before the opening I had added about $2,000 to my expenditures for further improvements and advertising. The newspapers were extensively used and the surrounding neighborhood was thoroughly circularized. These circulars explained fully just what Woodland would offer as an amusement resort."

"Particular stress was laid upon the fact that the new park and air-dome was to be first-class in every way, that no rowdism within the grounds would be tolerated, and that it would be a safe place which women and children might visit at any time in search of entertainment."

"From first to last the patronage was satisfactory and at the end of an eleven-week season the investment had netted a profit of twenty-five per cent, in face of the fact that there were many motion picture theaters close by on every side. On one night there were 1,500 paid admissions."

"The people in the neighborhood of the park in every way possible showed that they were pleased with the management of Woodland Park, and many compliments were received on the perfect order maintained and the absence of objectionable features in the entertainment."

"No one was ever ejected from the grounds and, although a policeman was kept constantly on duty, his services were never required."

"A LONG with the working man and his family many of his more fortunate neighbors acquired the habit of coming to Woodland to while away the time on a summer's night. It soon was no uncommon sight to see dozens of automobiles parked in the street before the entrance while their owners saw the pictures and afterward 'tripped the light fantastic' in the dance hall."

"When I started last year my plans necessarily were immature and considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the pictures I desired. Since that time, however, arrangements have been made with one of the best-known producers for the most desirable films obtainable."

"Two feature pictures each week in addition to the regular run, are employed this season at the Woodland in order to make a strong appeal to the patrons of the park. By dispensing with the vaudeville turns, such as were used last year, the added expense is slight."

"VAUDEVILLE: bah!" he said, shrugging his broad shoulders. "Although enough was paid for these alleged artists last season to assure satisfactory performances, it has been my experience that the quality of entertainment obtainable in the majority of cases was far from satisfactory."

"I figured on spending from $75 to $100 a week for good vaudeville turns, but some of the acts were so devoid of merit that I was forced to cancel them."

"So, now, instead of poor vaudeville the patrons of Woodland are treated this year to high-class feature films, and from results already have shown the pictures are more welcome. The program is changed three times a week, and the policy of 'no intoxicating drinks' is maintained as in the past. In addition, a gallery displaying portraits of all the prominent motion picture actors and actresses, together with scenes from the plays that are to be shown during the week, are displayed."

"Another plan I am carrying out is to enlist the interest of all the lodges and societies of the city in Woodland as a picnic resort for their annual outings, and the various organizations have been circularized to this effect."

"T HE park property stood idle for many years. The grounds are no larger now than then, the trees cast no greater shadow nor give more cooling shade in summer, yet motion pictures have transformed it from a neglected spot into one of pleasure and enjoyment. I have always believed in the power of pictures to please, and dared to take a chance. Woodland speaks eloquently as to the result."

"It may be fitting to close this review of Woodland's transformation by remarking that the park successfully opened its second season under Mr. Oldham's management on Saturday, May 23, with every promise of a flourishing summer before it."

A violinist, pianist, cornetist and drummer furnish the music for the picture-dramas—all members of the Walnut Street Theatre orchestra. Woodland deals exclusively in Universal pictures. "A Bolted Door," with J. Warren Kerrigan, was the opening attraction.
NEVILLS BUYS TWO MORE TEXAS THEATRES

Dallas, Tex., June 17.

William Nevills, who owns more photoplay theatres than any other man in Texas, has added two more houses to his list, the Empress and Princess theatres, which had been closed by the Pierce interests, of New Orleans. It is understood that the purchase price was $5,000 for both places. The shows are located on Elm street, in the heart of the business district, but attendance has dropped since Manager Hoffman relinquished the first-run General service. Second-run pictures now are being shown.

This purchase makes Nevills the owner of seven shows in Dallas. They are: The Washington, Palace, Candy, Nickleodeon, Empress, Princess, and the new lighted art-house. The Art-Huntington is the only first-run house, the others using features and other available material.

Seven years ago Nevills started his career in the show business with practically nothing. To-day he is recognized as one of the most practical, and successful exhibitors in the southwest. He says he has succeeded by giving the people what they want.

GOOD SUMMER BUSINESS IN CAPITAL

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.
Washington, D. C., June 17.

Among the newly built theatres is the American in the residential section of Washington. The building is equipped with a very high ceiling, ample ventilation from side openings, broad aisles and roomy seats. The lighting system is excellent, and according to the season the cooling and heating system are equally as good. The facade of the building is very attractive. A varied program with courteous ushers at once established a large patronage for the American.

Another comparatively new photoplay house is the Savoy, in the northwest residential section of the city. This theatre is commodiously built, with good ventilation. The interior decorations are attractive. With the excellent program offered, accompanied by good music, the Savoy has met public approval. An air-conditioned with this theatre is furnishing a cool diversion during the warm weather.

AMERICAN FILMS POPULAR

The American Film Manufacturing Company's policy of observing the same attention to detail in one-reel subjects as is usually given to features, has won for them an enviable reputation. There is a large demand for "Flying A" and "Trickery" subjects, single as well as multiple releases.

Hackett Makes More Money In Films

Expected Falling Off in Regular Dramatic Receipts—Intends to Take Motion Pictures of Dress Rehearsals to Improve Plays

JAMES K. HACKETT, now playing in Paris in the film production of "Monsieur Beaucaria," which is being made by the Famous Players Company under the direction of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, became an enthusiastic advocate of motion pictures more than a year ago, when he acted in the same firm's production of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

In a recent interview in a French newspaper, "The Courier," Mr. Hackett gave some of his reasons for acting before the camera.

"When I posed for the Famous Players Company in 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' I expected that my dramatic receipts would fall off in the succeeding year, because the public would be reluctant to pay legitimate prices when able to see plays like 'The Prisoner of Zenda' for less money in the motion picture houses. To my amazement, I find that my business the last twelve months has been the best in many seasons, despite the fact that the past theatrical year was the worst for some years.

"Naturally, I have become enthusiastic over film drama, and have arranged to act for the Famous Players Company. In 'Monsieur Beaucaria,' I expect to go on to have at least one big feature a year for the company, and perhaps more. The player who neglects an opportunity to appear on the screen is letting a valuable opportunity slip by.

The motion picture has done a great deal to raise the standard of legitimate productions. On my return to the United States I am going to introduce a new idea in theatrical attractions, which ought to revolutionize rehearsals and almost eliminate failure. A film impression of new plays will be made at dress rehearsals, enabling the stage manager to discover defects. Every detail will be reproduced with pitiless sharpness, and faults of acting and "business" can be corrected intelligently. This system will aid managers in gaining the proper perspective of productions and the weighing of dramatic values."

$150,000 Film Company Under Way

A new important addition to the ranks of motion picture manufacturers is that of the Bon Ray Film Company, with a fully paid up capitalization of $150,000. The plant of the Consumers Brewing Company, at Woodside, L. I., has been purchased and the entire fifty thousand square feet of factory space will be devoted to film printing. A capacity of eighty thousand feet a day is afforded. On the twenty acres adjoining the factory studios are being erected and the work of making pictures will be begun very shortly.

The enterprise is the conception of Mr. F. E. Halliday, who has been employed by the Gaumont Company for the past four years in various capacities. Mr. Halliday has devoted his energies particularly to the technical and business ends of the industry. For the past year, he has edited the Mutual "Weekly." Mr. Halliday has executive charge of the new concern.

This is the first instance where a brewing plant has been utilized for picture production.

Such a factory, with its cool rooms, clean air and pure water, is an ideal one for the purpose. Definite plans of the Bon Ray Film Company have not been announced as yet. The production policy of the company, however, will be made in an announcement to the public within a comparatively short time.

Woman Censor Rules Dallas

Dallas, Tex., June 17.

The matter of censorship has reached an acute angle, according to local exhibitors who are opposed to the methods employed.

Although a board of censors was named more than a year ago, only one of the members is now active. She is Mrs. Reed Finley, who has authority to prevent the exhibition of any film. Her power is supreme.

The exhibitors believe that the entire censor board should rule on all pictures of a questionable character.

Mrs. Finley is the only one of the censors who receives a salary, however, and her duties are not confined to the motion picture theatres. She must visit the dance halls and legitimate houses.

"Chicago may howl about its censorship," an exhibitor said, "but pity us fellows in Dallas. We are forced to abide by the ruling of one lone woman. The entire censor board should be present to see the presentation of sensational films, and not just one-third of it."

Vol. IX June 27, 1914 No. 25

One Strong Organization Needed

At the New York Convention a committee of seven prominent exhibitors was appointed to attend the Dayton Convention and suggest an amalgamation of the two exhibitor organizations—The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America and the International Motion Picture Association.

If nothing more than this one act had been consummated at New York, the convention there would have been well worth while.

It now remains for the exhibitors assembled at Dayton to receive these gentlemen in the same open-minded serious, progressive spirit with which they were appointed.

These seven exhibitors are well representative in every way of the exhibitor body of this country. They speak for the Pacific Coast, the Middle West and for the East. They are experienced, broad-gauge, progressive exhibitors. They have in mind the good of the entire body of which they are a part. What they will have to say will be well worth listening to.

They come directly from a convention that was dominated by a spirit worthy of the utmost commendation. It may not have been a perfect convention, but no one will dispute its excellent intention and courage. A real and determined effort was made to conduct a non-political and businesslike meeting in the practical interests of the exhibitor and for the betterment of the entire industry.

The time for the amalgamation of the two organizations has come. There was never a reason for their disassociation except the selfish or short-sighted interests of a few. There will be nothing now to continue the split except the selfish or short-sighted interests of a few.

This is the big, the vital opportunity of the Dayton Convention. Let the delegates already appointed go to Dayton with a full sense of their responsibility. That responsibility is not one of political instructions. It is rather a responsibility of safeguarding the welfare of the exhibiting business. Politics are of minor consideration, or rather no consideration at all.

Let the state conventions which precede the Dayton Convention set a good example by ignoring politics and sending their delegates uninstructed. Let them go with a free mind and free voice. Give them a chance to look the ground over before they act. In this way they will act in the interests of the state organizations which send them and not for the sake of a political slate.

No politics—one organization! That is the cry of the hour. That is what the exhibitors of the whole country ask for and deserve.

Advertise Wisely, But Not Too Well

A THEATRE manager, a few weeks ago, was racking his brains for some unusual method of advertising the attraction then playing his house. At length he hit upon the plan of having a number of "fake" telegrams printed and sending them broadcast to possible patrons, as regular telegrams are sent.

The scheme worked. It did all the manager had intended.

But the ultimate effect was to destroy the impression he meant to create, because everyone who received one of the "phony" telegrams was angry at the manager.

There is a moral in this for all live-wire exhibitors.

Be careful how you advertise. In making people aware of the attractions you have to offer them at your theatre, be sure you do it in a pleasant and agreeable manner.

The use of a "fake" telegram is an unfair means of gaining a man's attention.

If your advertisement doesn't bring you the man's patronage at once, at least you can obtain his good will.

Such a method forfeits both.

You don't have to set fire to your theatre to draw a crowd. If you can't get one any other way, go out of business.

You don't need to explode a stick of dynamite on every doorstep to announce your attractions.

Advertise wisely, but not too well.

Helping the Small Exhibitor

Editor, The Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—Your New York readers will undoubtedly be interested in the following news item. As counsel for the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, New York City Local No. 1, I appeared before the license commissioner at his office on June 5.

Sometime ago I took up with Mayor Mitchell the fact that the motion picture ordinance, when passed, was a compromise because certain interests did all they could to block a fair ordinance for the picture exhibitors of the city, and that the provision apparently prohibiting standees was a gross injustice to the small exhibitors who had invested their money relying on the existing law and that the activity of the public departments in prohibiting standees, made it impossible to operate these small places for the reason that such a theatre, when completely filled, has taken in less than fifteen dollars.

When the place gets to be about three-quarters full, the exhibitor fears to permit other persons to enter, for while the usher is seeking a seat for a patron, he may be charged with having standees. This is equally true where a number of people come in who want to sit together and the usher may spend a few moments to try to find seats for them, or where a manager, desiring to promote the comfort of his patrons, asks newcomers to wait until a picture is completely run, so as not to interfere with the pleasure of those seated.

It was pointed out that the hazard is not of fire but a panic hazard and that ten, fifteen or even twenty per cent of the seating capacity of a small house would in no way impair the safety of the audience where there is adequate space behind seats and adequate exit space.

This would enable a man running a small house to permit persons to enter his theatre so that seats could be found for them as they are going in and out constantly, instead of having the exhibitor afraid to permit them to enter his door, for fear of paying a penalty amounting to sixty-three dollars, of being convicted criminally and also having his license taken away.

The law as it now stands does a great deal of harm and accomplishes absolutely no good. It is unnecessary and has ruined many exhibitors. No less than thirty-two houses were closed in the Bronx for this reason, within a short time past.

It is not because there is not sufficient business but because the severe view taken by the authorities make it impossible to take in enough money to pay operating expenses, bearing in mind that the bulk of the business is done between eight and nine o'clock in the evening.

The exhibitors are as anxious to promote the safety of patrons as any one.

They have no desire to have standees that will prejudice the safety of their audiences, but it is persecution to deprive them of a small number of standees, and the matter should be regulated according to the seating capacity, space behind seats, aisle space and exit space and studied by experts so as to properly protect the public.

These views were presented by me to the mayor a short time ago and he very promptly took the matter up and referred it to the license commissioner who also promptly arranged for an audience. The committee were delighted with the reception given them by the new commissioner, Mr. Hill, who is very courteous and attentive, and he seemed to be very fair, and we hope for justice at his hands.

He stated he wanted to investigate the matter prior to the approaching election, and the mayor in the near future. A number of additional matters were developed in the conversation I had with Deputy Commissioner Rosenthal, who especially has charge of motion pictures. A great many exhibitors have complained bitterly that when they wanted to have their license renewed they were compelled to close down their place pending expensive alterations, so that they have lost a good will that took years to build up.

Commissioner Rosenthal assured me that if any exhibitor wants to find out his place is in condition that his license may be renewed, he may request an inspection without waiting for the license to expire so that whatever must be done will be outlined to him and thus the alterations may be made and the exhibitor will not have to have his place closed pending the issuance of a new license.

This will also interest exhibitors buying pictures. It will still in that way avoid the necessity of having their places closed immediately after buying them. No doubt the exhibitors of the city will be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity. Further action is to be taken shortly by our association relative to standees. We hope that this condition, which has driven many men out of business and may drive more out, will soon be greatly modified.

Very truly yours,
Counselor Fowler, 233 Broadway, New York City.

PICTURES AND THE CHURCHES

Editor, The Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—I received your acknowledgment of the receipt of my order for the Motion Picture News, will say that I have been purchasing from their yearly for six months, and look forward for each number. The News is the one for me. It is certainly a live wire among the motion picture publications.

It pleases me to see the churches come in the installation of motion pictures in connection with their services. I think a good deal of benefit can be derived from the use of the motion pictures, before an audience of church people. We, in the motion picture business, all know we have had some very good hard work to convince some of the staunchest church members the good that can come from the motion picture screen.

Now, I hope the time will come when these people will be educated from the screens in their own church to the value of the motion pictures, and the good lessons that can be brought through them. I have had people here tell me that they object to their children attending the motion pictures because they believed it poisoned the minds of the little ones.

I really believe that if the motion picture is brought into the church it will not only be the means of educating the church people to the value of the motion picture, but it will have a tendency to make them patrons of the motion picture theatres.

Respectfully yours,
W. O. Fowler,

The Bellevue, a Motion Picture Theatre

We take pleasure in devoting the space of the Architecture and Construction Department of this issue to illustrating and describing the Bellevue Theatre, of Newark, N. J., the work of Architect Nathan Myers, exemplifying as it does particularly interesting points of design construction, equipment, etc.

John C. Eisele, of Eisele & King, bankers and brokers, owned the property upon which were "tax payers" in the form of a series of stores and shops. The major part of this valuable land, a large yard, was empty, non-productive.

At the suggestion of Mr. Myers, one store about eighteen feet wide, at the uppermost section of the property, was demolished and its space used in providing a vestibule, lobby, entrance corridor, ticket office, and men's and women's rest rooms.

This made a costly entrance wing, but time has fully justified the expense. Almost two hundred people might wait in these entrances in comfort for the change of the show. This occurs almost every night, and especially in uncertain weather it is a drawing card against competing houses.

The auditorium is about thirty-six feet by ninety feet in dimension, and seats almost six hundred. The seats, finished in birch veneer, are supplied with foot rests, hat guards and hat racks. The auditorium and all the public parts of the entrance wing are handsomely decorated in relief plaster ornaments and ran plaster work. The house was opened in mid-season and no time was taken to decorate it. This will be done this summer with a color scheme of steel grey, silver and cream.

There is a stage twelve feet deep, with a proscenium arch of twenty by eighteen feet. The dressing rooms and heating plant are located in a separate wing.

The large expense of the fire-proof stage, dressing rooms, sprinkler system and stage paraphernalia justified itself last summer. The house opened in the early spring and at once prospered, to the harm of all the smaller houses nearby, some of which all but closed their doors. When summer came the receipts of this house fell off to such an extent that it became imperative for the lessees to make some move to warrant keeping the place open.

Small time vaudeville was installed. Four numbers were provided, and instantly the attendance grew so that in a short time capacity houses were played to for the remainder of the season. In the fall the house again went into straight pictures, for then it did not need the additional drawing power.

The stage has a steel gridiron and a modern rigging equipment. There is a full complement of fireproofed scenery, and an asbestos proscenium curtain.

This house has installed the largest size one-piece mirror screen ever built. It measures eighteen feet wide and thirteen feet high. After much anxiety it was finally safely installed. In order to use the stage for vaudeville, it became necessary to raise and lower the screen at will. This has been accomplished by using a geared hand hoist with six steel cables, three to the screen and three to the counterweights. This screen is so delicately adjusted, it responds to the slightest touch of the hand, though weighing over a ton.

The operator's booth is located at the end of the auditorium, with its side in direct view of the entrance wing. As the structure is built right in the auditorium and stands out prominently, it has been treated as part of the decorative scheme, as shown in one of the plans. A well-known producer visited this house, and was standing below the booth. For a moment he was perplexed to know where the machines were located.

!Ground Plan of the Bellevue Theatre, Newark, N. J.
The theatre is absolutely fireproof in its construction, and with its many exits leading to two different objective points, gives to the neighborhood, together with the high-class pictures shown, the equipment, etc., all that can be desired.

DALLAS EXHIBITOR MAKES PLACE WITH UNION

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Dallas, Tex., June 17.

Another exhibitor has joined the ranks of the union operators, making a total of nine houses listed in the struggle between organized labor and the photoplayhouses of this city. The Strand Theatre, owned by P. G. Cameron, one of the pioneer amusement men of the city, now flashes the union card on the screen.

"Two years ago the show men were in difficulty with the Sunday law," Cameron said, "the people wanted some harmless amusement. At that time the motion picture proprietors believed they could fill a want, and they invested heavily in these shows, tied themselves up with leases at a high rate on rental. Then it was that the strong arm of the law stepped in and the city authorities closed up the shows.

"It was organized labor," Cameron continued, "that came to the rescue. Organized labor, through its representatives, drafted the ordinance and this was indorsed by the labor unions and passed at a referendum city election. I believe they are due something for this effort in behalf of picture shows. It saved the show business." Cameron attempted to persuade the other exhibitors to see his argument, but failed.

"GREYHOUND" FOR STRAND

The Noted Plays Film Exchange, of 1652 Broadway, New York City, has purchased from the Life Photo Film Corporation, the exclusive rights for the state of New York on their five-reel feature release "The Greyhound." S. L. Rothapel, the manager of the Strand Theatre, New York, has booked the production for one week, commencing June 21. The state rights of this subject are fast being disposed of by the Life Photo Film Corporation, who are also progressing rapidly in the completion of their next five-reel feature release, "Northern Lights." Howard Tobias, the studio manager of the company, returned from Washington, and has completed arrangements for the use of government troops and Indians on reservations in Wyoming and Montana.

Rush Lasky Feature for Dayton Showing

"ARREST THAT MAN"

Max Figman and Lolita Robertson in a scene from "The Man on the Box" (Lasky Feature)

N the next release of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company two legitimate stars participate. Max Figman and his talented wife, Lolita Robertson, are now appearing in their first motion-picture effort, "The Man on the Box," in which Mr. Figman made such signal success a few years ago.

Max Figman first came into prominence as an actor twelve years ago, but was not starred until he made his appearance in the play in which he is now being pictured. During the season of 1912, Figman and Miss Robertson appeared together and last year they were both members of the all-star cast of "Fine Feathers" with Robert Edeson, Wilton Lackaye and Rose Coghlan. "The Man on the Box" is being made at the Lasky studio, Hollywood, California. Cecil B. De Mille and Oscar Apfel, aided by Wilfred Buckland, are directing. It will be released early in July, perhaps early enough to be shown at the Dayton, Ohio, convention of exhibitors.

Ramo Cruise in Paul Potter’s Honor

THE yacht “Scatti,” flying the colors of the Columbia Yacht Club of New York, and commanded by Captain Manson, left the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon, June 17, at 2:30 p.m., with a party representing numerous motion picture interests, foreign and domestic, for a sail up the Hudson River. After partaking of luncheon the party enjoyed being photographed in action by Eclair’s camera expert, Mr. Maier. The trip covered as far as Newburgh and return. Many beautiful scenes were taken of the Palisades and other interesting points along the river.

The party was practically given in honor of Mr. Paul M. Potter, the dramatist, who had just contracted with Ramo Films, Inc., to supply them with twenty-four of his best plays. The party consisted of the following: Paul M. Potter; Homer H. Snow, president of Ramo Films, Inc.; Mrs. Homer H. Snow; C. Lang Cobb, jr., manager, sales and publicity of Ramo Films, Inc.; Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, manager of the Leading Players Film Corporation; Miss Josephine Cobb; Claude Patin, secretary-general of Eclair Film Company; J. Alexander Leggett, of the Pathé Frères Company; W. A. Johnston; Count and Comtesse Paulino Gerli of Milan and New York, and Joseph Mechem, coffee broker, Water street, New York.

“LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY”
(Gold Seal—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

It is not at all surprising that in this number, coming as it does when Mexico is the main topic of the day, we should find Lucille still in Hugo’s power, encamped for a time at least in that country of continual political agitation. And their presence in Mexico causes it to be more agitated than ever.

At the opening of the first reel the party is still in the United States. Lucille is held prisoner in Lobeque’s apartments and a group of detectives are trying to bring about her escape, but owing to Loubeque’s skillful plans and his ever-active brain, the detectives are outwitted. A sleeping powder is administered to the unfortunate Lucille, and when she awakes she finds herself in Mexico, imprisoned on a most beautiful ranch.

LOBIQUE HOLDS THE SLEUTHS AT BAY

Thompson, the butler, which character is assumed by Ernest Shields, again appears in this, the tenth edition; he has been almost wholly in the background heretofore, except in the first chapter, and he has been sadly neglected and forgotten. Mr. Shields, as Thompson, makes an admirable assistant heavy. His actions and manners are even more of the villainous type than Mr. Ford’s, but Hugo is a villain who is not a villain solely for the sake of the villainy in it, but because he thinks he has to be, while Thompson is a true “bad man” of the worst sort.

Throughout these two reels he is continually spoiling on Lucille, watching for an opportune moment to steal the ever-prominent necklace. He fails utterly, as Lucille escapes from the ranch with a Mexican bandit (Wilbur Higby). The two are riding away when the bandit is shot by a guard. Lucille still gallops on and next week’s issue will show where she lands.

The scenes in the spacious gardens about the ranch house are beautiful, and some novel effects have been introduced. At one time none of the actors themselves appear before the camera, but their reflections may be seen in a crystal globe. The picture is clearly photographed and this installment, unlike the others, is almost complete in itself.

MISSISSIPPI CONVENTION

Greenwood, Miss., June 17.

The annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Mississippi opened at Greenwood, on Monday, June 15. This league is composed of a hustling body of men who have many thousands of dollars invested in the amusement field.

It is expected that the attendance will be large. Many problems peculiar to the film men’s business in this state will be brought up for discussion.

CANTON HOUSE CHANGES HANDS

Special to The Motion Picture News
Canton, June 17.

The Odeon Theatre, 225 Tuscarawas Street East, which for the past nine years has been the property of A. H. Abrams and E. E. Bender, has been sold to J. C. Steuer, of Barborton, O. The deal was made through the Tri-State Theatre Exchange, A. G. Neville, Manager. The purchase price was not announced.

The Odeon was one of the first motion-picture theatres in the city. For a while it showed several vaudeville acts, but of late has been devoted exclusively to pictures.

“THE LUNATICS”
(Leading Players Film Corporation—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

The best advice that can be given the exhibitor in regard to this picture is for him to see it himself before showing it at his house. In some places it might be well received, while in others it might be condemned. The latter verdict might stand for the women and young children, for in places it is undeniably harrowing and horrible. But those who love the extreme in sensational pictures will enjoy it, if they don’t mind seeing a man coming out of a room with his hands covered with blood, a crowd of lunatics standing over their doctor, the leader wielding a knife, and then later seeing the man dead and covered with blood.

It can’t be denied that the picture is an absorbing one. The scenes are so arranged and produced in an effective manner that the eyes are riveted on the screen from beginning to end. The photography is perfect and is tinted in pleasing tones at the right places.

The lunatics that appear in the picture resemble the genuine article to such an extent that they send shivers up and down the spine. They are always popping up in unexpected places and all will sympathize with the poor reporter who is trapped in the asylum. The “boss lunatic” is impersonated by M. Gouchet, and although not as uncanny as his mates, he is an ideal leader of the crazed band.

THE LUNATICS EXPERIMENT ON THE HEAD PHYSICIAN

The story is worth reitating; the lunatics, watching for an opportunity, seize all the guards and place them in a cell. Then they go to work on the head physician, performing various experiments with the aid of a knife; fortunately this one is their only victim. At the same time a reporter is told to go to the asylum and get a story of Dr. Gouchet’s system. He meets the chief lunatic, who starts to tell him of his system. He is about to illustrate on the reporter, when the guards come to the rescue and his life is saved.
"THE LION'S BRIDE"

(Revue Pictures—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This picture is novel in every respect, both in plot, the manner in which it is produced, and the characters that are introduced. Leading the cast of characters is Miss Emmy Destinn, the great operatic prima donna. Although the picture features Miss Destinn, she plays a small part, and really is in no way connected with the story. She is merely introduced as a novelty, and opera goers who happen to see the picture will appreciate it more than others.

Another opera star has been caught for an instant by the camera, but only for an instant—Enrico Caruso. He and Miss Destinn are seen parting from their friends on shipboard.

Miss Destinn sings "Mignon" in the lions' cage, which is a remarkable feat for an opera star to perform, even though the lions in this picture are very well bred, and almost bashful and retiring at times. But if these characteristics of the lions are apparent in the first part of the picture, one forgets them entirely when he sees them tearing the body of the unfortunate Mildred to pieces.

Although much of the three reels is taken up in introducing the novel events, the story is an absorbing one and of a kind not to be merely passed over. It will be appreciated by all, more by the older persons in the audiences than the extreme young, although these will find much enjoyment in watching the lions perform.

Mildred and Helen have lost their father, and are obliged to work to support themselves. They have a group of trained lions and with the assistance of a young man they give performances. Both the girls fall in love with their assistant and he chooses the younger. The older one, Mildred, despairing of life, enters the lions' den arrayed in bridal clothes and allows the beasts to kill her.

The picture is in no way sensational; the story and the novelty of the picture is what makes it, and in novelty it may be classed by itself. Another incident that will please the feminine part of the audience is that in which Helen views a number of gowns. Clearly photographed and well acted, and with such a noted star playing the outside lead, the picture will surely be a drawing card.

"HOUSE OF BONDAGE" SUIT FALLS THROUGH

Milwaukee, Wis., June 17

The threatened suit against the city and the Citizens Committee of the promoters of "The House of Bondage," which was refused a certificate by the Citizens Committee a few weeks ago, has evidently fallen through. After the committee's refusal, the promoters made preparations to exhibit without a certificate, but were stopped by Mayor Bading, who threatened to revoke the license of every theatre that exhibited the picture.

"THE SILENT WITNESS"

(Victor—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

No one can say that J. Warren Kerrigan is not an ideal Westerner, his large, powerful and athletic body stamp him as a true cowboy and his acting makes this picture. There are many admirers of Mr. Kerrigan and many more lovers of the Western melodrama, so without a doubt this picture will be well received wherever it is shown.

The Western melodramas are all marked by their riding, rapid action, etc., and the plots are all more or less akin. But this is a Western far above the average. The plot is old, that of the two rivals for the ranch owner's daughter, but the way in which it is worked out is most refreshing. "The Silent Witness" is a camera, with which Jack secures incriminating evidence against his villainous rival.

"THE ACTRESS' S REDEMPTION"

(Features Ideal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Any drama that is true to life has more appeal to all classes than the utterly impossible one, and this picture, which is full of possible and human situations, is of that variety. But this is not the only merit that stands out after one has seen the picture. It is well produced and the acting, especially that of Maria Jacobini, who is featured in the picture, is of a high class. M. Lombardi, who played the lead in "Pietro the Vassal," a recent release of this same firm, plays the father of the wayward son, and it seems a pity that he has such a small part, as his acting when he appears rivals that of the star. The other actors, whose names are not known, perform in a manner which well upholds the others.

The fancy dress ball which Charles and the actress are attending is a gorgeous spectacle. The spirit of revelry is apparent throughout this scene, and it comes at the right moment to relieve the tense scenes that have preceded it.

The scenes of the last reel in which Gossip, the usurer, is trying to obtain the papers giving the actress the right of the house, is a worthy one and when she finally succeeds in break-
The Perils of Pauline

If we could only take you round and have you talk to the exhibitors who have been running this great serial you would not hesitate a minute. You would book it as they did and see your box-office receipts increase, too. Pauline has proved to be the biggest money-pulling picture ever put out by any firm. It has created such a stir throughout the country both on account of the newspaper publicity and on account of the intrinsic value of the story, that it has been an enormous money-maker for the exhibitors showing it. Some of the theatres have been requested to issue reserve seat tickets for the days they show Pauline, so that the patrons could be sure in advance that they would get in to see it. There have been many disappointed people who have gone to the theatres and have found such a crowd waiting they could not get in. Do you need any better evidence that it will be a money-maker for you, too?

Pauline Pulls People—

Giants - White Sox World Tour

You have to hand it to Jack Gleason. The pictures he had taken by the Pathé camera man on the trip around the world are the most interesting travel pictures we have ever seen. Wonderful scenery, historical places and events, comical situations, thrilling adventures, interesting plays, notable men and perfect photography are all shown in such a way that your patrons will vote this picture the greatest they have ever seen. It is a fact that there has never before been an opportunity to get such a wonderful collection of events and place them before the public in one picture. Add to this the fact that every newspaper in the country has run column after column about the trip and you have a combination that is unbeatable. It is a foregone conclusion that this will prove the biggest money-puller you have ever had in your theatre. This is proved by the great number of telegraphic requests we have had for bookings. To get an early run you will have to hurry and place your order with one of the Eclectic branch exchanges or wire the head office direct.

Here is one of the most wonderful dramatic tragedies ever placed on the screen. Made for us by Pathé from a dramatization of the famous novel by Forrest Halsey and Robert H. Davis. The action is intense. The acting is superb. The story is entrancing. The tragic fall of the clerk and the final reckoning when he is faced with the proof of what danger and suffering his action has caused create a situation which calls for the very best artists to depict. These artists are some of the best known in the motion picture world and insure the quality of the picture.

The Lion's Bride
(3 Parts)

Did you ever feel the hair on your head slowly rise as you felt there was something going to happen, something which you had no power to avert and which would mean a terrible danger to the participants? Well here you have it. Madame Emmy Destinn, the great operatic Prima Donna, enters a cage containing fourteen lions and sings a selection from one of her songs. While she is singing one of the beasts springs on the piano and is within a few feet of the singer through the song. This is a thriller if there ever has been one.

A Big Feature
"LEAVES OF MEMORY"

Reviewed by Peter Milne

FROM the very first sub-title until the last scene has disappeared, this picture holds one with an absorbing interest, and when it is over one can hardly realize that he has seen four full reels. The first scene is one that everyone will be pleased with, for this aviation field has not been seen enough to cause the people to be familiar with it. After Jack Langdon has ascended in an aeroplane he descends via the parachute route, and when about one hundred feet from the earth the parachute collapses. Langdon is thrown into the water and severely injured. His fall is clearly shown and is a real thriller. This scene is the most sensational in the picture, but it is by no means the only one worthy of notice.

After his fall Langdon loses his mind and is confined in a lunatic asylum. The sight of the raving lunatics disporting themselves on the grounds of the asylum, although not a pleasant one, is realistic and borders at times on the humorous.

Langdon makes a daring escape from the asylum, after he himself is assured of his sanity. Louis Gaither, who takes this part, is an acrobat as well as an accomplished actor, as can readily be seen by his agility in his escape.

The double exposure work is remarkably well done. In the last reel several visions appear to Phillips; in one his servant melts into the man he killed. This one is exceptionally well executed. M. Dorival, who takes the part of Phillips, does a large amount of excellent acting when these visions appear before him. Leo Piron and M. Escoller are the other characters of importance. Midway through the picture there is an excellent café scene, in which Phillips is wasting his ill-gotten fortune. In fact, the whole picture abounds in fine scenes, which do not allow one's interest to falter once.

Few will be indifferent to the merits of the picture, for the story is of a kind that will always appeal to each and every audience. Langdon is perfecting a parachute, and needs more money to go on with the process. He asks his brother, who refuses him. He resolves to make an attempt anyway and is hurt. His brother relents and cares for him.

The brother's secret falls in love with his mistress and later shoots his master, fixing things so that the blame falls on Langdon. He marries the woman, and is living happily with her when the truth is learned. The shock of it kills him.

"THE MAN IN THE STREET"

Reviewed by Peter Milne

FOR this, like the many other novels that have been visualized for the screen, the same phrase may be employed, "It was good as a book, but better as a picture." In this case the whole truth is told in this line, not exaggerated in the least. Mary Imlay Taylor is the author of the book which bears the same name.

The drama is one of heart-interest and will appeal to any audience; the sympathy is aroused at the beginning for the poor playwright. His triumph in the finale is truly impressive and it gives one that satisfied feeling that all's well that ends well.

THE TRUE AUTHOR PRESENTS HIMSELF

The plot, that of a poor playwright being robbed of his play and then seeing it become a success, is one that has been handled in all manner of ways heretofore, but has never been worked out so well. The cast, too, adds importance to the production. Marc MacDermott, Duncan McRae and Elsie MacLeod enact the characters of most consequence. Mr. MacDermott already had a reputation, and so have the other two. Mr. McRae admirably takes off the "idle rich." Miss MacLeod is a charming leading lady.

The rehearsal scene is realistic and true to life, with the stage carpenters and electricians running here and there while the actors are trying to rehearse, and standing in front, giving orders to all at the same time, the self-important manager, a role that is assumed by Charles Ogle.
"THE MASTER CRACKSMAN"

(Progressive Motion Picture Corporation—Six Parts)

REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

This picture is undoubtedly one of the finest melodramas yet produced. It makes no pretense at being anything else, and it is due to this fact, if for no other, that the sale of the picture is assured. It is a good picture, a thoroughly worthy attempt, sufficiently good to do honor to any house in which it may be shown.

It is nothing like the Sherlock Holmes stories, nor does it resemble Arsene Lupin, Raffles or Craig Kennedy. It is a pleasing mixture of all, with an individuality all its own, principally supplied by Harry Carey, director and leading man.

The finale is thoroughly original and will remain in the minds of those that see it, even after many others. About the ending of the third reel we find ourselves wondering just what will happen to the happy-go-lucky crook? This thought continues right to the end, and then we really do not find out, for after making friends with his detective Nemesis we leave him.

Too much cannot be said for the work of Harry Carey in his part of Gentleman Joe, a notorious crook. He possesses a technique and skill which stood out prominently throughout. Rexford Bennett, in the part of the son, had some very difficult work to perform and did so in an unusually competent manner. Marjorie Bonner looked very pretty in a disagreeable role. Others in the cast were E. A. Locke, Fern Foster, Louis Morrell, Juliette Day, William H. Power, Herbert Russell, Hayward Mack, Roland De Castro, and Gregory Allen.

No melodrama is complete without at least one thrill and this picture has its full complement. Mr. Carey's leap from an automobile (and incidentally the car was apparently moving rapidly) into a tree, where he avoids the pursuing officers, was nervy enough for anyone. Another "stunt" of this intrepid crook is to jump into a moving automobile from another car in motion. Both of these require nerve and skill.

Peter Martin, the wealthy owner of the "Martin Diamond," lives with his daughter, Ruth; his son, Harold, and his nephew, Robert. The latter is in heavy debt and plans the theft of the jewel on the night it is to be presented to Ruth. Harold, who is somewhat wayward, is disposed of by his father, after one of his escapades. Captain McKae, of the police department, is engaged to watch the jewel on that night.

Gentleman Joe plans to steal the gem and goes to McKae's home, on hearing he is to be present, and overpowers him. Taking his invitation he impersonates the detective at the party. The stone is stolen by Robert and Joe is accused by McKae, who has escaped. Joe, however, by clever maneuvering, blinds the officer and leaps through the window. He succeeds in escaping after a long automobile chase.

Robert, in anger, kills his uncle. Harold is accused and thrown in jail. The murder was witnessed by Joe, who holds his peace for the time being. Harold is put through a strenuous third degree at the police station.

Joe, hearing that Harold is about to be executed, goes at once to Robert and accuses him. After coercion he forces the man to confess, and then gives him his choice between the electric chair and suicide. The villain chooses to kill himself. The confession is found and the detective also learns the part played by Joe, to whom he becomes reconciled.

PAUL McALLISTER WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS

"The Scales of Justice," with Paul McAllister in the leading part, will be presented by the Famous Players Film Company as its release for July 20. The plot centres around political intrigues, in which a young district attorney is made to decide between duty and love.

Mr. McAllister has won laurels in a series of metropolitan engagements with Mrs. Leslie Carter and Viola Allen. He also played the artist in "The Devil." A thrilling courtroom scene is a feature of the production.
Music and the Picture

Editor's Note.—This department is prepared to answer all questions from exhibitors relating to the use of music in connection with photoplays, and to suggest suitable music for current pictures. Correspondence will be welcomed.

Horse Sense and Musical Sense

By A. E. Aherm

I DROPPED into a show the other evening where there is a small orchestra. They were playing for one of Gaumont’s great masterpieces, “The Fall of Constantinople.” I was commenting on the boys, to myself, on the manner in which they were playing for this great picture. I thought, “These fellows are getting next to how to play for the pictures.”

The music was just suited to the action and very appropriate in regard to the time in which this story was supposed to have taken place.

As I say, they were doing fine. The climax of the picture was getting very close; they hurried the music for the beginning of the battle scenes and then all of a sudden, they stopped. I looked to see what was wrong, and noticed they had come to the end of the piece they were playing, as I chanced to know this particular composition. This happened just when they should have been playing presto and forte, to help out the action in the picture and drive its meaning home. But they stopped and left the audience all by themselves to help fight the enemy, as it were.

No reason for repeating or having another piece to go right on with. “No use, here’s where we rest, always do when we finish a piece of music,” they might have said.

Do you know what this crowd reminded me of? A mechanical orchestra when the current was off, or the usher had forgotten to wind up the machine.

Now I don’t insist that they spoiled the picture, but if they had been on the job as they should have been, the picture would have been fifty per cent more impressive, and the patrons on going out would have congratulated the manager on his good fortune in having secured such a fine picture for their entertainment.

This is another fault we find in picture musicians: they play the music just as it is written, regardless of what is taking place on the screen. When music is most needed, that is just about the time there isn’t any.

Instead of helping out the situation in the picture, they sometimes ruin a picture with one of these grandstand finishes that ends with a whollop on the bass drum and cymbals, to remind the people that they have come to the end.

Here was an exhibitor spending his hard-earned money for an orchestra that was supposed to lend distinction to the house, and entertain the patrons, but the patrons had to entertain themselves during this picture. Maybe some of them didn’t notice this, but if they were to see the same picture in another house where the orchestra does play the pictures they would be more enthusiastic about the bigness of the production.

WHENEVER we have a picture with lots of action and go in it, we should always keep the music going even if we have to play three or four pieces of music. Keep up the interest in the picture with the aid of the music. When the scenes quiet down or are “neutral,” then we can rest and get our next piece ready.

Don’t hold back the action in the picture by letting the music lag or stopping just because there happens to be a “ritard” written in the piece, or because the end looms in sight.

I have read a great many articles regarding this very same thing. Some musicians think they are spoiling a piece of music by not playing it the way it is written, instead of playing it to suit the picture.

A lot of them think they are employed to show their ability as musicians and how well they can execute some of the difficult parts.

What do the patrons care if you play this difficult part with one hand or two? They come to see the picture accompanied by the music, not the musician against background of pictures.

THERE are houses that feature their orchestra, but I don’t believe they feature an orchestra that has a tendency to detract attention from the picture.

We showed a scenic last evening, one of Pathé’s colored pictures. When reviewing this picture, which we always do in advance of the regular show, it reminded me of springtime, shady dells, brooks and flowers everywhere.

And say, it suggested spring. There we have it in Mendelssohn’s “Spring Song.” These scenes last about five minutes, long enough to play the “Spring Song” through nearly twice. The picture then shifted to a few country places with farm houses, barns, cattle and the like. Again we have the suggestion, “A pastoral piece of music.”

Now, I could have used “Nodding Tulip,” but the rhythm would have been the same as in the “Spring Song,” so I used “Chrysanthemum,” written in 6-8 time. Both these pieces are in different tempo, but they have the right atmosphere, and each one is long enough to complete sense.

THERE was nothing in the picture that would conflict with the music and vice versa.

The music just blended into the picture and helped to bring out the beauty of it, as it was played pianissimo so as not to divert the attention from the picture.

When I had played “Chrysanthemum” through once there was a little more of this picture to be shown. I repeated the last strain so as to end the music with the picture.

This was not a full reel; it was a scenic picture, with an educational, also of about 300 feet, one of Pathé’s natural history pictures.

For this I could have used a waltz, but the next picture required such a piece of music, and I didn’t want to play one waltz followed by another. I played a light and snappy piece, “June Bug,” 2-4 staccato. These “bug” pictures didn’t suggest this piece of music. I wanted to give the picture a little life, as the other two were of a moderate tempo. But after I had played this last, it suddenly came to me, “Gee! Bugs—June Bugs.”
DO you see what I am getting at?

This is one of the "tricks" of playing the picture. Give the audience a little music with the picture, but don't let it conflict with the picture.

Music should always be subservient to the pictures.

When it is otherwise, there are two different forces working against one another: one trying to entertain the eye, the other the ear, making it confusing to both.

SOLVING A MUSIC PROBLEM

MUSIC in a motion picture show?

S. H. Goldberg, proprietor of the Princess Theatre at 1337-19 Douglas street, Omaha, Neb., believes he has solved the problem of the motion picture theatre din.

The Princess is one of five theatres at one street intersection. Near it, so near that the sounds of one outdoors piano could not be distinguished from another, are the Cameograph, the Palm, Elite No. 1 and the Parlor theatres. Each has a piano which sits in the lobby and adds to the din of the busy street. At first there was an objection against so much noise. The objections were stilled, but the din was not.

Then Goldberg decided upon a fotoplayer, a piano inside the theatre. Besides the objectionable din, another reason was that the piano would start playing, "I Love the Cows and Chickens, But This is the Life," just as sure as a tragic or sorrowful scene was being shown on the screen. That added to Goldberg's desire for an inside piano he could control. He secured a piano which can be played to accompany any picture—be it a lively comedy, a tragic drama or an educational film—and transfer in music the feeling inspired by the picture.

Because many others are probably planning the same thing, it might be well to show how he made it the most effective. He put the piano in a pit just beneath the screen. There was a heavy floor to the pit and on this floor was put galvanized iron. Then another floor was built four inches above the first, leaving a vacant space between the floors under the piano. It made an excellent sounding board.

Since he has secured a player to control the piano and it has been delighting audiences that are becoming larger every day, other exhibitors in the city are planning on the same sort of improvement. This is the first of such pianos in Omaha, although they have proven a decided success in the East.

Balboa Plans $200,000 Plant

Laboratory Department, where first productions were made

THE Balboa Feature Film Producing Company, with offices and studios at Long Beach, California, has now been in existence one year. The company was founded by H. M. Horkheimer, who is president and general manager. E. D. Horkheimer is secretary and treasurer, and Arthur A. Lotto is assistant general manager.

The firm employs one hundred people, at present, the majority of whom live at Long Beach. Within a year they hope to have doubled their present output of pictures and consequently their plant and the number of employees.

A modern concrete plant is under consideration near the present studio, which is to cost about $200,000.

The productions of this company are handled exclusively by the Box-Office Attractions Company in the United States and Canada, and in England and Europe by William Stanley Bishop, of London, England.

Big House for Harrisburg

Second Largest Motion Picture Theatre in the Pennsylvania Capital to Open in a Few Weeks—Completely Fireproof

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 18.

A MOTION picture theatre which will have a seating capacity greater than any other, except one in this city, is now well on the way toward completion, at Third and Harris streets, in a section of Harrisburg that thus far has only a few motion picture houses.

C. E. Hanshaw, a retired coal dealer, is owner of the enterprise, and will conduct the business after the building is completed, probably about the beginning of next August. It is his first venture in the motion picture field.

The building will be 174 feet by 44, and the seating capacity will be twelve hundred. There will be a deep lobby which will provide standing room with safety for two hundred more. The theatre, of brick tiling and heavy steel girders, is designed to be fireproof. There will be eleven fireproof exits and ample facilities for the quick exit of the spectators in an emergency. Work on the building was started early in March. Modern heating and ventilating systems will be installed.

The theatre will be used entirely for motion pictures, and the fact that the stage will be only five feet deep disproves of a rumor that Mr. Hanshaw proposed ultimately to introduce vaudeville in addition to motion pictures. It will be the policy of the owner-manager to cater to the people living in and near what is known as the West End business section of Harrisburg which is far removed from the main business district of the city.

"The Alarm." (Keystone. Two reels. Thursday, May 28.)—The first reel of this offering is below the usual Keystone standard, but what the first reel lacks the second reel amply supplies in regard to humor. The Keystone fat boy, Roscoe Arbuckle, is the important member of the cast. Whenever he appears he is good for a laugh from all.

The chief of police and the chief of the fire department are rivals for the same girl. At the country fair they go through all kinds of foolish encounters to see who is the best and their antics are continued throughout the picture. The picture ends with a wild chase in which Roscoe Arbuckle, the fire chief, is pulling the whole police department behind him by means of a rope. After the police the whole town is tearing in pursuit.

"The Oath of Pierre." (American. Two reels. Monday, June 8.)—The cast of this drama embraces a large number of American stars, all of whom do good work and all of whom deserve to be mentioned. They are: William Garwood, Harry Von Meter, Jack Richardson, King Clark, Vivian Rich, Louise Lester and Charlotte Burton. The story is not clear at first and the characters are hard to follow in the first reel, but in the second matters are straightened out and the picture takes the form of a fine and pathetic story, which is sure of success with any audience. The locale is laid in the north Canadian wilds and the scenes are admirably realistic and true to life. The story, that of a city man running the happy romance of two of the children of the woods, but finally meeting his just deserts, is of a variety that will appeal to all.

"Prowlers of the Wild." (101 Bison. Two reels.)—Introducing Anna Little to the Universal patrons. Miss Little has a very good vehicle and shows to advantage. The story is laid in South Africa and is melodramatic. The direction is particularly good. A large number of natives are in the cast.

Landers, the foreman of an animal ranch, insults Anna. She loves Bert, the owner of the ranch. Anna goes to tend a sick Kaffir child, who is later poisoned by Landers and Anna is accused. The natives fire her home and drive her away. But for the timely aid of the returning animal hunters she would have been killed. The burning of the house was well done.

"The Gap." Edison, June 16.—The "Man Who Disappeared" series, of which this is the seventh, seems to have drifted far from the original idea of the story. John Perriton is mainly no longer in hiding from the police, but living a submerged life in which he is always trying to lighten the burdens of others and help them along in the world. In this story, the main point is merely an incident of one of his beneficial acts, enlarged upon so as to take up the entire reel. This does not mean the picture is a bore; on the contrary, it is alive with action, but even so, the story remains just an incident and a small one.

Perriton, alias Pottle, who rescued Jennie and her lover, now her husband, from the gang, is aided by these two in helping out a penniless engineer who wishes to bid for a contract. The engineer is on his way to Chicago. These three tax their energies to the utmost to stop him. After many useless attempts they finally succeed in raising the drawbridge, they stop the train and the engineer, Earle, is taken off.

"Pathé Daily News: Twenty-third Week." (Pathé. June 2.)—The first number of the Pathé Daily News shows different pictures of ships and people, all concerned in the recent wreck of the "Empress of Ireland" in the St. Lawrence River. Such a picture could not fail to awaken interest, and if all the daily are as well received as this was their success is assured.

"Trapped by Wireless." (Kleine-Eclipse. Two reels. June 2.)—Not only is the scene of action on the coast of the Mediterranean, but the picture was filmed there, with the result that some fine scenery has been obtained. The story is not as thrilling as the title would imply, but there are some thrillers not to be overlooked. Stavros carries the girl over a chasm by means of a rope in a sensational manner, and later the robbers try to go across the same chasm on two fallen trees only to meet their death. Stavros, the leader of a band of outlaws, plunders a ship, but when he sees the girl on board he falls in love with her and deserts his band. Both of them are bound and left on deck. Stavros manages to free himself and summon aid by wireless, then the two escape from the ship. In protecting the girl he is killed. The marines then arrive and rescue her.

"Wife." (Eclair. Two reels. June 19.)—Belle Adair, Alec Francis and Stanley Walpole are the principals. There are two inconsistencies in this picture which are not, however, radical enough to spoil the main effect.

Holiday is ruined and insists that his daughter marry Price, a wealthy man, and give up the man she loves. Some time later she is discovered in the doctor's bedroom. She had gone there at his summons. Price, believing her false, takes to morphine. He is cured by the doctor, who proves that his suspicions had been incorrect.
“The Changeling.” (Lubin. Two reels. Wednesday, June 10.)—It is seldom that a drama is put on the market that is so well produced and at the same time containing such an absorbing plot as this. The story, the acting and the photography is almost faultless. And it is certain that any audience will receive it well.

Delmore, a young doctor, is called upon to attend Mrs. Saunders, who is about to give birth to a child. The child dies and Delmore replaces it with a healthy baby, whose mother is dead and whose father is a lunatic. Years later this boy is in love with Delmore’s daughter, but he, knowing his descent, will not let him marry her. They finally elope, return home and think that all will be well. But Delmore, knowing the terrible consequences that may occur, takes the young man for a ride in his car and purposely drives in front of an express train. Both are killed. Earl Metcalfe, Lilic Leslie, Anna Luther, William H. Turner, George Spencer, Miss Dawson and Kempton Greene make up the cast.

“The Isle of Abandoned Hope.” (101 Bison. Two reels. Saturday, June 13.)—A novel plot, a large cast of principals and supers, beautiful scenes and fine action, combine to make this a splendid Universal feature. It is unusual in every point. Interest is aroused from the very start, when the survivors of the fatal wreck are struggling in the water, and then cast on one of the Hawaiian Islands, where the picture was taken. The natives give the survivors a separate island for themselves, but they are forced to remain in this space. After numerous and thrilling experiences, they are finally picked up by a passing ship. The southern scenes are gorgeous, and the film, exposed in the brightest sunlight, is perfect.

“Judge Dunn’s Decision.” (Solig. Two reels. Monday, June 8.)—A story that is quite new and appealing. All classes will appreciate it, for it deals with a question that is a hard one to solve. Parts of the picture are undoubtedly true, and a picture of this kind is always appreciated more than an utterly impossible one. The drama is a guess from start to finish. Judge Dunn, who is on the point of sentencing a girl who used to be in his employ, for stealing, is asked to watch his own wife and daughter for a week before he proceeds. He does this and finds that his wife and daughter are leading a fast life and are very much in debt, and also that they are the guilty ones. The girl is of course vindicated. Ail W. Filson and Lily Clark are the principals.

“The Mask of Affliction.” (Eclair. Two reels. June 17.)—There is excellent suspense in this picture. From the end of the first reel one never knows just what is going to happen next. Claudia and Peter are in love, the girl’s guardian objecting, as he wishes to marry her himself. A mine explosion injures Peter’s face, and he hides away, until he is believed dead. Just at the right moment, however, he turns up and frustrates the plans of the guardian upon the life of Claudia. His face has meanwhile healed.
A School for Ushers

Did you ever hear of a school for young men that started at 11 o'clock at night? Most boys are in bed dreaming about their next day's lessons at that time. However, there is one "school," in Buffalo, N. Y.—at least so George W. Erdman calls it—that starts its lessons right at the above-mentioned hour. Mr. Erdman is manager of the Elmwood Theatre, and every Wednesday and Saturday evening, as soon as the lights are turned off, "Schoolmaster" Erdman opens his "School for Ushers," which, however, is exclusively for the Elmwood staff of young men.

At the appointed hour, and on the dot, too, the "boys" file into the school-room, and take seats in front of Mr. Erdman's desk. The pedagogue enters.

"Well, boys, let's get busy. I know you are all tired but the lesson will be short to-night." is the opening of the lecture.

"Now, first of all I saw one thing happen to-night which I do not wish to see again. A lady entered the Theatre with her escort, and after Mr. So-and-So had shown them to a seat, the young lady began to remove her coat. Mr. So-and-So began to help her. Now whenever a lady enters with an escort never assist her with her coat. It is embarrassing to the gentleman.

"Next, I have noticed that several patrons are coming every night, and as a rule, take seats in the same part of the theatre. I want you to watch for these people and see that they are placed as near as possible in the location they desire, and if possible, in the same seats. Always let the patrons know where there are vacant seats, as the floor becomes crowded, and ask them where they would like to sit. This makes a good impression and people begin to talk about our polite ushers."

Always help the gentlemen with their coats, boys; this is something rarely seen in a motion picture theatre, but we are in a high-class district and the men who attend in any manner whatsoever.

here at night are successful business men, accustomed to such services.

"In a way, an usher's job is just as important as the manager's. If an usher is polite at all times and shows the patrons little attentions which are not shown them at other places, they will come again, but if he is impolite and 'sassy' at times, it will be noticed and our patrons will become dissatisfied.

"Be on the job all the time, be polite, be awake, and be quick about the little things that will make people talk.

"Be especially attentive to old people. Respect for silver locks should be one of your most valued characteristics. Give the old lady or gentleman your arm on the way to a seat, and be very careful to ask if they can see the pictures plainly from the seats you give them, whether they can hear the music, whether they feel a draught, and so on. It is these little things that advertise the Elmwood ushers and consequently the Elmwood Theatre."

"Always be on time at both matinée and evening performances. Punctuality is one of the necessary requirements for an Elmwood usher. We are paying you more than the ordinary usher gets, because you are not ordinary ushers. 'Ordinary' ushers are plentiful. We want you to be known as 'unusual' young men. School is dismissed to-night."

And so, on the above mentioned nights every week, these little sessions are held in the manager's office and as new problems come up, they are discussed with thoroughness by Mr. Erdman and his boys. The result is that the conduct of the Elmwood ushers comprise one of the best advertisements of this modern photoplay theatre. Every patron talks about the ushers' politeness and willingness to be of service. This school is original with the manager, and so far, has proved itself to be a success.

Why not try it, yourself?

Turns Patron's Vanity to Good Account

Special to The Motion Picture News, Milwaukee, Wis., June 16.

A BRAND new idea in lobby display has been discovered by Otto Meister, manager of the Vaudette Theatre, 183 Third Street. Like the majority of other photoplay theatres constructed in the past few years, the Vaudette has any number of mirrors set in the walls of the lobby. And like most other managers, Mr. Meister had been bothered to death by his patrons, especially the women folk, stopping to admire themselves and adjust their hats just at the time the crowds were entering or leaving the house.

However, all of that is now a thing of the past at the Vaudette and those same mirrors are helping to bring the nickels rolling into the box-office. For now lightly pasted on the mirrors are some striking figures cut from the lithographs, and lettered in whitening around the paper is the billing of the particular film they represent.

For instance, the familiar comedy head of Max Sennett is pasted on the mirror and around it are painted the words, "Keystone Comedy To-Day." This is all that is needed, as too much lettering is apt to spoil the effectiveness of the display.

The idea is one that can be utilized with very good results by most every manager, and with no other outlay than the services of a good sign writer and the use of a few unmounted one-sheets.

J. W. Martin.

The Syndicate Film Corporation, of Omaha, Neb., and Kansas City, Mo., advises exhibitors that Jules C. Rahmer is no longer connected with them and has no authority to solicit, or represent them in any manner whatsoever.
OPERATOR NEAR DEATH

Special to The Motion Picture News
El Paso, Tex., June 17.

J. E. Roberts, a motion picture operator, had a narrow escape from death at Fort Bliss recently while taking pictures of tests of the new Benet-Mercier machine gun.

Roberts, who is free-lancing and has just returned from an extended trip in the west coast country of Mexico, where he was taking pictures of the Carranza junket, had set his machine close to the gun and was grinding away when the cartridge belt which was being fed to the rapid-firer became overheated and exploded.

Roberts was thrown to the ground by the force of the explosion. His camera was struck by a flying piece of metal and wrecked.

"LOG CABIN," NASHVILLE, NOW VICTORIA

Nashville, Tenn., June 17.

The Victoria Theatre is the name of the new picture house formerly known as the Log Cabin, located at the Arcade and Fourth avenue. Following a change of management and a general remodeling, this newest addition to Nashville's amusement places is rapidly coming into its own.

A new program has been arranged for and hereafter Warner features will be shown exclusively. C. L. Corbit is the new manager. Mr. Corbit has decided to add another feature to his program in the form of illustrated songs. L. Eugene Ensor, of Chicago, well known as a baritone of ability, will sing at each performance.

Lambs' Gambol in Motion Pictures

The Lamb's, the most famous actors' club in the world, have just returned from their famous all-star gambol tour of the country and it has been left to the motion pictures to record the salient features and keep alive the history of the tour. The club made a hurried trip of but nine days, and in that time they piled up gross receipts of $115,000. The expenditures were approximately $40,000, which will leave a net profit of $85,000 to start the fund for their enlargement of the clubhouse in Forty-fourth street, New York City.

Scene from George V. Hobart's Morality Play "Experience," As Presented at the Lamb's Gambol. Marketed Through Sawyer, Inc.

The Lamb's traveled in a special train which they boarded in New York. The itinerary began at the Metropolitan Opera House, Friday night, May 22. A matinee Saturday, and then the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, that night. After this came the Court Square Theatre, Wheeling, W. Va.; the Nixon Theatre, Pittsburgh; English's Opera House, Indianapolis; Music Hall, Cincinnati; Olympic Theatre, St. Louis; Auditorium, Chicago; Star Theatre, Buffalo; Lyceum Theatre, Rochester; Worcester Theatre, Worcester, Mass.; Boston Theatre, Boston; and thence back to the Hippodrome, New York, for the farewell.

Motion pictures were taken of all important phases of the trip, and the parades and other incidents. These will be exhibited and show the greatest gathering of stars of the American drama ever collected upon a screen.

In addition to the main events there are some reel specialties of the tour which show the end men washing up in the rear of the theatre in one of the towns, and another shows the boys playing girl parts, emerging from the stage door in their leading lady costumes but smoking big black cigars, and in some instances well battered old pipes.

The Lubin Company of Philadelphia is developing and printing 7,500 feet of film made on the trip, and when it is cut to three thousand feet it will prove to be one of the most valuable collections of theatrical stars ever assembled. Picture made under direction of the shepherd, William Courtleigh, and Sawyer, Inc., have been appointed sole distributors for the Lamb's.
T he policy of giving the exhibitors a chance to see the big feature productions before release for booking is growing in Philadelphia. Recently W. A. Macan, manager of the Continental Film Company, and J. P. Glenn, of the Syndicate Film Company, gave a combination showing of "Home, Sweet Home," and the first two installments of "The Million Dollar Mystery" at the Stanley Theatre. About one hundred exhibitors and their friends attended and both pictures were received with much applause.

The Progressive Motion Picture Corporation, through their Philadelphia agents, have followed suit with a preliminary showing of "The Master Cracksmen" at the Fairmount Theatre since June 16. Harry Carey, who takes the lead and who directed the film, was present, as were members of the firm from New York.

The largest business in the history of the new Strand Theatre, was the record attained by Jesse L. Lasky's release, "The Only Son," which began a week's engagement at that house last Sunday. It is estimated by the management that at least five hundred more people paid admissions last Sunday than on any previous day since the house opened.

The plant of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., at Orange, N. J., and the motion picture studio in the Bronx, will be closed on Thursday, June 25, for the purpose of having the 3,000 employees become closer affiliated and united into one large family with the great inventor as the father. The various forces will congregate at Olympic Park, in Newark, where many athletic events will take place. Mr. Edison will act as starter and award a handsome prize to the winner of each event.

Albert Siegler, a war camera-man for the Animated Weekly, of the Universal, who for the last two months has been cruising along the west coast of Mexico on board the U. S. Cruiser "South Dakota," has returned to the Hollywood studios of the Universal company with a vivid story of his experiences in southern waters.

Ira H. Cohen, of the University Film Corporation, who occupied booth 19 and 20 at the exposition, although rather late in securing space, did considerable booking.

Robert Hilliard, star of "The Argyle Case," recently refused an offer made by the New York Motion Picture Corporation in which they offered him his own figure to play for the camera the play which he has had such success in "The Argyle Case." His excuse, if it may be called that, was a desire to enjoy his honeymoon.

Vivian Blackburn, well known on the legitimate stage, makes her screen debut in the first three-reel feature by the Eleanor Gates Photoplay Company, "Doc," made from a "Saturday Evening Post" serial by Miss Gates. Miss Blackburn was the original fencing girl with Anna Held's "Little Duchess" company, which she played for three seasons. She was with John Drew in "Jack Straw" and created the part of Vanity in "Everywoman," and for two seasons played Mrs. Sammy Whitecourt in "Excuse Me."

Miss Blackburn's work in "Doc," as one of the principals, was so satisfactory to Director Richard Garrick and Miss Gates that she will appear in several screen productions of the best known of Miss Gates' books and plays.

"The Greyhound" which has just been released by the Life Photo Film Corporation has been sold in North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, New Jersey, New York state, Maine, New Hamshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Mr. Rudolph, the general manager of Sawyer, Inc., has just returned from a flying trip, during which he arranged for several branch offices for Sawyer, Inc. The Famous Players Film Company's New York office will release the next Mary Pickford film production July 1, in place of the production presenting H. B. Warner in "The Lost Paradise," as previously announced.

This next film presenting Mary Pickford will be a five-reel adaptation of "The Eagle's Mate," by Anna Alice Chapin.
Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company and Mrs. Hutchinson, made an auto trip through Illinois and Indiana. The consensus of opinion of exhibitors throughout the territory is in favor of the Mutual Program, declares Mr. Hutchinson. The “American Beauty” and “Flying A” subjects are in especial demand.

John Pelzer, who was in charge of the Pathé booth at the International Exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors, June 8 to 13, will also direct the one to be held in Dayton, Ohio, July 6 to 11.

What is the matter with the proof-room of “The New York Tribune” these days? The readers must be sleeping at the switch to let S. L. Rothapel’s name go through as D. S. Rothapel, which happened in the report of the convention dinner Friday night at the Biltmore Hotel. Surely Mr. Rothapel is sufficiently well known to have his name spelled correctly.

David Kirkland, a former Essanay director, is now with Ford Sterling and his famous Sterling company of comedians. He will act with the high-salaried comedian as a co-director in Sterling’s own company. Mr. Kirkland was born in San Francisco and was educated at the University of California. He has been with Mande Adams and Robert Edeson on the so-called legitimate stage.

James M. Sheldon, president of the Syndicate Film Corporation, has returned from the South bringing fine reports of the activity among exhibitors to book and boost “The Million-Dollar Mystery.”

Albert Blinkhorn, president of the Hepworth American Film Corporation, sails Saturday, June 29, on the “Olympic” for England. Productions suitable for the American market will be discussed with the manufacturers, the Hepworth Manufacturing Company, Ltd., of London. The past year has shown an increase in the demand for Mr. Blinkhorn’s features and he will arrange to release a greater number of productions next season.

Mr. Blinkhorn will be away for about six weeks and will visit his company’s offices in Paris and Berlin.

The factory of the company is being remodelled to meet the increased demand for American Standard machines. This has delayed shipments, but the management expects to be able shortly to fill all orders promptly.

Harry Reichenbach, of the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company, was presented with a beautiful Waterbury jeweled watch by the Exposition Committee in appreciation of his untiring efforts in assisting to make that affair a success. It is inscribed as follows: "To Our Harry in Appreciation of Your Efforts in Our Behalf. Sam Trigger, Grant W. Anson, Adolph Weiss, J. A. Koerpel, William Hilkemeier, Aaron Cohn."

Romaine Fielding, director, producer, leading man, scenario writer and organizer of the Lubin Western studios in Galveston, Texas, is undoubtedly one of the best educated men in motion pictures. He has seen Famous Players, is now playing in "Northern Lights," a six-reel picture of the Life-Photo Corporation, which is now being produced successfully in Montana and New York.

Frank Rogers, of Knoxville, Tenn., owner of a number of successful theatres, has contracted with Sawyer, Inc., to handle their entire output for the Southern States. Mr. Rogers now has several men on the road in the South booking and exhibiting Lubin's "Drug Terror." These men will also book the Sawyer, Inc., features, six of which have already been sent to Mr. Rogers.

Walter Belasco, brother of David Belasco, is a member of the stock of the New York Motion Picture companies in Los Angeles, Cal. He was a member of sixteen years of the stock at the Alcazar Theatre in San Francisco.

In the making of O. Henry's story, "Wildcat Represents," the Eclair company had considerable difficulty in locating forty bull snakes, to play parts. They were found, however.

Ernest Torrence will lecture on the Paul Rainey pictures, Series '14, at the Casino Theatre, New York, beginning June 22. Free admission will be extended to newsboys for one week. Robert L. Priest will manage the engagement.

J. J. Shubert sailed for London on the "Mauritania," June 16, for an extended continental tour in the interests of the Shubert Film Corporation.

The Keystone Company is bringing out a comedy, featuring Marie Dressler, which will probably surpass all previous efforts of this organization. Several buildings have been constructed on the company's grounds at Los Angeles, which will be equipped with large windows, a tile floor, and have a bank with revolving doors, for the purpose of giving Miss Dressler's fun-making talents full play.

It is stated that Miss Snow, of the Thanhouser studio, has expended $2,000 for costumes, though she has acted in only six of the forty-six reels, the length of the serial soon to be released. Miss Snow declares that her costume used in "The Million-Dollar Mystery" will go over the $10,000 mark. It is expensive to play the part of a millionaire's daughter, or a Russian Countess, according to Florence La Badie, the heroine of the same company, as she also finds her costume bills have mounted up to a considerable figure.

Mildred Bright sang and danced into stagemad four years ago, by way of the musical comedy "Havana." That was just by way of entering, for her tendencies and ambitions were for the drama and not for musical comedy. However, the latter served and she considers her three years' experience in this line most valuable.

The opportunity to play straight drama seemed long in coming but, with October last, it made itself welcome in an offer from the Eclair Company, and since then Mildred has occupied one of the Eclair's dressing-rooms and lets her sunny disposition show itself in the Eclair films in which she has appeared.
Tighten License Requirements in Albany

New Requirements Must Be Met Before Theatres Can Be Sure of Existence—"Tess of the Storm Country" Makes Hit in New York Capital

Special to The Motion Picture News
Albany, N. Y., June 18.

On May 1 all motion picture show licenses should have been renewed in Albany, N. Y., and although all of the twenty-five houses have made application, only fourteen have received the necessary papers. The other houses are doing business and will be allowed to do so until inspected by Superintendent of Buildings Fulton and Fire Chief Bridgeford. Every one of the places are being given a rigid examination and will have to conform with the law in every particular.

There have been many laws made by the Common Council during the last year in regard to the motion picture theatres, and only a few weeks ago one was passed which prohibited the remodeling of a frame building for this purpose. Partitions are required to be made of metal lath on metal studding, or terracotta blocks or other fireproof material.

The popularity of Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" in Albany was tested during the last two weeks. The Colonial, a theatre seating about 1,000, showed the pictures recently and at all four performances people were turned away.

Motion Pictures Compel Equal Recognition

Buffalo Dailies Forced to Acknowledge Their Importance, Give Them the Same Space as is Devoted to Regular Drama.

Special to The Motion Picture News.
Buffalo, June 17.

In recent issues of daily and Sunday newspapers here, especially on the Sunday dramatic page, we notice that a great change has taken place in regard to position, space, and quantity of motion picture advertising and accompanying "write-ups."

A year ago a motion picture theatre was lucky if its show got a few lines in the paper. A review of a motion picture was a thing unknown, and when a production was mentioned it was relegated to a position near the poultry column.

Today it is no unusual sight to see half-column notices of such films as, "The Port of Missing Men," "Brewster's Millions," and others. Not only are the papers giving playplays generous space on the dramatic page, but press agents are getting pictures in the illustrated sections on Sunday. On Tuesday morning, when the theatrical criticisms appear, motion picture attractions are noticed at the head of the column, and are well taken care of. Every paper in Buffalo has a page or more especially devoted to such productions. One paper gets out a special four-page edition as a supplement to its Sunday edition, devoted entirely to motion photography.

The picture theatres are doing more advertising now than ever before. That is, the "live wires" are, and they are getting the business. Nobody ever does so much business that he can afford to stop advertising, for when he does his receipts fall off. Motion picture managers have their newspaper matter prepared in the same way as the legitimate productions. They put the taboo on all such words, as photography, camera, film, screen, in fact, anything that might lead the reader into thinking the production as a motion picture. At times it is hard for the press agent to get his copy across, but it seems to be good policy for some houses.

DECORATION SPECIALISTS

The Schroeder Art Flower Manufacturing Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, have just completed the decoration of Keith's Hippodrome in that city. They have also made a screen decoration for the Gordon Theatre in Cleveland. It is said that this is something entirely new for motion picture theatres.

The Schroeder company are specialists in the floral decorating of exhibitions, department stores, etc. A number of large clubs and hotels in various cities use their service exclusively.

NEW HOME OF MELIES PRODUCTIONS

The new home of the Melies "G" brand is a distinct discovery, according to Joseph Levering, who is at the head of the Melies Producing Company. The property is in Flush- ing-on-the-Bay, L. I., and stands at the top of a hill between Flushing and College Point. The property consists of ten acres, a portion of which is rocky headland, which makes a sheer drop of fifty feet into the Bay, while only one hundred feet away the rock slopes gently down to a beautiful sandy beach.

LIFE PHOTO'S NEW STAR

Iva Shepherd, recently of the Famous Players and Reliance companies, is to play the lead in the Life Photo Film Corporation's six-reel production, "Northern Lights." Miss Shepherd is noted for her emotional acting and marvelous facial expression, which stamp her as a true motion picture actress.

IVA SHEPARD

Although she has spent many years acting for the camera, she was once on the legitimate stage also. She played opposite William Gillette and Richard Mansfield, and also with the late Sir Henry Irving.

AGNES EGAN COBB AT TWO CONVENTIONS

Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb, who lately celebrated her first anniversary with the Eclair company, and was recently made a member of the directorate, has returned from a successful western trip. She left New York on May 26 for Chicago, Des Moines, Indianapolis and other points. While in Chicago she closed a big contract with Alfred Hamberger, of the celebrated Players Film Corporation. One of the most striking booths at the Annual Trade Convention, held under the auspices of the International Motion Picture Association, in the Grand Central Palace, New York City, was Mrs. Cobb's. She also expects to attend the Dayton convention next month, where the booth of Leading Players and Features Ideal, under her charge, will be handsomely decorated with pennants inscribed with the names of the features handled by the companies she represents.

Mrs. Cobb's booth, No. 113, at the Grand Central Palace, was a magnet for members of the trade, particularly the exhibitors.
“MANON LESCAUT”
(The Playgoers' Film Co.—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM BERMAN ANDREWS

THIS picturization of Albe Prevost's world famous love story, with Mme. Lina Cavalieri in the chief role, will find favor with the most critical public.

Excellent judgment is shown in the selection of scenes typifying the tender passages of the original, without sacrificing the more dramatic moments. Mme. Cavalieri plays the frail, pleasure-loving Manon with delightful charm, and brings to the part all the resources of her admirable technique.

A stern father brings up Manon Lescaut and her brother in a fanatically religious atmosphere, against which the vivacious nature of the girl rebels. She is sent to a convent in charge of the brother, a musketeer of Louis XV, and two nuns. At the end of the first day's journey she is seen by the Chevalier Des Grieux. The pair instantly fall in love with each other, and before the unworlly nuns realize what is going on under their noses, manage to escape to Paris.

The girl's beauty attracts a profligate nobleman of great wealth and influence, who contrives to separate the loving couple. She is made to believe that Des Grieux has abandoned her, while on the other hand, the lover supposes that she no longer cares for him. Through this misunderstanding they remain apart for some time, the girl, who has become penniless, under the protection of the treacherous nobleman, and the disappointed young man in close seclusion, studying for the church.

He is on the point of taking orders when the girl learns of the baron's trick. She leaves his house after a stormy interview, seeking her lover. Manon persuades the young man to give up his idea of renouncing the world, and they fly together. But they are pursued by the baron's vengeance, and finally sail for Louisiana, where after a number of misadventures they both meet death in the primeval forest of the new world.

EAU CLAIRE MAYOR CO-OPERATES WITH EXHIBITORS

Eau Claire, Wis., June 17.

Thanks to Mayor John B. Fleming, the exhibitors in this city have not been saddled with a local board of censors, despite the agitation that existed at one time for such an organization. This city has, however, an arrangement which is almost ideal.

When the agitation for local motion-picture censorship was rife, Mayor Fleming, whom G. W. MacLaughlin, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, describes as "a very broad-minded man," arranged with the exhibitors for a showing only of pictures passed by the national board.

“LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY”
(James McEnery Syndicate—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY E. KENDALL GILLET

One of the noticeable things in this production of a delightful classic, read practically by every child, is the great depth of the pictures. The views do not seem like shallow Harlem flats or cramped studio sets. The careful camera work gives clear impressions of nearly every foot of the film.

Although the Western scenes are exceptionally good, the stage director neglected to maintain the American color in the grocery store where the lad, before leaving home to see his grandfather, the craved Earl, engages in his famous discussions with Silas Hobbs, the eccentric proprietor. Typically British labels stand out on the cans and jars behind the counter, while the shopkeeper's face and round still betray essentially English characteristics. This oversight, however, does not detract from the general excellence sustained throughout the pictures.

The acting of Cedric, a boy of ten, reminds one in its finish, of the original creator of the part in the first speaking version put on the stage some twenty odd years ago. The interest is sustained throughout, and the play should appeal to both old and young as much as the dramatic production caught the fancy of an older generation.

The Earl of Dornicourt (H. Agar Lyons), around whom the story is written, is a man of the old school, cold, haughty and austere. His sons, except the youngest, who married an American girl and settled there, are all wild and live a life of profligate luxury. Bevis (Fred Eustace), the eldest son, is shown in his gambling haunts, where he meets Minna Tipton (V. Osmond), the wife of a blacklock, whom he finally marries, not knowing of her husband and child. Maurice (B. Murray), the second son, is shown in his idle life of following the race track, where he loses all that he has. This racing scene is very well executed and well taken.

All three of the sons die, the eldest from an excess of high living, the second from a fall from horseback and the youngest from consumption.

The old Earl is pathetic in his despair. He sends his lawyer to America to find his youngest son's son Cedric (Gerald Royston), who is the only male heir to his estates. The commission is carried out, and Cedric, with his mother, go to England. The Earl is cold to his daughter-in-law and will not have her about, but to the grandson he takes an immediate liking, which grows rapidly. Under the influence of the child his heart becomes softened and life again seems worth living.

All goes well till Minna Tipton, his youngest son's supposed wife, appears, claiming to the Lady Fauntleroy, with her son (by her legal husband) to be Lord Fauntleroy.

The claim is pushed to the point where the newspapers publish her picture and that of her son. This falls into the hands of Dick Tipton (Harry Edwards), an uncle of the boy. He forwards it to Ber Tipton (Frank Stratton), the father, who has now become wealthy in the West. They get together and go to England, arriving in the midst of the birthday party given to Cedric, where Minna Tipton and her son are striving for recognition. The secret is out. Minna is banished, the father takes his son and the Earl is overjoyed to find that Cedric, who has won his heart, is the undisputed Lord Fauntleroy.

The story ends by a happy reunion between Cedric, his mother and the Earl, all of whom from that time on live under the same roof.

PICTURES HELP AMUSEMENT PARK

Lexington, Ky., June 17.

Blue Grass Park, a big amusement resort six miles from this city, has adopted the motion-picture plan as a means of attracting patrons. A big air-dome has been built, and a nightly change of three reels of pictures is being used. Chang Reels With Chaney

I see Brother Sid Denon was on the job demonstrating the Optigraph at the Exposition, and it is rumored that the Optigraph's inventor, having been dismissed by the operator because it is only used in open-air theatres, will be passing to the hands of the one who is most capable of handling it. This is not an idle threat, as the Optigraph is a genuine invention.

During my visit to the operating-room at theatre No. 3, I noticed a man working the Cameron machine, and I inquired of "Brothers" Weischtein on the Power's. 'This was naturally very interesting to any one who had never had the pleasure of seeing the difficulties of operation there before.

At Theatre No. 3, Brothers J. Callahan and Arthur Kahn were in charge of the new Erneman projector. "Brother" J. Abrams and Wm. Mays were in charge of the Power's machine in the same booth.

Theodore M. G. H. Chaney, and L. Hammond were proving to the general public that while the Edison was not the prettiest machine at the Palace, the old reliable was still able to wind up its end with any of them.

Of course the Power's was in evidence in the same booth, in charge of Brothers Fred Voiglt and Jake Bennett. It is insured.

At Theatre No. 4, the Monograph was demonstrating itself little known in the East, the machine is fully capable of projection, and makes a picture as well as any of them.

Of course the Power's was again on the job, I mean doing along for the charge of Brothers J. Leonard and Dave Wombler.

It seems that wherever you find pictures, you also find the new Optigraph, and the Compton.

Incidentally I may mention that the exhibition booth on the largest in the Palace devoted to the showing of motion pictures, which is usually overlooked by many, was taken as a criterion, this year's exposition will eclipse any of the other.

Let us all hope so, anyhow.

Boston was visited by Brothers Bohannon, Cowan and Harry Danto— all out for good time and everything.

While on a visit to the exposition, I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Cameron, the inventor of the Cameron projector. Upon his invitation I had a close view of the machine, and in the opinion of many it is superior to any other. The picture can be projected with ease, and is taken as a criterion, this year's exposition will eclipse any of the other.

The shutter cuts less light than the average machine, though better than some other machines, to accomplish the same results.

The lamp is a great improvement over most of the lamps in the world, a heavy stone, with rack-backs of triangular construction, sitting snugly, without any sidewise and lost motion. Taken all in all, this machine is the consideration of anyone contemplating the purchase of a up-to-date projector.

Brother Max Hollanders took the great leap on Friday, June 12, when he was married just before leaving for a vacation with Car-ribia. It is understood that "Caribia" will have a run of about twelve weeks in Chicago.

Twelve weeks' work while on your honeymoon is what is known as business with pleasure, but then Max always did have an eye to business.

Brother Fred voiglt has at last achieved his ambition and is now the proprietor of the "Orchard Grove," and boating on the Elevenways at Fairview, N. J. He has extended an invitation to me to new place, an invitation which I shall take pleasure in accepting, and I would suggest that all the boys in this vicinity do the same when they find time to visit Fred will you be up there and know.

Brother Billy Giuek has taken his ever-lasting smile with him to Brooklyn, where he has secured a job in an open-air theatre, and we don't see him so often as we used to.

The only time we see him in the old days off is when he stops off on his way to and from the Bronx. Well, at least we can be the first to tell you how much he likes the Bronx, let us in on it, won't you, Billy?

In the last few weeks we have had a close election of Joseph Crehan as recording-secretary to the State of New York, at the recent annual election was omitted.

A Needed Reform

With all the legislation that has been done in the last few years that affects the motion picture business, it seems to me that it is only to any one that stops to consider the present situation that something has not been done in regard to the examination and licensing of motion picture operators.

In the State of Massachusetts the legislature has taken a stand that should be commended by everyone who has the best interest of the business at heart.

The examining and licensing of operators is under the supervision of the district police, and an operator must be thoroughly competent and possess the proper examination, as it is a practical rather than a theoretical test.

There is no chance taken of the lives of the people in the Massachusetts theatres being endangered through the employment of boys or other incompetents as motion picture operators.

As proof of the fact that the Massachusetts legislature is right in this matter, they can point with pride to the fact that it is impossible for them to receive any such notice of incompetent or any kind of any kind has occurred and the result is a failure of incompetence on the part of an operator.

Undoubtedly at some future time every State in the Union will have had the same law on their statute books.

But why delay? It is an old axiom that delays are dangerous, and it will very likely prove the case again and again, and the present state of affairs is allowed to exist, in the State of Massachusetts.

In the city of New York itself, conditions are really very bad, and if such is the case, it may prove that much more to the good of the whole industry.

Hardly a city, town, village or hamlet that has not at least one picture theatre, and as the present license law applies only to cities of the first class, boys are operating the machines in many places, and that the first consideration of the proprietor is price and not the safety of his patrons.

In all large industries of the country I think it a first class and important topic.

With all this agitation, why not consider the safety of your theatres? Not your stage theatre?

It all depends upon the knowledge and efciency of the motion picture operator—a fact, I may say, that is responsible for much of the patronage that the picture business has been able to get. And the public have a right to demand that the safety of the patrons, the public, the proprietor and operator, and all who have the best interests of the business as a whole at heart, should adopt that slogan, "SAFETY AND EFFICIENCY FIRST.'

Charles Bennett, of the Keystone Company, recently took a company of actors, under his direction, to a distant site, on the West Coast.

They threw a dummy into a chasm which was seen by three visitors who rushed into the "opera house" at the time of the chaffing at finding a dummy was amusing, for the effect was to carry the audience along with the story of the day, and the pseudoseries was found return to the Keystone Company.

Pauline Bush is back at work in the Hollywood western Universal studios for the past of six weeks. The charming little star, who will play with LM. R. C. and the public, and in the public favor of being rested during her vacation.

In two popular contests held abroad, Maurice Costello, of the Vitagraph Company, was returned dead last in the American after contest held in Australia, resulted in Costello's receiving almost as big a majority.

Some of the details are somewhat exaggerated, but the picture rather involved and hard to follow. The cast consists of pleasant players. Rose, Mary Thoby, Bartell McGulim, William Carr and Mr. Burns. It is ambitious to reform social conditions and when his father-in-law gives him a seat in the Exchange he sets out to reform the Street, but instead plays the market and gets rich. The Mysterious Package. (Edison, Split reel. Wed., June 24.)—On the same reel with "On the Ice." Not humorous, except toward the end. A box of fudge is mistaken for a bomb by the inhabitants of the small town and a wild chase follows. There is a large cast, none of whom are important.

The Basket Habit. (Edison, Mon., June 21.)—A couple humorous plots make this an unusually good comedy. The cook’s husband going off with "scraps" of food, Archibald wins his sweetheart, makes friends with her father, and gets him a big business deal. Elsie MacLeod and Arthur Haasman are the principals.

The Snakeville Volunteer. (Essanay, Thurs., June 11.)—Victor Fond, Harry Todd and Margaret Joselin play the leads. The war comes and Victor Fond joins the army. But his wife still dedicates her love to him. They are reunited as the war ends.

The two brothers both love the same girl, and when one is killed by an Italian the other is accused of the murder. But the truth is learned and the case is cleared up in the last reel.

The Prize Employer. ( Biograph, Split reel, Tues., June 16.)—Another class of comedy. On kindness to servants doesn’t make this comedy would indicate. It is most humorous, but little.

A Jonah. (Biograph, Thurs., June 11.) A fair comedy, but containing too much of the "Farce." In "A Jonah" is no good. At dinner, he has a hard time getting a wife and when he does get her the mother-in-law comes along with it, and twins follow.

The Eyes of the World. (Essanay, Mon., June 21.)—Another class of comedy. On kindness to servants doesn’t make this comedy would indicate. It is most humorous, but little.

The Belling News Pictorial. (Selig, Mon., June 15.) An excellent picture. The boy’s dog is lost and she will marry the man that finds it. Wiffles gets the wrong dog, but employs underhand methods and wins her.

Through the Bosphorus. (Pathé, Split reel, Tues., June 16.)—On the same reel with "Simple Experiments in Electricity." A quantity of pictures are shown here, all of which are most beautiful and clearly photographed.

Our Fairy Play. (Vitagraph, Two reels. Sat., June 13.)—The family get the play, "The Sireneas Beauties," and make a bad job of it. Everything goes wrong and in the end the wrong makes the whole audience laugh. A force cast takes part, but none of its members are more important than the others.

The Power to Forgive. (Vitagraph, Thurs., June 11.)—The plot is rather obscure at first and hard to grasp. Anne Schuster and Gerald Prentice are the principals. The story is a pretty one. Barker finds that the Front family is in trouble. Through an accident, he is cared for by his first love and all ends well.

Dalby Days. (Pathé Weekly, June 10.)—Another class of comedy. On kindness to servants doesn’t make this comedy would indicate. It is most humorous, but little.

The Girl in PANTS. (Crystal, Split reel, Tues., June 16.) On the same reel with "Her New Hat." Charles DeForest and Vivian Prescott play opposite and create a good bit of farce in this romantic and lively story. A chase ends the old story of two rivals.

Her New Hat. (Crystal, Split reel, Tues., June 16.) On the same reel with "The Girl in PANTS." The heroine is left without her hat in this juvenile comedy, which will amuse young and old alike. But her rivals are rivos for the girl. Neither wins her.
THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

“His Dress Rehearsal.” (Frontier, Sun., June 16.)—A new how-to-disgrace-an-actor play by Youngster, with a preface by an old actor. The hero is a harmless man who finds himself embroiled in a great struggle with the law. The Western atmosphere is predominant in the drama, and the picture is worked up in a masterful manner.

“The Gunnman of Plumas.” (Frontier. Sun., June 16.)—A dull, conventional treatment of the old “gunman” theme. The Western atmosphere is not sufficiently predominant, and the picture is worked up in a masterful manner.

“Universal Ike, Jr., Beary Won Her.” (Universal. Split reel. Tues., June 16.)—The theme is sufficiently well handled, but the picture is not as good as the most worthy picture in the series. It is the story of a boy and girl. To win the girl’s heart, the boy must capture an outlaw, which he succeeds in doing with his gun.

“The Flirt.” (Sterling. Mon., June 22.)—A fine comedy, along similar lines to the plots used by the “grown-ups.” It is very well acted and brought to a good conclusion. Real love the same girl, until the city girl arrives. Then they both have a battle royal over her, while the two girls pull hair. Reconciliation follows.

“The Sheriff’s Book.” (Res. Sun., June 14.)—A new how-to-disgrace-a-herald play by Youngster, starring Robert Leonard and Hazel Buckman. The hobo detective isn’t so bad after all; he runs down two bandits, with the aid of a little x-ray, and turns out to be the chief of detectives and the hero of the piece. A pleasing comedy-drama.

“Uncle Sam in Mexico.” (Victor, Mon., June 8.)—So many of the same pictures shown here in the weekly review, this reel is hardly worth while. Scenes in Yera Crua, maneuvers of the troops, results of the film, and the air shows in action are the main events.

“In Wrong.” (Crystal. Tues., June 22.)—Charlie meets an anarchist instead of his wife, for the usual surprise. His experiences with the anarchist and his tribe are comical, but very similar.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

“Hobby to the Rescue.” (Komie, Sun., June 14.)—Ed Dillon produced this comedy, which is a laugh until the end, then it becomes disagreeable. Tod Browning takes the part of a lady-killer and gets into a comical situation with another man’s wife.

Our Mutual Girl, No. 22. (Reliance, Mon., June 15.)—Mrs. Knickerbocker meets Florence Reed in the Yellow Rose. Detective Burns and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle are the principals, and the production of Margaret, and next week she will reappear.

“Handle with Care.” (Royal, Sat., June 13.)—An abundance of the slapstick variety comedy reel, which is enjoyable and amusing. A tramp drinks a can of honey which is thought to be nicotine. A number of comic events follow.

“The Knockout.” (Keystone. Two reels. Thurs., June 25.)—The big scene here is the panoramic view of the Indians attacking the immigrant train. It is so realistic that all the audience is possessed with the hope that the whites will last, and they do. A Western family is separated, but at length reunited.

“Desert Thieves.” (Brisco.) Two reels. We don’t know how to account for the production of this picture when we reviewed it was difficult to understand it, as it was without titles, but it seems to get along. The scenes are realistic and the Western atmosphere achieves.

“Romeo.” (Thompson. Two reels. Tues., June 16.)—This drama may appeal to the religious audience more than to others. The actor tells the story of his pathetic life and his reformation to his congregation. The story is entertaining, but quite improbable.

“The Toy Ship.” (Princess, Fri., June 12.)—A new novelty play, lead by a pretty story, but it contains little real action. The adaptaisons will be pleased with it. The lovers are allowed to remain together despite the interference of station and parents.

“The Outlaw’s Nemesis.” (Thompson. Sun., June 14.)—The plot is colorful and dramatic. To win the sheriff’s daughter he must capture an outlaw, which he succeeds in doing with his gun.

“The Hour of Reckoning.” (Brisco. Two reels. Wed., June 17.)—The story starts in New York and ends in India, after a terrible battle between soldiers and Indians. The story is well told, and the fight between Burns and Rawson becomes a derelict, joins the army and five years later comes to the outport, which is located by Indians, and all three die.

“Dan Morgan’s Way.” (Reliance. Fri., June 12.)—Fred Kelsey, Walter Lang, Vester Peg, John Eberts and Billy Baster are the principals, all of whom are important. The story is rather weak, but most will enjoy it. After an adventure with a young lout, Mr. Morgan finally returns to his faithful Dan.

“Her Friend the Bandit.” (Keystone. Thur., June 11.)—This comedy is poor. It was supposed to be a large amount of fun, but it is not as funny as it could be. The Count De Ricou’s play is taken by a bandit, who does not know how to act at a society affair.

“Our Country Cousins.” (Keystone. Sat., June 6.)—The arrival of the cousin at the farm causes a lot of trouble between two of the farm hands. She decides to elope with one and the two go over a precipice. The remainder of the film is employed in their efforts to get up again. The comedy is sure to produce a laugh, but is not equal to the usual Keystone.

“Rivalry.” (Thompson. Two reels. Tues., June 9.)—A well-told story of two rivals, each running for the office of Supervisor of a country town. It ends happily for all concerned, and is well told.

“The Lust of the Red Man.” (Albuquerque. Three reels.—G. P. Hamilton was the producer of this picture. The cameramen wrote the story and starred in the production. One idea seems to be that the modern Indian has the technics of the ancient Indian, and that he will paint him as a true villain of the worst possible sort. This is the idea, and due to this the picture is unpleasing at times. No sympathy goes out to the redskins, even when they are annihilated by the troops in the finale. Jack Livingston plays opposite Miss Farley, and he gives the impression of the typical pioneer. He has some difficult acting to perform, and in parts it could be better. His wife is captured by the Indians and his and two children. An unfortunate woman suffers terrible tortures at the hands of the bloodthirsty reds. She is finally rescued by the troops.

“EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORP’N”

“Around the World in 80 Days.” (Lewis.) Lewis in this part, Six parts, and based on the story of Jules Verne. There is much to praise in the picture, but the author’s ideas will be criticized. The director’s idea of America and the cowboys, to say nothing of Indian, is absurd. The acting is good.

The foreign exteriors are well done, considerably.

Phileas Fogg decides to make the trip around the world in 80 days. He starts with Female Detective Fix after him, believing him to be a forger. He rescues a young lady from a cruel fate in America, and finally arrives in London just in time to win his bet and to free himself of the charge of forgery.

Alexandra Phillips Fahney has voiced her opinions regarding the poster in the “Script,” and objects to the victim’s paper put out by some manufacturers.

Louis Glau, the comedian with Harry Pollard and Jack Hoxton in Mutual, says that the usual self-appointed duties is to help some of the cowboys write their letters.

William D. Taylor, now filling a special en- gagement with his cowboys, has signed a contract to write three vaudeville sketches.

“The Talk of the Tailor” is a comedy in which Harry Pollard and William Hume are featured. Excellent photographic quality and the work of Margarita Fischer makes this an attractive feature.

William J. Telmarsh, has been in pictures of the Western and A series for some years, and has proved popular with motion picture audiences.

The members of the American Baseball Club gave a vaudeville performance at the Poter Ballroom on Memorial Day. A novelty program was presented.

Thos. Ricketts and Winifred Greenland recently rendered a sketch from the old English play “The Long Strike”; the sketch went on a tour for the Salvationists.

“In Pawn Ticket 913” Mr. Lane, of Selig, wore some valuable jewels borrowed from the jeweler. A clerk from the jewelry store stayed during the run of the scenes in which they were used. Under the discretion of Ed Martin and opposite William Stoval, Miss Lane is giving a highly emotional performance in “The Missing Page.”

In a Western, directed by Sidney Ayres at the American, a man is left in the saddle for a long time and was stiff when he got up. The cincture fell underneath the horse, and was kicked in the rear.

In “The Dream Ship” Margarita Fischer and Harry Pollard had the novelty of acting in two sets in one week. The salaries amounted to an enormous sum. The same day William, the author of Millionaire Gillespie of Monte Carlo, and he generously suggested the use of his treasures. Our rug alone was worth $10,000 and the chair used was once the property of a Spanish King. Two pillars were from Pompeii.

When the enlargement and retting of the imp studio is completed, all the present scenery will have been replaced with new and consider- ably improved sets. The lighting systems will be remodelled, and with the new developing plant, being installed, Imp photography will be greatly improved.

Myrtle Steedman and the other members of the Snowshoe Company, worked for a comedy under Chas Bascomb with exterior and interior sets. The new scenes are being hurried to completion.

The same as has, during the last few weeks, produced three important three-reelers: “Secrets,” “Cabin Secrets,” and “Rice and Old Shoes.” These pictures will probably be released under State rights. News Picture Company is giving the producer chief support.

O. A. Gerwood and Vivian Rich play opposite leads with Charlotte Burton carrying an important part in “The Great Off’der” which was released Wednesday, June 17.

When Carlito Blackwell reached New York from Los Angeles last week, the change to the Famous Players had been widely publicized and 165 letters of congratulation awaited him.
"THE PERILS OF PAULINE"
(Eclectic—Seventh Episode)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

The latest release of this popular series maintains throughout the film the high standard of acting, photography, logical development of plot and strong scenic effects which have been characteristic of former episodes.

An unusually striking dissolve appears in a library scene, where a mummy seems to come to life in a man's dream, and step from the sarcophagus to warn a guilty sleeper to mend his ways. A tense incident capable of moving the most phlegmatic observer is a realistic fire in a deserted house, where the heroine, bound hand and foot, has been left to die. Only unusual mechanical ingenuity can produce so vivid a picture of the ravages of a raging conflagration without making it necessary to actually burn down a structure to impress the spectators.

Pearl White's acting in this scene visualizes the horrible suffering endured by fire-caught victims.

In this episode, Hicks, the friend of the villainous secretary who hopes to come into a fortune through the death of Pauline, locks the girl in a deserted house. On leaving, he carelessly throws away a match after lighting a cigarette. It falls into a pile of straw, and instantly there is a blaze. At first he thinks of putting out the flames, then moved by a sudden flash of inhuman suggestion from his innate cruelty and resolute wickedness, he decides to let the house catch fire and burn the girl alive.

She is rescued just in time by her brother Harry, who has managed to escape from the clutches of the secretary and his minion. Harry then takes his sister to their uncle's Montana ranch, where among other exciting adventures, a gang of bandits, bribed by Hicks, leave the girl in a cave to die. This thrilling climax ends the reel.

ILLINOIS CHURCH FEDERATION WANTS CENSORSHIP
Special to The Motion Picture News
Springfield, Ill., June 17.

Without a dissenting vote, all those present at a recent meeting of the Quincy, Ill., Federation of Churches, went on record in favor of the creation of a national board of censorship for motion-picture plays. The action was taken in response to a request from the International Reform Bureau of Washington, D. C., of which Dr. W. F. Crafts is the president.

The communication to the federation was read by J. A. Hama, the executive secretary. It stated that a general move is being made throughout the country to have a national board appointed to carry on, through the Interstate Commerce Commission, as far as federal power will permit, a reform of picture plays.

THE ONLY SON BEFORE HIS MOTHER NEEDED HIM

The household becomes estranged, and finally after a quarrel the wife with her son, leaves Brainerd.

The young man meets Henry Tompkins, who has discovered a new cost reducing method of crossing railroad ties, and agrees to finance a company for putting them on the market. The elder Brainerd learns of the invention, and impressed with its merits, tries to purchase it through a representative, who on the refusal of the partners to sell, resorts to underhanded means to gain possession of their secret formulas. Matters are finally straightened out satisfactorily and the members of the family are united.

COLLEGE WILL HAVE COURSE IN SCENARIOS
Special to The Motion Picture News
Lexington, Ky., June 17.

The University of Kentucky, located here, and which has nearly two thousand students, announces that it will establish a course for instruction in writing motion-picture scenarios beginning with the next September term. The course will be operated in connection with the department of English, and a trained instructor will be in charge.

"THE ONLY SON"
(Lasky—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY E. J. HUDSON

A photoplay favorably commented on by buyers and exhibitors at its first presentation in New York, this Lasky production makes a bid for popularity among motion picture fans who expect thrilling action staged on a large and impressive scale. The prevention of a collision between a runaway freight and a passenger train by a woman, and a fight between union workmen and strike breakers, are some of the means employed with telling effect, in imparting vigorous action to the story.

Although Mr. Ross's talents are better suited for comedy, his versatility enabled him to play a man's serious role satisfactorily. Indeed, at times he rendered a dramatic portrayal of the heavy scenes with an astonishing aptness.

In the fight between the rascally artist and his enemy the two men step out of camera range at the height of a thrilling moment, destroying the psychological effect. Excellent stage management is shown in the mob scene at the factory.

Thomas Brainerd, an engineer, applies to a railroad president for a "try-out" of an invention, but his request is refused. Mrs. Brainerd receives $5,000 as a reward for preventing a railroad wreck, and is thus able to defy the expenses of a test for her husband's patent.

The device proves a success, and after marketing it the inventor becomes a millionaire in the course of a few years. But money fails to bring happiness to the family.

"Finn" is the visualization of a beautiful poem in two parts, produced by Thos. Ricketts, of the American Films Manufacturing Company studios, which is to be released Monday, June 19."

Ethel Grandin, appearing for the first time in her life, in a role that compels her to dress and act as a boy. And more than that she has put on a fake mustache, wears up-to-date clothes and acts just like a young society sport. It is a clever comeback-drama, "Papa's Venging," which is now in the course of production at the lap studio by director Roy Smallwood. William Shay is playing the lead male role in the production.

Eddy Dillon, comedy director at the Reliance and Majestic studios in Hollywood, has started work on his next project. The production comedy by Anita Loos, the youngest scenario writer in the country. Aside from directing the production, Dillon also plays the lead.
Common Sense

THE Exhibitor with a 300 seat theatre cannot afford to purchase the high priced equipment that comes within the means of the man who owns a thousand seat house.

There is a vast difference in the various theatre equipments. Some concerns make accessories for large houses. Others cater to the smaller theatres.

The greatest trouble in buying is to select equipment that will not add too great a burden to your overhead expense, and to obtain quality despite this difficulty.

The Buyers' Service Department of The Motion Picture News was designed to serve in an advisory capacity to exhibitors. The News staff includes experts in every branch of the business. Whether you want an admission sign, or the entire equipment for a theatre, we will give you every possible bit of information obtainable on prices, durability of the commodities, and their worth to your theatre.

"THE VOICE AT THE TELEPHONE" (Kay-Bee—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

It is difficult to classify this production. There is no semblance of a love story or a romance in it, in fact only one woman appears in the picture. It certainly does not go under the head with the average drama; perhaps a detective story would be nearest the right classification, but there is little detective work in it, although two interesting yet exaggerated third degrees are shown. It is merely an event which comes near ending tragically, when the evidence of a telephone operator is used in clearing an innocent man, and convicting the guilty one.

Many dramatic and tense scenes appear, and the way the picture is produced and worked out will cause even the indifferent to burn with curiosity.

The picture is released in two parts of two reels each by the Mutual Film Corporation, at intervals of a week apart.

The leads are played by Thomas Chatterton and Herschel Mayall; they are assisted by a strong cast. Thomas H. Ince and Richard V. Spencer are the authors of the scenario. The former produced the picture as well and it deserves to be ranked with the best of his productions.

Disowned by his father because of his affection toward a telephone operator, Dick Carson enters his father's house at night to obtain his personal effects. Two burglars enter the house also, and hold old Carson up; he reaches for the phone, but is only able to say a few vague words before he is interrupted by one of the burglars, telling him to get off. The connection is then cut off.

Dick is accused of the crime, but the telephone girl recognizes the crook's voice and Dick is freed. His father, of course, lets him marry her.

The first two reels of the production, one of the most pretentious under this brand for some time, appeared June 19. The last two will be released June 26.

27 PINE STREET  NEW YORK
"A HIGHWAYMAN'S HONOR"
(Meca—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE scene of action of this drama is England, and the time the early part of the eighteenth century. There are not many pictures produced dealing with that time and place, and it is almost sure to be received. The Herkomer Film Company of England acted out the picture. The late Sir Hubert Von Herkomer is advertised as playing the leading part, but his part is small, and in the last half of the picture he does not appear at all. A number of others from the same family appear, Miss G. Herkomer and Lady Herkomer, and although neither of these two has an important part they do their work well and make the picture worthy the name of Herkomer.

Perhaps the beauty and artistry of the picture is the first thing that strikes the spectator. The beautiful scenes and the fine way in which the picture is photographed add to it greatly. The costumes worn by the players are correct for the time and place, and the characters appear perfectly at home in them. The sets, too, are truly old English in style.

All these things add to the realism of the picture, and if the observer has any imagination he can hardly believe the picture is being cast on the screen before him; one would really imagine himself witnessing a story of two hundred years ago in England.

Many scenes are worthy to be classed with the best thrillers. The duel, although mild compared to some, is well executed and is an exhilarating sight to see. Dick's escape from jail is as exciting as it is miraculous. He overcomes three men, but the fourth proves his equal and they both fall over the prison wall into the moat. The drop is quite a long one and Dick's opponent is killed, while he escapes.

The drama opens with a typical English fox hunt. A long distance away the hounds, closely followed by the horsemen, may be seen. As they come to a hedge they all clear it gracefully. The story really does not begin until the second reel, as this hunt employs almost all of the first.

Although perfect in many ways, there are some things which are inferior. For instance, after eighteen years Dick is the same looking man as he was before, and clothed in exactly the same clothes. Some of the actions of the minor characters would give the impression that no rehearsal of the picture took place before its actual making. Although these faults are noticeable to all, they are overbalanced by the merits of the picture which easily outnumber them.

The story itself is one that is little used and most entertaining. The daughter of an English nobleman marries her father's squire, instead of the man of his choice. In a duel with his brother-in-law Dick accidentally kills him with a pistol. He is arrested and escapes and later becomes a highwayman. After eighteen years a reward is offered for his capture, and his daughter's lover undertakes the task. He is captured, his identity becomes known, but just as he is being led away to prison, a free pardon comes to him through the efforts of an archbishop.

the spot at the time, proved his courage and loyalty by lending a hand to either fighting the fire or saving documents and factory machinery.

The real hero of the occasion was "Pop" Lubin himself. He was immediately summoned by phone from Betzwood and on reaching the plant his first words were "Are any of my people hurt?" When told that no one had been injured he exclaimed:

"Ahh. Thank God! I can get more films and a new factory, but I can't replace my people."

In one of the vaults the plate and jewels of Mrs. Singli, Mr. Lubin's daughter, had been stored. When recovered the plate was simply a mass of bullion and the diamonds in the jewelry had been turned to carbon by the intense heat.

The only salvage to the company was a small amount of raw stock and what silver can be retrieved by chemical processes from the charred masses of what had once been thousands of feet of perfectly good film.

The ruins were hardly cold before the work of cleaning up, preparatory to rebuilding was started. The fire occurred shortly after ten o'clock in the morning and was out within half an hour. By two in the afternoon the work of removing the debris had started. The contract for the new vault was awarded Monday and work started on rebuilding on Tuesday morning.

It is worthy of note that the fire insurance inspectors had been through the entire plant on Friday, the day before the fire, and had pronounced everything as satisfactory and in excellent shape.

Ventilation Cooling Heating

“TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM” has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don’t waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue N tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

A special motion picture show and entertainment will be given at the Lyric Theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ky., under the auspices of the chamber of commerce of that town, who will devote the proceeds to paying the expenses of a trained nurse to visit the schools and homes in Anderson county during the months of July and August to give instruction in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

John W. Keeler, formerly of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the new manager of the Broad Street Theatre, South Broad and Livingston streets, Trenton, N. J., is in charge of the bookings of films at that playhouse. Herman Wahn, manager of the State Street Theatre, has been successful in picking features which please his patrons.

Phillip Gross, Jr., manager of the Peerless Theatre, Holton and Center streets, Milwaukee, Wis., was arrested for violating the billfold ordinance, which prohibits the exhibiting of any picture depicting gun fights, etc., and was fined $5.00 and costs in the District Court; it was a one-sheet of the "Purloin of Pauline" that the charge was based upon.

Milwaukee evidently will not stand for a feature picture for more than a week at one house. "Les Miserables," which is being shown at the Orpheum Theatre, fell down badly on its second week despite the fact that everything possible was done to boost it.

Starting Monday afternoon, June 2, the National Theatre, Louisville, Ky., is featuring high-class motion pictures until the close of the summer season in September, charging ten cents for any seat in the house except the "Box of 50" and "Box of 100" which are $1.00 and $2.00 respectively.

A return engagement of "The Spoilers," the Selig nine-reel adaptation of Rex Beach’s novel, had a novel ending which was played at B. F. Keith’s Theatre, Louisville, Ky., beginning with the 8th of June. Original letters from Mayor Bouchener, the Chief of Police, and other civic leaders and prominent citizens who requested the return of this picture were used in an effective lobby display.

At the cup dancing contest, held by the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association in honor of the visiting exhibiting firm at the New York convention, Joseph A. Schuchert, one of Buffalo’s best known motion picture men, dancing with Anita Stewart of the Vitagraph company, was declared winner.

The Elywood and Allendale Theatres, Buf- falo, N. Y., now under one proprietorship, are about to publish a weekly newspaper, containing news of the motion picture world, the weekly program, and a back page of advertisements. The bulletin will be distributed at the theatres and other points in the vicinity of each theatre. Manager William G. Kolinka will continue as manager of the Allendale under the new regime.

Among recent Strand attractions in Buffalo, N. Y., have been "The Bride," "The Port of Missing Men," "The Curse of Greed," "Tea of the Storm Country" and "Hunting Big Game in Central Africa." Manager Harold Ekel was in New York recently, arranging with producers for big features in the fall. In addition to managing the Strand Theatre, Mr. Ekel has charge of the Strand and Parker, these two Strand houses are completed in the autumn.

A crowded house was the result of the introduction of moving pictures in the Empire Theatre, at Albany, N. Y., and it looks as if the management has won the right to bat in eliminating barefootism for the summertime, for the film plays. George W. Herbet, representing the All Star feature production, has charge of the bookings.

Mr. Herbet announces that he has secured only films in which real stars of the show were engaged. "In the Absence of the Phins," Ethel Percy and Tully Marshall in "Pill in Full Cure," and "Silly Little Mother," both McClure in "In Missouri," and Jpton Sinclair in the "Jungle" are some of the attractions which were arranged for. The Empire has conducted the same as if the largest attractions were booked, having secured a full form of attendants and a full orchestra.

Several Omaha exhibitors, always anxious to see improvements in their business, have gone to Des Moines, la., recently to look at the new Garden Theatre, Eighth and Locust streets, which is managed by D. F. Blank. All have agreed it is an advanced house.

Omaha's Airdome, den, known this year as the "Devil's Hotel," is a centre of interest to thousands of Nebraskans and visitors annually. This year one of the entertainment features is a Keystone comedy, shown through the screen by a machine in the rear. The feature always makes a hit.

Manager 1. J. Ramsdell, of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, last week started mounting his posters on cloth. The saving through the lasting qualities of the poster after it is mounted is many times more than enough to warrant the extra trouble, he said.

J. J. McCarthy, sales representative of the Lithode exchange in Omaha, was released from the hospital June 16, after suffering from pneumonia.

The Gayety Theatre, of Omaha, recently arranged for a long feature—longer than it has been running. The Hipp Theatre, next door to the Gayety, at Fifteenth and Harney streets, discontinued feature films this week and started in the regular program.

Lowry and Gillespie have opened the Columbia Theatre at Tenth and Hickory streets, Omaha. The theatre is another of the string managed by the American Electric Company.

A CLEAN FRONT

BY CARL LAEMMLE, PRESIDENT

I have a profound respect for the opinion of William Oldknow, general manager of the Consolidated Film & Supply Company's exchanges. He is not only a deep student of moving picture conditions but he is a man who looks ahead all the time. Moreover he comes in close contact with exhibitors who use their brains.

The other day he brought up some points that are worthy of the serious consideration of every thinking exhibitor and every thinking exchange man. I will report the gist of them:

“One of the worst things any theatre can do,” said Mr. Oldknow, “is to use mounted posters. After they have been used once or twice and shipped back and forth with films, they become creased so badly that when they are unfolded they look like a checkerboard. No matter how carefully they are packed for shipment, the creases are bound to appear.

“What is the result? The exhibitor may have some cracking good films to show, but his mussed-up posters MISREPRESENT HIS SHOW and give it a black eye.

“I don't allow mounted posters to be used in any of the Consolidated exchanges. The consequence is that some of my customers who are using, say, sixtieth run of film can make a better front than other theatres which may be using, say, fourth or fifth run.

“I can't understand to save my life why an exhibitor should be careless about the front of his theatre. He ought to make it as attractive as he knows how. No matter what run of film he is using HE OUGHT TO INSIST on CLEAN, FRESH POSTERS. His posters are his most direct form of advertising. If he sticks a dirty, mussed-up lithograph in front of his house he is virtually advertising the fact that he is a careless business man.

“A theatre showing the finest program in the world BUT DISPLAYING MUSSED-UP POSTERS stands a poorer chance of success than the theatre which displays fresh, clean, attractive paper.”

Mr. Oldknow's remarks ought to make careless exhibitors think with all their might. I not only endorse every word Mr. Oldknow says, but I urge exhibitors to buy the cleanest, freshest paper they can lay their hands on. It is more economical to pay for new paper than it is to use paper that is second, third or fourth hand even though the latter may be rented or bought for less money than new paper.

If I owned a theatre I would no more think of using second-hand posters than I would think of buying another man's cast-off shoes. There is no economy in either. There is no sense in either. The one is as absurd as the other.

Posters are a tremendously vital element in the success or failure of your theatre. They are almost as important as the quality of your program. In fact, they run the program such a close second in importance that they are nearly neck and neck.

To Universal exhibitors I say:—Don't MISREPRESENT your show by using dirty, worn-out paper. KEEP A CLEAN FRONT. It may cost you a few cents or even a few dollars more than an unattractive front, but it will pay you bigger dividends as sure as fate!

"Best Productions of the Season"

After seeing two of Warner's Features produced at the big Motion Picture Exposition in New York, an alert exhibitor from the Pacific Coast returned to his hotel and dictated the following letter:--

Mr. F. A. Powers,
c/o Warner's Features, Inc.,
130 West 46th Street,
New York City.

Dear Sir:-

I had the pleasure of seeing at the Convention Hall last week, your two productions of six reels each, entitled, "The Light Unseen" and "Mother Love." These are as near perfect as any I have ever seen. The photography is away above the average, and the acting first-class.

In my opinion, these are among the best, if not the best productions of the season.

Will you kindly notify me when the above subjects will be released in Los Angeles, Cal., as I wish my patrons to have the opportunity, as I have had, of seeing these great productions. I tried to meet you, but failed in my attempt. Will you kindly address your answer to me, and I will be under many obligations.

Truly yours,

Read this letter from a man who knows

DURING the big Exposition in New York a number of the great six-reel Warner's Features were shown. The president of the International Motion Picture Association, Mr. Charles H. Phillips, saw them, and upon his return home wrote the following letter:—

Milwaukee, Wis., June 16, 1914.

Mr. P. A. Powers, President,
Warner's Features, Incorporated,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—

Through the kindness of Mr. Samuel H. Trigger, New York, I had the pleasure of viewing several of your six-reel productions, and I consider these features among the best that have been produced in this country. With best wishes for your future success, I am,

Most respectfully yours,

(Signed) CHARLES H. PHILLIPS,
President,
International Motion Picture Ass'n.

When feature films command praise from such a source, it is time for you to investigate. WARNER'S FEATURES have the appeal that fills houses—the "punch" that builds business—the quality that spells success.

Buying Space

The advertising manager of one of New York's finest department stores gave me the other day the names of the dailies which he considered his best "pullers"—his best advertising mediums, in other words.

He goes to great lengths to check up the mediums he uses. Naturally, for his advertising outlay runs into the hundred thousands. Selection of mediums is a very important matter—his most important problem, in fact. He uses various and devious methods of checking results.

"How about the ——?" I asked, naming a daily which for more than a year has made rapid strides in all around improvement. To-day, in everything that makes a good newspaper—news and its arrangement, editorials, cartoons, features—it is considered by a good many judges to be the best paper published in New York.

The advertising manager smiled indulgently and sophisticatedly, the very same kind of a smile that drives to desperation the conscientious publisher.

"Why," said he with parrot-like precision, "its readers are high-class but non-purchasers."

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed. "I heard that dictum twelve years ago. Don't you know how the paper has changed—how it has popularized itself?"

"Oh, yes; to be sure. To be sure," he hastened. "It's coming right along. It's a splendid paper. We're watching it, you know. But—the same smile—it hasn't arrived yet."

"It hasn't arrived yet!"

When will it arrive? Not, in this advertising manager's estimation, until its rates are so high as to make it almost prohibitive. You can buy space in this newspaper to-day—third page, preferred position—at twenty-three cents a line. The same position in one other paper—one of the three best "pullers"—costs one dollar and twenty cents a line.

There is no question whatever but that the twenty-three cent rate in the growing paper is the best "buy." But our friend the advertising manager won't even give the new paper a chance to prove it.

HERE is too much parrot-like gossip and too little real thinking and investigation in the advertising world.

Advertising managers hear and accept it. No investigation of circulation may be made. No account may be taken of the price charged. In most instances it is impossible to check results.

And so it goes. The paper gets advertising very largely through the inertia of the advertiser.

At the same time another paper is building fast—and sure—like the instance of the New York daily referred to.

In these modern days it is perfectly possible for a publication to achieve in one year what it has taken another publication five years to accomplish.

Of course, it must have ample resources. It must be able to advertise itself more in one year than the other publication did in five years. And it must back up the advertising by editorial excellence and service to its readers and advertisers.

But if it has this excellence and you know that the right effort and resources are back of it, you are buying cleverly when you take advantage of its moderate advertising rate, for the simple reason that you are buying on a rising market.

You need only protect yourself with a yearly contract. Such a paper, with such a start, is bound to acquire circulation in excess of its rate before the expiration of a year.

FILM HALL OF FAME FOR ST. LOUIS

Special to The Motion Picture News
St. Louis, June 24.

Russell T. Edwards, motion picture editor of the St. Louis "Times," has originated and put into practise one of the most novel and attractive schemes of the year. A "Who's Who" department has been added to the "Times," Movie Review," which is the animated edition of the paper, and the readers are asked to nominate those persons whose deeds, or reputations they think entitle them to a place in the Film Hall of Fame.

The public have taken to the plan in an enthusiastic manner, and Miss Charlotte Rumbold, the sociological expert and Branch Rickey, the baseball manager, who put the St. Louis Browns in the first division, have received the first nominations. The "Times" prints this invitation to the public:

"Who is your candidate? Name some one who has done something for the city, for a church, for civic betterment, write your nomination and the reason or reasons in one hundred words, and a motion picture of the one selected will be put in the Movie Review."

NEW THEATRE PLANNED FOR ST. LOUIS

Special to The Motion Picture News
St. Louis, June 24.

An amusement company headed by James Forte, a pioneer in film circles, have completed plans to erect a $25,000 theatre at 1423 Market Street. The house will seat twelve hundred people, and will have a roof garden on top of the building. The plans were made by Hays, Barnett & Hays, the well-known architects, and it is expected that the new place will be ready for its initial performance by August 15.

WILL SHOW LOCAL SCENES

Special to The Motion Picture News
West Point, Miss., June 24.

Manager Hulon Redus, of the Elite Theatre, has closed a contract for special reel scenes and events in this city and the surrounding country.

West Point is probably the smallest town in the country producing its own local events on the screen. It is planned to exchange with other theatres throughout the section.

Louisiana Exhibitors Urge Organization

Pledge to Work for United State League at Recent Meeting—"Five and Six-Reel Programs Kill Business," Says Depinet

Special to The Motion Picture News

New Orleans, June 24.

Need of organization, thorough organization of the motion picture business in Louisiana, promises to be impressed upon local theatres as the result of conditions during the summer. At a meeting of the Exhibitors League of Louisiana, just held, it was promised that there would be a campaign made for new members and a complete union of interests through the state.

Officers elected for the year were: President, A. G. Gugel; vice-president, Theo. Reckognal; secretary, Bert Kern; treasurer, G. B. Mars; national vice-president, John Depinet, and A. G. Gugel and Theo. Reckognal, delegates to the Motion Picture Exhibitors convention.

Mr. Depinet, Manager of the Wonderland Theatre at 934 Canal street, in this city, explained the needs of the motion picture theatres in this state to a representative of the Motion Picture News, and investigation shows that his statements about the lack of organization and unwise competition are correct.

"Exhibitors of New Orleans and Louisiana are weak and far behind other sections as to organization," said Mr. Depinet. "They should get together and get acquainted and organize into a strong league. There is a tendency among exhibitors here when business is dull to lose their heads and see how many reels they can put on for a nickel and do everything to increase expenses instead of running a strong, clean show with as little expense as possible during the dull season.

"Exhibitors who show five and six reels for five cents are killing the business and tiring the public. The very best exhibitors in the country have cut out the long programs, and that is now the greatest need in this state."

R. E. Pritchard.

Five Children's Theatres for Los Angeles

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company Producing L. Frank Baum Attractions, Will Construct the Houses—Friday and Saturday "Kiddies' Days"

Special to The Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Calif., June 23.

PICTURES that need No Censorship" is the motto of the Oz Film Manufacturing Company, which is to build five children's theatres in Los Angeles. The company was incorporated to film the "Oz Fairy Tales" of L. Frank Baum, of "Tik Tok Man of Oz" and "Wizard of Oz" fame. It is capitalized for $100,000, and the company hopes to build it in ten days, all the stock being taken up by members of the L. A. Athletic Club.

The company has a studio, just completed, which covers a block in the Hollywood district. Alice Hageman will come here for the first production, "The Patchwork Girl of Oz." Frank Daniels is under contract to come in July, James Powers in August, and Montgomery and Stone in September.

Marshall Neilan has left the Kalem Company to become director and Louis F. Gottschalk, former musical comedy producer and composer, will be associated with Mr. Baum as producer. The company will build theatres at Hollywood, Boyle Heights, and in the Wilshire district, and construct two downtown houses. Leased films for adults will be produced for five days a week, but Friday and Saturday will be reserved for the kiddies and will be devoted entirely to Oz fairy films.

Top-Heavy Programs React on Business

Meridian, Miss., Exhibitors Engaged in Ruinous Competition with Five and Seven Reels—Hard Summer Season Ahead for Houses

Special to The Motion Picture News

Meridian, Miss., June 25.

An overdose of competition is playing havoc with the motion picture business in this city. The three large houses here are now showing from five to seven films at every performance, and the result is that the program is so long that the ordinary patron does not have time to visit more than one house in the course of an evening.

That the Princess Theatre, in this city, was able to operate for three days and nights following the explosion which wrecked the plant of the Motion Light and Manufacturing Company, leaving the city without lights and without transportation, was due to the grit of the manager.

He refused to allow his house to remain "dark" and brought in his automobile, and connecting it with his motion picture company, leaving without lights and nothing being shown as if nothing had happened.
RESERVE DECISION IN CENSORSHIP SUITS

Judges in Philadelphia Hear Arguments in Tripartite Complaint Against Keystone State Censor Board and Direct Counsel to Submit Briefs—J. C. Hennessy, of General Film, Testifies His Firm Does Not Find Censorship Burdensome and Has No Complaint to Make

When Is a Kiss Not a Kiss? When It's a Misdemeanor.

The firms fighting the censorship law are the Mutual Film Corporation of Pennsylvania and the Interstate Films Company; the Mutual Film Corporation of New York, Buffalo branch; and the Overbrook Theatre of Philadelphia.

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Philadelphia, June 25

ARGUMENTS for both sides were heard, June 15, in the Court of Common Pleas, November 5, in this city, before Judges J. Willis Martin, William H. Snakke and Robert Ralston, in the case of the Mutual Film Corporation et al. against the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors of Motion Pictures.

Counsel for the motion picture interests, George Q. Horwitz, asserted that the act interferes with that section of the bill of rights relating to the freedom of speech and the freedom of the press. He said that for the first time in the history of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania there is an attempt to create a censorship over things about to be exhibited, published or shown to the people.

He contended that the act was an unlawful attempt to create a censorship to decide in advance what may or may not be lawfully printed or published by way of the motion picture screens.

The production of photographs, he contended, comes within the right of free speech granted by the Federal and State constitutions.

"THE whole subject of the determination of the morality, immorality or sacrilegious nature of each and every picture exhibited, as well as sold or rented within this State, is committed to two appointive officers, together constituting the State Board of Censors, without any kind of limitation or restraint and without responsibility to any supervising agency."

This, he argued, was an unlawful delegation of arbitrary powers to two persons, whose decisions, he said, cannot be appealed to any proper tribunal.

The act was further attacked on the grounds that it was confiscatory in that it deprived the complainants of their property without due process of law or of trial by jury, which, under the Constitution, is an inherent right of every man.

Much time was consumed in calling witnesses and attempting to examine them as to the details of the motion picture business.

The testimony was wanted to show that the average commercial value of a film is about ninety days, and that each week its value depreciates, so much so that to delay the exhibition of a film means a serious financial loss and to entirely forbid its showing amounted to a confiscation of property.

The witnesses called were James Burton, Mutual; Vernon R. Carrick, Universal, and J. S. Hebrew, Warner's Features.

I N this connection, J. C. Hennessy, local representative of the General Film Company, was called by the State and testified that his company did not find censorship burdensome and that they were satisfied to submit all of their films.

Although not brought out in the courtroom, this testimony is the exact reverse of statements made by Mr. Hennessy when called as a witness in the suit of the Mutual Film Corporation when he was testing the Ohio censorship law in the courts of that State.

In the present case the witness, however, did admit that if films were withheld from exhibition for two weeks that there would be a loss to the renters of the films. At this point the judges ruled that such testimony, as had been heard was irrelevant and decided that all testimony should be introduced by counsel and that same be included in their briefs.

When it was attempted to show that it would be physically impossible for two persons to review all the reels that were brought into Pennsylvania the attorney for the state objected. The judges again ruled that it did not bear on the constitutionality of the law.

AT ORNEY General John C. Bell, assisted by his counsel, Morris Wolf, represented J. Louis Breitinger, chief censor, and Mrs. E. C. Niver, assistant censor.

Attorney Wolf, who did the talking for the defendants, cited other cases which he considered relevant and which might furnish precedent. At one point during his argument the judge asked him if a censorship might not be established over art galleries and cartoons, and for the minute it seemed to stun the orator. He, however, replied that he thought such a censorship might be established legally. The judge simply smiled.

Throughout the arguments the judges listened very attentively and at the close reserved decision.

The opinion will be handed down in writing after the examination of the briefs submitted by both sides.

When is a kiss too long? In real life—the witness refuses to state. In reel life—when it is over four feet.

Such, at least, is the ruling of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors of Motion Pictures. As a result, the youthful fan will no longer be able to disturb a love scene with the cry, "Break away there," as of old.

Mrs. E. C. Niver, the feminine half of the censor board, says, "Cut it out," but not meaning it as a slang term, her word goes and anything over four feet long in the oscillation line is taboo.

The new "yard and a third" rule of Mrs. Niver was caused by a five-yard kissing match which she had to endure in one of the films which she was censoring last Monday morning. This ruling has automatically brought into being a new table of measurement (not U. S. standard). Before, four lips equaled one kiss. Now it is one second equals one foot. Four feet equal one kiss. Eight feet equal a pair of scissors.

The scissors do not necessarily cut the thread of love nor of the story, but a snap here and another about four feet away, transforms a possible soul kiss into a firm but dainty smack.

Thus the law allows one staid matron to put a dent in love's young dream until the courts have their say.

Then maybe love and kisses will again come into its own.

THE operator in the cutting room at Lubin's has compiled the following table to be observed:

Feet

Fiance-Fiancée...........Four to six

Husband-Wife

Three and a half to five

Newlyweds...........Five to seven

Brother-Sister..............Three

Husband-Mother-in-law.....Two

MOTION PICTURES OUST STOCK
(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

New Haven, Conn., June 25.

Back to the motion pictures and vaudeville, is the slogan of the management of Fox's Grand Opera House, after a six-weeks season of stock that met with only moderate success. The theatre has closed for the summer months, and will reopen in the fall with its variety shows.

Stock was only recently introduced at the theatre, the New York Academy of Music players taking parts with such stars as Robert Edeson, Marguerite Clark, Amelia Bingham, Edmund Breese, and others, in the leads. Even such high-class "staff" fails of the warm reception tendered the "Perils of Pauline" and life feature attractions.

EXPECT BOSTON STRIKE
Boston, June 25.

A general strike among motion picture operators has been confronting managers here for several days. It is stated that a business agent of the Moving Picture Operators Union, acting in excess of his authority, ordered operators to leave their booths while the managers of houses in Boston, Chelsea, Cambridge and Somerville were absent from their theatres.

It is said that the union demands $5 for work on Sunday and wants $1 an hour for overtime. The managers are up in arms over the coercion.

Y. M. C. A. COMPETITION IN ELIZABETH
Elizabeth, N. J. June 25.

Picture shows are being given every Saturday afternoon and evening at the local Young Men's Christian Association. A Powers 6-A projecting machine has been installed and programs of Western, comedy, and educational subjects are given. So far the performances have not drawn very well, nevertheless some of the managers of the regular houses object to the Y. M. C. A. shows. The Y. M. C. A. has no motion picture license and pays no taxes.

MINISTERS OBJECT TO "CREATION"
Hattiesburg, Miss., June 23.

A peculiar state of affairs arose here over the production of the motion picture of "Creation" at the Auditorium. The films were produced here under the auspices of the International Bible Students' Association and Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn. Local pastors objected to the production on account of the fact that the creed of Pastor Russell does not carry with it a belief in the material hell.

Plan to Force Censorship on Indiana
(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

Evansville, Ind., June 23.

A BILL to put Indiana into the class of film-censored states is being framed by Representative Miedreich, of Evansville.

This bill will put the supervision of films shown in the state in the hands of three censors to be appointed by Governor Ralston.

Aside from attempting to restrict the rights of the film exhibitors, the bill will list specific pictures that may be barred without the discretion of the censors, prizefights, scenes of riot and intoxication among them. Specifically will the bill declare against the showing of any picture that reflects whatsoever upon any religion.

Representative Miedreich, a lawyer, believes that his bill will be constitutional, but other officials who have been consulted by the exhibitors are of a different opinion. There is considered to be no question of the passage of such a bill, as the forces that have requested Miedreich to frame the bill are in control of the democratic machinery of the state, which is in legislative power.

The Taggart-Fairbanks faction, now dictating the political policy of the state and the democratic administration, is catering to the ministerial element in this and other instances to divert agitation from the liquor interest, which is clamoring for protection. In making the censorship of pictures an issue this church element is given the intimation that the democratic machine wishes morality.

Exhibitors in Indiana are opposed to censorship of any kind.

A recent instance illustrated to them its disadvantages.

The stand at the baseball park collapsed here recently at the school field day exercises. A motion picture operator caught the picture of the collapse and the subsequent disorder and confusion in rescuing the injured.

The collapse and injury of forty was the result of the negligence of the city officials and the school board. The officials promptly demanded that scenes of the accident be cut out and that only the pictures before and after the collapse be shown.

When the picture fans discovered what had been done, attendance at the houses showing the picture dropped exactly ninety-two per cent. This has resulted in activity among the local exhibitors to prevent the passage of a censor act by the 1915 Indiana legislature.

Exhibitors Will Seek Liberal Sunday Law
(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

Atlantic City, June 24.

FINIS was written upon Atlantic City's Sunday amusement war, so far as the amusement predators are concerned, when William Ferran, manager of the Steeplechase Pier, was fined $15 for operating noisy devices recently, and managers of the Bijou and City Square Theatres were penalized $1 each for showing motion pictures on Sunday.

It is now intended for the amusement men of the entire beach to act in concert in procuring the passage of a liberal Sunday measure.

Small amusement men of the Boardwalk scored a second victory in police court recently when Recorder Keffer declared the giving of motion pictures on Sunday a violation of the city law.

Fines of $10 each were imposed in the cases of the Apollo Theatre, leased by the Nixon Amusement Company; the Garden Pier Theatre, leased by the B. F. Keith interests, and the New Nixon Theatre, of which Samuel

PROJECTION ARTICLES IN DAILY
(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

Elizabeth, N. J., June 25.

The Elizabeth "Evening Times," which recently started a motion picture department, is running a series of articles treating the various phases of projection. Several local managers have taken advantage of the publicity given to this line of their business, and are taking up the subject in their newspaper advertising.

A new Powers 6-A machine has just been installed in Proctor's Broad Street Theatre, and the Garden Theatre has put in a powerful new generator with the object of clarifying its pictures.
NEW HAVEN EXHIBITORS WIN SUNDAY FIGHT

Allowed to Open without Interference—Court Approves Exhibitions Likely Agitators Will Continue Clamor for Week-End Thriving After Six Months’ Existence

Conducted with Decorum—Not Closing—Association

Special to The Motion Picture News
New Haven, Conn., June 25.

O more do Savin Rock motion picture exhibitors and other amusement promoters fear the disruption of New England’s greatest pleasure resort. Prosecutor Charles Martin—he of fame, bought with “promises” to act against everybody doing business on Sunday as soon as he took up the reins of the office in which he alternates with Assistant Prosecutor Arthur B. O’Keefe—has not so much as turned an ear to the complaints of the anti-Sunday-business agitators who have been pressing him to “do something.”

Mr. O’Keefe is on duty, and it is safe to say that from now on Sunday business and motion picture exhibitions will not be disturbed.

Dr. S. A. de Waltoff, proprietor of the Orpheum and Ardmore, the leading theatres at the “Rock,” fittingly demonstrated recently that motion picture men have nothing to fear by keeping open on Sunday. After receiving instructions from the court that so long as “exhibitions were conducted quietly and in a manner befitting the Sabbath” they might be held on Sunday, Manager de Waltoff decided that he needed a band concert in addition to his pictures to liven up a Sunday performance and attract a crowd.

In accordance with his decision he hired a band and announced that it would play on Sunday. People read of this, and considering that there might be some “fun” of a kind not advertised, went to the Orpheum. They enjoyed a good concert, an excellent picture performance and—nothing more—for the police failed to make an appearance.

During the week following it was confidently expected that some action might be taken—arrests made, or orders to close the Orpheum issued—and it caused no little surprise when it was found that the authorities seemed inclined to let matters drop and pay no heed to Manager de Waltoff’s challenge, to which his action literally amounted.

Talk still prevails of the need of some action to stop Sunday exhibitions, but in all probability only the desire will remain, as Mr. Martin apparently does not care to try a case that has already been thrown out of the courts, and Mr. O’Keefe sees no reason why he should.

All that remains open to the agitators is to live up to their threats to take the matter to the highest courts. As yet they have evinced no particular enthusiasm over such a step, and affairs remain “in statu quo.”

Savin Rock is not the only place that has its Sunday problem: even New Haven itself is so troubled. Exhibitors are at a loss to understand why Sunday exhibitions are permitted in other states, yet not tolerated here, and are understood to be planning a campaign at the next general assembly for legislation favorable to Sunday opening.

Strange as it may seem, in neither Orange nor New Haven have the authorities shown themselves opposed to Sunday amusements. As a matter of fact, in New Haven they are inclined to encourage them, and have failed to take any action against Sunday baseball, which is also against the law.

Principally the clergy and a few of the more pious of the people hereabouts have taken upon themselves to oppose Sunday amusements.

Feature films, five and six reels in length, are taking so well in this city that managers are almost at continual warfare in seeking the privilege of being the first to exhibit them.

A number of the all-star attractions have been rented in central houses for return engagements and one, “A Million Bid,” was shown in this city five times. Each performance is greeted with a packed house, wherever a feature film is displayed, and time and again it has been found necessary to turn patrons away, even the “S. R. O.” sign failing of its purpose.

Vaudville and “legit” theatres are suffering, theatre-lovers finding it to their advantage to “take in” the pictures when exhibitors are vying with each other to see which can put up the best show.

The Orpheum, in Savin Rock, is making a strong showing of feature, and has announced an eight-reel for the near future.

Frequent changes of management have failed to produce an increase of business at the Majestic Theatre, and in consequence the building is now for rent for any purpose whatever. The theatre failed shortly after its efforts to replace motion pictures with regular drama, and closed its doors for good.

Manager M. J. Slepac, of the Globe and Comique, had an experience recently that almost led him to abandon the amusement business. Several reels of a feature film disappeared and despite the closest search, could not be found in his office or the theatre. He was about to reconcile himself to the loss of between $300 and $400, when the missing film turned up in a Maine railroad station where they had been sent by mistake.

Practically every member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, of New Haven, was present at the recent monthly meeting in Odd Fellows Hall recently, when Harold W. Rosenthal, secretary of the International Motion Picture Association, delivered an address in which he touched upon the censorship question.

Mr. Rosenthal’s presence in New Haven was for the purpose of urging as many as possible of the local exhibitors to attend the convention in New York. He told the show men what might be expected at the convention, and advised them to pay particular attention to the discussions on censorship.

F. H. Richardson, a writer on projection also spoke, the topic of his discourse being “Proper Projection.” He gave the exhibitors a number of valuable pointers on how to work their machines to the best advantage, and outlined some of the causes that contribute toward the failure of a picture to show properly on the screen.

The local Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is practically a new organization, having been organized only about six months ago. It has done good work, however, and under the leadership of President Philip Wittstein, has advanced to its present flourishing condition. Its affiliation with the national body has not yet been accomplished.

Only recently the association held a banquet at the Hotel Oneco, at which about thirty people were present. A number of prominent men spoke.

Within the past few weeks five new and old theatres, open-air and indoor, have opened in New Haven. All are doing well. They are owned by George M. Fahy, Christian Van Der Mark, Burns & Harding, H. J. Rabanus and Samuel Glaizer.

Murphy & Brown have also opened an open-air theatre, but the structure is only a temporary one, to be remodeled into a theatre in the fall. It will be one of the largest in the city, and now accommodates about 300 people.
CITY ORDINANCE KILLS THEATRE
Special to The Motion Picture News
Rochester, N. Y., June 25.
The Monroe, on Monroe avenue, corner of Clinton avenue, S., has gone out of business, and will be replaced by a feed store. The house was doing business in two stores on the ground floor of an apartment building, and was one of the first to be established in Rochester. Such a location would not be permitted by the city officials under the new ordinances, but the old one was allowed to continue. W. C. Hubbard was the proprietor. He sold out to become connected with a local film exchange.
Business has been holding up fairly well in Rochester, in spite of the warm weather. The afternoon trade has fallen off most, but in the evenings the houses do a good business.

WILL GO ON WITH NEW THEATRE
Special to The Motion Picture News
Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 25.
The Appellate Division of the supreme court, now in session in Brooklyn, has granted a stay in the injunction against the completion of the interior of the New Theatre in this city, brought against the proprietor, George Cohen by James E. Andrews, until the suit against Cohen can be carried to a higher court.
The suit was originally brought by Andrews, who alleges that the right of way over the property leased by Cohen is not the same as in the original grant and that it is not adequate to his purpose.
Following the stay of proceedings, Mr. Cohen will at once proceed with the construction of the new theatre building which he expects to have in condition for use about September 1.

MAY GO BACK TO "LEGIT"
Special to The Motion Picture News
Rochester, N. Y., June 25.
An unconfirmed rumor among motion picture men is to the effect that the city will probably lose one of its largest houses, the Victoria, on Clinton avenue, S. J. J. Farran, manager. It is said that this house will soon change hands, and be used for high class drama.
To outward appearances, the Victoria is doing a great business in pictures. The theatre was never a success financially until it went into pictures. It was first intended for vaudeville, with pictures as a part of the programme, but only when the present management took hold of it and put in pictures at five cents, did it begin to do business. The house has a seating capacity of 1,800, including a balcony. It is commonly reported that the rental of the establishment is very high.

THEATRE USES EIGHT PAGES FOR OPENING
Istrione, in Jackson, Miss., Establishes Record—All Firms Having a Hand in Its Construction Advertise in the "Daily News" Supplement.
Special to The Motion Picture News
Jackson, Miss., June 24.
A six-page supplement devoted exclusively to the Istrione Theatre, which opened its doors on Monday, June 15, appeared in the Sunday "Daily News." To this remarkable advertising achievement Manager H. A. Carleton attributes the fact that from 2 p.m., when the first performance began, until the closing hour on the opening day, the house was continually crowded with people, and since then the attendance has been splendid.
The supplement was published in the regular form of the newspaper, and besides containing pictures of the theatre and of Mr. Carleton and J. C. Landen, the contractor and joint owner with Mr. Carleton, it embraced a vast amount of interesting information regarding the motion picture business, and quite some advertising matter.
To pay for the advertising all building and equipment firms which had played a part in the completion of the Istrione ran special display ad-

Minneapolis House Turns to Pictures
Minneapolis, Minn., June 24.
Two of the city's largest theatres, the Orpheum and the Auditorium, which heretofore have been played only by the so-called legitimate shows and vaudeville, have invaded the motion picture field, and commencing with this month have featured only movie plays.
Manager G. E. Raymond, of the Orpheum, announced that commencing with June 2 only feature pictures from the motion picture world will grace the boards at his theatre.
"Antony and Cleopatra" will be the opening attraction which W. A. Hogan, manager of the Auditorium, has booked for that theatre's initial introduction to motion picture enthusiasts. The film has been booked for one week and will be followed by the eight-reel play "Du Barry."
No Censorship for Montana Exhibitors

Managers Declare That the Average Photoplay Fan Can Be Depended Upon to Regulate the Question—American Public is the Court of Last Resort on the Censorship Question, Says Butte Manager—
Clean Feature Films Are Favorites

Special to The Motion Picture News

Billings, Mont., June 24.

COUNT Billings as unanimously opposed to censorship—at least in its present or proposed forms. Were it possible to secure a board of censors above the temptations of political graft, broad enough to lay aside personal prejudice, human enough to appreciate a people’s wants and needs, and with the working capacity of a thousand-horsepower dynamo—but then you might as well wish for the moon, say exhibitors—you would come nearer getting such a body.

Censorship as conducted at present or as proposed in any of the so-called “reform” bills now pending, is nothing more or less than a useless expense which the exhibitor ultimately pays. That is the reply of Billings managers. “Tell the question, ‘How do you regard censorship?’ Then add that they wouldn’t be so bad if the investment produced results, and proceed to tell you in detail and with great fluency of the fallacies of the present system of censoring films.

“It is simply a hardship on the exhibitor,” argued F. N. Jones, proprietor of the Star Theatre, a pioneer in motion pictures in Montana and one of the most progressive film exhibitors in the Rocky Mountain region. Mr. Jones is a Columbia University graduate and a director of the Montana Theatre and Exhibitors’ League.

“I believe in good censorship,” he went on. “And if it were possible to have a national board composed of fair and impartial men possessing the necessary qualifications, I should certainly favor it. Personally, however, I don’t believe such a board could be assembled, and even if it could, who would be foolish enough to say that the members could view all the films produced in the United States, to say nothing of those of foreign make.

“What is the use of censorship as now conducted? We don’t have censorship of the drama, our books are not censored, our newspapers contain whatever their editors think would interest us—why single out the exhibitor? Is he any worse than the common run of mortals?

“A local board of censorship in most communities would be a joke, and a national board would be but little better for the obvious reason that it could not begin to view all the films produced. The best the censors could do would be to read the synopsis, and the synopsis seldom tell half the story. There was a time in the motion-picture business when censorship was perhaps desirable, but at the present stage of development, with men of education and refinement in the game, and the public offered enough of a variety to enable it to discriminate in favor of the better class of productions, the immutable law of ‘the survival of the fittest’ forces the exhibitor to either offer clean, wholesome plays or go out of business.”

A. J. KINGMAN, proprietor of the Gem Theatre, is equally opposed to censorship, characterizing it an unnecessary burden.

“I wouldn’t allow a picture unfit to be seen, in my house,” he declared, “and I believe practically all exhibitors feel the same way. The standard of photoplays has been raised to such a high plane that I don’t believe the proportion of undesirable films is one hundred, and that one exhibitor will catch—if he doesn’t he will catch something else from his patrons. Even if there were exhibitors whose moral status led them to show indecent pictures they would soon discover that it was very poor business policy to do so, as the theatre can’t live which makes a practice of showing questionable productions. A few of its patrons might want it, but the mass of the people can be depended on to censor their own amusements.

“In the long run, the public has to pay for censorship, and it occurs to me that money now spent for inferior censorship might be more profitably invested in better service and better productions.”

Similar broadsides are to be heard from censorship is mentioned to Manager Art Lovett, of the Broadway, or Manager Keith, of the Luna Theatre. If there is any good in it for anybody but the politicians, they fail to see it, and their opinion is representative of that of exhibitors throughout the West.

F. N. Jones, proprietor-manager of the Star Theatre, is spending $3,000 in altering and redecorating his house. A new ceiling, new furniture, a new lighting and ventilation system and other improvements are the features. He expects to cater to the best trade, and everything about the theatre will be strictly first class. The Star at present is featuring masterpieces on Wednesday and Thursday of each week, charging a slightly increased admission on those days.

“Bill” Cutts, formerly proprietor of the American Theatre at Butte, and a prominent figure in Montana politics, has moved to Spokane to become secretary-treasurer of the Liberty Amusement Company of that city.

Film men of Montana, North and South Dakota are planning to get together soon to form a tri-state exhibitors’ league. A meeting will probably be held early in July to tentatively discuss the plan.

Feature films are prime favorites with Billings theatregoers, and exhibitors believe the time is coming soon when an all-feature house will be a paying proposition.
A $200,000 HOUSE FOR SYRACUSE

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 25.

A new theatre patterned after the $1,000,000 Strand, in New York, will be erected in this city, at the corner of South Salina and Harrison streets, by William F. Rafferty, associated with the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Company, of Buffalo. It will have a seating capacity of 2,000 and will cost approximately $200,000. Mr. Rafferty has a fifty year lease. It will be called The Strand and with the New York theatre will be a part of the chain of thirty-five theatres operated by the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation.

The new theatre will be of fireproof construction throughout. The exterior will be treated in glazed terra cotta and buffed pressed brick and tile.

There will be a main floor and a large double balcony in the auditorium. To avoid all possibility of panic, there will be eighteen separate exits. As an extra precaution a court will be left on the south side of the building. The court will be eight feet wide and a number of exits will open into it.

The interior of the theatre will be treated with Oriental plaster, scagliola, marble and tile. Rest rooms, retiring and smoking rooms will be provided and every possible convenience installed.

An unusually large pipe organ will be installed. It will cost about $15,000. The keyboard will be operated in the orchestra pit.

An elaborate system of ventilation will be installed. Fresh air will be forced into the theatre through mushroom ventilators placed under the seats and the foul air will escape through a system of exhausts.

OPPOSITION TO PICTURES IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Conn., June 25.

Meeting with opposition in the form of a protest from about 100 residents in the vicinity of Rowe and Lombard streets, Thomas J. Murphy and Henry J. Brown, amusement promoters, withdrew their application for a permit to exhibit motion pictures in the neighborhood several days ago.

They are proceeding now with the construction of an open-air "movie" theatre and expect to have it built within a week. The theatre will probably be opened during the early part of June. It will be 90 feet deep by 50 feet wide, and will have a seating capacity of about 800.

The petition of citizens to deny a permit to Messrs. Murphy and Brown is the second to have succeeded in this city in a very short while.

$100,000 Theatre for San Diego in Autumn

Special to The Motion Picture News

San Diego, Cal., June 23.

The Plaza Theatre will soon have a $100,000 companion picture house on the ground adjoining it on the east. Work will begin at once on razing the property and the construction of the new edifice, which will be one of the most beautiful picture houses on the Pacific Coast and up to the minute in every appointment.

R. E. Hicks and A. L. Hiller, joint owners of the Plaza Theatre, will operate the house. The new theatre will be ready for occupancy about September 15.

Walter S. Keller, architect, is pushing the work with all possible speed. The new house will be unlike anything in San Diego, replete in new and novel appointments, equipped with a ventilating system which, by means of levers and buttons, it is possible to reduce the temperature in summer to any desired degree above 50, and in winter the heat may be applied at will.

The system also provides for complete change of the atmosphere every few seconds.

The exterior will be of Spanish mission architecture, radiating myriad colors by day and brilliantly lighted at night. The interior will be furnished expensively, including chairs already ordered at a cost of $89 each, the latest and most improved projectors, curtain and other appointments, and a private electric light plant, such as has made a reputation for the projection at the Plaza.

A specially built $13,000 photo-player will be constructed for the house and attuned particularly to its acoustics.

In the basement of the new house will be an immense plant for making motion pictures, a feature already an adjunct of the Plaza under limited conditions.

The Plaza makes motion pictures of local news subjects and in a commercial way, notable among the latter being the 2,000 feet of the San Diego & Arizona Railway now being shown about the city.

The new theatre will be equipped for larger and more frequent contracts. The two houses will be conducted under the same management as the Plaza now, and as companion theatres, each of the highest order.

The faces and companies seen in the Plaza will not be in the new house, and vice versa, yet all will be of the best quality afforded by the leading producers. Messrs. Hicks and Hiller will make the new house a part of the Plaza Amusement Company, which is the corporate name under which business is conducted.

The new house will have a seating capacity approximating 1,000. Fintel, Steinmetz and Getzelber are instrumental in negotiating the lease, which covers a long term of years.

Capital Screen Club Will Have Quarters

Fulton Brylawski's Appeal for a Home for the New Exhibitors and Exchange-men's Organization Meets With Hearty Response at Meeting.

Washington, D. C., June 25.

At the recent meeting of the Screen Club, at a banquet at Castelli's, about one hundred exhibitors and exchange men were present. Fulton Brylawski, secretary of the local Exhibitors League, made an excellent toastmaster and surprised the company with his wit. Of course A. Dresser, manager of the Washington Film Exchange handling the Universal program, headed the list of speakers, as he is the president of the club.

Other speeches were made by Dr. Wm. P. Herbst, president of the local Exhibitors League, B. C. Cunningham, manager of the Mutual Exchange; Tom Moore, president of the Moore Amusement Company; W. H. Irvine of the Exchange Company; W. H. Irvine, of "The World's Special Features," Alan Backman, manager of the Pastime, and J. Lust of Warner's Features.

The remarks made were, on the whole, far from business trials, many of them of a humorous nature and apropos of personal experiences though trade affairs were discussed.

It was the talk of Mr. Backman that lit the fuse of the evening and this was a suggestion—almost an appeal—for club rooms for the association. "Let us have some place we can call our own, where we can hold meetings, banquets, discuss matters and meet each other when we wish." emphatically announced the speaker. The idea struck a responsive chord and was unanimously taken up.

Another important matter discussed was a ball to be given by the club in the fall. The Screen Club is doing much for the social intercourse of film men and was A. Dresser, president; Harry Crandall, secretary; John Morgan, treasurer, and Morris Davis, vice-president. W. H.
Storing Up Advertising Ammunition

By S. Barrett McCormick

The Last Time This Exhibitor Was Caught Without Material for His Advertisements, He Said "Never Again"—Now He Has His Own Reference Department, Complete from A to Z

SORRY, Mr. Exhibitor, but our advertising matter has not arrived from the home office; I haven't a synopsis, the stimuli are lost. I don't know the story; I've wired, but the office boy that handles our "advertising junk" is out to a double-header and I can't get you a line to advertise "Why She Did It," although you play the film to-morrow.

How many exhibitors have oft heard those or similar pathetic words from the man that peddles the features, takes his money and leaves the show to the tender mercies of cruel fate, without a three-sheet or a blocked electro?

The first "state righter" that sprung to "Jacket-Advertising" talk on H. E. Ellison, manager of the Colonial and the New Plaza theatres, Denver, Colo., was the last to get away with it, and in reality he did not.

THE feature in question was several months ago, when the first of dramatic stars were crossing the border line to screenland. Photographs were very essential, synopsis and reviews doubly so—but, sad to relate, they failed to arrive in advertising time. Hungry the advertising solicitor haunted the exhibitor's sanctum for the promised space until nearly press time.

"By the sacred sprocket wheels of a Powers 6-A how can I advertise a show like this without stuff?"

"No cuts?" queried the A. S.

"No cuts. Huh, no photos to make 'em from, even! No dope on past performances? No nothing!"

"Follow me," replied the A. S. to Ellison's last remarks, as he again felt the near presence of the coveted space, and together they ascended to the sacred door of the newspaper's "morgue."

IT was not until after Ellison had extracted several two and three column cuts, some good if musty feature stories, a lobby display of plate photos of the star from the time of his debut, a biography or two, scenes from the star's successes and some costume poses in the role he essayed in the film, that Ellison realized what a favor the feature man had done him by letting him have only the reels.

Incidentally, it fed the bug of imagination and brought forth an idea.

If a newspaper could maintain such a library or "morgue" for everything from potatoes to Portuguese, why couldn't an exhibitor maintain a morgue that dealt intimately with his business—and his box-office?

ALL the s'ray trade journals that heretofore had clogged the carbon boxes and choppers succumbed to the shears and the idea. Two copies of The Motion Picture News found their place to his office, where only one came before, and that extra one likewise fell under the yawning blades. Two large A to Z letter files that cost about fifty cents each, and a few hundred sheets of cheap second-hand sheets completed the equipment.

The synopsis, advance notices and reviews of every three-reel or over subject was carefully clipped, pasted on the sheet and filed alphabetically. Likewise were the biographies, good stories and photos of every film player and dramatic star that was venturing into the screen limelight.

ELLISON'S morgue solved the problem. There before him were the truly authoritative reviews and criticisms by men who knew and who spoke truthfully because they strove to elevate the silent drama; and no small amount of his decisions were based upon the "hoyle" of this old morgue.

Now one can find out from Ellison how the villain escaped in that Italian melodrama of last January, or what are Alice Joyce's hobbies, the names of the Costello children or what the News said about the film appearance of some brilliant dramatic player, just by turning to the right letter in Ellison's "Morgue."

ENCOURAGING co-operation with the dramatic houses, gaining the value of their advertising and the prestige and following of their attraction and yet profiting both the legitimate theatre and the photoplay house, seems to have been solved in a plan outlined by G. H. Greaves, manager of the Prince Theatre, Denver, when that house will present the Famous Players' production starring Miss Jane Grey and that popular favorite of that city will open a summer engagement of stock at the famous and favored Oriental Gardens.

The plan, easily applicable to a similar situation in any city, consists of a carefully outlined contest conducted through the motion picture department of a newspaper.

Ten days to two weeks prior to the engagement (the photoplay and stage appearances being simultaneous in this case) display advertisements will announce the appearance of the star. This will be followed up by readers pointing out the dual appearance of the popular player and in a new manner—referring to the many artists who are playing for the camera, how some have found new modes of dramatic expression in the silent art and how others lose their most valuable asset—the voice—in the screen drama.

This paves the way, implanting in the minds of the readers not only the double appearance but suggests comparison between their two performances.

THERE are few that will not mentally picture the failings of the camera to exploit the actor's vocal emotion and who will see where the wonderful possibilities of motion pictures will augment the interest and intensity of the play. The seed of curiosity and speculation soon grows into a tree of talk, branching out and carrying its appeal by the arguments and talk it creates.

Shortly following this the newspaper announces a contest, offering several cash prizes, and many tickets to both dramatic and photo theatres to those who best tell in a hundred- or two hundred-word essay why Miss Grey is seen to better advantage in either stage or screen portrayals.

The theatres will now begin to extensively exploit their star in their respective roles, wounding the advertisement with an air of co-operation and friendly rivalry, perhaps advancing suggestions that will encourage the contestant in their particular choice.

The contest closes immediately after the engagement of the photoplay.

If the plan justifies large cash prizes, as it would in many cities, the contest rules may include that the chances for the theatres be attached to the essay assuring that the contestant has truly witnessed both performances and is equipped to make a truthful comparison.

Mr. Greaves has met with splendid co-operation and the business-getting scheme proves to prove a most novel and profitable one.
$500,000 Educational Film Company Formed

The Duke of Manchester Floats Concern to Supply Churches, Colleges and Similar Bodies with Religious Pictures—Prominent Men Interested; Henry Clews, Dr. Parkhurst, S. S. McClure and Other Prominent Men Interested in New Enterprise

For the first time in the history of the industry a company has been formed for the purpose of exploiting educational and religious subjects exclusively, and on as large a scale as amusement pictures are now put on the market. The Duke of Manchester, the son-in-law of Zimmerman, the baking powder king, is the promoter of the new concern. Millionaire Zimmerman has backed it for $500,000.

The organization is known as The Church and School Social Service Corporation. The officers are the Rev. William Carter, president; the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, vice-president; S. S. McClure, secretary, and Henry Clews, treasurer. An assistant manager of one of the large film exchanges has been selected as general manager of the organization, which has been perfected by the Rev. William Carter. Offices have been opened at 18 East Forty-first street.

An advisory board has been appointed, its members including prominent churchmen and educators of New York and elsewhere. The plan is to take pictures in the Holy Land and the mission fields, together with educational and sociological subjects here and abroad, and supply them to the institutions intended to be served at a cost lower than the regular prices of the commercial companies.

In a recent interview, the Duke made known some of the reasons why the motion picture field seemed to be ripe for the exploitation of a company devoted to religious and educational films for use in private exhibition halls.

"Yes, it is true; I am going into the motion picture business," he declared.

"I have interested my financial friends, who readily contributed to the formation of a $500,000 motion picture corporation. We shall have 40,000 shares of preferred stock at $10 per share, and 16,000 shares of common at the same price.

"I do hope the people will not take the idea from my mention of this that we are following usual Wall Street methods to exploit them. That is farthest from our minds.

"The purpose of this company is to supply churches and educational institutions throughout America first and later throughout the entire world with pictures of religious, moral and educational value.

"There are 1,000,000 children going to the motion pictures every night and for the most part they learn nothing that is good, and much that is harmful. The churches are steadily losing attendance. It has been proved that children learn more quickly by the eye than by the ear, and hold a more lasting impression of what they see. Our plan is to reach the youth of the world with the very best in story pictures.

"Our corporation will be known as the Church and School Social Service Corporation, for the advancement of moral and religious education and social uplift work through the medium of the higher art of the motion pictures.

"The organizing director and president is the Rev. William Carter, Ph.D., of No. 18 East Forty-first street. The Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst is vice-president. Our treasurer is the noted banker, Henry Clews, and S. S. McClure is the secretary.

"I am a sort of vice-president, but I shall be the first field secretary in the work in this country. Later I expect to become president of the parent company to be organized to cover the entire world.

"We shall start with the Old Testament and produce accurately every scene therein. We shall present a complete curriculum of the educational side of life. We shall teach geography by motion pictures. We shall show everything to the school pupil that the books taught us in our boyhood, and keep right up with each new discovery.

"Our field is practically unlimited. There are 115,000 Protestant churches. We shall canvass all of them. The Catholic churches will take all of our religious films. There are 3,500 unattached Sunday schools; 2,900 Y. M. C. A. branches and 25,000 settlement, social and welfare organizations to draw upon. Just watch the interest of the public in our plan when its merits are fully understood.

Film Drama Aid to Prison Discipline

Warden of Tennessee State Penitentiary Finds That Motion Pictures Have Good Effect on Convicts

Special to The Motion Picture News
Nashville, Tenn., June 24

The influence of motion pictures on discipline is being tried in the Tennessee state prison. A brand new motion picture machine has been installed in the building and first class convicts are given the privilege of seeing regular motion pictures twice a week. None but first class prisoners are allowed in the chapel, where the pictures are shown.

Infractions of prison rules have become less, since every convict, from the life-timers to the one-year men, are anxious to see the happenings of the outside world on the screen.

When the pictures were first installed a few weeks ago, there was a general change in the demeanor of the convicts. Prisoners who had gone about their labors in sullen silence thanked the warden for his efforts toward bettering their condition and taking the rough edge off their lot.

Manager Tony Sudekum, of the Alhambra and Elite and Fifth Avenue theatres, furnished the machine for the prison, and an expert now serving a five-year term at the penitentiary has been put in charge of the weekly amusements. The convict-operator has but a few more months to serve, and Manager Sudekum has promised him a job as operator.

A silver loving cup has been presented to Mr. Sudekum by the Rotary Club for his kind act in lending the convicts a machine. The prisoners have also expressed their gratitude to the local motion picture wizard, and those who have been behind the walls for ten and twenty years can appreciate, as the others can't, the great relief from prison monotony furnished by film drama.

Educational pictures are among the number shown, and with the prison orchestra rendering music between the reels.

IN THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

Mississippi Will Boom Resources of State by Use of Motion Pictures—Yale Professor Points Out Common Ground for Theatre and Church in Talk at Waterbury, Conn.

JOHN L. SMITH, of Jackson, Miss., as manager of the Mississippi exposition commission, and A. R. Barracks of the Panama-Pacific exposition, have contracted with the National Film Company to make 10,000 feet of Mississippi film, covering the entire state, its interests, and will make motion pictures one of the special educational features of the Mississippi exhibit at San Francisco.

A model auditorium will be equipped in the Mississippi building in San Francisco, and each day during the nine and one-half months of the exposition the entire film will be run, supplemented with slides and lectures on Mississippi.

It is planned by Mr. Smith to make the educational feature as presented by motion pictures so entertaining and attractive that the Mississippi lecture auditorium will be one of the popular attractions of the exposition.

Will Close Contracts at Once

The commission will, with the assistance of representatives of the film company, at once proceed to closing contracts with various individuals and interests of the state for motion picture footage to be used in this film. These contracts will provide that at a reasonable fee, payable to the Mississippi exposition commission, the film will be run as a part of the Mississippi exhibit daily. The film will become the property of the commission and will at the close of the exposition, together with the general exhibit, be returned to the state and placed in charge of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

It is believed by Mr. Smith that this twentith-century method of advertising, educating and exploiting will appeal to persons, firms and corporations, civic and commercial organizations, and county and municipal bodies as a good investment, inasmuch as the motion picture speaks the universal language.

Negotiations between the Mississippi exposition commission and the film company have been conducted through F. S. Hinrich, of Washington, D. C., who was at work on the proposition at Jackson for some time.

How About “Go to Church” Films?

Can the motion picture theatre be employed as a medium, incentive or impetus to fill our churches? This question is being debated more frequently now than ever before, by both clergy and laity. Despite the fact that a “Go to Church Sunday” has been inaugurated and many other schemes as well to fill our churches, pastors everywhere are preaching weekly to small congregations, and in not a few instances, empty seats. Some have blamed the Sunday evening motion picture shows for the falling off in attendance and have gone so far as to attack the silent drama in no uncertain terms.

These attacks, in almost every instance, have been uncalled for and unwarranted in the opinion of thinking men and women. The day that a motion picture can be assailed as having a detrimental effect on the church has gone by. A new light is dawning and they are gradually coming into their own.

It was not surprising, then, that at a time when the motion was being debated in the council of public thought that a discourse on the subject should be given by Frederick E. Pierce, instructor of literature at Yale University. Professor Pierce spoke before the Sunday Noon Club of the Second Congregational Church, of Waterbury, Conn., at its annual banquet held in that city, Monday evening, June 8. Professor Pierce chose for his theme, “The Present Relations of the Church and Theatre.” and during his discourse had the following to say:

A College Professor’s View

“The church in many ways is adopting the methods of the theatre. A short time ago in a small theatre at Savin Rock, New Haven, I saw pictures of Palestine. It has been thought that there was nothing more apart than Center Church and a theatre in Savin Rock.

“The theatre is they both used the same method. The Center Church service was interesting and inspiring. This church is considered the most conservative and dignified in old New England, and by showing the same pictures as the theatre at Savin Rock it demonstrated the fact that the church is beginning to use the same method as the theatres to secure congregations.”

Coming from such a learned man as Professor Pierce, the theory that eventually the churches will add motion pictures to their “curriculum” appears to be a plausible one. A former pastor of a church in this city as early as three years ago went on record as favoring sacred picture shows conducted by trained and educational ones at church entertainments. His views, however, were not in accord with the deacons and the plan failed to become a reality.

Church people point out that the stereopticon has a fixed place in the church, and why not the motion picture? These members who are not straight-laced or over-pious claim that the sentiment in favor of motion pictures in the church is rapidly gaining weight, and that the time is not far distant when every church will have its motion pictures as a feature of the service. If the end justifies the means all can well say, “let us have it.”

Use Films at Engineers’ Convention

Harrisburg as the capital of Pennsylvania and by reason of its railroad facilities the most accessible point in the state for the largest number of counties, has always been noted as a “convention city.” During the summer months there is scarcely a week in which there are not three or four large conventions. Recently the Engineers Society of Pennsylvania held a large convention in the Board of Trade building, at which motion pictures as an educational feature were introduced.

Methods of preventing fires and accidents were explained very graphically through the medium of picture films, and it is likely the idea will be further adopted for conventions of a similar nature.

The part of the program in which the motion pictures were used was under the auspices of the National Council for Industrial Safety.

“NEPTUNE’S DAUGHTER” PACKS ATLANTA THEATRE

Special to The Motion Picture News.

Atlanta, Ga., June 24.

All motion picture attendance records in Atlanta were smashed last week when Manager Harry B. Hearn, of the Grand, presented Annette Kellerman in “Neptune’s Daughter.” Although the Grand is one of America’s biggest theatres, the S. R. O. sign was hung out throughout the week. This is the first time in years that any attraction has drawn enough people to pack this immense auditorium, which seats 2,600. Twenty-four presentations of the picture were made during the week. Manager Hearn stated to-day that just 39,426 persons saw the picture. Mr. Hearn recently has converted the Grand into one of the South’s most palatial motion-picture houses and is meeting with wonderful success here.

The “Airtoni” is a new departure in motion-picture novelties in Atlanta. The Airdome, located at 320 Peachtree Street, was opened June 13 and has been entertaining record crowds since.
FINISH NEW COLUMBUS THEATRE
Columbus, O., June 23.
Messrs. J. W. and W. J. Dusenbury have just completed their business block on the north side of Mt. Vernon avenue, immediately opposite the East Side market.
The feature of the block, and the most conspicuous part of it, is the new Vernon Theatre, which occupies a space of 50 feet by 125 feet and is 40 feet high. The entire front of the theatre is of white glazed brick and white glazed tile, with only the medallions, ornaments and cornice slightly tinted.
The outer lobby is finished with white and dark olive green tile, with green Italian marble trimmings. The lower part of the ticket booth is also of the same kind of marble and tile, while the upper part is of stained art glass. The front doors have the colonial latticed effect over plate glass mirrors. The arched entrance and also the front of the building, are studded with electric lights, while the interior is also brilliantly lighted.
The interior walls are finished in old rose and other blended colors, making a very pleasing effect.

LIVELY OMAHA CLUB FROLIC
Special to The Motion Picture News.
Omaha, Neb., June 25.
F. A. Van Husan, manager of the Omaha, Laemmle exchange is the only exchange member of the Rotary Club. Last week, at its monthly banquet, he played an important part on the program. Following a hilarious comedy, the machine flashed pictures of various popular members, showing incidents in their careers.
One man was revealed in the infant stage, another when he was a cowboy, and a third at the time he was superintendent of schools, playing with a doll, etc. The features made a hit. One of the local newspapers carried a page Sunday story of the banquet, with illustrations, giving Mr. Van Husan full credit.

FIRST LUBIN SERIAL
Arthur V. Johnson is producing the first serial photoplay bearing the Lubin trade-mark. There are to be fifteen separate stories, all episodes in the life of "The Great Adventurer," Lord Cecil, a nobleman impoverished through his own unselshiness. The scenario is by Emmett Campbell Hall.
The character is rich in pictorial possibilities and, from the standpoint of the producer, the series will be Mr. Johnson's most ambitious undertaking. He has just returned to the Lubin Studio from a ten-day motor trip through New England, where he went for recreation as well as to plan the details of his forthcoming work.

Aitken and Hite Again Head Mutual
Company Declares Extra Dividend on Common Stock—One-Half of One Per Cent for Next Four Months—Officers Re-elected
At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Mutual Film Corporation, held in Richmond, Va., on June 17, five directors were elected. The outgoing directors, Crawford Livingston, Felix E. Kahn, George W. Hall, Wilber Shallenberger and Addison E. Jones, were unanimously re-elected for terms of three years each.
A resolution was adopted by the stockholders approving the conduct of the corporation's business during the year that has just come to a successful close.
At the annual directors' meeting in New York on June 19, the treasurer's report showed the Mutual to be in a flourishing condition. Regular seven per cent dividends on preferred stock for the year beginning July 1 were declared payable quarterly, and a dividend of one-half of one per cent with an extra dividend of one-half of one per cent on the common stock was declared payable in each of the next four months.

Keeping Receipts Going Up With the Mercury
New York State Man Employs Novel Method for Advertising Aero Balloons Drop Free Tickets
Hot weather should not be a dull season for a five motion picture exhibitor. If he is constantly on the alert he will find at every turn means for keeping his house full, regardless of the thermometer.
One such man, with a razor-edge perception of the advertising possibilities in objects apparently remote from the theatrical business, recently increased the receipts of an up-state theatre from eleven dollars to fifty-nine by the timely use of toy balloons.
An agent was billing the four-reel feature "Through the Clouds." As the six sheets contained a picture of a balloon, he obtained the day before the film was put on three paper balloons, and ran a slide in the theatre reading, "Watch for the balloon ascension in front of the theatre at twelve o'clock tomorrow. Free tickets will be dropped."
The toy balloons were sent up at the specified time, and the tickets allowed to drop in the street. A large crowd, attracted by the previous announcement, was on hand, ready to scramble for the freeadmission pastebounds.
As a result of this plan, the film was widely advertised, and people flocked to the theatre.

FINAL DECISION ON "BREWSTER'S MILLIONS"

Court Fight Ends and Film Is Scheduled for Early Release in Hamburger's Theatre—Illinois and Wisconsin State Right for "Littlest Rebel"—Annette Kellermann, in "Neptune's Daughter," Draws Big Houses at the Fine Arts—Chatkin Goes to Warner's Features

---

Special to The Motion Picture News

Chicago, June 24.

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS," the longest celluloid comedy yet produced, is announced for an early engagement at the Ziegfeld Picture Playhouse, after a strenuous fight in the federal court and a damage suit for $30,000.

The Chicago censors ordered several scenes cut from the play at their first view of it and this obliged Alfred Hamburger to hesitate in accepting the picture from the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, which held a contract to deliver a feature picture per month to Hamburger. The Lasky company thereupon sued the Celebrated Players Film Company for breach of contract and asked for annulment of his contract with damage of $5,700 and the return of the "Squaw Man," the first feature delivered.

The federal court held that Alfred Hamburger had done all that a farsighted businessman could do to keep his agreement. An order was issued compelling the defendant company to deliver to Hamburger "Brewster's Millions" and all the other big features it would produce during the term of its contract.

Had the court's decision gone against Hamburger it would have removed the only obstacle to the immediate operation of the merger of the Lasky company with the Famous Players Company and Bosworth, Inc., in the Paramount Feature Film Company, which has just been formed and which intends to be a giant operator in the motion-picture world. The merger of the three film producers is to become operative on Sept. 1.

ANNETTE KELLERMANN, the diving Diana, is entering her sixth triumphant week in "Neptune's Daughter," at the Fine Arts Theatre, where her physical perfections have caused Alfred Hamburger's playhouse to enjoy a financial and artistic success both abundant and gratifying.

Seven large cities have shown the Kellermann pictures, but Chicago has eclipsed them all in brilliancy of opening, length of engagement and paid attendance up to date. At the Fine Arts, box-office estimates given out indicate that fully one hundred thousand people have witnessed the comely mermaid displaying her beauty in the watery realm of kind Neptune. And the end is not yet.

The big twelve-reel Itala production, "Cabiria," opened at the Illinois Theatre on Wednesday evening, June 17, when it was shown to an invited audience. It was not only vigorously applauded, but was highly praised by the entire gathering. The Detroit critics did not hesitate to write about it in the superlative. The play is considered by many the biggest and best production of its kind ever attempted.

The Reel Fellows' Club, of Chicago, held its first smoker on Friday evening, June 19, in the Advertising Club rooms. Practically the entire club's membership turned out. It now numbers one hundred. Every one was called on to help entertain. Outside talent was also secured.

The first two releases of the Photoplay Production and Releasing Company, organized under the laws of the state of Illinois, and headed by A. M. Gollos, president; George H. Baird, treasurer, and George M. Gollos, secretary, will include "The Littlest Rebel" and "Should a Woman Tell?" on which they have the rights for the states of Illinois and Wisconsin.

This concern has contracted with some of the big producing companies for big features, which will allow it to release a picture a week. In the meantime, it is working to an end where an entire week's program can be offered.

This company is one of many exchanges which will open throughout the country in connection with a big New York producing concern said to be incorporated for half a million dollars. The Photoplay Production and Releasing Company has also contracted with the Photoplay Producing Company, of New York, for its entire output.

Dave Chatkin, who has been connected with the motion-picture business in various branches for some time, returned to Chicago last week to assume management of the Warner's Feature office. Mr. Chatkin gained the majority of his film experience in the Windy City. For many years he was associated with the Anti-trust Film Company and several of the manufacturing companies.

E. H. CALVERT, producer with the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, has been chosen to direct the series of pictures which will be released under the title of "One Wonderful Night," the story of which is running serially in the "Ladies' World." It will be remembered that Francis X. Bushman, leading man of the Essanay, won the popular contest conducted by the "Ladies' World" to secure the proper settings for the picture, Mr. Calvert took Mr. Bushman and his company to New York City during convention week and produced many thousand feet on the streets of New York City.

Since his entrance into the producing field Mr. Calvert has shown some splendid work. He has turned out some very strong pictures containing many novelities and original situations.

"Home, Sweet Home" opens its second week at the Ziegfeld, on Michigan Avenue. These pictures are based upon the pathetic life of John Howard Payne and his immortal song, "Home, Sweet Home," together with several stirring dramatic stories whose finale reveal the power of this sweet melody to uplift the hearts of men and women.

The Superior Feature Film Company, of 37 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, report the state-right business good through Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, the territory they are covering. "Fire and Sword," "Her Life for Liberty" and "Lieutenant Daring and the International Jewel Thieves" are their attractions.

The Lux Theatre at the corner of Michigan avenue and Thirty-fifth street, Chicago, has been taken under the patronage of Alfred Hamburger, and after a period of reconstruction and beautifying, it will reopen under his management.

A. A. Davison, superintendent of the Selig plant, who has been quite ill, has fully recovered, and after a long and severe siege, he is again on duty.

"Othello," the big Kleine multiple made at Venice, Italy, last winter by the Photo Drama Company, will be released through the General Film Company early in July. This beautiful subject follows the Shakespeare version faithfully. The costuming, settings and photography are almost without rival, even by others of the big Kleine multiples.

"A Kingdom at Stake," the three-reel Kleine-Eclipse feature is scheduled for release through the General Film Company as a special feature June 29.

Marie Corelli's "Vendetta," who is being released as a special feature through the General Film Company, by George Kleine. This is a big multiple reel feature without question the greatest effort of the Eclipse Company, of Paris, France.
CECILIA LOFTUS A WARNER'S STAR

Cecilia Loftus, the character actress, is about to make her first appearance in this country as a Warner's Features star in "The City of Promise," a three-part romantic drama.

In this production Miss Loftus has found the opportunity of her career, and she has made the most of it. Her power of mimicry, her dramatic talent and her personality are all given full sway.

Miss Loftus' role is that of a girl born and reared in a small town who develops yearnings for the city life. She accordingly leaves home. Her trials and tribulations in the city, where all sorts of perils beset her, make a thrilling picture story. Her adventures as a chorus girl are especially stirring. She is finally reunited with her parents at Thanksgiving time.

Warner's Features, Inc. have a reputation for presenting feature films of drawing power, and "The City of Promise," with Miss Loftus as the star, is just that kind of a film.

L EW DOCKSTADER IN CIVIL WAR DRAMA

The latest All Star Feature Corporation's production, a tense comedy drama of Civil War days in which Lew Dockstader, the world famed minstrel and black-faced comedian is featured in the title role of "Dan," is rapidly nearing its completion and will be ready for release about July 4.

In support of Mr. Dockstader, the All Star company presents Lois Meredith, the young ingenue of "Help Wanted," Gail Kane, the star of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," who has appeared in "Arizona" and "The Jungle" for the All Star company, Beatrice Clevenger, George Cowl, W. D. Fishter and Hal Reid.

Begins Ventilation Campaign in Harrisburg

Dr. Dixon, State Health Officer, Declares Stuffie Theatres—He Considers Motion Pictures Proper Entertainment Under Sanitary Conditions

(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

Harrisburg, Pa., June 25.

UNQUALIFIED endorsement of the motion picture theatre as a healthful place of amusement when proper ventilation is provided, was given by Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, the aggressive head of the State Department of Health, under whose administration numerous reforms with regard to health and sanitation have been effected in Pennsylvania. Dr. Dixon characterized the motion picture theatre as the most popular form of entertainment of the present day and asserted positively that it has come to stay.

He uttered a warning against the dangers that lurk in poorly ventilated picture houses and said the public can solve the problem of poor ventilation in theatres by patronizing only those in which the sanitary conditions are good.

Dr. Dixon's statement was given out as one of a series of "Little Talks on Health and Hygiene" which he has been issuing for publication in his official capacity as State Health Commissioner. What he says about the motion picture theatre is as follows:

"Proper ventilation and cleanliness ought to be given without the asking, and when they are not provided they should be compelled. The shocking accidents which have brought the public to a realization of the necessity for adequate protection from fire in places of public amusement taught their lesson at the price of many lives.

"The crowding of hundreds of people into improvised auditoriums which are stuffy, overheated and ill ventilated has no doubt exacted an equally high death toll from pneumonia and other diseases.

"In the early days of these enterprises when there was an uncertainty as to the lasting popularity of this class of entertainment it might have worked a hardship to demand too much. Under present conditions when a great many people in the city, including policemen, have lost their lives through being unaware that the protection of their patrons' health is essential,

"The working man or woman who seeks relaxation after a day's toil will not secure the full benefit if shut in a crowded, ill-ventilated, badly ventilated auditorium. Their pleasure will be lessened though they may be unaware of the fact. They are being deprived of the full measure of their recreation.

"Dr. Dixon's campaign has borne fruit in numerous instances, and managers are paying more attention to ventilation."

Pinkerton Places Ban on Crime Pictures

Makes Emphatic Statement Against "Gunman" Films at Police Chiefs' Convention in Grand Rapids—Approves Good Subjects

(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

At the recent session of the International Association of Police Chiefs, held in this city, a resolution was passed urging the members to draw everything in their power to suppress films depicting crime and caricaturing policemen.

The meeting was addressed by William A. Pinkerton, the famous detective, who has made this subject a hobby for some years. Mr. Pinkerton did not lose sight of the fact, however, that motion pictures have become a great factor in imparting instruction of a desirable nature in addition to their world wide popularity. He said in part:

"The motion picture has become a mode of instruction as well as a form of most popular entertainment. Within its province lies a dangerous power for evil that cannot be too seriously considered. A written story of crime and human frailty may pass from memory, but a pictured delineation of it is apt to remain. We have all felt the power of pictured suggestion, the spiritual spring of action which makes so much for good or ill in the world.

"Take a picture of sordid crime illustrating the shocking features of white slavery, of drug depravity, of gunmen exploits—what good purpose can any normal person expect them to serve? To the rough, to the weak, or the ignorant, it is like throwing fuel upon a fire already hard to control. Those whose lust for money is greater than their sense of decency should be brought to book abruptly on this score."

PHOTOPLAY PALACE FOR CONEY ISLAND

Realizing the need of a first-class motion picture theatre in Coney Island, Feltman Brothers have built the Seaside Garden, which is considered one of the best and most beautiful open-air theatres at the resort. The theatre is located on the main promenade quite near the ocean, so that the temperature will be cooled by ocean breezes at all times. The house has a seating capacity of 2,000.

The spaces between the rows are exceptionally wide.

B. F. Porter, the Simplex sales manager, has installed two of the latest Simplex machines which are motor-driven. First-run pictures are shown and the program is changed daily. The admission price is ten cents for days and fifteen cents on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Harold Holstein is the manager of the Seaside Garden.
CREATING THE "COME AGAIN" SPIRIT

By Albert C. Sproul

Having Won His Patrons, Miller Began to Devise Means to Hold Them—"Nights" for the Different Organizations of the Community Helped—Plans for the Working People—Other Policies That Proved Profitable

Editor's Note—This is the second of the "Story of Miller" series, the first of which appeared in a recent issue of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Here Miller proceed to build with permanence on the foundation he had erected, as described in the last chapter, here vividly narrated.

It is one thing to arouse enthusiasm and another to keep it alive.

Miller knew the fickleness of the many and realized that, unless he took decisive steps to keep his patrons loyal to "The Ideal," they would soon drift away.

For that reason, he started a series of publicity stunts that individualized the work and welded each person more firmly to the theatre.

He obtained his first suggestion from a stock company that held forth in his city. As a spectator, he was often impressed by the home-like spirit of the place and the way every one applauded the actors. Each, as he stepped upon the stage, received an ovation from the audience, showing that he was known and his past work appreciated.

Now, reasoned Miller, why can't I build up the same spirit in my house? My actors are, to be sure, merely shadow people, as they appear upon the screen. I wager, nevertheless, that people would be just as loyal, once they knew them.

So he examined into the personnel of each motion picture company, found out all the salient facts about the individuals that appeared in the plays and imparted the information in a novel way.

To each person who purchased ten tickets, good only on a night when attendance was liable to be slim, he would give a photograph of one of the actors or actresses.

On the back of the photograph was printed such bits of information as would introduce the actor to the patron and give subtle bits of gossip to mull over. It was working gregarious nature to the limit.

In this way, he obtained a number of regular patrons who, because they were interested, not only in the theatre itself but also in the actors, and wishing to make as complete a collection of photographs as possible—one went with every ten tickets bought—had a definite incentive to attend.

This publicity plan particularly appealed to the women.

Then, to enhance and enlarge his idea, Miller got in touch with the editor of a run-down newspaper and offered to go into a tentative partnership—the editor to give Miller whatever space the latter needed for his plans, and Miller agreeing to formulate those plans so as to build up the circulation of the paper and consequently its advertising value.

Elaborated bits of photoplay chit-chat, coupled with timely news and instructive articles of "behind-the-scenes" stuff, all likely to stimulate the interest of the community in the motion picture field, were printed.

Various stories, based on future releases, stories which the editor himself wrote, were left unfinished, to be completed by subscribers, the usual quota of complimentary tickets going to those submitting the best solutions. All this helped cement the public to "The Ideal."

Miller next made a complete list of all the organizations in the community—the local athletic club; the women's club; the G. A. R., plus other military bodies; the lodges and clubs of all kinds.

At one time, Miller would build up a program, as far as the facilities at his disposal permitted him, to fit a definite organization. Then he would procure a list of the members and interest them in the performance. By this means he gained as patrons the majority of the members.

If, for instance, there were a good selection of war films, he would have a "Military Night," and invite the various military organizations to attend. Should he be so fortunate as to secure a graded number of reels on social reform, he would make the settlement workers, mainly allied with the women's club, the object of his quest. Everything helped.

He occasionally used feature films and at that time, in order to differentiate between them and his regular program, he raised his admission fee to fifteen cents, reserving a few seats at twenty-five.

In addition to this, however, he pursued a unique course which won the approval of many.

He took the opportunity afforded by the feature films of disposing of a number of subscription tickets for that program, making the following offer to insure a large audience for those evenings when there was a possibility of not playing to capacity.

If a patron would purchase ten tickets for a special performance, at the advanced price, the tickets to be distributed among friends, Miller would give—were the play based on an old-time work—a copy of the book.

These copies he could procure, neatly bound, for a very small sum. And the patrons, by reading the book given them as a premium, find added enjoyment in their evening's entertainment.

Every legitimate means of publicity that had been successfully exploited by others and every idea that he could think of, was tried out, to keep the public awake and interested in "The Ideal."

There was no standing still for Miller.

He examined into the possibilities of the week days. He knew, from careful investigation, that the rubber works and the shoe factory, which employed many of the young men and women of the vicinity, paid their help on Tuesday night.

Tuesday night was, therefore, a night for the young people. The program, the music, everything connected with the theatre, was arranged so as to appeal to the younger element. The fact that the stores in the neighborhood kept open until nine o'clock Thursday night, instead of closing at seven as was their wont other evenings, was coined into added clientele at "The Ideal."

A checking-room was especially installed for the shoppers and the program extended to meet their convenience. All these things were done to accommodate the public and the public knew it.

Miller saw to that.

And, like other persons catered to in that way, they appreciated it by attending the theatre with more or less regularity.

Whenever there was any local agitation, Miller was always ready to back it. He soon became known, in spite of his unobtrusive personality, as a public-spirited citizen, and whatever he said was well weighed in the scales of public judgment.

The benefit which he gave for the wife of Dougherty. (Continued on page 80)
Building a Permanent Clientele

By L. W. Bailey

With a Mailing List of Five Thousand Names and a Judicious Use of It in Connection With the Various Features at His House, This Manager Has Built Up a Lasting Patronage

MEET me at the Forest" might well be the catch word of the Forest Theatre, 875 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich., for the Forest Theatre, offering motion pictures alone, has a lobby unequaled by any other theatre in town. It runs the full width of the theatre, fifty feet, and nearly as deep, with leather upholstered seats running all the way around it; is tastily frescoed; has a tiled floor in a pretty pattern; and the walls are hung with pictures of playopay stars.

A glass canopy extends over the sidewalk to the curb line, and the ticket-office being midway off the lobby, exposure to the elements is slight for patrons coming either by street car or motor car. On the same side of the lobby with Manager R. W. Minkley's office and on the opposite side, is a spacious smoking-room, and a retiring-room for ladies.

Worked into the colored glass design of the canopy outside at either end and in front is:

Famous Photo Plays
Music

THE Forest Theatre is one of the best patronized in the city, so I visited Manager Minkley and learned how he built up a clientele in a district made up partly of first-class rooming houses, partly of old residences occupied by some of the city's best families.

The arrangement of the house in itself is a bid for an exclusive patronage. It is spacious and airy, seats 600, and has 16 boxes, a row on either side from front to rear. These box seats sell for 20 cents, the first ten rows, 10 cents, and the remainder of the house, 15 cents.

When I asked Mr. Minkley how he built up his patronage he said:

"I obtained a mailing list of 5,000 names. I sent to each address one of my complimentary tickets with the name written on it. You can see for yourself that the tickets which came back gave me a valuable, permanent mailing list and index to the likes of my patrons.

"Now I have classified my names and whenever I have a feature that will appeal to a certain class, I have a post-card announcement of the play and a little synopsis sent out to my list. Sometimes the announcement goes out in an envelope, and when it does I always enclose a copy of the program of the theatre for the current week."

THE program of the Forest is a neatly-printed folding card, giving the titles for each day's show. Under each title is a line or two giving an index to the character of the photoplay and the name of the star featured. On the last page is an added announcement of the Sunday feature.

I glanced over the program and noticed that the big feature of the week runs on Wednesday. "Why do you do that?" I asked.

"Well, I find that mid-week I can get everybody out better than on any other day." The program of the Forest changes daily and consists of three or four titles, four to five reels, usually a two-part social drama, a comedy and another drama, sometimes two comedies. "They won't stand for the blood and thunder out here," said Mr. Minkley.

Mr. Minkley has no orchestra in the house, only a pianiste. "She is a girl with a remarkable memory and always knows just what to play for a picture, and she can play for the pictures better than an orchestra could."

Each week Mr. Minkley has a singer of note as a special feature. For instance, this week he has Frederick Irving, who was formerly leading man with Mme. Schumann Hein. He got out a 6x9 throw on Irving, 2,000 copies. He usually mails these special announcements and also distributes them in the neighborhood of the theatre.

This and his lobby display are Mr. Minkley's only advertising.

HOW large a territory do you draw on? How big a district do you cover with your advertising?" I asked.

"A district about a mile and a half long and a half mile wide," was the answer, giving the streets bounding the district.

"What special drawing card will you have for the hot weather that is coming?" I asked.

"I've got the best ventilating system in the city."

We went into the theatre again and the manager pointed to eight large domes in the ceiling in the center of which the powerful inverted lights illuminated the theatre from end to end without interfering with the pictures.

"Each of those domes has an open space of twelve to eighteen inches all the way around it. In the cupola, which is connected with the domes by flues, is a six-foot suction fan. I can create such a draught that it is difficult to open the outside door when the fan is going.

"I shall have the house paged frequently with clear cold water. My girl usherers will be attired in white coats to look as cool as possible."

With such provisions for comfort, the patronage of the Forest should hold up well during the hot season. The theatre gives three shows daily, a matinee at 3:30 and two shows in the evening, at 7:15 and 8:45. At each show the program for the next day and the features for the week are thrown on the screen.

The telephone, too, is a valuable adjunct, as many patrons call up to learn the evening's bill.

The Forest Theatre, it might be added in passing, is the first-run house for all the Universal features.

FORM NEW REX COMPANY

A new Rex company has been organized by the Universal at its West Coast studios, Los Angeles, Cal., and to do it the Universal has again drawn members of the legitimate drama into its fold. Elsie Jane Wilson and Rupert Julian will lead the new Rex company.

Rupert Julian is already known in pictures, having played heavy leads with the Smallay Rex company for some time. Miss Wilson, who is Mrs. Julian in private life, is well known before the footlights of the English provinces of Australia, New Zealand and Africa.

FILMS SUPPLANT FIREWORKS ON FOURTH

St. Louis, June 34.

Mayor Henry Kid is taking precautions to insure a safe and sane 4th of July in St. Louis. A drastic regulation against the sale and use of fireworks will be rigidly enforced, and the Nation's Birthday Association, headed by Judge Henry Holtcamp as president, have decided on using motion pictures as one of the means of entertaining the people of the city who will gather by thousands in the parks and amusement resorts on Independence Day.
Among Buffalo Exhibitors

Educational Shows Popular in Lake Erie City—Full Dress Communion Sight at the Elmwood—Edel, of the Strand, Will Manage Three Theatres in the Fall—Kaliska Will Continue to Manage Allendale—More and Better Comedies Wanted

Special to The Motion Picture News

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 25.

Educational subjects seem to be very popular in the local theatres at present, and a great many of Buffalo's school children are taking advantage of the unusual opportunities offered them by the motion-picture camera. Last Friday and Saturday, Manager George W. Erdmann, of the Elmwood, presented "The Conquest of Quebec," with a special matinee for school children on Saturday, at which a capacity audience of deeply interested pupils of the schools attended.

Manager Harold Edel, of the Strand, has booked "Washington at Valley Forge" for a coming feature. Manager M. B. Schlesinger will present Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle" at the Academy this week.

Pathé's colored subject, "Loyalty," screened in Holland, also did big business at the Elmwood recently because of its educative feature.

Getting full dress into a theatre is the problem which Manager Erdmann, of the Elmwood, seems to have solved. Every evening gentlemen in full dress and tuxedos are seen in the audience at the Elmwood, where they stop on the way to a dance, club or some other evening engagement.

The Elmwood is the first motion-picture theatre in Buffalo where this has been noted. Of course, to attract this class of trade, the attractions must be of exceptional quality, and this is just the kind of feature that Manager Erdmann books.

Another thing that The Motion Picture News correspondent noted the other night was that the entire audience stood when the orchestra played the "Star Spangled Banner." It has been a good many years since this has been seen in any theatre. These little things are good advertisements for the Elmwood, for they make people talk.

MANAGER CLAUDE WEIL, of the Premier Theatre, at the corner of Main street and Leroy avenue, one of the few theatres in the Central Park district, announces that business is very good at his theatre for the summer opening.

Arnold Daly, in "The Port of Missing Men," will be at the Premier during the coming week. Manager Weil has one of the choicest locations in the city, drawing upon the highest class trade in the city.

Buffalo has had a week of exceptionally cold weather for this time of the year, and the different motion-picture theatres have reaped the benefit, while the amusement parks and beaches have had no business whatever. Few people care enough about the beaches to take a lake trip on a cold evening, and would much rather visit a motion-picture theatre.

All the managers report good business during the week.

Manager of three of the largest houses in Western New York is the job mapped out for Harold Edel, now manager of the Strand Theatre on Main street, in the fall. Mr. Edel will look after the interests of the Strand, Palace and Regent Theatres, all on Main street.

The Regent is about complete and will have a seating capacity of 1,400. The construction has begun on the Palace, which will be without doubt Buffalo's most beautiful theatre. It will be modeled after the Strand in New York, but on a smaller scale.

Mr. Edel is a real "live-wire" in the motion-picture business. As manager of the Strand he has established an enviable record for the house. The Strand is known as the home of "First Run Features," and it is one of Mr. Edel's strict rules that nothing shall be shown at the Strand unless it is a "first run."

Mr. Edel is a firm believer of the power of the press and does more consistent advertising than any other motion-picture theatre in Buffalo. And he gets results. This is one point which many other managers overlook and then wonder why they do not get larger audiences. Patrons will not come to a theatre when they do not know what is being shown.

Although Mr. Edel is now one of the busiest men in Buffalo, he will certainly be a much busier one about September 1, with three theatres to look after and have the pleasure (?) of booking for all three.

Manager Edel has booked "The Master Mind" for four days in July; "The King and the Man" and a "Mary Pickford" week. During the latter week he will show to Strand patrons "A Good Little Devil," "Tess of the Storm Country," "The Bishop's Carriage," "Caprice," and "Hearts Aflame," which will mean a different attraction every day. A big advertising campaign will announce the coming of these attractions and Mr. Edel says that he hopes to make this the biggest thing that ever happened at the Strand.

THE Allendale Theatre, recently acquired by the Allendale Amusement Co., Inc., will continue under the management of William G. Kaliska, who has done more in the last six months to put this theatre on a money-making basis than his predecessors accomplished in two years. Manager Kaliska has installed six new arc lights on the front of the house during the past week, planted a garden on one side of the theatre and spent the rest of the time figuring out where to seat his patrons, for few nights pass without capacity audiences at this theatre.

The new four-manual organ has arrived at the Elmwood and is being installed. It is hoped that it will be ready for July 1. The Elmwood organ will be one of the largest in the state and in addition to three series of pipes in the front of the house, it will have a series in the rear over the balcony, which will act as an echo.

The organ will be played by Bertram A. Forbes, former organist of the Central Park Presbyterian Church, and one of Buffalo's most talented musicians.

Manager M. B. Schlesinger, of the Academy Theatre, has installed a new air-cooled "refrigerating" plant in his theatre to keep his patrons cool during the summer months. When this apparatus is in operation it is 20 degrees cooler in the theatre than on the outside.

The Academy has changed from vaudeville and pictures to a straight picture house, with a 5-10-cent admission. "Pierre of the Plains" and "The Jungle" are two of the current attractions.

A large and attractive electric sign has been placed in front of Shea's Hippodrome, on Main street. This theatre will open at an early date with high-class vaudeville and celebrity pictures.

Niagara Falls will be advertised in motion pictures at the Panama-Pacific Exposition next year. The motion picture bureau of the Exposition has communicated with Mayor Laughlin, of the Falls, in regard to the taking of pictures for the New York State exhibit. The pictures, which will include scenic and industrial features, will be shown in the New York State building each afternoon during the fair.

BUFFALO managers are clamoring for more and better comedies. There have been some very poor films of this brand on the market of late. It seems that this kind of production needs more attention by the manufacturer.

Everything nowadays is feature, feature, feature, with sad neglect of opening and closing reels.

C. B. TAYLOR.
AUTHORESS HEADS FILM
FIRM

Eleanor Gates, who needs no further introduction, has formed her own motion picture producing company under the name of The Eleanor Gates Photo-Play Company, Inc. and is having her dramatic and literary work placed on the film. Miss Gates is the author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" and other dramas and novels of equal note. The first release of the new company will be "Doc," the story from her pen, published in the "Saturday Evening Post." Sydney Seaward, Vivian Blackbum, Herbert Bostwick, Baby Grau and others are in the cast.

SUBMARINE FILMS TO HITE

Among the flock of picture magnates who bid for the marketing rights of the new "photographed under the ocean" films made by the submarine-picture-taking invention of the Williamson Brothers, of Norfolk, Va., Charles J. Hite, of Thanhouser-Mutual fame, was the lucky one. He will shortly "open" them to his Broadway Rose Gardens, the "society" play house where New York fashionables may see motion pictures and then dine, or even dance. After this the films will be shown to leading scientific bodies and then go on a tour of the big theatres of the country. Special Representative Bert Adler is in charge of bookings.

EDISON OFF FOR FROZEN NORTH

Robert Edeson and thirty-five players have gone to the Moose Factory in Canada for the picturizing of "The Call of the North" for the Lasky company. Stewart Edward White, the author, will accompany them.

Life Photo Makes Quick Removal

Buys Land and Installs New Plant Across Hudson River in Two Days, Following New York Fire Department Order.

FOLLOWING the orders of the fire commissioner, requiring the film concerns in 103 West 101st Street, New York City, to vacate the premises at once, the Life Photo Film Corporation made record time in getting new quarters at Grantwood, N. J., last week. Twelve lots were immediately bought outright at Lafayette Street and Hill Avenue, and two large stone structures on the plot will be enlarged for the laboratory, and provisions will be made for commodious outside and indoor studios. The order to vacate was received Thursday night and at 8:30 Friday morning Bernhard Locenenthal, the treasurer, and Jesse I. Goldburg, the secretary of the company, with Charles Hirlimann in charge of the laboratory, hurried to the Hudson River on a quick tour of available sites in the Grantwood and Fort Lee district, just across the Hudson River. The site was obtained at 12:30, and at 9 o'clock Saturday morning the contract was signed for the property. By 11:30 specifications and plans for the erection of new buildings and the enlargement of those on the premises were completed, and everything was ready for operation by June 24.

With all speed the films, negative and positive, were stored in the vaults of the concern at the new location. The studio will be ready for the return of the cast, now in Canada engaged in screening the picture "Northern Lights." The Life Photo Film Corporation is being congratulated on every hand for the expedition with which the removal was conducted, preventing any delay in the completion of its productions the sudden eviction might otherwise have caused.

Pasquali-American Reorganizes

New Company Arranges with the Italian Concern for Simultaneous Releases in America and Europe of Spectacular Features

THE announcement has just been made of the reorganization of the Pasquali-American Company, after a most successful year, by a group of prominent New York financiers. This company, which came into prominence last September through its elaborate production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," has been reorganized and its operating policies will be completely changed to meet the new demands which have arisen for the productions of the company. The reorganization has been effected by Alberto Amato, the former president of the Pasquali-American Company, who has been in Europe for the last four months on behalf of the syndicate. He will be the vice-president and general manager of the new concern. He has closed a number of contracts with several of the largest foreign producers.

It is not the policy of the company, however, to restrict itself to foreign films, and arrangements have already been completed for the organization of a large subsidiary producing company which is at present making feature pictures of popular American novels and plays. Besides these pictures the company is also at work upon several original and startling dramas by well-known authors.

The new company is also opening exchanges throughout the country from which all of its productions are to be marketed. A long term contract has been signed with Pasquali and Company, of Turin, whereby the new company and this company will show spectacular plays simultaneously in America and Europe. Pasquali will send his actors and actresses all over the world to obtain accuracy of detail and fidelity to locale of the feature productions.

The new company intends to put on a line of comedies and dramas of a highly spectacular nature.

OPERATORS' STRIKE CLOSES HOUSE

Special to The Motion Picture News
Evansville, Ind., June 24.

The new Grand Theatre, which ran vaudeville, Orpheum time, all winter, inaugurated a summer policy of showing feature films, charging 35 cents admission this week. "The Spoilers" drew crowded houses, but the operators' union called a strike when the management refused to keep the stage hands employed, and the house closed for the season.

LASKY SELLS WORLD'S RIGHTS

The rights for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's products for the entire world have now been disposed of. So great has been the demand for Lasky's features that additional prints have been purchased by almost every territorial owner on the Lasky roster.
LENGTHENING THE LIFE OF THE POSTER

POSTERS that formerly lasted a few days are made to last a year by a plan adopted by Manager Van Histon of the Laemmle Film Company's exchange of Omaha. No laborious process of using cheesecloth backs. In his new building Mr. Van Histon has established a poster pasting department, where two men are kept busy, putting cheesecloth backs on the paper posters.

"As soon as the posters are gone, the life of the film is ended," said Mr. Van Histon. "With these stronger posters the film remains in service many times longer, increasing the revenue. Then, too, the posters are not as expensive. They cost more at first, of course, but they last so much longer and there is no necessity of always demanding new posters.

"I have been enabled to befriend many exhibitors with needed posters because they were preserved by the backs. They have telegraphed me, urging me by all that is good to send them a poster of a certain kind, because they have not worn out, I am enabled to do so. And my customers appreciate such things."

A "SMALL TOWN" EXHIBITOR'S PLAN

M. R. LANGFORD, manager of the Dayton Theatre in Watertown, Conn., a suburb of Waterbury, took a "chance" recently and made good. The average manager of a theatre in a suburb adjacent to a large city finds it pretty hard to fill his house. But the residents of a country suburb like Watertown can easily be made enthusiastic.

Manager Langford decided to give away a chest of high-class silver every week if ample returns came in. The chest cost him quite a sum, but he went ahead to see if his townspeople appreciated what he was doing. They did. He has a drawing of a chest of silver every week and capacity houses are turning out.

The giving away of chests of silver in city picture houses is nothing new, but every country motion picture manager can hardly afford the expense.

BIDDING FOR THE SPORTING FRATERNITY

SINCE the legalizing of boxing in Wisconsin, Milwaukee has jumped into prominence as one of the country's leading fight centers. Naturally it contains thousands of fight fans who become immediately interested in anything that saviors of the squared circle.

The Saxe brothers have not been slow to take advantage of this. The result has been that, among the many advertising novelties that were gotten out to boost "The Spoilers," the fight idea was carried out to the smallest detail.

The picture got a lot of advertising among the fight fans that it would never have received if only the conventional style of advertising had been followed.

SOME CASH-DRAWER POLICIES

THE Colonial Theatre, Lexington, Ky., managed by the Colonial Amusement Company, of which John M. Elliott is president, and E. J. Treacy, secretary, has solved a problem—how to attract people during the hot weather and make them forget it is hot.

The Colonial has installed throughout its building the latest motion picture house in Central Kentucky—electric fans every few feet, and these are kept going constantly. Ozone machines are placed at brief intervals down both sides of the main room. A great mirror screen is used and this reduces the flicker of the pictures to a minimum, the whole being advertised as an eye-saver.

Then the music of the Colonial is a great feature, and it is a fact that scores of people attend the theatre every day who rarely ever see a picture because of weakened eyes, but who go to hear the music. Gregg's Imperial Orchestra furnishes the music, and as there are ten members of the aggregation, it gives "some music." The Colonial also allows this orchestra to accept engagements to play for dances after the regular Colonial hours. The proceeds of course go to the orchestra members, but it is mighty good advertising for the Colonial, nevertheless.

The daily program of this orchestra ranges from the raggedest ragtime to the classics, and a box is maintained at the theatre with a standing invitation to all to state their preference for whatever they desire to have played, and these requests are carried out.

The ushers also are unusual in that they ask the patron where they desire to sit, whether far down in front or well back.
Mutual Has Fine Quarters in St. Louis

Model Exchange Building Is Completely Equipped—Miniature Theatre on Second Floor—Steel and Concrete Vaults Absolutely Fireproof

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

St. Louis, June 23.

The new Mutual home is the last word in construction and convenience for the rapid and efficient handling of films. The rise of the industry has developed a distinct branch of picture-theatre and film-exchange architecture. If any architect will go to the new home of the Mutual Film Corporation, at 13th and Pine Streets, he will find a model of how a film exchange should be built.

The exchange complies with the insurance law in being only two stories high, and is absolutely fireproof throughout. There are 6,300 feet of floor space, film vaults of steel and concrete that will defy the hottest fire, a miniature theatre on the second floor that would do credit to a million-dollar national bank. The poster department is especially convenient; paper for any film in stock is right at hand without any delay or loss of time.

The building is equipped with an indirect lighting system, which will not be needed except on very dark days, or after sundown, as the entire house gets the sunlight through a system of roof and ceiling skylights.

There is a handsome reception room leading into the manager's office, and a lobby with a side passage that leads to the poster and booking department. The move from the old quarters to the new building was made at night in order that the service and booking arrangements might not be interrupted in any manner.

Mary Fuller Signs With Universal

Edison Star, with Charles Ogle and Walter Edwin, under Laemmle Banner—Miss Fuller Will Probably Appear under Special Brand Name

MARY FULLER is to be a Universal star.

Negotiations to this effect were at the same time with Miss Fuller were Charles Ogle and Walter Edwin.

Mr. Edwin is a well-known director. He has been with the Edison Company for some time, latterly as Miss Fuller's director, and he will direct the new pictures featuring Miss Fuller.

The little actress is acknowledged to be one of the best known motion picture stars to-day and that Universal has secured her is considered in the way of a scoop. It is probable that a new brand will be created for her releases.

Mr. Ogle is well known upon the screen as a character actor and heavy of exceptional ability.

Miss Fuller has distinguished herself as the heroine of a number of photoplay series while with the Edison Company, among them being "Dolly of the Dailies," "What Happened to Mary?" and "Who Married Mary?" She is not expected to become actively connected with the Universal for a few weeks, perhaps not until August 1.

Newspaper Starts "What-Do-You-Like" Canvass

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 25.

In order to ascertain just what style of pictures are most desired by the photoplay patrons of Washington, the "Herald" in its Photoplay News department is asking a series of questions in the form of a coupon. This requests persons to state whether they like drama, comedy, multi-reels, military, educational, or serials, and how many reels they prefer to find on an evening's bill.

So far, comedy and drama hold the lead, with educational and news weeklies coming close. The serial is not at all popular.

It is the intention of Louis Glaser, the motion picture editor, to use this information thus gathered for the benefit of the Washington public by taking the matter up with the manufacturers.

According to correspondence received by the editor the exhibition which will take place at the Olympia between August 29 and September 19, promises to be most interesting.

The European manufacturers are busy preparing new types of machinery and material, which will have the most attractive effects. The best British, French and German firms have already retained space. There are also numerous producers of various other countries who are now interested in the cinematographic trade and promise to surprise the old-timers.

All communications regarding the exposition should be addressed to the secretary, 22-24 Portland street, London W.

Cinematography Cures Eye Trouble

The virtues of cinematography in connection with the human eye are disclosed in a long article of the French magazine "Nos Loisirs." According to the author, nothing constitutes as good a tonic for the eye as two hours cinematography every day.

Another advantage due to cinematography, says the author of the article, results indirectly, by causing those who discover that their eyes are hurt by the screen, to immediately apply to the oculist, as there is certainly something wrong with them: normal eyes should not be affected by motion pictures. It is understood, of course, that the projector, screen and film have to be in proper condition.

New Companies

Two new raw film manufacturing companies have recently been incorporated. Nothing has yet been announced regarding license arrangements between the new companies and the owners of the Goodwin patent.
Among the manufacturers who have already made arrangements for patent rights are: Eastman Kodak, Agra and Gevaert, Lumière and Pathé Fréres, who have imported films into this country amounting to millions and are not known to have obtained licenses. It is probable that these two firms, and mainly Pathé, will have to pay large sums for goods imported during the past years.

Five-reel Features Wanted
The leading French trade journal "Le Courrier," publishes the following announcement:

The company Pathé Fréres of the United States, has just sent K. W. Linn to London, as European representative. Mr. Linn has lived in the states fourteen years and has been in the cinematographic trade seven years.

"He opened his offices at 29 Charing Cross Road, K. C. London. His intentions are to buy for the United States all films which he will consider suitable. Money will be no object, he says, if he likes a film. He only wants multiple-reel films, as according to him, the demand today in the United States is for long pictures, generally five reels.

Cinematography and Health
A certain Naldo Filke in Amsterdam, Holland, recently discovered that motion pictures were a danger to health. His experiments are said to have been conducted in a medical and scientific manner, and he thus noticed that a nervous person could only stand the test two and one-half hours, while a strong person supported it two hours and fifty-five minutes. Mr. Filke describes the precise moment when his patients suffered from the eyes to the head, the heart, and so forth.

The author failed to state, though, the conditions of the air in the projection room, the quality of the projector and film, and above all, the kind of film used.

NORTHWESTERN MEN FILMED
Special to The Motion Picture News
Minneapolis, June 24.

Minneapolis wholesalers and manufacturers who have just made a trip through Minnesota and North Dakota to meet business men of the smaller cities and towns, will know just how they appeared in the eyes of the country merchants when they return.

J. V. Bryson, northwestern manager of the Laemmle Film Service, has made it possible. Mr. Bryson and Claude Kimball, known in the northwest as the motion picture recorders of important happenings, accompanied the merchants by request, and they took motion pictures of the trade party at the different stops.

Manager of the Gordon in Rochester Resigns
(Special to The Motion Picture News.)

Rochester, N. Y., June 23.

T. S. POWERS, resident manager of the Gordon Photoplay House, has tendered his resignation to the board of directors, and it was accepted at a meeting held June 20. J. J. Raymond, of the Boston office of the Gordon Brothers Amusement Company, is here to assume the local management temporarily. Mr. Powers will go east for a rest, and expects to return in August.

Mr. Powers came to Rochester on January 12, 1913, and fitted up the Gordon for the opening on February 17, of that year. He has been manager ever since. Mr. Powers was presented with a silver loving cup by the house attaches, as a token of the esteem in which they hold him. Mr. Powers will remain a member of the board of directors, and is still vice-president of the corporation that owns the Gordon.

The Gordon made big money in the first year of its existence, under the management of Mr. Powers.

A. R. TUCKER.
THE EXHIBITOR WHO CASHED A SMILE

By R. E. Pritchard

"Give the People What They Want, and Give It with a Smile," Has Been His Motto—He Did and the People Have Given Him What He Wanted—and with a Smile!

IT is not often that you hear of a motion picture proprietor who literally cashed a smile.

But that is just what happened in the case of Victor Perez, owner and proprietor of the No Name Theatre at 1052 Canal street, New Orleans, one of the most prosperous motion picture men in the South. And he is pulling the George Ade stuff so strong that it would make George himself take second place.

Perez has built up an immense business on his personality, his chief asset being his sunny disposition, his friendship with his patrons, and the strong show that he always gives his patrons.

"The only secret of my success," he told a News representative, "is to study the demands of the public, give the people what they want, and give it to them willingly and with a smile."

THREE years ago Perez started in the business. One of his first ideas was that a motion picture theatre should be open all day.

"I concluded," he declares, "that in a city the size of New Orleans there are a large number of people who will patronize a show in the morning.

"There are hundreds of women shopping at that hour, and in this city there are always scores of visitors looking for amusement. I began to open my house at seven o'clock in the morning and it stays open until eleven at night. It is the only motion picture theatre in the country that opens so early.

"I attribute my success," he continued, "to having backed up my smile as my only capital. When I say nerve, I mean a willingness to give the people a good show and take a chance at getting financial returns.

"In entering the business I concluded that a motion picture man should not be impersonal and remain in the background.

"I knew how much personality counted in other businesses, and I was impressed with the fact that the general public knew nothing about the motion picture proprietor further than his name on the theatre.

"I determined that I would let my personality enter into the business, make friends, and have them make money for me. I have tried to treat my patrons with the same friendly interest that the proprietor of any store would accord, and this policy has more than made good for me."

WHEN Perez opened his theatre there were three others in the same block. Wiseacres predicted that he would fail, especially since two of the houses are owned by the two largest syndicates in the city.

But Perez had planned carefully before he started business, and he faithfully followed his plans so that it is now doubtful if as many admissions are paid daily in any other house in the city.

"I have tried to give my patrons the films first, and to present always features of news value. If there is a sensational case before the public, I always seek pictures of this, or along the same general line.

"I have found that the general public is very much alive as to what is going on in this world of ours and that pictures of some trial or other news event that is occupying the attention of the newspapers is certain to attract the throngs to my house."

Perez is a great believer in advertising, and he has used a large amount of printer's ink in New Orleans.

However, he does not believe in the simple little daily advertisement, but in "letting it go out" when he goes after business.

Time and again he has used page advertisements in local newspapers, always having as the central feature of these advertisements his smiling face.

With these pages from time to time he has printed coupons for free admission. Each one of these coupons bears his picture—his smiling face. The person that uses the coupon is sure to be impressed with the smile, and he will probably see Perez there and see the smile in reality.

When Perez used his first page advertisement, it caused some consternation among the motion picture houses here, and those who have steadily maintained their standing announcements in the newspapers, never increasing them for some special feature or big event, predicted that Vic would soon bankrupt himself by such a policy.

However, his advertising, because of its peculiar "human nature," has always packed his houses, and advertising has proven all the more valuable to him because he has the happy faculty of making and maintaining friends. His patronage is now made up largely of "regulars" who will walk blocks to patronize his theatre rather than any other.

IN the same measure that he employs newspaper advertising, Perez makes a "show" in front of his theatre covering the entrance with posters of the films he is showing, but never forgetting his own picture and his own name, still his biggest assets in business.

The entrance is not so artistic as some other houses, but no one can pass the place and not be thoroughly convinced that a motion picture performance is going on inside and that Vic Perez is the man behind the show.

So successful has this policy been that Perez has just adopted a new slogan: "You made me rich, it's my treat now," and this has taken as well as the "keep smiling."

Most men in business would rather hide the fact that they have gotten wealth out of their business within three years' time, but Perez is honest about it and he is letting everybody know how prosperous he is, how completely he has cashed in on a smile.

"It is not the smile that is entirely responsible," he said as the News man was leaving, "but I consider it my most valuable asset. I figure that it costs absolutely nothing to be pleasant and affable and the return makes a noise like round dollars."

If Perez's prosperity is a fair example of what personality can do, it would well pay many managers who are showing their films to all empty seats to get out in front of the house and let the public know them through the newspapers—and—to keep smiling.

KEARNY LIFTS LICENSE BAN

Special to The Motion Picture News
Newark, N. J., June 25.

After refusing for several years to grant licenses for motion picture theatres in the town, the Common Council, of Kearny, N. J., has at last broken its ironclad rule. Several years ago licenses were issued for motion picture theatres in Midland avenue, Arlington, and Johnson avenues, but since that time the council has turned down all applicants.

Now former Freeholder John J. Wilson has obtained a license to conduct shows. He intends to put up a theatre that will accommodate 669 persons. The showhouse will be built on Kearny avenue, opposite Dukes street.
WEEK-RUN FEATURES IN VAUDEVILLE HOUSE

A. Alex Wall has taken over the Majestic House, Third avenue and Nineteenth street, Birmingham, which heretofore has been a vaudeville house, and has made out of it the largest motion picture theatre in the South. Mr. Wall is operating it with week-run features and states that the venture is proving a complete success.

He runs four shows daily and charges an admission of 10 and 20 cents. Recently he ran the new picture of the Mexican war, which he says were first shown in Birmingham, coming here direct from the manufacturers. Enormous crowds were disappointed the first three days of the week, however, as the development of the big feature film was delayed and did not arrive until Wednesday. Mr. Wall had billed the town extensively and advertised in the newspapers and many people went to the theatre not knowing of the delay. After the film arrived, however, the crowds which saw it were as large as ever.

USE SCREEN FOR ADVERTISING

Special to The Motion Picture News
Trenton, N. J., June 25.

Several of the smaller picture houses of the city have contracted to throw advertising matter on the screen during the summer months. This is presumably in order to cut down expenses, or, more properly speaking, perhaps, to increase receipts during the dull months. The prices being charged are said to be very reasonable. It has been stated that less than $1 is charged by some for an advertisement to run a week.

Of course the larger houses will not follow this example. They have persistently refused quite lucrative offers to take on this kind of publicity. Programs are used and advertising space sold on the curtain and in other places about the houses, but they will not permit announcements on the screen.

AIRDOME REIGNS IN ALBANY

Special to The Motion Picture News
Albany, N. Y., June 25.

Last week marked the opening of the open-air shows in Albany, and the attendance in the picture houses fell off. There are four of these open-air affairs in Albany, and every one of them can accommodate over 1,000 comfortably. Full houses greeted each performance and the owners are jubilant. M. Sucino, who runs the Parkway motion picture house, is better fixed than any of the managers, insomuch as he has an open-air show in connection with his theatre.

“Salomy Jane” Scheduled for Films

Bret Harte’s Famous Story Will Be Picture Corporation Produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation

THE romantic days of the great gold rush to California are to be rehabilitated in a motion picture production of “Salomy Jane,” with due regard to the realism demanded by many audiences to-day. The adaptation is to be taken from Paul Armstrong’s dramatic version of Bret Harte’s famous story, and the pictures are to be filmed on the very ground that the celebrated author had in mind when he wrote the romance. The motion picture version will be the work of the California Motion Picture Corporation, which has just signed a contract for the film rights with the Libber and the Paul Armstrong companies.

The title role will be played by Beatriz Michelen, the beautiful prima donna.

The producing company in this initial release is presenting Miss Michelen in silent drama for the first time. The part of the capricious Salomy Jane is exceptionally well adapted to Miss Michelen, whose animated mannerisms and colorful voice made her a well-known operatic star. Among the operas in which she has starred are: Kirk La Shelle’s “Princess Chica,” Henry Savage’s “Peggy from Paris,” John Curt’s “Kissing Girl,” and Oliver Morosco’s “Tik Tok Man of Oz.” Miss Michelen will be supported by one of the best balanced casts ever organized for motion pictures, including House Peters, late of Frohman’s Famous Players; Andrew Robson, William Nigh, Ernest Joy and Clara Beyers, all of whom have played leading roles when with other companies.

The California Motion Picture Corporation, which is devoting its time exclusively to feature adaptations from famous plays, books and operas, has been carrying on active operations at its San Rafael studio, situated at the base of Mt. Tamalpais, since the first of May. It is the intention of the company to get several productions ahead, thus insuring the prompt release of its features on definite dates without the necessity of hurried and inadequate work, should unforeseen circumstances cause temporary delay.

The corporation has been financed by a group of prominent California business men and capitalists. Among the stockholders and directors are Herbert Payne, of Menlo Park; Henry T. Scott, president of the Mercantile Bank; R. P. Schwerin, vice-president and general manager of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; Charles Templeton Crocker, owner of the St. Francis Hotel and director of the Crocker National Bank; Edwin M. Eddy, of the Selwyn Eddy Estate Company; William F. Herrin, vice-president and chief counsellor of the Southern Pacific; Christian de Guigne, of the Parrott Estate; James Tyson, president of the Seaboard National Bank, and Arthur C. Payne of the Payne Estate. Alex. E. Beyfuss is general manager of the corporation.

MONROE GARDEN DIRECTORS’ MEETING

Special to The Motion Picture News
Toledo, O., June 25.

Walter B. Moore, manager of Toledo’s largest playhouse, was unanimously voted by the directors to manage the Monroe Garden open-air theatre. At the annual meeting of the company these officers were named:

President, J. Gazzam Mackenzie, superintendent, Ames-Bonner Company; vice-president, Ed. Hubbel, insurance man; secretary-treasurer, N. E. Hascall, the J. J. Freeman Company; managing director, George Hassett, the Hassett Storage Company; and local manager, W. B. Moore. All of the officers are well-to-do and prominent business men of Toledo. This is the theatre’s first year, and it made handsome profits for the owners.

When it rains, unless the downpour is too heavy, patrons take up umbrellas, and the show goes on just the same. Ten cents is the admission charged adults and five cents for children.
STRAND, MILWAUKEE.
READY IN FALL

The new Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., now in course of construction, will take rank as one of the leading feature photoplay houses of the city when it opens about September 1, under the management of Philip Gross, Jr. Mutual pictures and exclusive features will form the program.

The building is being erected on ground owned by the Miller Brewing Company, at Grand avenue and Fifth street. Wolf and Ewens are the architects.

The beautiful arcade elaborately decorated, ninety feet long and thirty feet wide, will connect the theatre with Grand avenue, the principal street of the city.

The theatre proper will cost $80,000 and will have some new and exclusive features, such as a seven-foot drive fan that will furnish cool air in the summer and heated air in the winter, making this theatre absolutely perfect as far as ventilation is concerned.

SUN THEATRE, BUFFALO IS UNDER WAY

The directors of the Broadway Sun Theatre Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., announce that at the first meeting of stockholders the following officers were chosen: President, Louis Newman; vice-president, Pearl M. Block; treasurer, Percy S. Landsdowne; secretary, Henry G. Walters.

Ground has been broken at Broadway and Madison street, the site chosen for the theatre, where the company will erect a strictly modern, fireproof theatre of white sandstone and brick, with a seating capacity of 1,000. The color scheme of the inside will be carried out in turquoise blue with gold trimmings. A prominent feature of the new theatre will be the mushroom system of ventilation. The air in the theatre will be at least 25 degrees cooler than the temperature in the street in midsummer. The directors announce the opening of the Sun Theatre on or about August 1, of this year.

BUTTE WILL HAVE $100,000 THEATRE

To Great Falls will belong the credit of having the largest and finest picture house in the state if the plans of H. O. Clark, president of the Electric Amusement Company of that city are realized.

The plans for the new building contemplate a structure which will cost $75,000 for the frame with another $25,000 for the furnishings and perhaps a little more. Ground will be broken within 90 days and the doors will be thrown open on November 1. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,000, will be two stories high with a foundation which will carry five; will have two stores in front, one each side of the main entrance of the theatre, a row of boxes around the complete mirror and the around the complete interior and the

The Electric Amusement Company already controls the Alcazar Theatre and under Mr. Clark's guidance has become a success. The officers of the Electric Amusement Company are Mr. Clark, president; Mrs. Clark, vice-president and Thomas Mackey, secretary. These, with C. S. O'Brien, compose the board of directors. Needless to say, the new theatre will be strictly modern, and on his present trip Mr. Clark will take advantage to visit the larger cities in the East and study the newest things in picture houses with a view to adopting what is good in his new Palace Theatre in Great Falls, the electric city of Montana.

TWO THEATRES DE LUXE FOR DETROIT

Under the direction of John H. Kunsky, Detroit's motion picture magnate, ground was broken Wednesday at the northeast corner of Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, Detroit, Mich., for the erection of a theatre costing $75,000 and seating 1,750 persons. The large pipe organ which will be used with a full orchestra. The theatre is designed so stores can be erected about it later and an arcade entrance to the theatre proper constructed.

The building of Mr. Kunsky's new "Strand" Theatre, Jefferson and Hillger avenues, which will have a capacity of 1,500 and cost approximately $100,000, has begun. The "Strand" when completed will rank as one of the most beautiful motion picture houses in the United States.

$80,000 THEATRE PLANNED
IN ROCHESTER

A number of Buffalo men have just closed contracts for the erection of a large $60,000 photoplay house in Rochester to be called the Regent. Among those interested in the new theatre are Manager Harold Edel, of the Strand Theatre, and M. Schwartz, manager of the Regent Theatre, about to open in Syracuse. The new theatre will open about Nov. 1. A fifteen-piece orchestra and a $20,000 organ are announced as two of the features.

Mitchell H. Mark has closed contracts with the Havens House in Olean, Pa. Mr. Mark will remodel this theatre and open it in a month or so as a high-class motion picture theatre.

NEW HOUSE FOR EL PASO

Construction work commenced on the new Alhambra Theatre, El Paso, Tex., on May 21. This building will cost $50,000 and will be one of the finest moving picture houses in the Southwest.

The building is being erected for Rudolpho and Manuel Cruz, who have recently been extensively interested in the motion picture business in Dallas.

The theatre will be of reinforced concrete construction and will be fireproof. It will contain a balcony with a total seating capacity of 1,200. A feature will be the men's smoking room and the ladies' lounge room, located on either side of the foyer. The lobby will be of marble and both the exterior and interior decorations in the Moorish styles. The building will be three stories in height, with the executive offices located on the third floor.
The stage will be so arranged as to permit the production of elaborate vaudeville acts. It is expected that the new theatre, which will display only feature films, will open July 1.

FOUR NEW PICTURE HOUSES FOR HARRISBURG, PA.

Peter Magaro, of the Magaro Amusement Company, Harrisburg, Pa., has announced that on June 15 he will start tearing down his Star motion picture theatre, 410 Market street, for the erection on its site of a new theatre that will cost $25,000. He expects to have the new house in operation by September 1. It will be of brick and fireproof.

The seating capacity will be 1,000, and the theatre will be equipped with a stage, although Mr. Magaro is not prepared to state whether the house will be used ultimately for vaudeville as well as motion pictures. This will make the fourth new motion picture theatre in the city, as others have been constructed by various interests in that city, the four to have a combined seating capacity of more than 4,200 persons.

NEW BUFFALO THEATRES

The Ellen Terry Theatre, now in the course of construction at Potomac and Grant streets, Buffalo, N. Y., will have a seating capacity of 1,200. Among its features will be a large organ and an eight-piece orchestra. It is being erected by the Grant Theatre Company at a cost of $50,000.

The new house, which will be 50x150, will seat 1,500. It is to be known as the White House. The front, to be constructed out of white marble, will contain over 4,000 lights.

Universal Films Beloit Events

Local Pictures Later Run Off at the Rex Houses—Lyric Sold to E. J. and M. W. Tillotson.

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Beloit, Wis., June 24.

BELOIT was in the hands of men from the Universal Film Company for three days, recently. Operators were busy registering interesting and unique features of the city. The filming of the town awakened a great deal of interest in the methods of the motion picture man. Large crowds turned out when exhibition runs of the motorized fire and police departments were held. The pictures were shown later at the Rex theatres.

The Lyric Theatre has changed hands within the week. On account of ill health Mr. Quinn disposed of the house to Messrs. E. J. and M. W. Tillotson, formerly of Belvidere. A new suction fan of large capacity has been installed in the theatre, the bad air removed and fresh air supplied every three minutes. Electric fans also furnish cool breezes.

It has been the custom of the management of the house in previous years to furnish fans for the audience during the hottest weather and Messrs. Tillotson will continue this popular feature. Other managers do not seem to realize the value of this simple and inexpensive plan by which the audience can be kept cool and hence in a responsive state of mind during a performance in the hottest weather.

As the custom has been practised at the Lyric, each patron, as she or he enters the door, is presented with a fan by an usher. The fans are of the good old plain palm-leaf variety, of ample dimensions and capable of kicking up a good breeze. Wielded gently during the hour that the pictures are being watched, they are conducive to a pleasant enjoyment of the performance. Each bears a label asking that it be deposited at the door as the patron leaves the theatre.

One of the decided advantages of the large palm-leaf fan is its size, which makes it practically impossible for it to be carried out of the theatre without detection, should the patron have such an intention.

All of the Beloit theatres are provided with suction fans. The suction system in the Rex is probably the most complete. It was built in the theatre at the time the building was constructed.

Rochester Theatre Will Reopen in Fall

Buffalo Men Interested with Rochester Man in New Enterprise—Bankruptcy Sale of Fitzhugh Hall Effects Brings $1,210

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Rochester, N. Y., June 25.

THE sale of the Fitzhugh Hall Amusement Company's assets in bankruptcy court resulted in the disposal of a five-year lease on the building to W. E. C. Stone for $460. Personal property in the hall, including chairs and other furniture, brought $750, making a total of $1,210 netted by Paul Sheehan, of Buffalo, trustee in this case.

The sale has not been confirmed as yet by the Receiver in Bankruptcy, Mr. P. Sanford, if he does not think the amount netted is sufficient, he has power to order it sold again.

It is stated that Fitzhugh Hall will be reopened in the fall, under the direction of three Buffalo men and one Rochesterian, who have formed the Rochester Winter Garden Company, Inc., for that purpose. It is said that they will make a specialty of showing Broadway feature photoplays.

The men interested in the new company are: A. Charles Hayman, of this city; Joseph A. Schueher, Charles R. Rogers and Harry Marsey, of Buffalo.

At Dayton—A Trade Board!

At the recent New York convention the following resolution was passed by unanimous vote:

Whereas, adverse State and National legislation is continually being introduced, legislation that has a tendency to hamper the development of the trade, and

Whereas such attempted legislation can best be defeated by united and concerted action on the part of all branches of the industry, and

Whereas the motion picture industry has now reached a stage where it is essential for harmonious and united action of all the branches of the industry, therefore be it

Resolved, That the International Moving Picture Association recommend the establishment of a trade board where film manufacturers, exchange men, exhibitors and all the allied branches of the trade can be represented for the purpose of protecting the industry as a whole, and be it further

Resolved, That the incoming executive officers be hereby instructed to enlist the different elements for the establishment of such trade board,

* * *

The attention of exhibitors in general, and in particular of those who will attend the Dayton convention, is urgently called to this resolution—its wording and purport.

In the first place, it should be clearly understood that the trade board which the resolution calls for does not interfere in any way with an exhibitors' association.

It does not interfere with a manufacturers' or a distributors' association.

The preamble of the resolution states that adverse legislation and the necessity of combatting it are reasons for the existence of a trade board.

This is a most important reason, but it is only one of many.

At the present time there is an astonishing lack of co-operation in the motion picture industry.

This is not to be wondered at, for the industry is new. Other industries in their youth have gone through quite the same experience.

But this lack of co-operation can be remedied—to the betterment of every factor in the industry. This has been accomplished in practically every other big business. The one way is through some such body as a trade board.

The situation in the whole industry is just like the case of any one business. There must be some one head to even the smallest business. Otherwise, as every business man knows, it has no policy, no go-ahead movement, no security, and its activities are only of the helter-skelter order.

The trade board will only deal in general matters, affecting the industry as a whole.

The manufacturers, the distributors, the exhibitors may have their own associations and through them strengthen their own common interests.

But the point of the matter is that these three main branches of the industry are necessarily interdependent—just like the various departments of an individual business.

Somebody must knit them together.

* * *

Take the question of the exhibitor's price of admission. The whole industry is supported right at the box-office.

If prices are inadequate and ununiform the whole industry is involved.

But who will adjust these prices?

The exhibitors can't do it alone.

Take the matter of advertising to the public. Right here lies fundamentally the growth of the whole industry.

Who is going to do it? The exhibitor—all alone and at his own expense?

The matter of censorship—state or local. Who will fight it—some one manufacturer or some lone body of exhibitors in one city?

A trade board or some such unity of organization will come about in this industry as certainly as day follows night.

But why defer it?

The Dayton convention has a splendid opportunity before it.

New York took one step.

Let Dayton take another and longer one and evidence to the whole industry that the exhibitors are not only the largest and fundamental branch of this business, but also the most progressive and best organized.
Westminster Studios Ready Soon

Clarence Schottenfels Promotes New Enterprise Declared to be Most Exensively Furnished of Their Kind—Open For Inspection July 20.

The Westminster studios, 518-526 West Fifty-fifth street, New York, said to be the finest of their kind by Clarence Schottenfels, formerly of the Rensho Company, general manager of the new concern, will open for inspection to producers on July 20, and will be ready for occupancy about the middle of August.

Each studio measures 30x100 feet, the ceilings are from thirty to thirty-five feet on the clear, and the lighting consists of the Cooper-Hewitt system on trolleys, to enable each studio to accommodate from five to seven sets. Mr. Schottenfels says that each studio will be equipped with trap-doors and stairways reaching all the way to the cellar. An annunciator and call bell system will be installed in each studio, and there will be ample dressing rooms, toilets, lavatories and hot and cold running water.

It said that ten shower baths will be installed for men and women, and there will be a lounging-room for men and a retiring-room for ladies. Six executive offices for the use of the directors and a large reception-room are other features claimed.

Mr. Schottenfels declares that part of the equipment will consist of a tank measuring 20x60x12 feet, with a capacity of 39,844 gallons. An up-to-date sprinkler system for rain-storm effects is another feature the management says it has provided, and that the stock of artificial trees, palms, ferns and flowers is complete enough to meet the requirements of the most elaborate outdoor scenes. The list of furnishings compiled by the company to give stage managers an idea of the completeness to be expected of the studios includes all the principal period styles of furniture, and props for everything from hospital scenes to executions and, on the other hand, the most peaceful and restful domestic episodes.

Make Special Scenery for "Ragged Earl"

Popular Plays and Players, Inc., Prepare to Present Andrew Mack it Elaborate Production of His "Legitimate Success.

Andrew Mack writes in from Philadelphia to say that he is much pleased with the way his old stage success, "The Ragged Earl," is being produced as a big feature picture for Popular Plays and Players, Inc., of 1600 Broadway, New York City.

"I never realized before how much more detail is necessary for a motion picture than for a speaking play," says Mr. Mack. "I thought at first that the director, Mr. Carlton, would have nervous prostration before the picture was over, but things are going along finely now. Of course I was of considerable help in the matter of costume, as I have made a study of Irish costumes through my years in Irish plays on the speaking stage. I was somewhat troubled at first by the scenes being taken out of the sequence in which they will appear on the screen, but I soon got the hang to it.

"I think 'The Ragged Earl' will make a dandy picture. There's a lot of action in it and we're getting the most out of it. We have taken one of the fight scenes, and it nearly killed me. I rehearsed about ten times and it's some strenuous duel too, but if it doesn't get a great effect, I'll be much surprised.

"We've had to build a lot of special scenery for the picture and a crowd of 'supes' is required for the big scene, so you see the work is no cinch; but I'm going to it with vim, for I want my picture debut to be in a cracking good feature. I think it will be.'

How an Exchange Man Knows His Clients

Omaha, Neb., June 25.

Charles W. Stomback, of the General Film Company's office, knows his three hundred exhibitors in Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota like a book. In a certain part of Omaha he knows Wild West drama and slap-stick comedy cannot occupy too prominent a place on the programs. On the other hand, he knows the suburban theatres require a reel of scenic and travel, the next number of some popular series, and a simple comic photoplay, or something similar. In the uptown business district he knows current events and good comedies are wanted. Most of the small towns want thrillers—trains running into automobiles, men and women jumping off bridges, cliffs and other high places; lots of cowboy stuff, and plenty of war. But here and there a little town—and he knows them all—wants a higher grade of material.

For instance, the Dean Theatre at York, Neb., wants current events and good, strong dramas. He says the demand for slap-stick stuff and thrillers is dying out more and more as the demand for higher grade increases.
“The Mystery of Wickam Hall.” (Powers. Three reels. June 26.)—The action of this drama takes place almost entirely in an old English mansion. But the scenes in this 2reel house are quite worthy of mention. The rooms are beautifully decorated, and the actors clothed, in the first part of the production, in the costumes of two centuries ago, perform their parts admirably well. They act like the people they are impersonating, their actions are slow and dignified, and there is not the slightest gesture or movement which would lead one to believe that they were modern people. The photography leaves nothing to be desired.

Sir Henry Maston’s lands are forfeited to Sir John Wickam, the Squire of Wickam Hall. To save himself from ruin, Sir Henry gives the hand of his daughter, Nadine, to Sir John. Later when he feels that Henry has insulted Nadine, by embracing Netta in his wife’s presence, he is challenged to fight by Nadine’s true lover. Both are killed.

Three generations later, when the modern Nadine’s father is in debt to his neighbor, he plans doing the same thing that Sir John Henry had done before him. But Nadine in a vision sees the old story enacted again. She refuses to marry her father’s creditor and marries the man she loves.

“In the Southern Hills.” (Domino. Two reels. Thursday, June 18.)—As the title indicates, the action transpires in the South, but the scenes resemble the usual western as much as the southern hills. But the story is an entertaining one. Some people do not approve of spreading religion by force, but perhaps in a lawless town no other way is possible.

Willis, enraged because his sweetheart aids the minister in his work, enters the church on Sunday morn, and attempts to break up the service but the minister uses his fists to good advantage and Willis goes away carrying a black eye. Many times he tries to harm the minister, but the right always triumphs.

“The Hopes of Blind Alley.” (Rex. Three reels. July 4.)—This story seems to ring true to human feelings. Murdoch McQuarrie does the best work we have seen for some time. Pauline Bush, George Cooper, William C. Dowlan and Lon Chaney are also very good. The plot is powerful. The action does not drag. Living in a Bohemian section of the city, the inhabitants of the building are very friendly. The old man and his daughter are left an “estate” consisting of one picture, which turns out to be worth a fortune. The attempts of an artist to crook to obtain this give an interesting melodramatic sidelight. The old man and his hat add a human interest touch.

“Molly the Drummer Boy.” (Edison. Saturday, July 4.)—Viola Dana plays the leading in this picture, which is adapted from Harriet T. Comstock’s novel of the same name. The story really deserves more than one reel, as almost too much appears in this one and the story is a little hard to follow. Miss Dana makes a charming boy, although anyone would know she was a girl. The scenes of the productions are worthy of praise. Most of them are laid in the camp of the Continental Army, where Molly has gone as a drummer boy. After the war the army surgeon adopts her as her father deserted to the English.

“Face to Face.” (Edison. Tuesday, July 7.)—In this chapter of “The Man Who Disappeared” series, Perriton comes face to face with Mary Wales, his fiancée, the sister of the man for whom he took the blame of the crime for which he was forced to flee. The brother has been forced into crooked work by the man who is bidding against Perriton’s friend, the engineer.

The young man involves his sister in his troubles, but Perriton saves them both, and gains evidence to use against his rival. This story is better than those that have immediately preceded it, and is worked out well.

Dead Men’s Tales. (Eclair-Universal. Three reels. Wednesday, June 24.)—To those who love the Western melodrama this picture will surely appeal. The villain is painted as black and horrible as possible. The drama is marked by sensationalism.

The main story deals with the treachery of Blair toward his partner, Hopkins. Blair leaves him to die in the desert and becomes rich from their mine, but eighteen years later he meets Hopkins’ wife and child. Overcome by remorse, he fully reimburses them, their children marry, and all ends well.

“The Song in the Dark.” (Essanay. Two reels. Friday, June 12.)—Richard Travers, Bryant Washburn and Gerda Holmes play the leads. All will appreciate the story, for it is quite new and the plot and situations will appeal to all. Richard is engaged to Angela, who loves nature. She discovers that canaries are blinded to make them sing and tries to have the cruel practice stopped. Then she becomes blind and her sweetheart deserts her for a time, but when he hears her singing he returns to her.

"LUCILLE LOVE, THE GIRL OF MYSTERY"
(Gold Seal—Two reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE locale, as in the preceding installment, is Mexico. These two reels were filmed around San Diego, Cal., and the excellent Southern scenery afforded by this part of our own country resembles that of Mexico to a high degree, and is therefore exceptionally well suited for this purpose. It will not belittle this chapter at all to say that it bears a marked resemblance to the high-class Western melodrama, as the Westerns of this variety are not so plentiful as might be supposed.

Plenty of fast riding and its complement, falling from the swiftly moving horses, occurs. The numerous fights, in which a large number of supers appear, must have required a great amount of time and money to perfect, as realism is predominant in all of the bloody engagements.

Miss Cunard proves that she is a well-trained horsewoman; she rides her horse with the usual ease and grace that marks anything she undertakes. Besides the battles and the horseback riding, there is a thrilling chase of Lucille in an automobile by the hirelings of Hugo. The auto is the victor and takes Lucille over the border line, where she boards a train for San Francisco, the home of her father.

The lawless atmosphere of Mexico is excellently conveyed, owing to the fights that use up a large part of the film. The scenes, too, are excellent; a large number of distant views are shown; they are clear and the figures are easily discernible, although obviously a long distance from the camera. Mr. Ford was, in all probability, too busy directing the furious engagements to appear as an actor in this chapter. He doesn’t put in his appearance until the second reel, and then only for a few moments at a time with long intervals between.

Ernest Shields, as Thompson, Lobeque’s servant, through his performance in the last installment and this, is becoming an important character. He at length succeeds in stealing the ruby necklace from Lucille while she is asleep in the train bound north. She awakes to find it gone, and all the passengers are offering suggestions when the reel closes. This is the eleventh edition and is booked for release June 23.

JUDGE CLOSES SHOWS: CITIZENS REBEL
Special to The Motion Picture News
Lexington, Ky., June 23.

Police Judge Minnich, of Hazard, Ky., in the wisdom that characterizes those who sit in high places occasionally, has issued an edict that the motion-picture shows in his town must be closed on Sunday. The town paper has had some words to say on the subject and the citizens are not pleased by any means. They point out they had much better be in the motion-picture theatres than in questionable places. Judge Minnich also rules that drug stores in his town shall be closed on Sunday, so there are now no films and no ice-cream sodas to be had in the town of Hazard on the Sabbath day.

"THE LITTLE HOUSE IN THE VALLEY"
(American—Two reels)
REVIEWED BL. C. J. VERHALEN

SPLENDID opportunities for beautiful backgrounds are offered in this two-reel photoplay (released Monday, June 29) and are taken advantage of by the producer. The Flying A pictures are always full of nature’s beautiful spots, and this is no exception to the rule. These scenes are accentuated all the more by the sharp and clear photography.

The Coxen-Greenwood company of players interpret the story. Ed Coxen plays the part of a civil engineer, while Winifred Greenwood interprets the role of the wife of Vernon Prentiss, a retired and invalid writer, played by William Bertram. The other actors who help to make the picture are George Field, John Stepping and Carl Morrison.

The picture derives its name from the little home of Vernon Prentiss, which is located in the valley, in the midst of a picturesque garden. It is the target of a band of bandits, and also is in line with the new railroad which is in contemplation of construction.

These misfortunes embitter Prentiss and he offers the bandits a vast reward if they will destroy all the plans and instruments of the survey party. His efforts, however, are foiled by his young wife. The shock of his home being destroyed angers him so that, in his weakened condition, he dies.

"THE TRAMP"
(Electric—Three reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FOR those who love a picture that is really just a character portrayal, no other would suit as well as this. It contains little action, but much good acting. Only two characters of any importance appear, and unfortunately their names are not obtainable, as the picture is of German make. But these two men make the picture, because if the acting were poor it would be entirely devoid of all interest.

The producer evidently had in mind the idea of giving the spectator a quantity of beautiful scenes, and in this he has admirably succeeded. Many of them are rural exteriors, and supplemented by excellent photography and beautiful tinting they cause the picture to stand in a class by itself as a scenic. Some of the scenes are slightly long, and even though the acting is good the average person desires more variety than is furnished in this picture.

The tramp is accused, tried, and sentenced for life for the murder of a farmer, when in reality a convict is guilty. Later the convict is mortally injured and is brought into the hospital ward of the prison where the tramp has been put to work. The convict recognizes the wronged man and confesses with his dying breath, freeing him from his sentence.

"SHORTY GETS IN TROUBLE"
(Broncho—Two reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE beauty of this series, which features “Shorty” Hamilton, is that each of his experiences is complete in itself, but the same characters participate in each picture, so that one gets to know the characters well and this causes the spectator to enjoy the pictures a great deal more than he would otherwise. Add to this merit that the pictures are a mixture of good comedy and fine drama, without the usual love story and the usual heavy and other conventional characters and plots, we have a picture that will bear up under the severest criticism.

Shorty is almost hanged as a bandit in this adventure, when the culprit, urged by his wife, confesses with his dying breath. She arrives in time to save Shorty, to the great happiness of all.
"A PEARL OF THE PUNJAB"
(Eclectic—Three Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

The beautiful scenes of Florida have been turned to good purpose in this Eclectic picture. With the aid of native huts, to say anything of the natives themselves, Florida has been transformed into India. Realism is predominant in every scene.

The story is one seldom told on the screen, or even in any other manner, and anything original, or nearly so, will surely be a success as a picture. A capable cast of Pathé players performs. Miss Nellie Craig, Miss Lillian Wiggins, Charles Brunnell, Walter Seymore and George Busby are the principals.

In the first reel an elegant fancy dress ball is staged. This is a most beautiful scene and the parts of the picture showing the palace gardens in which the ball is given are excellent in photography and lighting. The whole picture is marked by these merits.

To heighten the Indian atmosphere a number of wild animals have been introduced. Many elephants appear, and are used as the means of transportation. In one scene a wild tiger dashes before the camera. The young people will not enjoy the picture, as the plot is one that will appeal more to older people of the better educated class.

George Hamilton, while on a hunting trip, adopts a little Indian child, who grows up as his daughter’s servant. Years later, Sarah, the daughter, is engaged to Carruthers, a doctor in the British army. One day Sarah chastises Aissa, the Indian girl, for some slight mistake and Carruthers takes the Indian’s side. This leads to a quarrel. Carruthers is beside himself with anger when he sees Colonel Allen receiving her attentions. He fights with the colonel, and thinks he has killed him; Aissa aids in his escape and takes him to her native village.

The colonel and Sarah are married, and while on a hunting trip the colonel becomes ill and is taken to the doctor, who lives among the natives. Recognition follows, and the colonel tries to reconcile the two before he dies. But Carruthers prefers Aissa to Sarah, and stays with the natives.

"THE TOLL OF MAMMON"
(Eclectic—Four Parts)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHEL

In the heralds distributed by the Excelsior Feature Film Company, this, their first production, is called “a forcible masterpiece.” The word “forcible” is not wholly expressive of the merits of the picture. The noun “masterpiece” is applied to so many “features” that it means nothing. There is hardly a word in English that exactly presents the attributes of this picture. One might say it is wonderful, but that would hardly be correct. “Beautiful” expresses it partially, but not in entirety.

The picture has merit because it has an absorbing plot that holds our attention; it is needed because it teaches a valuable moral lesson; thirdly, it is worthy because it contains splendid photography with ingenious acting; it is a masterpiece, the word being used advisedly, because its whole make-up is of the order that goes to produce a “consummate piece of workmanship,” as the word “masterpiece” is interpreted in the dictionary.

The moral lesson which this film teaches has to do with patent medicines and their tremendous sale in this country. An exposé of just how the exploiters work, how they gain control of the minds of ignorant people, is explained in detail in a vitally interesting story. If for no other reason than this, people should see the film, and exhibitors should have no hesitancy in showing it.

The story was written and directed by Harry Handworth, and the principal female lead is played by Octavia Handworth. Among others in the cast are: Gordon de Maine, Tom Tempest and William A. Williams.

Dr. John Wright, a young physician, is forced to give a note for $3,000 when his wife loses some valuable jewels she had borrowed. Some time later the owner of the note wishes to use the doctor’s name for a tuberculosis “cure.”

DR. WRIGHT LEARNS THE POLICE ARE AFTER HIM

Doctor Wright, now well known, though poor, refuses this on examination of the serum. He is, however, forced to give in upon presentation of the note.

Some time later the Board of Health becomes suspicious and warrants are issued for his and the promoter’s arrest. He tries to escape the police, but they follow in a motor boat, and by a well-directed shot blow up the launch. A good explosion is registered. Doctor Wright is imprisoned for thirty years, but is released when he has caught consumption during his stay in the cells. Several good scenes of prison life are shown.
THE LETTER FROM AMERICA ARRIVES

"THE JUNGLE"
(All Star—Five Parts)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHELL

When Upton Sinclair wrote and published his book under this name, it probably created more world-wide comment than any other single work of that year. Nor was its hold on the people confined to a brief space of time. It still has a tremendous sale throughout the world, and has been translated into every language.

For this reason, if for no other, the ultimate success of the picture following this tale is assured. The story is morbid and seems, from a layman's standpoint, exaggerated, but it has such a human appeal, such wonderful continuity of action, that it should draw record crowds wherever shown.

One could not read the book or see the play without being able to tell Mr. Sinclair's politics. Socialism breathes throughout the picture, and no chance is missed to bring it forward. The author himself plays a small part in the drama and is introduced at his typewriter in the first reel.

The customary title of the All Star is used very effectively, as usual. At first one large star is shown, composed of myriads of smaller ones. These leave the centre one after the other, and form the letters of the title. This is followed by an introduction of the players and a general view of the great stockyards in Chicago. Gail Kane and George Nash play the leading parts. The work of the two principals was far above average and deserves commendation. They are supported by Alice Marc, Julia R. Hurley, Robert Cummings, Clarence Handysides, May McCabe and Ernest Evers.

Great care is taken in the details. The letters are shown in the original language in which they were written and then by a dissolve are translated. The scenes showing the rotten meat, the sausages made with dead rats, the ham filled with maggots are naturally nauseating, but undeniably realistic.

Briefly, the story is as follows: Jurgis and Ona, his sweetheart, with her family come to America to live. All obtain positions in the stock yards and commence to build their home. Marija, Ona's sister, obtains work in the household of the owner of the yards. Here she is ruined by the son of the family and thrown out.

Jurgis and Ona marry. A year later their troubles commence. Their wages are cut at the yards and all go on strike. His wife, in order to save the child, sells herself to the foreman, who is nearly killed by Jurgis. The latter is sent to jail, the baby dies, the little boy and his mother go to different homes, Ona dies and Marija is forced to prostitute herself. In the end Socialism rescues Jurgis, who rejoins his relatives and settles down to happiness.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE"
(Eclectic—Eighth Episode)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

It would be an exceedingly difficult proposition to find a man willing to run down the side of a mountain sloping at an angle of about seventy degrees, with a huge boulder rolling after him. It would be hard to find a man to do this, and doubly hard to find a woman, but when it comes to such acts of daring—leave it to Pearl White. She accomplishes this hair-raising feat in the eighth episode of "The Perils of Pauline." The rock may have been a "fake," but it certainly looks like the real thing, and even if it were made especially for this purpose, it must have had weight enough to carry it down the hill, and the weight is surely sufficient to break a person's back.

This scene, which comes in the second reel, is the big scene of this chapter, but its ending is as thrilling as the race itself. Harry, who has lodged himself on a ledge in the side of the mountain, throws out a rope which Pauline manages to grasp, and she is pulled to safety just as the rock plunges by. Without a doubt everyone will breathe a sigh of relief when he sees Pauline safe at last in her lover's arms.

Excitement and mystery are still served in generous and appetizing portions by the Eclectic Company in this serial, now in the midway of its career.

Before one has seen this picture he little thinks that the wilds of New Jersey can be used as a setting for the West, but the locality makes an admirable substitute, and if the audience isn't told the truth, it is a safe guess that they will be deceived as to the place. To add to the Western atmosphere, a tribe of Indians is introduced in this episode; they have an important bearing on the story, as it is they who first find Pauline after she has escaped from the cave where she was imprisoned by the villainous Hicks.

The Indians believe that Pauline has come to lead them against the white settlers, and when she refuses they set her off down the mountain with the rock after her. When they see that she is rescued, they attempt to capture her but are beaten back by the cowboys. A realistic encounter occurs, and this scene gives a chance for the introduction of some clever riding.

At the end of this episode the question arises, "What sode of 'The Perils of Pauline'" The next installment? She has already been on the water, in it, in the air, under the earth, and on it; there seems to be nothing left for her to do. The next installment will be awaited eagerly.

"A MEXICAN MINE FRAUD"
(Pasquali-American—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THOSE who love the sensational melodrama of the better sort will find this picture one that is modelled after their own hearts. It is full of thrilling situations and scenes from the very start to the very end, and five reels never passed sooner than these.

The story, which is mainly the adventures that befall a newspaper reporter while attempting to discover the truth about a Mexican mine, reported to be fraudulent, are the most nerve-racking experiences that ever a human being withstood.

The financier of the fraudulent mine naturally attempts to dissuade Ferguson, the reporter, from the investigation. He at first tries to bribe him, but this plan is a failure. Next he is forced into a duel with Park, Starry's prospective son-in-law, but even this plan fails. But in Mexico the worst net of all is laid around the unfortunate Ferguson.

He is captured by Park and enclosed in a cage. In an adjoining cage are a group of starved lions. Unless Ferguson sends word that the mine is rich, Park will let the lions in his cage. After a terrible battle with himself, Ferguson finally writes the letter and allows Park to take it. At that moment Ferguson's followers arrive and set fire to the building, hoping to free him.

He escapes but Park and the lions are consumed by the flames.

This fire scene is exceptionally realistic and very well executed. Ferguson returns home with the proofs that the mine is a fraud and the banker is ruined. But the two men are reconciled and the reporter wins the hand of the banker's daughter.

The scene of Ferguson momentarily hearing its death by the lions is produced in a wonderful manner. For a time it looks as if he would surely meet his death. The supposition is that he will last until the death of the lions. Ferguson at that moment will arrive and save him. But it only lasts at the ultimate moment. This scene is by far the biggest in the picture and consumes a large portion of the last reel.

The photography and lighting of the picture is good throughout. In some of the scenes in restaurants and trains no artificial light has been used, and this causes the film to be quite dark. But everyone will realize this, and these parts are of the sort that do not need to be highly lighted, as they are mostly close-ups.

The foreign idea of Mexico does not quite correspond to the American. The Mexicans are not dressed as we would imagine Mexicans should be dressed. English saddles are seen on the horses. But the action is so rapid when the scene shifts to Mexico, that although this defect may be made light of, it is easily overshadowed by the absorbing plot.

"THE SPITFIRE"
(Famous Players—Four Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CARLYLE BLACKWELL is known to motion picture fans all over the country, and his initial performance with the Famous Players in "The Spitfire" will cause him to rise in popularity, if there is any room for improvement on his part in the minds of the fans. The part he takes, that of Bruce Morson, a young American who is traveling around the world, could not be better suited to this type. Violet Merseran plays opposite Mr. Blackwell, and it is doubtful if a better lead could be found. She gives a perfect characterization of "The Spitfire."

The rest of the cast, all of whom do excellent work, consists of Redfield Clark, Lionel Adams, Robert Cummings, W. R. Dunn, Lois Arnold and June Dale.

"The Spitfire" is taken from Edward Peple's well-known comedy-drama of the same name, which had a long run and was a great success on the legitimate stage. The four reels of the picture are full of laughs, to say nothing of thrills. A well-done scene, one that is often attempted but seldom with success, is a fight in the dark. Only at times do the faces of the combatants come under the rays of a flashlight. When at last the light is turned on the room and the two men are a complete wreck.

Near the end of the last reel, an excellent fire is depicted on board a yacht, which is burned to the water's edge. Morson and Valda Girard jump overboard and swim to a nearby island, where a most impressive and pretty finale takes place.

The story consumes practically the whole first reel in forming and allowing the audience to straighten out the characters and the parts they are to play. At the opening of the second reel things begin to happen, and do not cease until the last scene. No one can help enjoying the picture, and no one can but recognize the superb acting and producing. It is unnecessary to say that it will be a great success.

The photography is of the usual high-class variety that always is predominant in these pictures. In a few scenes, those in the dark especially, the film is affected by static rays, but these appear seldom and when they do the action is so absorbing that they are hardly noticeable. Aside from this small defect, the film is perfect throughout in photography and lighting.

Bruce Morson, the young American traveler who is the main character in the story, is the victim of a robbery, and the events that transpire before he captures his enemies and wins the heart of a girl, who at first is unwillingly cold toward him, as she thinks he is a detective on the track of her innocent father, will hold all spellbound, and when the spectator is not experiencing a thrill he will certainly be enjoying a hearty laugh!

"HERE YOU STAY TILL YOU CONFESS!"
"CALIFORNIA RODEO"

(General War Feature Film Corporation)
reviewed by William Reisman Andrews

In these pictures of rough-riding and cattle-breaking, held at Salinas, Cal., one sees daring feats of horsemanship reproduced with clear photography. The dare-devil riders known so well to denizens of the cow country here display their skill for the benefit of the effete Easterner in a series of reels showing excellent work on the part of the "General" War Feature staff.

The camera men have succeeded in catching the more thrilling moments of the round-up, and by clever focusing made it appear in many instances as if vicious, untamed horses and roaring, frenzied bulls were making a direct charge on the spectator.

All the sports of the range are shown, with real cow-boys and cowgirls in competition. Bronco busting of vicious horses which have never felt the touch of the saddle until brought into the enclosure, and unarmed men wrestling with wild steers, provide enough thrills for the most jaded motion picture fan.

In 166 scenes the spectator sees the crack riders from all Western states taking part, at the risk of their lives, in hair-raising championship contests, and leaves, feeling that he has witnessed an unusual performance, expertly reproduced.

The paper issued by the company for the exhibitor contains just the kind of information likely to arouse interest in the film, and should prove of real service, if properly distributed, in filling a house to capacity.

This house, it is said, will be the first of a string of houses this company is planning to erect in the city, among which is said to be a big downtown house.

"GIANTS-WHITE SOX WORLD TOUR"

(Eclectic—Six Parts)
reviewed by William Reisman Andrews

The producers hit upon an excellent idea in not confining the pictures to travel and baseball game scenes in this elaborate series. There was no temptation to simply film a few striking events, but rather to get the experience of the characters, though unusual to the stay-at-homes, and depend upon baseball enthusiasm and curiosity concerning foreign parts to maintain the interest.

On the other hand, comic relief was introduced with good effect in the person of a tramp who determines to tour the world with the teams, regardless of the fact that he has only a couple of coppers in his pocket. The shifts to which his poverty puts him in carrying out his scheme makes numerous amusing incidents. A novel sensation is produced in scenes where the tramp sits waving his hands frantically in the bleachers filled with Chinamen, Japanese and Filipinos, who turn out in shoals to witness the national game.

Good photography and the clear atmosphere in which the pictures were taken, enable the audience to see the changing expression of the natives, to whom the wildly gesticulating American tramp is apparently a mysterious being. Some watch him with amazement bordering on fear, as if they had a maniac among them, while others emerge from their Oriental stoicism and grin knowingly at his antics.

The placing of the tramp in these alien throngs shows adroit stage management, for his actions give what would otherwise be only a mildly interesting travel picture, all the liveliness of a farcical episode in a regular drama. Another bit of comedy was introduced at a time generally needed—in parts showing life on board ship. The public has seen so many pictures of this character, which from their very nature cannot be varied to any great extent, that the regular first night fans, who never miss a reel at their favorite theatre, feel blasé on the introduction of steamship scenes.

Bearing this in mind, the Eclectic director prepared a little surprise in the first voyage out, across the Pacific. The members of the ball teams are attracted by a coquetish woman and wait on her most assiduously, each hoping to outshine the other in her favor. On the landing of the passengers, the gallants see, to their chagrin, a man meet the supposed widow, who naively introduces them to her husband.

Two good business-getting one-sheets are issued for the exhibitor by the Eclectic company. The first shows a number of colored caricatures representing natives of the East in extravagant poses, catching a player at the bat. On the other is a group consisting of members of the team standing behind several Egyptian soldiers, in a squatting position. The Sphinx looks down calmly at them from the background.

ST. LOUIS PAGEANT PICTURES MAKE A HIT

(Special to The Motion Picture News)

St. Louis, June 24.

The St. Louis Motion Picture Company made eight reels of the historical pageant and masque enacted here the last four days in May in commemoration of the city's hundred and fiftieth birthday. Willis L. Robard directed the filming of the 7,500 performers that took part in the drama at several special rehearsals given for motion picture purposes.

The pictures, which were finished last week, are hand colored and tinted to represent the colors secured by the lighting effects during the performance. They are being run in the Columbia Theatre, at prices ranging from ten to fifty cents. George Lloyd is managing the attraction for the St. Louis Motion Picture Company. The films will be booked as a high-class feature everywhere.

BULLDOGGING A STEER
Henry R. Slocum has been made assistant manager of the General Film Company's branch in St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Slocum is one of the best known film men in that territory, having been associated with the business since its beginning. He started in with the O. T. Crawford exchange nine years ago, and was their traveling representative until the firm merged into the Swanson-Crawford Company. He remained with the new firm until about eighteen months ago, when he accepted a position with the General Film Company as solicitor. "THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"
(Thanhouser—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY A. DANSON MICHEL

If this, the first edition of the forty-six reel serial of the Thanhouser Company, may be taken as a criterion, the picture is due to have a long and most successful run. More publicity has been given to these pictures, and more advertising distributed, than perhaps any other picture ever produced. The dailies of New York, for example, with but few exceptions, each carried a full page describing the prizes for the solution of the mystery which enshrounds the film.

It is the intention of the Thanhouser Company to release the picture in installments of two reels each, the first being released on June 22, others following at an interval of a week each.

The scenario was written by Lloyd F. Lonergan, and the story, which will also run in various papers throughout the country, by the well-known novelist, Harold MacGrath.

Mystery, that subtle drawing card, seems to emanate from every foot shown. The questions that will naturally be asked are: "What are the Black Hundred? What is their relationship to Flo's father and herself? Where did Hargreaves get this million dollars? What became of it when it was taken from the safe by the mysterious hands? What became of Hargreaves after the balloon was wrecked?" etc., ad infinitum. These puzzlers will draw the people into a theatre.

The cast is a notable one. Florence La Badie is featured in the leading part; James Cruze plays the hero, a newspaper reporter; Sidney Bracy plays the butler—a large part; Albert Norton impersonates the father; Marguerite Snow plays the Countess Olga, the female heavy (apparently); Lila Chester is Susan, the friend of Florence, and Frank Farrington plays Braine, a conspirator.

The escape in the balloon is a thriller seldom equaled. A. Leo Stevens, a professional aeronaut, was engaged to assist Albert Norton, in the part of the father, in a novel escape from the roof of the building. Norton narrowly escaped losing his life in this attempt.

A prologue, entirely separate from the main picture, introduces the various characters, and finally groups them. It is about 350 feet in length and most interesting. Credit should be given Howell Hansel, the director, for arranging the opening of the first scene, upon which much depended. As the main title vanishes hundreds of hands are shown grasping for the elusive money which is in the center of the picture. Then the check for $10,000, offered by the Thanhouser Company for the solver of the mystery, is photographed. From there the story goes right forward.

Florence, a wee baby, is left at a boarding school, accompanied by a note and half a bracelet, with instructions regarding the disposition of her future. On reaching the age of eighteen she is sent for by her father. In the meantime a mysterious band are after Hargreaves, who was formerly a member. He receives a note and, obtaining some money, escapes in a balloon from the roof. The balloon is wrecked by a shot that pierces it, and naught more is heard of Hargreaves. The daughter has not arrived at her new home.

"THE CHIMNEY-SWEEPS"
(Pasquali American—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Chimney-Sweeps," or as the second title has it, "The Triumph of Love Over Class Prejudice," a better definition of the picture, is of a nature that any audience will enjoy. Although it will most certainly appeal to men, women and children, the women, especially the mothers, will be greatly pleased with it, most of all when Lucy is forced to sell her little boy to Gaspard, a cruel man whose profession is that of collecting small boys and using them as chimney-sweeps.

Laura Darville, who takes the part of Lucy and the one whom the picture features, is certainly the star. In the last part of the picture she outshines her acting in the earlier scenes. At the supposed death of her child she becomes greatly affected and later is insane.

Artistically the picture stands quite in a class by itself. The rural scenes, of which there are many, are most beautiful, and these, supplemented by photography of the best variety, make the picture worthy to be classed almost entirely by itself in regard to these merits.

The action is slow and dignified, yet almost too slow at times. Five reels is perhaps a little too long for a picture that contains no big scenes or sensational events. But those who love this kind of a story—and there are many—will not consider it slow in the least.

The story is simple. Count Frederick falls in love with his father's game-keeper's daughter and later she has a child. The Count's father forbids him to marry her. Unable to support the child, she allows Gaspard to take him. Later he is thought to have died, but in reality it is another who perishes. The sight of his grandchild is the means of winning the Count's father to allowing the marriage, and all ends happily.
Lighting Effects for the Photoplay

Novel Combinations of Lights Are Used with Artistic Results by This Theatre Manager, Who Has the Advantage of Having a Theatre Equipped with the Latest Illuminating Apparatus

CAREFUL planning on the part of a progressive and resourceful manager is fast increasing the business of Proctor's Broad Street Theatre, at Elizabeth, N. J., a house now devoted almost entirely to the presentation of recently released motion pictures. When there is anything new in the line of equipment for motion picture theatres, this house gets it and it has many features not commonly found in other theatres.

Among the latest innovations was the installation of a Wurlitzer concert organ. Novel lighting effects have also been introduced with good results and new tricks in advertising have been developed.

As a result, although there are nearly a dozen other motion picture houses in the city, the Broad Street Theatre gets the lion's share of the business.

Since the Wurlitzer was put in, efforts have been made to raise the standard of music accompanying the pictures.

The music is arranged to follow the main theme of the photoplay.

To music lovers at least, this is a decided improvement over the old plan of changing the tune with each shift of scene or new development in action.

The method works especially well with feature pictures. Of course, the various effects such as the blowing of a train whistle, tolling of a bell or ringing of a bell, are not lost sight of, but they are carefully interpolated so as not to appear discordant.

MORE has been done in the way of arranging stage settings and lighting effects in the Broad Street Theatre than would perhaps be possible in a house designed especially for the pictures. The Broad Street Theatre is a combination house and was formerly the home of stock and the speaking drama.

The stage is dressed up with an arch representing a partially ruined Greek temple, through which the picture is projected to the screen. The white curtain is materialized in wood wings and foliage borders, giving the effect of a sylvan grove.

The effect is further heightened by a soft, indefinite glow of light which touches up the pillars and the peak of the temple, the wood wings and borders, yet in no way interferes with the picture, giving to the whole a moonlight effect.

This is accomplished by the use of proscenium strips hung from the wood wings and suspended from the flag gallery. A similar effect can be obtained by using a spotlight and cutting out the screen from the flood.

In houses where no spotlight is obtainable, it is possible by rigging up an extra lamp with a No. 12 Stereo lens and using only one condenser.

Between the two matinee shows and the two evening shows in the Broad Street Theatre, the light effect is worked. First the red feet are turned on, dimmed to the minimum, fading the tail-piece of the picture into a soft, pink glow that illuminates the whole stage. As the picture dimmed off, the light is brightened slowly until the reds are full up.

At this point, the blue feet and the blue border are thrown on and the reds slowly dimmed down until the minimum has been reached when they are pulled off altogether, leaving a deep blue light from the feet and border which gives a magnificent purple effect.

The working of the red lights is timed to the showing of the slides. When the reds are pulled off, the title of the first picture is shown together with the sub-title and all introductory reading matter, with the foot and border still on.

The instant that the first scene flashes on the screen the lights are pulled off altogether, leaving only the moonlight effect. The main idea of this lighting arrangement is to afford relief for the eyes of the spectators.

Among the photoplays which have drawn the biggest attendance at the Broad Street Theatre recently are: "Through Fire to Fortune" (Lubin), "Hearts Adrift" (Mary Pickford and Famous Players), "Tales of the Storm Country" (Famous Players), "Loyalty" (Eclectic). "In the Bishop's Carriage" (Famous Players), "The Lion and the Mouse" (Lubin), "Between Savage and Tiger" (Kleine Cines), and "Brewster's Millions" (Lasky), "Officer Jim" (Lubin), and "The Prisoner of Zenda," have also attracted crowds.

Advertising by the Weather and with It

The Garden Theatre Publicity Man in Rochester Turns an Eagle Eye on Uncle Sam's "To-morrow—Fair" Signs Before Preparing Advertising Matter

Special to THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Rochester, N. Y., June 25.

It isn't every manager of a motion picture house, or advertising agent, who thinks to follow up weather conditions in the spring and summer in preparing his advertising for the newspapers, but this city boasts of one, Arthur Paul Kelly, who handles the publicity for the Garden Theatre.

For a while, when the weather was unsettled, Mr. Kelly was kept busy trying to keep on the right side of the fence in his advertising. He tells some humorous instances of how the weather man fooled him, and made his advertising look foolish.

"One day I was preparing my advertisements for Saturday and Sunday, and I put in a heading to the effect that my theatre was 20 degrees cooler than the street temperature," said Mr. Kelly. "At the time, the mercury showed about 80 degrees, and the temperature in the Garden Theatre was 60 degrees. When my advertisement appeared, however, the temperature had dropped to between 50 and 60 on the street, and my advertisement made it look as though we had a temperature just a little above freezing in the theatre."

"After that I decided to follow the weather reports a little more closely, and since then I have had very good luck in keeping the people informed as to the comfort of my theatre in warm weather."

The Gordon is not the only theatre which pays attention to weather conditions when the hot weather approaches. The Colonial Theatre, on Main street, A. N. Wolff, resident manager, advertises along those lines, too, sometimes making a play on the name of the theatre, and calling it the "Cool-omial." It catches the eye instantly.

The Victoria Theatre, John Farren, manager, on Clinton Avenue South, while it does not play up the fact in its advertising, in the newspapers, provides scores of palm leaf fans, which are kept on tables in the lobby, free for the use of patrons. Electric fans on the walls also keep the air moving. Slides are run in frequently telling patrons of the fans to be obtained for the asking, the only request that the management makes being that patrons leave them in the lobby when passing out. The idea made a big hit.

ARTHUR R. TUCKER.
ETIQUETTE FOR USHERS

ATTENTION to the details of management in front of the house is as necessary for success in conducting a theatre as the selection of suitable films.

No manager can afford to neglect the appearance of his ushers and their treatment of the theatre's patrons. If an usher is slovenly in dress, rude or indifferent to the people, making them feel that he is exercising great condescension in showing them to their seats, the patronage of that house will suffer, no matter how wisely the manager has selected his pictures.

Realizing the importance of these things and their direct influence on the box-office receipts, farsighted exhibitors are on the constant lookout to avoid any friction between the ushers and the public frequenting the theatre.

Indeed, so deeply impressed are many such managers with the necessity of obtaining efficient service in the front that they have organized what may be designated for the want of a better name a "School for Ushers."

S. L. ROTHAPEL, manager of the Strand Theatre, the largest motion picture house in New York City, noted as a successful innovator in his chosen field, who among other things, has brought musical accompaniment of the pictures to a high state of perfection, maintains an informal school of that kind.

Mr. Rothapfel insists upon neatness of dress as one of the essentials for the appearance of the men showing people to their seats produces an unconscious effect, either for good or ill. It might sound strange to hear that every Strand usher must wear suspenders. But there is an excellent reason. A belt does not hold up the trousers as well, and they look baggy—quite the opposite of neatness. Suspenders, on the other hand, give a man's nether garments just the right "hang" and an usher walking down the aisle with well-set suspenders presents a more attractive appearance.

Courtesy on all occasions is the slogan. Manager Rothapfel has taken a leaf from the book of Stewart, the pioneer drygoods merchant, who laid it down as a principle to be observed by all his clerks, "that the customer is always right." Ushers in the Strand have been instructed to terminate their remarks when called upon to answer questions with a "thank you." And they have been cautioned not to speak with a parrot-like intonation, as if they begrudged a patron the respect implied in the phrase.

The Strand ushers are warned against another matter—not to touch a patron in order to gain his attention. Nothing is so annoying to the majority of people, and in many cases the act, no matter how innocent of familiarity, is considered the height of impertinence. Many theatre-goers have ceased attending a house because they felt, after such an experience, that they had been subjected to an unpardonable indignity. Manager Rothapfel realized this common attitude, and has provided against such irritating experiences by making the caution to his usher sweeping. Under no circumstances shall they attempt to get a patron's attention by such means.

Strand ushers are not allowed to solicit for money. Manager Rothapfel wanted to guard against the offensive practice of an usher who shows his manner that he expects a gratuity for the slightest service, a service that is expected of him by the management. At the same time, no objections are made in the Strand to the acceptance of a fee from a pleased patron who might wish to reward an attentive usher for some particular service.

THE VALUE OF A SMILE

FOR a long time I have watched Rosie, an usher at one of the large theatres in Washington, D. C., and she is never ruffled and always courteous and pleasant. I noted that many of the patrons greeted her as they entered and she always smiled acknowledgment.

She is popular but not obtrusive. Why? Because she smiles. That is it; she smiles.

When asked how she treated grumpy and dissatisfied patrons, she answered cheerfully: "I just smile and try to please them. True, it does not always bring the desired results at once, but in time, if the patron returns, it does.

"I know that the men have come from a trying day's work and seek another place as a relief, and they are not in the best of humor or frame of mind when they enter the theatre. And I realize that mothers have hurried from home cares frequently to find rest at the pictures.

"Usually when you meet such people with a smile they relax some, and the next time I find them more civil, and later even pleasant. I'm not going to have my spirits dampened just because some other folks are mean or grumpy. Besides, the public likes a cheerful face.

"Oh, yes, it pays to smile," was her confident conclusion.

WORTHWHILE SOLICITATION

In all large theatres there are some seats which are not good for viewing the pictures, and the occupant of these does not fully enjoy the show and sometimes leaves with a grumble, though he did not know the cause. A Washington (D. C.) usher—a young lady, by the way—recently gave a good suggestion on this point which may be helpful.

"I have made it my business to know just where the poor seats are in this theatre," she told me, "and I never give a patron these seats unless the house is full. Even then I let him know of the deficiency of the viewpoint, but add that I will secure another place as soon as possible. This I always do.

"When I find a patron in these poor seats, and there are more desirable chairs elsewhere, I take the liberty of calling his attention to the fact, and he is ready to make the change. Patrons like this solicitation."

Edward H. Wagner, of the Dania Bio Film Company, Copenhagen, sailed for Europe on June 27. He will return in September with some large features.

This advice and all their good wishes are wasted on her, for she is engaged to a rich, old man and they all wish to be her friend. Later her sweetheart becomes really rich and the two are happily married.

The Struggle Everlastings. (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., June 17.)—Not once is the inducement to marry these two men. Every scene is an absorbing one and the picture ends with a situation peculiar to Lubin pictures. A young lawyer is trying his father for draft. He is guilty, but he dies from the strain of the trial. Edgar Jones, James Haley and Louise Huff are the principals.

The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nestor. (Essanay, Wed., June 17.)—The first of a series of comedies adapted from George Ade's stories. The subtitles, taken from the story, rival the picture itself in humor. The drummer thinks that he has won the heart of the simple country girl by his city manners, but she goes away to the big city and the drummer sees her home a different opinion.

The Ladies' War. (Vitagraph. Wed., June 17.)—Arthur Bergen and Pauline Fitzgerald play the lead. The comedy will bring peals of laughter from all. Both ladies are fighting for the reigning lord of the Ladies Culture Club. Mrs. Blankensop is the wife who is elected in materially due to her cook who wears a dress of the same kind as her mistress' rival.

Pathé Weekly No. 41. (Pathé. Wed., June 17.)—The midsummer of the United States Naval Academy with their delightful graduation ceremonies. This picture is without artificial light and it will be received with great applause.

His Dream Fulfilled. (Melies. Split reel, Thur., June 18.)—On the same reel with Wayward Daughter. The photography of this offering is excellent and the scenes are varied. Everybody's Doing It. (Melies. Split reel, Thur., June 18.)—On the same reel with His Dream Fulfilled. Tommy plays havoc with the whole family by using itching powder. The comedy is of the practical joke variety and those with this kind will be pleased with the picture.

The House of Darkness. (Lubin. Two reels. Thur., June 18.)—Mysterious from the start, and not very clear at the end. The plot is difficult to follow, for no cause is given for certain happenings. Two brothers who are too much given to the guardianship of a little girl who is very rich years later. They fight over the money, and while fighting the house catches fire and both lose their lives. The girl marries a young doctor.

At the Beach. (Melies. Thurs., June 18.)—As we approach him at the beach he flirts with a girl whose husband is not able to join her. Unfortunately for them, however, their respective "halves" turn up inappropiately.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 32. (Selig. Tues., June 16.)—A number of items of interest. The coming yacht race, the advertising of the challenge and former boats and their present condition. The Mexican troubles receive their share of publicity. The conference of women in Chicago who are deciding on dress reform is interesting.

The Wooling of Sophie. (Essanay, Thur., June 18.)—One of the series played by Margaret Joslin and Victor Potel and their cohorts. This is one of the best of the lot and will amuse all.

The Unknown Hand. (Melies. Two reels. Thur., June 18.)—A detective story along unusual lines. Sure to hold the attention. It revolves around a mysterious band in a desirable mystery throughout. Many beautiful interiors. The story is entranced with a paper which contains the mysterious band. After some clever detective work the thief is found to be his wife who had stolen it for her lover.

The Persistent Mr. Prince. (Vitagraph. Fri., June 19.)—Lillian Walker and Wallace Van are favorites all over the country so this picture will surely be a success. Mr. Prince falls in love with the picture of a young debutante and determines to marry the original. He makes many little attempts, but finally takes her up in an aeroplane and refuses to come to earth unless she promises. She does.

The Parent Strain. (Lubin. Fri., June 19.)—Joe and Tom both love the same girl. She favors Tom and she marries Tom. Later Tom, taken to cards, but Joe is the man who is doing the matters out. The scene of action is in the West, and the story will be received favorably by most.

The Wages of Sinn. (Kalem. Split reel, Fri., June 19.)—On the same reel with Military Tattoo at Aldershot, England. John E. Brennan and Ruth Roland are the principals. Sinn and his wife are at odds over the former's salary, but after various cards and comical happenings, matters are put right.

Peter's Relations. (Selig. Split reel, Fri., June 19.)—On the same reel with Chicken. There is nothing in this comedy that warrants calling it interesting. The spec- tator in law comes and causes a great disturbance in his household.

Chicken. (Selig. Split reel, Fri., June 19.)—On the same reel with Peter's Relations. Two wives are suspicious of their husbands, and in an attempt to catch them, lead them to raid the club. They find the chickens are the cats and the husbands have a good laugh, but the spectator doesn't.

By the Old Dead Tree. (Biograph. Sat., June 20.)—A pleasing drama. The story is a long business man finds that his son no sheller is better suited for his wife than his first choice.

Father's Flirtation. (Vitagraph. Two reels. Sat., June 20.)—John Bunny, Flora Finch and Mary Anderson are the principals. This is a long business man, who is possessed of two daughters. He finds the former to be of comical situations and happenings, but it was in the idea of the boy who is occupied in two-stories. Bunny, while visiting his daughter at college with his wife, has an experience with a college widow which comes near ending disastrously, but lucky keeps the escape from his wife. The boy is left with a pocket. This is all right.

Me an' Bill. (Selig. Two reels. Mon., June 22.)—If every other picture were of the worst sort imaginable, it would be worth seeing them all to be able to see one of these among them. It is seldom that such a wonderful and appealing story is produced as this. When the last scene has gone off the screen it may safely be said that there will not be a dry eye in the audience. Bill and Sam have been lifelong friends, from boyhood to extreme old age. They both married and they both had children, one a boy and the other a girl. The young man is an industrial man, the older returns, and the girl despairing of life is drowned. The two old men survive their children and their wives. The cast performs a splendid job and all are lovely. The two old men are Guy Oliver, Wheeler Oakman, Reese Ryton, Eugenie Bessiere, Olive Drake and Francis Newbrown.

The Marmot. (Pathé. Split reel. Mon., June 22.)—On the same reel with "Glasier National Park in Winter." The habits and peculiarities of this creature, which belongs to the rodent family, are shown. They make a good educational.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 33. (Selig. Mon., June 22.)—The 1. W. National Bank issues the picture of the "Resolve" defeating the "Vantage" in the third tryout consumes a large portion of the reel. Mexico is busy with social doings while waiting for war or peace. The weekly sends with a series of excellent pictures to the West Point during the recent Commencement exercises.

"Glacier National Park in Winter." (Biograph, Mon., June 22.) A pleasant drama, but hardly worth a trip to the best, though some one will be disappointed with it. Tony comes to America. His letters to his sweetheart are all stories of the mountains, which is extremely interesting.

"The Song of Sunny Italy." (Biograph, Mon., June 22.) A pleasant drama, but hardly worth a trip to the best, though some one will be disappointed with it. Tony comes to America. His letters to his sweetheart are all stories of the mountains, which is extremely interesting.

"Maria's Sacrifice." (Vitagraph, Mon., June 22.) A pathetically and absorbing story and one that is worth seeing twice. Maria, to free her husband from life imprisonment, accepts herself of making love to another man. Her husband is freed, and he believes her honor is clean, as it really is.

"The Show Girl's Glove." (Kalem Two reel, Tues., June 23.) This is the second feature of the Alice Joyce series, and an interesting picture. An interesting series of events lead up to the climax, when this pictures comes. Alice Joyce comes and reaches the scene, which was good to see, tends to fall down. The film is more than a little long, but is given to better art in places. The cast: Alice Joyce, John E. Mack, John B. Rainey, Alice Hamilton, Marguerite Courtois. An innocent man is accused of murder. His wife sets out to find the real culprit, without finding a clue left by a glove on which the body of the man lies. She discovers that the murderer is a show girl, who desert by him.

"Max the Magician." (Pathé, Split reel, Tues., June 23.) On the same reel with "Historic Saint Cloud," Max is the picture this week. This has a good deal to tell about the historic castle and its grounds, which lie in southern France, make a most picturesque ending to the comedy.

"Pathé's Weekly, No. 42." (Pathé, Wed., June 24.) An interesting picture is shown in this week's Pathé. The story is as charming as it is romantic, but the scenes are more than one, for they have been turned into an interesting picture and are as in our country, but much better in beauty.

"A Visit to the Paris Zoo." (Pathé, Split reel, Mon., June 29.) On the same reel with "Redpads and Falls of New Zealand." A large variety of animals and birds are shown in this educational picture, and it will interest the children even more than the grownups.

"Redpads and Falls of New Zealand." (Pathé, Split reel, Mon., June 29.) On the same reel with "A Visit to the Paris Zoo." Waterfalls and rapids make about the best scenic produced, and this one will be enjoyed by everyone. The rapids are as fine as those in our country, but much better in beauty.

"A French Village in Senegal (West Africa)." (Pathé, Split reel, Tues., June 30.) On the same reel with "Vernous Serpents." Beautiful scenery, and many of the diiferent towns of this province are shown. The Governor-General's palace in Saint Louis is an unparaleled beauty.

"Vernous Serpents." (Pathé, Split reel, Tues., June 30.) On the same reel with "A French Village in Senegal (West Africa)." (Pathé, Split reel, Tues., June 30.) On the same reel with "Vernous Serpents." Beautiful scenery, and many of the different towns of this province are shown. The Governor-General's palace in Saint Louis is an unparaleled beauty.

"Papa's Darling." (Imp. Mon., June 29.) An exceptionally clever comedy in which Ethel Dunn plays the lead. If Ethel can prove to her father that she can earn money, he will let her keep the clothes she wants. She disguises as a man, and finds employment in a man's dress office. Her identity is revealed by a mouse. The disguise she assumes is clever and every audience will enjoy the picture with as much pleasure as "up the river" is used in the West.

"Universal Ike Jr. in a Case on the Doctor." (Universal, Tues., June 23.) The new Ike Jr. shows off in this Western town. He causes all the cowboys to injure themselves purposely. The results are side-splitting.

"Universal Animated Weekly No. 119." (Universal, Wed., June 17.) An unusually entertaining number containing events that will interest the whole country. Mayer's cartoons at the end of the film are comical and are good barbeques on several important questions of the day.

"Snowdrift." (Eclair, Two reels, July 1.) A drama that cannot help but "get through" the audience. It is pretty and in places pathetic, yet vital most powerful. An old snow sweeper is brought in by some wealthy clowns in order to amuse them. He tells them his wife has been a wealthy man's wife, the owner of a mine. He is loved and in love with a girl who sacrifices her happiness for his sake. Later he is found to be a liling a man who has had a run in the ruins of the girl. He is freed and starts snowing for a living. One of his schemes is to become the villain for whom he had been hunting.

"The Old Cobbler." (Bison, Two reels, June 27.) Played by Murdoch Quarrie and Lon Chaney. A character man Mr. Quarrie is unsurpassed. In this heart-interest story he plays the part of an old cobbler who disowns his son. Years later father and son meet again, the latter comes in for given, and a beautiful reconciliation takes place.

"The Blunderer's Mark." (Eclair, June 31.) From the story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes, it will interest all. The girl arrives at the ranch and becomes the secret love of one of them. All is, however, deeply attached to her. When the Indians attack the party he gives up his life, first writing her a note telling of his love.

"Prince Willie." (Eclair, Split reel, June 28.) A very pretty colored picture. The little prince run away with his fiancée and is adopted by Adelbert, the woodchopper. A reward being offered for his recovery, little Prince Willie gets it.

"Nutty and His Father." (Eclair, Split reel, June 22.) A reel which allows the full scope of the comedy to come into play. Nutty Sr. begins to go out at night, causing consequent grief to his wife, and Nutty Jr. determines to be the adjuster. He finds his father with a woman in a restaurant. Nutty Jr. takes him home, but not to wait for the man. Nuty Sr. having the accusing finger of his little son, renders a comic situation that is very taking.

"A Twentieth Century Pirate." (Victor, June 30.) A comedy and a personal feature in the top drawer of the picture. It is noted for its novelty and the results are hilarious. The picture is the means of bringing the husband and wife together, who had quarreled over nothing.

"The Unmasking." (American, Two reels, June 23.) Shows a party of girls and boys at a masked ball. A comedy and a personal feature in the top drawer of the picture. It is noted for its novelty and the results are hilarious. The picture is the means of bringing the husband and wife together, who had quarreled over nothing.

"The Man Without Fear." (Thanhouser, Fri., June 18.) By saving his employer's life, the young secretary wins his daughter. The picture is full of action from start to finish and the whole story is a problem in suspense.

"The Dream Ship." (Beautu, Tues., June 29.) A comedy and a personal feature in the top drawer of the picture. It is noted for its novelty and the results are hilarious. The picture is the means of bringing the husband and wife together, who had quarreled over nothing.

"Bessie the Detectress, or Tick, Tick, Tick." (Jolie, July 1.) A comedy in the top drawer of the picture. It is noted for its novelty and the results are hilarious. The picture is the means of bringing the husband and wife together, who had quarreled over nothing.

"Passing the Love of Woman." (Krix, June 22.) A comedy and a personal feature in the top drawer of the picture. It is noted for its novelty and the results are hilarious. The picture is the means of bringing the husband and wife together, who had quarreled over nothing.

"The Deceiver." (Komic, Sun., June 21.) Tod Browning plays the lead. His work will bring peaks of laughter from all, it does use. In order to win the heart of a beautiful girl, a man plays the dis- guise of a beggar, although he gets along well at first he "gets his in the end.

"The Skull." (Imp. Two reels. Thur., June 30.) A comedy and a personal feature in the top drawer of the picture. It is noted for its novelty and the results are hilarious. The picture is the means of bringing the husband and wife together, who had quarreled over nothing.
"The Burden." (Majestic, Tues., June 24.)—This is a pleasant surprise. The man is sentenced to life imprisonment on a false charge. After a long unsuccessful effort to save his life in the West with his wife, the real murderer threatens to expose his secret to the world unless he recovers his former life. But it is discovered that he is the culprit. Eugene Pallet, Irene Hunt and Sam Hume are the principals.

"Inny's Night Out." (Reliance, Wed., June 25.)—A foolish comedy which is not as harmless as it seems to be. Two nickels are picked up by three joy riders who take them to their home. In the morning they put him where he belongs, but it is too late. He then decides to steal for his wife and tries to dispose of their daughter from marrying her, but does not succeed. Jack Richardson, William Garwood and Vivian Rich are the principals.

"Such a Business." (Royal, Split reel. Sat., June 27.)—On the same reel with "The Busy Man."

"The Busy Man." (Reliance, Split reel. Sat., June 27.)—A sequel to the same screen. One of the scenes is to buy a "business." Higgs is the police force, fire department and the boy has his own hands full. An uproarious comedy.

"The Severed Thong." (Majestic, Two reels, Sun., June 28.)—A beautiful Western story in which the spurned Indian maiden proves that he is worthy of his profession. The drama will doubtless appeal more to the deep thinkers and the religious than to others. Dick Cloud, George Siegeman and Max Mack are the leads.

"The Horse Wranglers." (Reliance. Two reels, Sat., June 28.)—Miriam Cooper, Eugene Pallet and Sue Blase are given the cupids. The wife of the foreman of the ranch gives him a cow and uses a rope on the round up. Her husband discovers the disguise and so does another who attempts to take advantage of his knowledge when the husband is absent. She kills him by mistake, but the man was an unworthy character, and the rest of the boys were glad of it. The picture is complete in parts, and will furnish amusement for all audiences.

"The Hour of Manhood." (Domino, Two reels, Thur., July 3.)—A drama of the West that is full of live action, some of which is pleasant and some unpleasant, but all of which is good. Anything of the West that is full of live drama will surely enjoy it. Pete is a drunkard. He deserts his wife, and later she marries another. Pete returns to her, and tells her how rich he has become to buy his home and set him up in business. She goes with him, and they are happy home he returns. Later he meets his death.

"The Heart of a Crook." (Kay-Bee, Two reels, Fri., July 4.)—Every crook, no matter how much of a villain, has a little honor, as this picture indicates in a most novel and picturesque fashion. The story is even more impossible than most, but everyone will enjoy the picture, for it is full of action from start to finish. The picture was once shot by a Westerner proves it, and by reason of his suspension of a crime which he believes in.

"A Gambling Rubie." (Keystone, Mon., June 13.)—A general mix-up story when two cities are about to have a country rubber in which the police force and the whole town participate. The picture is more complete at the conclusion than at the start. None of the usual stars appear.

"The Stolen Code." (Reliance. Sat., June 14.)—A story of a country rubber in which the police force and the whole town are participants. The picture is more complete at the conclusion than at the start. None of the usual stars appear.

"The Mystery of Green Park." (Felipps, Two reels.)—A detective story along very conventional lines. The plot is plainly PREPARED TO JAVAapse and Thos. is a blacksmith. He can be found. Then he finds some dead bodies, and the man was sandbagged. He finally catches the thief, who proves to be his rich friend.

"The Tragedy of Basil Grieve." (Hepworth, Two reels.)—A splendid melodrama of the crime type rather well done and well acted. It is well acted and well done. The photography is clear cut and definite. Acting is nice, and the atmosphere is good. Basil Grieve, a novel, is written by a man of talent, and the atmosphere is good. Although the girl loves the latter he marries Basil for his money. Later Roland becomes wealthy and finds out instead of Basil, of whom she has treated. Together they kill the writer, but their crime is brought home to them by clever detective work.

EDESON NOW UNDER LASKY BANNER

Robert Edeson, the original star of "The Call of the North," by Stewart Edward White, is now playing his original role before the Jesse L. Lasky camera. Much of the picture is being staged in Great Bear Valley in southern California, many scenes being taken, however, in Moose Factory, Canada, the trading post of the Hudson Bay Company. Mr. White has an intimate knowledge of the Canadian Northwest, having spent much of his life there.

UNIVERSAL CITY STARTS TO MOVE

The new Western ranch of the Universal Film Company, in the fertile San Fernando Valley, where Universal City will be located soon, is already occupied by the cowboys and stock of the company.

Under the direction of Joe Flores, the several hundred head of cattle, oxen and horses were moved to the new ranch. Corrals have been built for the stock, but the cowboys, save Joe Flores, his wife and two kids, are bunking range fashion.

THE DAYTON CONVENTION ISSUE of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS reaches our readers on July 8. This is the strongest issue of a Motion Picture Trade paper ever published. It will contain the first actual authentic résumé of trade conditions throughout the country ever published.

Albuquerque Films Two Winners

NEWS comes from the Western studio of the Albuquerque Film Manufacturing Company, Inc., that its two latest productions, "The Lust of the Red Man" and "The Price of Crime," are nearing completion "The Price of Crime" is a problem drama with the opening scenes laid in Los Angeles. Later the scene shifts to the rugged Rockies.

The production of the pictures are under the supervision of G. P. Hamilton, whose years of experience in all branches of the business has fitted him to guide the destinies of the Albuquerque Film Manufacturing Company, Inc.

Miss Dot Farley, the star of the company, may find it necessary to take a rest for a few weeks to recuperate after the strenuous campaign of seven months since the Albuquerque concern was incorporated, for Miss Farley has written its stories and played the leading role in every picture. She is an earnest worker and her perseverance has brought her splendid results. She is a clever writer and versatile actress. Her co-workers have learned to admire her because of her sunny disposition.

In Miss Farley's next story entitled "False Pride Has a Fall," the heroine rises from an unsophisticated ranch girl to the wife of a city millionaire, finally becoming a leader of society. But at the moment of her triumph, her father and mother visit her. Their actions at a reception are embarrassing for the wife. The husband, a whole-souled, honest man, takes father and mother under his wing, and later everybody is happy just as it should be back on the ranch at a good old country "hoe-down," with father and mother.

Fox Will Open Chain-of Exchanges

Branch Offices to Open in Seven Cities at Once—Others Later—Big Studio promised for New York

WILLIAM FOX, president of the Box Office Attraction Company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, has determined to enlarge the scope of his exchange operations. Up to the present time the Box Office Attraction Company has released and booked features in New York City and state, Northern New Jersey and the New England states, but the recent acquisition of continental rights for the products of two large American factories, a contract for control in the United States and Canada of scores of the best foreign productions and plans already adopted for the erection of a mammoth studio in New York, influenced him to take on important additional territories.

Exchanges will open at once in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit and Chicago. As soon as these branches have been efficiently organized the territories adjacent to St. Louis and Kansas City will be opened up and cultivated.

In the southern and western states, in all states west of the Mississippi and in Canada, all Box Office Attraction features will be disposed of on the state-rights basis, and Alex Lorimore, formerly with the Gaumont Company, will have charge of this end of the business as well as other necessary details connected with the exchanges in the new zones of activity.

All Star Finds Vehicle for Ethel Barrymore

Company Producing "The Nightingale" With a Strong Cast—Film Will Be Released Early in August.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, the famous playwright, director-general of the All Star Feature Corporation, has been at work for sometime on a scenario in which Ethel Barrymore will play the stellar role.

The drama is entitled "The Nightingale," and deals with the life of a young Italian girl and her brother, proteges of a famous musical star.

In support of Miss Barrymore in "The Nightingale," the All Star Feature Corporation has engaged a cast creditable to any premier Broadway production. Among those in her support will be seen Charles Stevenson, George Andrews, William Courteleigh, Jr., Conway Tearle and many more. Work has been progressing at the Yokner's studio toward the completion of "The Nightingale."

Miss Barrymore's debut before the camera has been a most satisfactory one, and the producing staff of the manufacturing company is free in its prediction that "The Nightingale." will assume a position of great prominence among the All Star studio successes. "The Nightingale" is scheduled for release early in August.
40,000 SEE "WRATH OF THE GODS"

"The Wrath of the Gods," the six-reel feature of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, produced under the direction of Thomas H. Ince, scored an unusual attendance at Ebbett's Field, Brooklyn, on Monday night, June 22. It is estimated by the management that forty thousand people filled the old ball grounds to witness the run of the picture.

Marcus Loew, who opened the field as an airdome for the summer, supposed that in a place of such area no one would be turned away. But the crowd instead of thinning out at the approach of the opening hour increased to such proportions that no seats were left for the late comers.

Not believing it possible for the arena to hold the capacity the people demanded admittance. The manager re-stated but his remarks were not heeded and the throng became riotous. He phoned for the police, and the reserves from three precincts were necessary to quell the tumult.

Crowds have been turned away from Ebbett's Field every night this week. Ten fifteen and twenty-five cents admission is charged.

MARY PICKFORD STILL WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS

According to a rumor, circulated without foundation, Mary Pickford was intending to resign from the Famous Players Film Company, to go with the Universal Film Company. Miss Pickford denies any such intention, and to prevent the false statement from traveling farther she has communicated with the Motion Picture News in regard to the matter. Her letter follows:

Motion Picture News.

Gentlemen:

An unauthorized report, detrimental to both myself and the Famous Players Film Company, has been circulated to the effect that I intend to leave that concern and become associated with the Universal Film Company.

This story is entirely without foundation or authority, and you will do me and the Famous Players Film Company a great favor if you will contradict this report in the strongest language possible.

As is commonly known, the Famous Players Film Company has supplied me with opportunities and play material unequalled by any other company, and the report is therefore, unjust and injurious to everybody concerned.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) Mary Pickford.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

R. Blanchard, proprietor of the Magic Theatre, at 617-631 Chicago Blvd., the largest of the five hall houses, has just opened a new house in Lomita. It is said to be a very good machine. The fact that the latest machines are of massive construction and increased cost, only goes to prove that the operator who intends to amount to anything in the future, had better get on himself and make a study of his profession. The present trend of the situation tends to the elimination of the smaller houses and it is only a matter of two or three years when you will be able to count the houses of less than six hundred seating capacity, almost on your fingers.

Naturally this will throw a number of men out of positions, and the only hope for the mediocre operator lies in a State license law such as is now in force in Massachusetts.

This would compel the proprietors of motion picture theatres to employ men instead of boys, and would provide positions for these men.

However, the high-class man will always be in demand, and any exhibitor who really knows his business will be willing to pay a premium for his services, even if it amounts to only a dollar or two over the prevailing rate.

When will the interested parties, and the public in general, insist on a state-wide readjustment of the present dangerous conditions, and demand that this be corrected?

Will it be after another great disaster, such as the Bayestown conflagration?

Will it be after a number of innocent children are trampled to death, as a result of a fire in one of these halls?

Will we again lock the stable door after the horse is stolen?

Will we also assume an attitude of watchful waiting? Watching and waiting for the inevitable?

Or will we demand of our representatives in the Legislature that they formulate adequate laws for the proper protection of the public?

And will we demand that one of these laws shall be for the proper examination of all moving picture operators, such as the laws which have been adopted in California?

DO NOT WAIT. DO IT NOW. AGITATE, EDUCATE.

When will the theatre-going public wake up?

When will the motion picture theatre proprietor see the defect in the present state of affairs?

When will the State of New York awaken to the fact that with the immemorial laws now on the statute books, none of them can be construed as properly protecting the lives of the picture patronizing public?

When will the owners and lessees of all the beautiful theatres throughout the Empire State begin to realize the imminent danger of their entire investments going up in smoke as a result of employing a boy to do a man's work?

When will the Insurance Underwriters, insisting on their rights under the premises, insist on their policy on those buildings where electrical equipment and dangerous combustibles are placed in charge of an incompetetent person?

Creating the “Come-Again” Spirit

the fireman who was crushed by a falling wall, brought to his house a number of prospective patrons. Not that Miller was mercenary; he had as big a heart as the next one.

When the Riverside Athletic Association held their annual dance, it was Miller who agreed to furnish the music. By beginning his evening performance a little earlier so that the three musicians could reach the hall at nine-thirty, just after the minstrel show, which opened the festivities, was concluded, Miller killed two birds with one stone.

The few extra dollars which he gave the musicians came back to him many times over during the course of the year.

As an illustration of Miller’s resourcefulness, I might mention what occurred the night of the Odd Fellows installation. It seems that the committee of the lodge had decided to have an entertainment after the formal exercises of the evening were over, instead of the usual collation.

The trio which they had engaged failed to appear, and Miller heard of it, just as he was concluding his evening performance. Running hatless across the street to the hall, he offered to give a special performance at his theatre for the benefit of the guests, he to receive the sum that was to be paid the trio. The offer was accepted and Miller now has an annual Odd Fellows night on his schedule.

It goes without saying that Miller made use of everything possible to keep his house clean and well ventilated. His ushers neat and well demeaned. Things were spick and span at “The Ideal.” The most finicky person would not have hesitated an instant to enter.

And through it all, Miller evolved a bit of philosophy that was his never-failing slogan.

“What is good enough for my house to-day, won’t be good enough for it to-morrow.”

If, after the day was over, Miller couldn’t note some definite advance, he would sit down and find out the reason why and set himself a stint for the next day which he would carry out willy-nilly.

As I have already said, Miller wasn’t a “mixer,” and he had the good judgment not to attempt something for which he was not personally fitted.

He didn’t especially regret the fact, however, for he knew that smooth palaver wasn’t the vital factor in building up a lasting patronage.

He got below the surface to rock-bottom facts and treated a business proposition in a business-like way.

He won, by his clean-cut, unique methods of boosting “The Ideal,” the respect and support of those with whom he came in contact, which satisfied him.

Ventilation  Cooling  Heating

“TYPHOON BLOW-IN SYSTEM” has revolutionized the ventilating problem. You get in front of a desk fan to keep cool, not in back. Apply this common sense and blow the air in.

Don’t waste money experimenting with exhaust fans.

The TYPHOON MULTIBLADE BLOWER will force air right through ordinary exhaust fans. Reversed, the air can be exhausted as well.

Our Catalogue N tells how to keep cool in summer and warm in winter.

HEARD IN THE LOBBIES

The White Theatre, Scottsville, Ky., has been showing to crowded houses since its opening. Some of the best business men of the town are interested in the new motion picture house, which is offering some of the better class, comedy-drama productions. Schlather & Mayes, C. C. White and T. B. Allison are among the promoters of the White Theatre. The Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Ky., opened recently. A building was erected especially for the theatre, which is declared to be one of the most beautiful in the smaller cities of the state. A. Mitchell is manager of the Dixie. Covington motion picture men are said to be behind the proposition to open a new movie house at the Park. W. C. Collins has disposed of his interest in the Liberty Theatre, Covington, Ky., to Mrs. Hardie B. Ripley, who will continue the enterprise.

The stockholders of the People's Amusement Co., Owensboro, Ky., have voted to dissolve the corporation and liquidate its assets. The Masonic Temple Theatre, Elizabethtown, Ky., is now using the Warner film service for its program, which will include a three-reel feature, it is announced. Thomas Schmidt, formerly with the Blank ruralker Vaudeville, has been engaged by the Richland Theatre, Carrollton, Ky., "to sing one of New York's latest song hits every evening." "Four reels of movies and a song, five cents," is the way the Richland is now advertising its attractions.

George Wright, manager of the Clinton Square Theatre, at Albany, N. Y., struck a popular vein in that city last week by showing the Universal drama, "Swede Larson." The people went wild over the drama and Bobby Leonard, who took the leading part. Bobby has always been popular in that city, but if he is shown there in a few more dramas such as "Swede Larson" he will be the idol of the movie lovers.

Charles Holly has just opened the Pastime Theatre, at Bloxoi, Miss., an outdoor attraction, which he will operate during the summer months.

Perkins and Adams have awarded the contract to E. L. Mitchell for the construction of a $12,000 theatre at Ruston, La. The plans call for a three-story building, seating 1,100, designed to be a moving picture house. While the policy for the winter season has been announced it is stated that there will be other attractions besides the pictures.

RIGHT OFF THE REEL

After Richard Nell had climbed up a rope hand over hand for 200 feet in an Edison film, "The Counterfeiter," he was so sure that he at once took up training in the Y. M. C. A. He is now in such great physical shape that he guarantees to climb the same rope with one hand tied behind his back.

Marc MacDermott's right hand was swathed in bandages for two days after his return from Cincinnati. Miss Nesbit and himself were the Edison representatives at the Grauman's Egyptian Exhibitors. Marc showed hands with 3,367 different people at the affair.

Robert Brower, of the Edison Company, is the proud possessor of a new automobile. In fact, the entire department is a three-piece suit, including a right arm, a left arm, and a head, as far as the Edison company's constellation is concerned, says she is not going to marry a member of the company—any one else, in fact, at present.

For some time to come J. Warren Kerrigan, Victor star, will appear only in Western pictures. Many letters received each week by Mr. Kerrigan from admirers indicate that he is liked best in Western stories.

With Miss Edna Maison and J. Murdock MacQuarrie as his leading woman and leading man Charles Gilby, new Universal director, has started the production of "Heart Strings," a one-reel interest drama. Mr. Gilby now directs the Universal Nester company. Lenore Aubert and Ray Coghill will do heavy and juvenile leads, respectively.

Laura Oakley, formerly mayor of Universal City, California, will soon be seen again in Universal pictures. After a vacation of almost three weeks, Miss Oakley has returned to the West Coast studios of the company with the assurance that she is ready for work. During her vacation time Miss Oakley has been camping in the mountains, riding horses, hunting, fishing and sleeping out of doors.

"The Old Cobbler" is the title of a two-reel comedy written especially for J. Murdock MacQuarrie by Seymour Hastings. Samuel S. Goldwyn, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, after a trip to New York, covered Northern Illinois and Wisconsin by automobile, Mr. Hutchinson reports a healthy growth of the picture theatres.

Anem the Mexican situation, "The Little House in the Valley" will prove a big drawing card. No attempt is made to produce battle scenes, but the figures figure very prominently. Winifred Greensleeves plays the lead and William Garwood plays opposite her in a love story that carries the elements of interest from the bowels of the poverty-stricken masses to the well-do-to classes. The subject is scheduled for an early release.

Wallace Reid, of the Reliance and Majestic companies, recently returned to his home at 1239 Allison Avenue, Los Angeles, to find that a burglar had ransacked his residence. The burglar carried away several suits of clothes and some of Mrs. Reid's dresses and jewelry.

Jack London's story under the title "To Kill a Man" was recently dramatized by Frank A. Cookey, assistant general manager of the Fall River company, and presented by himself and Mrs. Cookey at the Potter Theater, Santa Barbara, on the occasion of the Flying A Baseball Club's vaudville.

Clifford Bence, who has been playing leads with the Pathe St. Augustine company, recently returned to Los Angeles from now on will be working regularly in the Pathe stock company at the main studio.

Ramona Radcliffe, moving picture actress and daughter of Mrs. Zee Green Radcliffe, a prominent cabwoman of Oakland, was recently married in Martinez, California, to Samuel E. Stabler, a Western business man.

Florence Garrett is back with the Frontier Players after a month's vacation spent in Los Angeles.

Charles Huber, of the Frontier Company, is able to be around again after a month spent on chores. He was seriously injured by a fall from a horse during a thrilling bareback riding scene in "Won by Wire."

Grace Cunard was out of the "Lucille Love" pictures for ten days during which time she had an operation performed on her leg and had a mighty sick girl in the Sisters Hospital in Los Angeles. She has returned to work in order not to retard her screen, but it will be some time before she is herself again.

Milton H. Fairnery, the first director of the Nester Company, and Alexandra Philipp Fairnery recently left Los Angeles for New Jersey, the former to direct several features and the latter to write special playbills.

Harold Lockwood has received numerous letters regarding his work in "Hearts Adrift" and "West of Storm Country" opposite Mary Pickford. He is now appearing in the Famous Players "Country Chairman" with Theda Bara.

H. B. Muller, of the Industries Motion Picture Corporation, has been appointed general manager of the Great Western Features Picture Corporation. Mr. Muller will make work for an extended trip through the Middle West to exploit the productions of the Great Players.

Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution has received a gift which it values very highly, a book upon Jesus in Jewish lore. Monsignor has a wonderful Indian library, most of which has been sent by admirers.

Common Sense

The Exhibitor with a 300 seat theatre cannot afford to purchase the high priced equipment that comes within the means of the man who owns a thousand seat house.

There is a vast difference in the various theatre equipments. Some concerns make accessories for large houses. Others cater to the smaller theatres.

The greatest trouble in buying is to select equipment that will not add too great a burden to your overhead expense, and to obtain quality despite this difficulty.

The Buyers' Service Department of The Motion Picture News was designed to serve in an advisory capacity to exhibitors. The News staff includes experts in every branch of the business. Whether you want an admission sign, or the entire equipment for a theatre, we will give you every possible bit of information obtainable on prices, durability of the commodities, and their worth to your theatre.

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

DON'T BE A POSTER COWARD!

NOTE: This is a reprint of one of the editorials that appeared in the Universal Weekly, and was written by Carl Laemmle. It is of such timely interest to all exhibitors that we consider it worth reprinting. Read it over carefully, as it means a great deal to your future, Mr. Exhibitor.

The poster question is one of the most important things you have to face, Mr. Exhibitor.

We realized this long ago, and we inserted in our agreement with the Morgan Lithograph Company a clause calling for posters BY THE FINEST ARTISTS IN THE LITHOGRAPHING BUSINESS.

We were the first to get away from the common, ordinary kind of "moving picture posters" and produce the highest class of theatrical posters. As a result, hundreds of high-class picture houses which NEVER USED POSTERS BEFORE are now gingering up their fronts and REAPING A HARVEST OF GOLD!

THE FINAL PUNCH.

Next to the quality of your program, the quality of the posters you use is of inestimable value! It is the FINAL ARGUMENT WHICH EITHER DRAWS THE PEOPLE INTO YOUR THEATRE OR DRIVES THEM AWAY.

A poster that pulls the people in is a GOOD thing for you IF YOUR PICTURES MAKE GOOD THE PROMISES OF YOUR POSTERS; and a bad thing for you if your posters have lied or misrepresented.

Universal posters are REPRESENTATIVE OF ACTUAL SCENES SHOWN IN THE FILM. In most cases they are drawn from actual photographs, then painted by the best artists on the Morgan Lithograph Company's staff. The painting is then turned over to the stone artists, who carry out the color scheme and drawing of the original painting with fidelity. Thus they are not only artistic and attractive, BUT THEY ARE TRUTHFUL AS WELL.

YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD.

Don't be timid about using posters. Don't be afraid to use liberal quantities of them, not only in your front display, but throughout your neighborhood. Some of you have criticized one of our posters showing a great big pirate's head with a knife in the teeth. Others have criticized a six-sheet of "Absinthe." RIGHT THERE IS WHERE YOU MAKE A BIG MISTAKE. Just because these posters were daring and DIFFERENT FROM ANY YOU EVER SAW BEFORE, some of you were afraid of them.

I never made a dollar by doing what others had done before me. Whatever success I have had has come from DOING WHAT THE OTHER FELLOW DIDN'T! Keep the other fellow (your competitor) barking at you and SUCCESS IS YOURS! Spend your own time putting ginger and snap and zip into your business. Use the brains God gave you. Be original. Go after new business from a new angle every time. Never let up. Never get in a rut. Don't be afraid to do a new thing just because "it has never been done before." I'd rather make a hundred little mistakes by experimenting than make the ONE BIG MISTAKE of sitting back and doing nothing.

MAKE THEM LIKE IT.

Advertising makes dollars grow where pennies grew before. Posters are advertising. Slap them right up in front of the people and MAKE THEM LIKE IT!
The exhibitor who uses a soiled or torn poster OUGHT TO FAIL. He's no friend of mine nor of the Universal if he uses ragged, second-hand posters to advertise that Universal program. No matter how fine a reel of film you may be showing, the first impression that the people get is from the poster. And if the poster is dirty the impression is just as dirty.

FALSE ECONOMY.

Don't handicap your house by FALSE ECONOMY. It is the falsest kind of economy to "economize" on posters. Use fresh, clean, new posters and BUY IN THE BIGGEST QUANTITIES YOU CAN POSSIBLY USE.

I can conscientiously give you this straight tip, because IT DOESN'T MAKE AN EXTRA CENT OF PROFIT FOR THE UNIVERSAL, EVEN IF YOU BUY A THOUSAND POSTERS FOR EACH RELEASE. The Morgan Lithograph Company gets the profit and is entitled to it. This may be "free advertising" for the Morgan people, but they're entitled to it as long as they uphold the superior quality of posters they are making for all Universal releases. I'll gladly boost anyone who shows a disposition to MAKE GOOD and the Morgan people are giving you THE BEST POSTERS THAT CAN BE MADE. No one can ask anything better than the best.

Using soiled or torn posters is a GIGANTIC MISTAKE, a COSTLY FOLLY. Every Universal exhibitor who does it is hurting himself and hurting the Universal—the VERY PEOPLE THAT HE OUGHT TO HELP IN EVERY WAY THAT HE CAN.

OPEN THE THROTTLE.

If you've been using one or two six-sheets, try using ten or twenty! If you've been buying ten or twenty, try fifty—or more. BRANCH OUT! Go after new business AS THOUGH YOU MEANT IT. And you'll GET IT! The same argument applies to three-sheets or ones.

Don't be afraid of a poster JUST BECAUSE IT IS NEW IN IDEA. On the contrary, give a hearty welcome to the novelty ideas we are constantly giving you and learn how to turn them into quick PROFITS.

Be a poster-progressive. Don't be a poster-coward!
